The easiest, the Weed.

The remarkable self-command of Bismarck was well illustrated dur-ing an interview between him and Thiers. The latter began the con-versation in French, and in the course of his remarks grew so bitter and personal that Biamarck would have been justified in breaking off the interview. He, however, intersed, "Let us continue our remarks German." Whereapou Thiers, Authors and writers on the subject of although well acquainted with that hygiene, are universally of the opinion. language, found bimeelf obliged to proceed cautiously and weigh each word carefully. And thus culmness
