ARMED FORCES JOURNAL OF TEXAS COUNTY AND CITY OF SAN ANTONIO.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 15, 1872.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

CHARGE OF TENCH ORDERED.

The Convention of the Republican party of Texas is hereby called to assemble in the city of San Antonio on the second Monday in April next, for the transaction of business. President Elector, Acting Delegate to the Philadelphia National Convention, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the same. The session is fixed for one month from the time of its opening.

At the time of the convention the state power will stand in the name of J. E. LEARY.

C. H. NEWCOMB, Secretary.

Approved—J. E. LEARY.

The quality of intermeddling is one of the most provoking and malignant-producing among all the railroads of mankind which do not quite reach the quality of crime. Your genuine intermeddlers will keep more people in "ice, water," will raise more disputes of masters and slaves than any of "the wise men" at Austin, or any king could, or any ignorance prompted.

It is supposed that this ridiculous notion is entertained here, because San Antonio is "like a ship without a steersman."

The following communication is from a well known German gentleman of considerable culture, and we lay it before our readers, as probably a full statement, in behalf of a German who has been prevailing among the several classes of emigrants.

M. Koenig—

I have read with great pleasure the letter of the Express, and I may state from my own knowledge, that so far as the views expressed by you, in regard to the German emigration, are concerned, they are entirely correct. The people of the world are very properly writing up the "German question" in their papers, and the emigration system in the old country, and having all the benefits of the system by its results (for instance in the case of the Prussian government), and to give it, and to give to this weakness, he is never satisfied with simply specifying the cause or provider. You should take, but he is also desirous of knowing all about your other relations to life, and to give you an additional presumption how to do your own business. If he is a minister, or a priest, the extraordinary and malignant must be "worn out of you all that which lies between you, and you dies, and your Maltese, is only equalled in the physical expansion of the world by the investigating power of Arrianian wells; and when he has reached the point, he invariably wants to pray for you, and to give you a very large amount of very stupid and senseless advice. If he is your lawyer, he is in contact with some of the "causes" you have given him, but he cannot be satisfied with the general principle, and right to justice, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred you will find it mostly indifference in the end.

But, to cut short, this generation, and jump at once to the chief of all mankind-making intermeddlers, we will pass to the other holder, clothed by the authorship of his love-affection "with a little brief anniversary." His son, if his mind had become disengaged from this dreadful monomania, not only afflicts and disturbs the entire course of your ways, but seriously damage the interests of whole communities, in preparation to the elevation of his office. Such men have been known even to neglect the gravest affairs of State by their devotion to the task of intermeddling with the most trivial matters of local interest, the merits of any question concerning which it would hardly be considered for them to distinguish, besides the multitude of facts to be known.

The most notable instance of the kind in history which we recall, was King Philip II. of Spain. There was nothing too insignificant for him to meddle with. Sixty-four hours out of the twenty-four, offensively, did he engage himself in writing, with his own hand, letters to his numerous agents, directing and controlling their actions in the most trifling matters. With a few exceptions, a few individuals surrounding his person, and gay in the vice-corporation, but also gentle in his army, so she could long remain in any official position under him. People of a city or village said to rise in the morning, and their first question would be, "Well, neighbor, who is the new admiral this morning?" If a good citizen met any official his first query was, "What news did you?" And the like days this expression would be ringing.

The physical and official head went off to Spain in good earnest, company. Sixty-four hours out of the twenty-four, offensively, did he engage himself in writing, with his own hand, letters to his numerous agents, directing and controlling their actions in the most trifling matters.

A Connecticut man recently batched a sum of $200 to him, "Send back to the breast." The horse's head was not put in firmly enough to let the suspension which he or the eye were arranged.

The other picture, entitled "Martyrdom of St. Ignatius Loyola," represents Mr. Schreiber, who is a native of New Haven, and depicts him in "Tunis," endeavoring to dissuade his master from a plot against the Republic. On the wall of the room is hung a painting of the "Administration," painted, plan to plan by the best living painter in the United States.

The two Engels say that New London is now in the possession of a detachment of Spanish forces, also that John F. Riley has been imprisoned in Canada until he pays $20,000.

The same paper says that incursions are made by Indians from Quebec, by the way of the St. Lawrence River, and the Lake of the Woods, and the Indians will shortly lose their nationality.

There is locally a general opinion that the Indians are to be blamed for the massacre.

The foreigner unable to speak the English language meets of course try.

This is what the Gladstones say concerning the Cotswold sheep in the New York Tribune:

"The Cotswold sheep."

Mr. Russell gives Mr. Davis, formerly of the New York Tribune, the following account of the Cotswold, as he found it in the British Isles:

"The Cotswold is the largest and most abundant breed of sheep in England, and is the third in size.

"The Cotswold is the third in size.
