MEMORIES OF THE PAST. Prussia over the partition of Poland. MARIENBURG, Sept. 13, 1872. The year 1772 is a remarkable one in the annals of Prussia, for in that year took place the famous partition of Poland. This act must be regarded in two aspects. On the one hand it restored to Prussia towns and places that had formerly been under German domination and that had preserved the German language and German institutions; on the other it took from Poland territory to which Germany never had any claim, and which was peopled by men who had no inclination whatever for union with the German race.

The Germans, of course, determined to celebrate this year the centenary of the day which restored some Germans to the Fatherland, and, of course, were in no way prevented from doing so by the fact that such a celebration could give nothing but annoyance to their Polish fellow-subjects. It was a singular coincidence that such a celebration should follow so close upon the meeting of the three Emperors at Berlin, especially as Poland was said to be one of the subjects on which the three Emperors were supposed to have exchanged ideas. Another coincidence also took place. The Emperor William had to leave Berlin for this town on the same day that the Czar had to leave Berlin for St. Petersburg; and thus the two men who represent most strongly the subjection of Poland travelled together to the place in which Poland's downfall was being celebrated. The two monarchs, however, made an attempt to take away the significance by separating at a station a few miles before Marienburg, and the Emperor William arrived here alone.

The festivities, by which the imperial visit was celebrated had strong resemblance to festivities on other occasions in different parts of Germany. Of course these were the inevitable municipal authorities with addresses; there were German maidens, dressed à la Marguerite, and carrying flowers in their hands; and there were plenty of soldiers of all kinds. The proceeding, however, were not as festive in the way they were intended to be, for the rain came down pitilessly nearly the whole time, and many were the fine uniforms and fashionable dresses and elaborate toilets that Jupiter Pluvius spoiled on the memorable day. An incident in connection with the celebration has attracted a good deal of attention. Your readers have doubtless already heard, on more than one occasion, of the dispute between the government and the Catholic Bishop of Erlangen. The Bishop had dared to so far exercise his episcopal rights as to instruct some soldiers not to visit a certain academy which had been used by the so-called "Old Catholics." The Bishop was called upon to withdraw his prohibition; but he declared that he could not do so consistently with his duty to his conscience and his Church. It was supposed that the government would hereupon have proceeded to extremities, that the Bishop would have been deprived of his revenues, &c.; but as yet no such step has been taken. The Bishop endeavored on the occasion of this festival to pave the way to a reconciliation. He issued a pastoral, very loyal in its tone, and asked permission of His Majesty to come to Marienburg to pay homage there. But the Emperor declined to receive the Bishop unless he made an unconditional surrender of the position he has taken up. And so the matter at present remains.

Don't Like Hutton. A good story is told of the recent excellent performance of Hutton's "Mesiah" at the Broadway Baptist Church. A farmer took his wife to hear the grand music, so splendidly rendered on that occasion, and after listening with apparent enjoyment, the pair became suddenly interested in one of the choruses: "We all, like sheep have gone astray. First a sharp, soprano voice exclaimed: "We all like sheep—" Next, deep bass voice uttered 'is the most earnest voice: "We all, like sheep—" They all the singers at once asserted: "We all like sheep—" "Darn'd if I do!" exclaimed old rustic in his partner. I like beef and bacon, but I can't bear sheep-meat."

There was an audible titter in that vicinity, but the splendid music attracted attention from the pair, and they quickly slipped out, on Louisville Courier-Journal.

Prospects in Connecticut. Mr. W. Eaton is said to have recently admitted that 1,000 Democrats in Connecticut will not vote Horace Greeley for President. The New Haven Journal responds: "If he did but know it, there are more than a thousand of that sort in New Haven county alone." In this connection it may be interesting to read what Congressman Starkweather says in a recent letter. He writes: "Until recently I have regarded Connecticut as a doubtful State; but the return of large portions of the Republicans, and some of them our best men, who were first inclined to vote for Greeley, and the support of more than six thousand free Union Democrats that have already declared for Grant, in this State, insures his success by at least three thousand majority. It will probably be more than that."

Home Medivins. We clip from the Christian Union the following paragraph, showing the change which the old city of Rome is undergoing: "All accounts from Rome agree in representing a state of things in that regenerated capital which assures the unfortunate who have not hitherto visited it that they will never have the opportunity of enjoying it in its original dampness and stink, with the smell of certifiers steaming from its every pore. Such a new life of growth has come upon it, that the inhabitants can scarcely believe it really. New streets are laid out; blocks of houses are rising on all sides, busy masons and carpenters swarm everywhere, and yet, with all this activity, the new buildings cannot keep pace with the increase of the population. A correspondent of the Evangelist tells us that the Castle of St. Angelo is to be surrounded by a public garden, and there is to be some where in that vicinity a new boulevard, on which many blocks of houses will be built. The precise route and termini are not yet fixed, but there is no doubt that such a boulevard will ere long stride across the meadows of the Tiber and shelter thousands of people. "A change is noticed in the appearance of the population. There is no longer that apathy, like the shadow of death, veiling every face. We hear less empty chattering. There are comparatively few beggars, but everywhere old Rome starts into view. On the Esquiline, which is to be graded in the neighborhood of Santa Maria Maggiore, a fine mosaic pavement has been found which is to be placed in the Capitol. Pillars, capitals, statues are weekly brought to light."

In such a condition of affairs, it is not wonderful that the Pope, who must rejoice to see the old capital so revived, should have decided to "stay and see it through." By and by, either he or his successor will accept the very reasonable offers of the Italian government, and (perhaps) the prosperity of the Church itself will be more assured under the new order than under the old.

An official return has just been published of all the members of the English House of Commons who are in receipt of the public money, whether in the form of pay, pension, or allowances of any kind. From this return it appears that out of 666 members belonging to the House of Commons 138 are in receipt of public money amounting to $460,990. The salaried officials members are 32 in number. Three members belong to the Queen's household, and six are in receipt of pensions for civil services. Two are Colonels on full pay of $5,000 a year each, and twelve are officers on retired or half pay, who receive $43,482 between them. There are 91 members who divide $8,800. These 91 members are chiefly officers in the yeomanry and militia, and the expenditure is chiefly for pay and allowances attached to the various grades. Some of the separate payments to these officers are small. Thus, one of the members of Parliament is a Cornet of the Derbyshire Yeomanry, and receives $16 a year as pay, and $6 16 as allowance. Another member has since 1832 enjoyed a pension of $244 a year as compensation for loss of postal fines in connection with the abolished office of "Lord of Liberty," but what the office was nobody now can tell.

To have good cooks we must have good kitchens. These require to be not only provided with all the essential implements of the necessary handwork, but to be made comfortable, cheerful, wholesome, and convenient abodes for those who are forced to spend most of their daily life in them. The kitchen should be of a simple and regular construction, free from hidden corners and all kinds of nooks favorable to deposits of dirt and grime, and the encouragement of malarial influences. No cupboards or closets ought to be allowed. A dresser, with exposed shelves above and broadly opening drawers below, is all that is required for convenience. This should be made of unpainted white wood, in order that it may invite daily scrubbing with soap and hot water, and be all the better for it. The floor of the kitchen might be of white tiles, and should never be covered with matting or anything like a carpet. The best ornaments are ranges of well polished tins, bright coppers, clean plates, and a general purity, neatness, and order. —Harper's Bazar.

Worcester Greeley on his Southern Friends.

It is quite refreshing, after reading in those hermaproditic papers which support Greeley and Gratz Brown their benevolent rhapsodies, to turn to the speeches of the great agriculturist of Chappaqua in times that are past. We have before us his address of June 13th, immediately after his Texas tour, to a large number of friends assembled under the auspices of the Union Republican General Committee at the Lincoln Club Rooms, New York. A few quotations therefrom may not be inappropriate at the present important time.

"I recollect distinctly," he says, "that in that eventful winter of 1860-61, the correspondents of the Tribune, whom we were obliged to keep traversing the South, were uniformly obliged to conceal their business and to deny their views. Brave and true men they were; but they would have been torn to pieces as if by wolves if they had been known as Tribune correspondents. They dared not address their letters to the Tribune office; they had to address them to private individuals in different parts of the city, in order that we might receive them."

Alluding to his speech at Galveston, on the last night he spent in Texas, he says: "I tried before them to vindicate the North against the charges made against her in the South, and to prove that the North did not make war on the South (as too many Southern people still believe she did). I tried to show them that the war was commenced in the South, by the South—say in Texas itself—by capturing, through treachery, the United States army, and turning its arms and munitions against the flag and against the integrity of our country; and that all the way through, we stood virtually on the defensive, against what seemed to me a most indefensible and wanton aggression? Further: 'I have been asked, 'are there any Ku-Klux down South?' 'Yes, gentlemen, there are.' 'I am moved with profound disgust when I think of these men, covering themselves with second hand calico, masking their faces, arming themselves to the teeth, and riding around to the cabins of poor, harmless negroes, dragging them from their beds, and whipping and maiming them, until they are compelled to swear they will never again vote the Republican ticket. I hold that to be a very cowardly procedure as well as a very base one, and I hold it to be the duty of the Government of the Union to oppose with all its power and all its force every such execrable outrage as this. Do you tell me that those men are liable to State laws for the assaults and batteries they have committed? I don't doubt it; but I say they are also in substance and purpose traitors to the Government, rebels against its authority, and the most cowardly, skulking rebels ever known to this or any other country.' 'I, therefore, on every proper occasion, justified and advocated the Ku-Klux act. I hold it especially desirable for the South; and, if it does not prove strong enough to effect its purpose, I hope it will be made stronger and stronger.' 'Why, fellow-citizens, these very men that asked me if I saw any Ku-Klux, have themselves read the returns of the last Presidential election in Louisiana, when that State, with 30,000 black majority on its registers, was made to vote for Seymour and Blair by more than 30,000 majority; counties which had 3000 negro voters alone giving three, two, one, and in several instances no vote at all, for Grant and Colfax.

States army, and turning its arms and munitions against the flag and against the integrity of our country; and that all the way through, we stood virtually on the defensive, against what seemed to me a most indefensible and wanton aggression? Further: 'I have been asked, 'are there any Ku-Klux down South?' 'Yes, gentlemen, there are.' 'I am moved with profound disgust when I think of these men, covering themselves with second hand calico, masking their faces, arming themselves to the teeth, and riding around to the cabins of poor, harmless negroes, dragging them from their beds, and whipping and maiming them, until they are compelled to swear they will never again vote the Republican ticket. 'Why, fellow-citizens, these very men that asked me if I saw any Ku-Klux, have themselves read the returns of the last Presidential election in Louisiana, when that State, with 30,000 black majority on its registers, was made to vote for Seymour and Blair by more than 30,000 majority; counties which had 3000 negro voters alone giving three, two, one, and in several instances no vote at all, for Grant and Colfax.

Now, friends, you and they know perfectly well that this result was secured by terror and by violence; by telling those black men, 'You shall vote for Seymour and Blair, or you shall not vote at all, or you shall be killed.' That was the way Louisiana was made Democratic in 1868; and that is the way that I trust she will never be made so to vote again. Therefore I uphold and justify the Ku-Klux law.' 'The Ku Klux are a disgrace to Southern chivalry; and they would be drummed out of the South if there were any true chivalry there.' Now if the foregoing extracts mean anything, they mean that if the Southern Democrats had the power to give effect to their wishes, they would still curtail the right of free speech, of freedom of opinion, whenever it was sought to be exercised against their views; that, were it not for the wholesome Ku-Klux laws, energetically enforced, the colored voter, by a barbarous tyranny, would be compelled to vote as the chivalry pleased; that while the people of the South, belonging to the Democratic party, profess to ignore the existence of the Ku-Klux, and hypocritically asked him 'are there any?' they know all about it; had used them as a powerful electioneering engine, and had not drummed them out of the States where they existed because there was no true chivalry amongst them. Heaven save the mark! And would are the men with whom he would affiliate—shake hands across the bloody chasm! With what hope of peace and prosperity to the country could we entrust the reins of government to a man, who, for the sake of attaining to a brief and dangerous eminence, would expose his country to the storm of reverses that his own language fore-shadows.

Under General Grant's Administration three diplomatic triumphs have been accomplished of unprecedented magnitude: 1. The American principles for the guidance of neutrals have been acknowledged by Great Britain, and their ultimate incorporation in international law has been secured. 2. Large claims of a character never before settled, except by war, have been brought to peaceful arbitration. 3. Great Britain has been brought to extend to the United States an expression of regret for matters arising out of her conduct during the rebellion—a concession of infinite value to the peace of the world, as constituting the first example of a kindly and pacific treatment of questions heretofore submitted only to the decision of the sword.

It is easy to see that General Sherman thinks there is no place like home, and no soldiers in the world like those who 'marched down to the sea.' He says he cannot understand how the French soldiers could fail, except when fighting the Prussians, that they—the Prussian soldiers—without doubt are the best drilled troops that ever marched, but they had not a trial of steady fight for four years, the way the 'boys' had, so he would not compare them.

His POLICY.—On all leading questions agitating the public mind I will always express my views to Congress, and urge them according to my judgment, and when I think it advisable will exercise the constitutional privilege of interposing a veto to defeat measures which I oppose. But all laws will be faithfully executed, whether they meet my approval or not. I shall on all subjects have a policy to recommend, but none to enforce against the will of the people. U. S. GRANT.

These have of course their followers and friends, who do all in their power to obstruct the progress of the new machine. Some of them go so far as to support Grant; while others spare no pains to manifest their enmity to Greeley. Among the latter we find such prominent names as those of Judge Dowling and Scott and Alderman Coman. Now when we bear in mind that Tammany made no change in its management until the clever knaves already named were indicted for their monstrous frauds, we are led to conclude that they were not replaced in the management of the society because they were rogues, but because that fact had transpired and become notorious. The attempt at reform, this point being understood, suggests no hope of a real, radical improvement in the morals of this great concern. The corruption in the grain and cannot be so easily washed out. They sacrifice, have sacrificed, and will sacrifice to the 'loaves and fishes' as long as they hold together. Therefore do we not mourn over the strife of the Tammanyites. The powers that be in that big shop may fight with the powers that were, to their hearts content, until extermination ensue; we shall not therefore break our hearts. There will ever subsist, above the wreck of vitiated and corrupted party machines, enough of the true and pure element of honest Democracy to keep our Republicanism from lapsing into sapinensness.

On the inauguration of President Grant a one hundred dollar United States bond, paying six per cent. interest in gold, was worth only $92.75. To-day it is at par. This advance in the national credit is due solely to the firmness, integrity and good sense with which the finances have been conducted. Could we expect as much from a President like Horace Greeley, surrounded by repudiators like Pendleton, thieves like the Tammany leaders, and wild-cat financiers such as he would constantly attract and listen to, to say nothing of the indefinite claims of his Southern friends, and his own propensity for experimenting in finance!

The American principles for the guidance of neutrals have been acknowledged by Great Britain, and their ultimate incorporation in international law has been secured. 2. Large claims of a character never before settled, except by war, have been brought to peaceful arbitration. 3. Great Britain has been brought to extend to the United States an expression of regret for matters arising out of her conduct during the rebellion—a concession of infinite value to the peace of the world, as constituting the first example of a kindly and pacific treatment of questions heretofore submitted only to the decision of the sword.

It is easy to see that General Sherman thinks there is no place like home, and no soldiers in the world like those who 'marched down to the sea.' He says he cannot understand how the French soldiers could fail, except when fighting the Prussians, that they—the Prussian soldiers—without doubt are the best drilled troops that ever marched, but they had not a trial of steady fight for four years, the way the 'boys' had, so he would not compare them.

His POLICY.—On all leading questions agitating the public mind I will always express my views to Congress, and urge them according to my judgment, and when I think it advisable will exercise the constitutional privilege of interposing a veto to defeat measures which I oppose. But all laws will be faithfully executed, whether they meet my approval or not. I shall on all subjects have a policy to recommend, but none to enforce against the will of the people. U. S. GRANT.

These have of course their followers and friends, who do all in their power to obstruct the progress of the new machine. Some of them go so far as to support Grant; while others spare no pains to manifest their enmity to Greeley. Among the latter we find such prominent names as those of Judge Dowling and Scott and Alderman Coman. Now when we bear in mind that Tammany made no change in its management until the clever knaves already named were indicted for their monstrous frauds, we are led to conclude that they were not replaced in the management of the society because they were rogues, but because that fact had transpired and become notorious. The attempt at reform, this point being understood, suggests no hope of a real, radical improvement in the morals of this great concern. The corruption in the grain and cannot be so easily washed out. They sacrifice, have sacrificed, and will sacrifice to the 'loaves and fishes' as long as they hold together. Therefore do we not mourn over the strife of the Tammanyites. The powers that be in that big shop may fight with the powers that were, to their hearts content, until extermination ensue; we shall not therefore break our hearts. There will ever subsist, above the wreck of vitiated and corrupted party machines, enough of the true and pure element of honest Democracy to keep our Republicanism from lapsing into sapinensness.

On the inauguration of President Grant a one hundred dollar United States bond, paying six per cent. interest in gold, was worth only $92.75. To-day it is at par. This advance in the national credit is due solely to the firmness, integrity and good sense with which the finances have been conducted. Could we expect as much from a President like Horace Greeley, surrounded by repudiators like Pendleton, thieves like the Tammany leaders, and wild-cat financiers such as he would constantly attract and listen to, to say nothing of the indefinite claims of his Southern friends, and his own propensity for experimenting in finance!

Under General Grant's Administration three diplomatic triumphs have been accomplished of unprecedented magnitude: 1. The American principles for the guidance of neutrals have been acknowledged by Great Britain, and their ultimate incorporation in international law has been secured. 2. Large claims of a character never before settled, except by war, have been brought to peaceful arbitration. 3. Great Britain has been brought to extend to the United States an expression of regret for matters arising out of her conduct during the rebellion—a concession of infinite value to the peace of the world, as constituting the first example of a kindly and pacific treatment of questions heretofore submitted only to the decision of the sword.
