How to Secure Government Bonds

When Mr. Newcomb approached the President's chair at the Saturday meeting, he did so with a loaded cane in his hand. That is so approached in his rear, a large number of his friends armed to the teeth. Mr. Newcomb repeated; in an undertone, called the President a damned liar, a damned puppie, and other opprobrious epithets, with the view of arousing John to strike this gentlemanly and refined Secretary of State, and furnish an excuse to his police to shoot the President down. Had the President of the meeting, angry and incensed as he was, for one moment lost his self-control there would have been a dozen lives lost in less than sixty seconds—and, that is why this model Secretary of State wanted, and did his very best to bring about. At one time Newcomb picked up the gavel from the table with the view of striking the President of the meeting, who being observed at the moment, was arrested, and the President seized the pitcher, prepared to return the blow had one been offered.

In this conduct, however, the leading Representative of the State Executive—who has shown himself so sensitive when he imagined the dignity of his office to be insulted by a letter from the city council of this city! Does Governor Davis approve of his Secretary's Mohocratic method of controlling county conventions or mass-meetings, called to ascertain the free voice of a free people? If he does not he should at once suspend his Secretary from office if he does, he cannot blame the people if the odium which is justly cast upon the infamous unashamed, and inhumane, despicable conduct of Newcomb should go further and reach himself—in the end most disastrously. If the democracy had interfered with the efforts of the majority of the republicans in this county to hold a peaceful and fair mass-meeting, in the manner in which—Secretary Newcomb and his mob have done, the Governor would have been very apt to declare martial law in this country, which would have cost this people thousands of dollars. Let him now convince the people that he is equally opposed to violence and wrong-doing—then—wherever source it may come, the only way he can do so is by immediately suspending a Secretary who would be a disgrace to a republic of cannibal islanders.

James F. Newcomb.

On next Saturday evening, at the adjourned mass-meeting of the Republicans of this body, Capt. G. will be present, we are informed, a memorial to Governor Davis, and the suspension of J. P. Newcomb from his office of Secretary of State. We have not seen the memorial, but the grounds upon which it is based cannot be difficult of conjecture by any intelligent man. His high position in the highest executive office in the State, next to that of chief, to the honest parson, and the first being the first to demand that all obeying the law, no Ku-Klux in the State has surprised him in an organized effort to trample under foot the laws, and suppress any expression of the free will of republicans. The whole country from Maine to California will stand amazed at his unbridled apathy, and the unscrupulousness with which he holds the power and influence of his high office. No mere bold or ignorant effort to control the people of the State has ever been made in this country, since the time when the Minister of the Golden Office insisted in his judgement upon every man in the community who held a position of his own.

He has abused the minds of the colored population, and wilfully arranged them against the whites, and their best friends. Instead of teaching them to obey the laws, and thus to insure their protection by a wholesome respect for their excellent demands, he has endeavored to induce them to break all rules of decency and good conduct. Instead of using his influence to elevate them, he has what was in his power to debase them. He has led them by the nose into quagmires they will be glad to struggle out from with the assistance of more discreet and honorable friends. They will learn, by and by that Mr. Newcomb is false to them who he would have them believe that they are indebted to him instead of the great republican party for their freedom, and for the custody of their rights. They will learn that those rights are not to be preserved by violence and trickery, but by proving themselves deserving of the bonus which have been conferred upon them.

But this is not a title of the improvements which will be brought against this the most despotic executive officer this State has ever had in a time of peace. The ball will thicken like a snowball as it rolls on. All over this State will lie memorials to go to the Governor, and likely should, haplessly, be shelved unheeded,—if the convenience, also, shall refuse to listen to the voice of the people who by their votes placed him in power, and continue to cling to his unprincipled Secretary.

—conspire to support him in his villainy and disorderly acts, continuing to invite opposition by exhibiting a spirit too stubborn and unswerving to recede from false steps, no power can prevent the fate of his Secretary, and determine the fate of our chief executive.

—should a strong effort be made to get him off the stage, and to make him a laughing stock.

We have heard it said that Mr. Newcomb is a man of iron, and that he is as hard as the iron in the
