Policy of the Administration.

In conclusion, I would like to say that the policy of the Administration to be a thorough enforcement of every law, a faithful collection of every tax provided for, a prompt payment of every debt of the nation, a reduction of the taxes as rapidly as the requirements of the country will admit, and the reduction of the public debt as far as possible, are all the things that we should expect to see done by the Administration.

Washington, Dec. 4, 1870.

We would like to see the special attention of the Administration to the collection of the taxes, the prompt payment of every debt of the nation, and the reduction of the public debt as far as possible.
