President Grant

Perhaps there is no little game in polities which can be played with greater safety, or with better chances of success by the corrupt leadere of a coccupt party that the game of slander. The throwing of mad at any object is a work easy of schievement. The dirtier the operator the more successful the operation may be ! The purer the thing assailed, the more, by contrast, the mud appears to defile. And the probabilities are that at least nine out of ten of the witnesses of the dirty assaults never take the trousticks. Their reading is limited. The party organs, who favor the foul assaults, abstain, of course, from the publication of anything but might malighten their readers, who content with the partial, one sided view, which a corrupt press furnishes, grow in the persuasion that lies are truth, and that false witnesses deserve their credence.

regard to the highest official of the United States. President Grant has been assailed in so many ways, and by such disreputable won, that an exhibit of the falsity of charges, gratultously hunched against him without the shadow of a proof, together with the weighty replies which have met and squelched the slanders, seems a simple matter of justice. Read and reflect.

It has been a common against the President that he was an inebriate. To this charge Dr. Eddy, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Washington, Gen. Grant's pastor, replies :

"My relation as his pastor gave me access to the White House at all times, and I have never, on any occasion, observed anything in his Hely expressed by Greeley and his habits which a temperance man Tribune of Sept. 3rd, 1862, upon could except against. Grant that he was drunk at the battle of Shiloh. Over and over again this foul aspersion has been refuted. Yet the Greeley papers repeat the falsehood as it it never had been disproved. J. D. Webster, late Brevet Major General Volun late Brevet Major General Volunteers and Chief of Staff to General Sherman, in a letter from Chicago, dated Sept. 4th, 1872, disposes of this falsehood in a way which can leave no doubt in a candid mind.

We might continue to refute the false charges, one by one, that in the grossness of their minds, the Greelevites have sown broadcast over the country against the President.
