[New York Herald 24th.] The Horse Disease.

As yet , po definite and concise opinion of the exact nature of the disease has been arrived at by the veterinary surgeous, although they all agree that it is a species of catarrhal affection, there are the most diverse opinions as to whether it resulted from something peculiar in the air, whether it was contagious and was brought to the city by some horse from other infected towns. Belladonna is still targely used in connection with tar, and the general treatment in the car and stage stables is confined to some simple food of a laxative nature mixed with their feed and water. The well-known veterinary surgeons, such as professor Copelan, Lectard and Lockhart are in immense demand, and have more orders than they can possibly attend to. They appear to agree that there is very 10 contains a very sensible article little danger in the disease, it the affected animal is given rest and election, in the course of which it proper treatment, but that they cannot say how long it will last. But I cannot concede the revolutionists removed him from neither infallible nor impeccable office in 1861, because he refused to may carry out a great pelley, and that it would be folly to ostracise him in the vain search after perfection."

From Eugland we have a rumor, which we tear is too good to be true, that Mr. Gladstone intends at the forthcoming session of Perliament to introduce a grand, comprehen-sive measure looking to the extension of muncipal privileges all over the British isles, based on the principle of local taxation. The details are vaguely hinted at as follows; Ireland is to be divided into four sections, Scotland into two or three, and England into six. The practical effect of this would be to relieve Parliament of much work that it is now obliged to perform, and enable it to give more time to the great questions that press upon its attention. It is undoubtedly a step to wards republicanism, and yet no botter means, could in all probability be taken to strenghten the monarchy. MISOBLLANEOUS
