EDITORIAL ITEMS.

The Grand Duke is still with us. We receive to-day for the first time, the "Loup Garou" (werewolf) of Washington, Texas, and now moved to Austin. Having been established in 1858, it is undoubtedly one of the oldest newspapers in the oldest yet in existence in Texas. Its typographical execution is very neat, and its editorial course shows lack of ability. The Grand Duke is in principle devoted to the Commercial, Agricultural and Industrial interests of the State, and to take a thoroughly independent stand in politics. The Ranger is edited by J. Lancaster, and conducted by Mrs. Eva Lancaster. We wish it success and X with pleasure.

THE HOUSING DELIGHT—The Wood.

We find in the Washington Herald a very interesting report of the progress of the housing delirium in the city of Washington. The delirium is said to have been first observed in the city of Washington, and has since spread to other cities. The delirium is characterized by a peculiar delusion, which is that the houses are so crowded that the inhabitants are unable to breathe. The delirium is said to be a result of the rapid increase in the population of the city, and the consequent overcrowding of the houses. WATER—One furnished more, by Burnett & Grant.

For the purpose of answering our readers with another copy of our Democratic literature, we are publishing the following interesting report. We had intended to publish it in our issue of the 27th, but through a mistake in our printing office, the article appeared without our comment. We hereby apologize to the author, the daily Herald. We need hardly add that we are in no way the organ of the Daily Herald, and we are not in any way connected with it. We are not in any way connected with it.
