residence in Sweden or Norway without the intent to return to America, he shall

J. JOSEPH J. BARTLETT.
And whereas the said convention and protocol as amended have been duly ratified and ratifications of the same were exchanged at Stockholm on the fourteenth day of June in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, by U. C. Andrews, Minister Resident of the United States, and Count C. Wachtmeister, Minister of State for Foreign Affairs of His Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway, and
And whereas the Senate, by their resolution of the eighth instant, (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring,) did advice and consent to the said exchange, notwithstanding said exchange was delayed beyond the time appointed therefor, and resolved that the said exchange may be regarded as valid as if it had taken place within the time mentioned in the resolution of the Senate on the subject, of the 31st of December, 1870.

CONVENTION BETWEEN
THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
AND THE UNITED STATES OF MEXICO.
EXTENSION OF THE TREATY OF GUADALUPE-IQUILTEPEC.
Signed April 19, 1871; Ratified Dec. 15, 1871;
Exchanged Feb. 8, 1872; Proclaimed
February 9, 1872.
BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES
OF AMERICA.
A PROCLAMATION.
Whereas a convention between the United States of America and the United States of Mexico was concluded and signed by their respective plenipotentiaries, at the City of Mexico, on the nineteenth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, for extending the time limited by the convention between the two countries of the 4th of July, 1867, for the termination of the proceedings of the joint commission provided for by the latter instrument, a such convention being in Spanish, Spanish language, a word for word as follows:
Whereas a convention was concluded on the 4th of July, 1867, between the United States of America and the United States of Mexico, for the settlement of the boundary line that has originated since the signing of the treaty of Guadalupe-Iquiltepec, on the 2d of February, 1848, by a mixed commission limited to expire for two years and six months from the day of the first meeting of the commissioners, and whereas doubts have arisen as to the probability of the meeting of the said commission, being concluded within the period assigned:
The President of the United States of America and the President of the United States of Mexico, anxious that the time originally fixed for the duration of the said commission should be extended, and to that end have named plenipotentiaries to agree upon the best mode of effecting this object, that is to say, The President of the United States of America, Ulysses S.
Grant, accredited as Extraordinary Minister and Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to the Mexican Republic, and the President of the United States of Mexico, Manuel Arriaga, Chief Clerk and in charge of the Ministry of Foreign Relations of the U. S. Station of Mexico, who after having presented their respective powers, and finding them sufficient and in due form, have agreed upon the following articles:
ART. I.
The high contracting parties agree that the time assigned to the convention of the 4th of July, 1867, above referred to, for the termination of the proceedings, shall be extended for a time not exceeding one year from the day when the functions of the said commission shall terminate according to the provisions referred to, or for a shorter time if it should be deemed sufficient by the commissioners;—the supplementary commission provided for in the said convention shall be organized and shall begin its operations on the 4th of July, 1868.
ART. II.
The present convention shall be ratified, and the ratification shall be exchanged at Washington, as soon as possible.
In witness whereof the above-mentioned plenipotentiaries have signed the same and affixed their respective seals.
Done in the City of Mexico the 19th day of April in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one.
U. S. GRANT,
MANUEL ARRIAGA.
And whereas the said convention has been duly ratified on both sides, and the respective ratifications of the same have been exchanged.
Now, therefore, be it known that I, Ulysses
S. Grant, President of the United States of America, have caused the said convention to be made public, to the end that the same, and every clause and article thereof, may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and citizens thereof.
In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two, and of the Independence of the United States of America the ninety-sixth.

Planting Trees on the Plains.
We have received from Geo. Piney, Esq., of Sturgeon Bay, Wisconsin, a copy of a memorial to Congress, introduced by Mr. Allen, in the Wisconsin legislature, asking government aid in making large plantations of forest and timber trees in various sections of the Western plains.
The memorial represents:
First. That the State of Wisconsin, together with the extreme of the northwestern states, are suffering severely through the inclemency of the western and southwestern winds which burn and whither in summer, and greatly increase the frequency and intensity of our droughts and which are dry and severely cool in winter, materially obstruct the growing of fruit any many other productions of the soil.
Second. That it is well settled among the meteorologists that these winds, that produce the extreme inclemencies of our season, cross in their course the arid plains lying to the eastward of the great ranges of mountains near our western coast, where they are wrung of their moisture, and in that condition are forced through the northwestern states, producing the extreme severities of both summer and winter.
Third. That those western plains are destitute of trees, and that history and science prove that trees exercise a marked influence upon the atmosphere, not only increasing its humidity, thereby reducing its liability to become either extremely hot or cold, but do actually impart warmth to a cold atmosphere, and also cool it when very warm, and do increase and regulate the rain fall; and that these effects are realized not only in the immediate vicinity of the forest, but are extended in a greater or less degree over the whole path of the winds passing the forests in their course.
This subject of tree planting in its effects upon climate, excites more and more discussion, and the Kansas Pacific railroad, and indeed Congress are already turning their attention to the matter.
Facts furnished in a paper of M. Mathieu, Professor in the School of Forestry at Nancy, read before the Congress Agricola Libre, held at Nancy in 1869, seem worthy of being called to notice in this connection.
The experiments described in M. Mathieu's paper had been carried on during the last eight months of 1866, and also the years 1867 and 1868, and were aimed at the following points:
1. The influence of the forest state upon the rain fall of a country.
Two points some miles distant from each other, one in the wooded and the other in the cultivated country, nearly the same height above the level of the sea, and in other respects alike, were chosen and the amount of rain fall compared with the following result:
Time. In open forest. In open country. Difference.
— 1866. 33.25 in. 37.24 in. 3.99 in.
— 1867. 33.35 in. 36.41 in. 3.06 in.
— 1868. 34.64 in. 35.4 in. 0.76 in.
Showing that a considerable excess of rain fall fell in the forest country.
2. The amount of moisture that the covert of a forest prevents from reaching the earth. This experiment was made by computing the amount of rain caught by a rain gauge in the open ground with that caught by a rain gauge embracing a tree in the dense forest. The results were:
Time. Under the trees. In open ground. Difference.
— 1866. 25.30 in. 36.20 in. 10.90 in.
— 1867. 27.15 in. 36.41 in. 9.26 in.
— 1868. 27.77 in. 35.4 in. 7.63 in.
Showing that less rain reached the ground where the trees stood than in the open ground immediately about them; but yet more than fell in the open country, as shown by the previous table.
Time. Under trees in open country. Difference.
— 1866. 25.30 in. 36.20 in. 10.90 in.
— 1867. 27.15 in. 36.41 in. 9.26 in.
— 1868. 27.77 in. 35.4 in. 7.63 in.
Showing that less rain reached the ground where the trees stood than in the open ground immediately about them; but yet more than fell in the open country, as shown by the previous table.
3. The influence of forests upon temperature. These experiments were only commenced in 1868, and give no complete results, but so far as conducted, went to show that the annual mean temperature is less in the woods than in the open ground. The difference being greatest in winter and least in summer. The temperature varies but little between day and night in the forest, whilst it changes a great deal in the open country.
In these facts we think are contained principles that have an important bearing on agriculture and horticulture, to which we shall some time have occasion to allude.
A teacher of a young ladies' school in New York recently told us that during a history lesson she asked an apparently advanced girl, of fifteen what was meant by "Internal Revenue." The scholar answered "I suppose internal revenue must mean a tax on what we eat."

The system of representation is based upon the whole number of voters, and not as it should be, upon the number of representatives...

These telegrams explained themselves. The little town was filled with democratic politicians who look quite as much interested in the Convention as the delegates themselves.

It was a foregone conclusion with the shrewdest politicians of both parties, that if Mr. Degener should be nominated on a national republican platform, untrammelled by State issues, he would be elected.

Western Texas is largely republican in sentiment and feeling, and will show itself so in votes in the next Presidential election.

Therefore, let the republicans in this county, and in every other county in this District, see to it that they choose men who are sound republicans...
