Paging System Is Operational At Lazbuddie

Glenn Lust, Lazbuddie fire chief, said the Lazbuddie Fire Department paging system is now in operation. He said that to report a fire, or emergency, such as illness, accident or severe weather, call 965-2800.

An automatic telephone answering device will answer the call and alert all the pagers. Chief Lust said that after the alert tone stops when the telephone is rung, give the information as to the location of the fire, what is burning, the name of the person reporting the emergency and the telephone number called from.

All firemen with the pagers will hear the information and the message will be recorded. If you accidentally dial a wrong number and reach the fire department emergency number, the fire chief asks that you wait until the alert tone stops, and then inform the firemen you have reached a wrong number. He further asked that callers do not dial the fire number and then hang up. The firemen with pagers will be automatically alerted but will know if there is a fire. Please explain the reason for the call.

The fire department base station and antenna is located at Treider Electric Company at Lazbuddie.

County Records 2.5 Inches Rain In Saturday Storm

Small Hail Leaves Minor Area Damage

Clouds started building to the west and southwest of Muleshoe late Saturday, and during the evening wind heralded the approach of the area's first spring storm.

Following the midnight rain, workers from the Texas Highway Department were called out to Farm-to-Market roads to remove mud in some cases and to set out flares to warn of deep water over the roads.

Lloyd Killough, supervisor of THD operations in Bailey County, said that in the years he has been with the highway department in this area, he had not seen more water across FM1760 at one time than he saw Saturday night.

He said the water was so deep and so fast approximately five miles west of Muleshoe on 1760 that it was floating highline poles onto the highway from the edge of a field.

Also, Texas Highway Department workers had to remove deep mud from FM1731, a north/south highway in Western Bailey County.

The heaviest amount of rain reported was by Don Seals who lives on 1760 just west of 1731. He reported two and one half inches, but said the rain fell so hard and so fast, most of it ran off in ditches.

He also reported small hail, as did Eugene Black, who lives nine miles northwest and one mile north of Muleshoe. Black said he received one and one half inches of rain Saturday night and an additional .2 on Sunday afternoon and night.

In the Coyote Lake area, only one inch of rain was reported. The spokeswoman at Coyote Lake Feed Yard said high wind accompanied the rain, but they received no hail.

The Muleshoe National Wildlife Refuge located approximately 20 miles south of Muleshoe, was almost left out of the rain picture. The rain gauge on the refuge received only .07 moisture over the weekend, with hard wind reported for two nights in a row.

Bailey County Feeders, located two miles south of 1760 and five miles west of Muleshoe, said they received only a half inch of rain, as it appeared that the heavier rain was to the west and north of their location.

Just over a mile south of 1760 on FM1731, Mrs. Charles Farmer said they received approximately one half inch of rain, accompanied by marble size hail.

Muleshoe recorded .3 in the weekend moisture, which saw rain and snow mixed Sunday night as the temperature dropped to the mid-30s.

Also on Sunday night, heavy snow fell between Farwell and Lariat around 10:30 p.m. Although the snow clung fell

New Traffic Code Study Underway

Although the Muleshoe City Planning Commission conducted a public meeting Monday night at the Muleshoe City Hall, no local citizens attended to voice a possible use for a community development grant fund application to be submitted in May.

Members of the planning commission were told the funds could be used for improvements for low and low-middle income persons for improvements to neighborhoods and for health and safety.

It was explained that up to $1,500,000 was available in a 100 percent grant to be used in communities the size of Muleshoe.

Several areas were discussed, including the possible demolition of abandoned homes; additional paving; upgrading of existing sub-standard housing; and the hiring of a housing counselor.

Medic Alert Week Slated April 9-16

April 9-16, National Medic Alert Week, calls attention to the serious prevalence of hidden medical conditions in the United States, said Mrs. J.E. McVickers, Bailey County volunteer for the Medic Alert Foundation.

"More than 40 million Americans suffer these conditions," she added. "They need to be protected in medical emergencies when they are unconscious or otherwise unable to communicate about their problem."

As an example, she cited the statistic that there are more than 300,000 hemophiliacs in the United States. "In medical emergencies, these people need special medical treatment," said Mrs. McVickers. "If they are unconscious and unable to tell about their condition, they can easily die."

"We will be using Medic Alert Week to emphasize the need for special protection for the one in five Americans who suffer such hidden conditions," she added. "This will form the greatest drive in the twenty-two year history of the Medic Alert Foundation."

Mrs. McVickers said thousands of Medic Alert volunteers around the United States have already been contacted about the special April event. They are being asked to participate in a specially developed program in their own communities.

"We will also put forth a gigantic effort to distribute Medic Alert literature to hospitals, medical clinics, pharmacies and other places where people interested in their health can learn about Medic Alert," she concluded. Displays have been placed at West Plains Medical Centers and the drug stores in Muleshoe.

including apartment, mobile home dwellers and city home owners. Suitable containers vary from wire mesh hanging baskets to bushel baskets, galvanized cans, wooden boxes, or even such oddities as old hats, styrofoam coolers and discarded toilets. Almost any type of well drained container can be used for growing vegetable plants. Optimum container size will vary according to the crop selected. Green onions, parsley and herbs grow well in 6 to 10-inch containers. Large containers are more suitable for fruiting vegetables such as tomato, pepper and eggplant.

Regardless of the container chosen, adequate drainage is the key to success. The key to proper drainage is a loose, crumbly soil mix. It is wise to use a mix that holds ample moisture and nutrients, drains well and is light weight.

Location of your container can also make the difference between success or failure. Nearly all vegetable plants grow better in full sunlight than in shade.

Plant the best adapted vegetable varieties for your area. This is another key to success. After selecting the best variety, you must carefully avoid overplanting. Two plants per container of the larger bush vegetables such as tomato, pepper, eggplant, broccoli and cauliflower are enough. Timing of plantings can make the difference between success or failure.

For instance, don't plant cauliflower in the spring; plant tomatoes as early as possible in spring-time and in August so that climatic conditions will be favorable for fruit set.

Culturing plants in containers severely limits their root spread so frequent watering and fertilization are essential. As plants grow larger, more watering is required. Young container plants require watering once a day, whereas large older plants may have to be watered twice or three times a day. Fertilize with a soluble fertilizer solution once or twice each week, depending on plant size.

An adequate nutrient solution can be made by dissolving two cups of a complete garden fertilizer like 10-20-10 in one gallon of warm water. This solution will be your base solution. Prepare the "growing" nutrient solution to be poured on the soil around the plants by mixing two tablespoons of the base solution in one gallon of water.

If you use transplants, irrigate with nutrient solution immediately after planting. At each watering—whether fertilizer or not—add sufficient water to the container to cause free drainage from the bottom. A well-prepared container garden with a well-drained soil cannot be over-watered.

SANDHILL CRANES MARKED LUBBOCK—Lesser and Canadian sandhill cranes have been marked on their wintering grounds near Lubbock and are currently being marked at their stop-over point along the Platte near North Platte, Nebraska, by personnel of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The sandhills left Texas early this month and they are currently gathering in large numbers along the Platte river before continuing north to the nesting grounds.

Sudan Track Meet

The Sudan Boys tied for the Championship with Amarillo Riverroad. Results as follows: Pole Vault, Joey Bellar, served, Vault, Joe Bellar, second, 10'6", Shot Put, Lonnie Williams, second, 45'7", Roy Dudgeon, fifth, 40' 8", 440 relay Sudan, third, 45.9 sec., 880 yard dash, Mike Jones first, 215.7 sec., 100 yard dash, John Mills, third, 10.1, Joel Williams, fourth 10.1, Discus, Lonnie Williams, first, 141'6", 220 John Miles, first 23.5 sec., Mile Relay Sudan, first 3:43.1.

Girls Division 31 points, Marilyn May, first high jump, 4.9, Shot Put, Jody Vernon, second, 33'4", 80 yard run, Pam Kent, fourth, 80 yard hurdles, Becky Byerley, third, 12.7, Glenda Cardwell, sixth, and Mile Relay, Sudan, sixth.

The scientists have moved along with the cranes to Nebraska to resume trapping operations and to study the cranes' mating antics with the arrival of spring. 314 birds were marked on the South Plains with 9 x 2 1/4 inch markers attached to the front edge of each wing. Juvenile birds have blue tags and adults have white tags. Each marker has a combination of letters and numbers that identify each bird.

The purpose in marking the birds is to learn at what age the birds mate and have young. More information is needed as to routes they take from Texas to Canada, where they nest, and their general behavior. The data from this study will provide the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department with a more accurate picture of the status of the cranes' population. This information will be used to manage the species and provide Texas with guidelines to set the annual fall hunting seasons.

Anyone observing these marked birds should note the location from the nearest town, the date and the time of observation, color of markers, letters and number on marker, and the name and address of the observer. Report sightings to Bird Banding Lab, laurel MD 20811 or any P&WD office or local game warden.

Congressional Candidate Bush Visits

Visiting in The Journal office this week, George Bush, Republican candidate for the 19th Congressional District seat, gave several stands on prominent issues facing voters.

On the farm bill, he said he supports the Dole Bill. And said he supported that bill because it was a one year bill; would create the least of any federal interference and uses the marketplace with supply and demand to raise prices.

He also advocated long-term solutions to the farm problems and said people in Washington needed to get involved with overseas negotiations to develop markets as a first priority for farm goods.

Bush also said he favors restricting imported beef and says the labeling should be the same as the health standards imposed for U.S. products.

The candidate said he believed it would take joint federal and state participation to get water imported into the state and is convinced such a water plan will pay out itself and will help all Americans.

He also said legislators should fight to make sure government involvement is only on a financial basis.

On energy he said he believes tremendous number of gas reserves are yet to be discovered and said that only two percent of all potential onshore acreage has been explored for deep gas. Bush advocated that gas is cleaner and cheaper than coal and supports more exploration within the boundaries of the U.S. to help end some of the overseas dependence on oil and gas products.

He was making his second trip to Muleshoe and expects to be back in the area in the future. His home is Odessa where he is an independent oilman.

The Canal Vote

The adverse reaction to the recently ratified Panama Canal treaty in many Latin American newspapers, and among some Latin American officials, prompts second reflections. Pre-treaty Senators had to accept safeguard amendments, such as one allowing this country to intervene militarily if the canal is threatened, to accumulate enough votes to win the first of the two key canal votes—68 to 32.

Now there is evidence Panama really isn't accepting these changes as binding. Other Latin leaders have denounced the amendments.

What about the upcoming vote, then, on transferring actual sovereignty to Panama? This is a more serious vote—since other American acquisitions could be questioned once the precedent of returning sovereignty is begun. And should that be done if there is disagreement on what has been agreed to?

As Senator Bob Dole says, rejection of the proposed transfer of sovereignty doesn't mean there will be no treaty, simply that there will be another treaty. The United States need not panic, nor be intimidated, during the present process of arriving at a treaty which safeguards U.S. interests and rights without contradictions and doubts.

Energy & Americans

Joseph Harsch, of the Christian Science Monitor, and others, have recently taken the American people to task for not reducing their consumption of oil. They blame the dollar's troubles on this lack of foresight and discipline among the American people.

This argument is weak on two counts. The American people now suspect there's no shortage of oil and are right. Currently, there is a glut. They also suspect, perhaps rightly, that other energy sources might be found to alleviate the energy crisis by the mid 1980's, the earliest date petroleum reserves could begin to run out.

Secondly, it's not the American overuse of oil which is the primary cause of the dollar's trouble. It's the lack of discipline in Congress and the White House in reducing spending. If the domestic budget were balanced, even an imbalance in international trade would not send the dollar plummeting as it has been doing. The obvious threat of inflation to the dollar, by continued overspending, by huge budget deficits (this year's likely to be $70 billions plus), is the primary cause of loss of confidence in the dollar.

Doubling the price of gasoline and bringing the U.S. standard of living down toward that of other countries just may not be the only solution. Perhaps we have not yet come to that. Oil prices should and must go up some but a moderate rise, coupled with an intensified effort to utilize coal, methyl, alcohol, biomass conversion, solar, geothermal and nuclear energy sources, plus better insulation of buildings, and spending discipline, might be better solutions.

In other words, most Americans suspect the Carter-Schlesinger war crisis approach of early 1977 hasn't yet been proven to be justified—and they may be right.

NEWS REPORT FROM WASHINGTON

Carter Being Tested- Stands His Ground- Congress The Key- Defending Kearney

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- President Carter last year took on the oil companies. The results were mixed. Some feel he lost more than he gained in fairly blunt attacks on the big petroleum giants. Congress listened to the oil companies, to business and rallying cries about free enterprise, as much as it listened to Carter.

Now Carter has taken on Israel's Menachem Begin, and American Jewish organizations (but not all of them or all Jews) insisting on Israeli concessions to get Middle East peace talks going again.

In the past, Israeli leaders have always been able to rely on key supporters in the Senate and House to confront the President, if necessary, in behalf of Israeli policies. This time Mr. Carter has made it clear U.S. interests, hopes for Middle East and world peace, hinge on more flexibility from Begin.

He has let it be known clearly on the Hill that U.S. interests are not served by Israel's present policy. Nevertheless, many Jews feel still they can count on the continued support of the Senate's five Jewish members and Senator Henry Jackson (D-Wash), and others, to oppose Carter, plus a number of House members, and they may be right.

The political clout of the American Jewish lobby, especially "back home" in some states, is considerable, and ruthlessly applied. It has turned more than one congressional solon against official U.S. policies in the past.

Carter is standing his ground, though already in deep trouble with his three-country arms deal. Israeli supporters in Congress now believe they can delay the Carter-proposed arms agreement with Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Israel, as a way to block the sale of sixty F-15's to U.S. ally Saudi Arabia.

The danger to the United States in Congress blocking this long-ago-agreed-upon sale is twofold. Saudi Arabia has been the primary exponent of holding the line on oil prices, and in continuing to back the weakening dollar.

The Internal Revenue Service recently refused to grant the Fund for the FBI tax-exempt status. The fund, defending FBI agents now being indicted because of past activities, is now appealing to the public for donations to meet expenses. Two other funds, using their money to aid prosecution of FBI agents, are tax-exempt!

Senator Price Raps Emergency Farm Bill

Senator Bob Price said Monday that he was alarmed by the comments of the Carter Administration's agricultural spokesman, Dr. Howard York, at the House and Senate conference on the Emergency Farm Bill in Washington.

Senator Price attended the conference and visited the conferees to discuss the various proposals put forth.

"The Administration is committed to a cheap food policy," Price said. "The Administration tipped its hand when Dr. York stated that the administration is afraid of production being reduced to an extent that it will reduce supplies and increase prices."

During his visit with the conferees, Senator Price encouraged them to pass legislation that will be fair and equitable to both farmers and consumers.

"I don't believe consumers expect to buy their food at substandard prices, and farmers should not be expected to produce food and fiber for the people of this country and the world at prices that force them out of business. I was very disturbed when the administration admitted that it prefers large surpluses, and large supplies in warehouse, so that it can sell our agricultural products to foreign countries at a cheap price."

"The day for a decision is here. We either help the American farmer now, or face skyrocketing food prices for American consumers and the loss of additional thousands of American agricultural producers."

Senator Price went to Washington at his own expense, along with many Texas agricultural producers, to provide assistance in the development of sound legislation that would be beneficial to the residents of his district, the State of Texas, and the nation as a whole. The Texas legislature does not meet until January of 1979.

Price said that since he had been a member of the U.S. House Agriculture Committee when he was in Congress, he was given the opportunity Monday to attend the conference committee meeting, to listen to the debate, and to visit with members—both Republicans and Democrats, from the House and from the Senate—of the conference committee.

Senator Clayton Speaks On Panama Canal Treaty

Untold thousands of Texas jobs will be in jeopardy and the economic losses to the State could run into the billions of dollars if the U.S. Senate chooses to sign over the Panama Canal as is now contemplated. Our State's losses will be in the form of staggering setbacks in the agriculture and petroleum industries, to marine commerce and related businesses dependent on these major sectors of the State's economy. The main reason for these losses will be uncertainty about the continued efficient operation of the canal and the promise of higher toll charges that could rise at unprecedented rates. For a number of reasons it is conceivable that the Canal could be closed for indefinite periods of time. Labor strikes, lack of proper maintenance, civil uprising, etc., are all possibilities. It is generally conceded that once Panama takes over the operations of the Canal, inefficiency in operation will rise greatly. What would that do to Alaskan crude oil being shipped to Texas? It would mean a trip around the tip of South America and an increase of 90 cents transportation cost for each barrel. That would mean a $180,000 per year increase in the cost of Alaskan oil coming to Texas. That in itself is a staggering annual figure. Many jobs dependent on shipping from Texas ports will be impacted because the inevitable higher tolls will impact shipments of commodities which are susceptible to transportation rates. The ripple effect that will spread throughout the Gulf Coast area in the maritime industry will cost those areas dearly in personal income. Losses of a number of jobs in any industry eventually affects merchants, job holders and government. Farmers will be forced to find new markets or alternate transportation. Just think of the costs that are involved, especially when you take into consideration that farmers are already losing money on their grain crops. The actions of the federal government routinely have impact on the states. To what degree the impact of those decisions is felt can usually be debated at great length. Some times the results are good, this time they will cause undesirable consequences.

The canal controversy is a classic example of the states having little to say about impacts of federal action. I have found that not only do we have little say, there has not been a determination of how great the impact could be on Texas or any other state. For that reason, 10 days ago I asked eight House members to lend their assistance in making an attempt to determine to what degree ratification of these treaties with Panama would impact the economic health of Texas. The study had to be done quickly if it was to have any chance of being seen by members of the Senate before Thursday's first major vote. For that reason I asked those participating in the research to produce a product that would aid in determining if there would be consequential economic impact on the state from the treaties as they now stand. I wish to thank Representatives S.L. Abbott, Wilhelmina Delco, Joe Hanna, Joe Hubanek, Jim Nugent, Ron Wilson, Brad Wright and Joe Wyatt for providing the basic research pool with their staffs. Dr. Herb Grubb and his staff from the Planning and Development section of the Texas Department of Water Resources did a remarkable job gathering and digesting data with the Texas Input-Output Model. Without the assistance of these very fine researchers, the Texas Legislative Council and the work of members of my personal staff we would not have been able to meet such a short and arbitrary deadline. Being delivered this morning to Sen. Bentsen, Sen. Tower, and 98 other U.S. Senators, the Texas Congressional Delegation and the Washington news media, are copies of the report. There has been no attempt made to color the report because of any personal leanings concerning the treaties. The evidence in the report is factual and well documented. I believe any one who reads this brief but detailing study will determine that Texas stands to lose very substantially over the broad spectrum of its economy. If you would consider the entire labor force in any one of the cities of Waco, Abilene, Odessa or Tyler you are speaking of approximately 50,000 jobs—and that's how many jobs could be impacted in major economic sectors of the Texas economy by the Canal change-over, conservative estimates indicate. To this end almost $1 billion annually in personal income and federal, state and local taxes could be in jeopardy. It is impossible to pinpoint determinations about what the impacts will be without knowing exactly what will happen to the Canal in the future. Instability, toll increases and interrupted service through closure or inefficient operation could cost Texas many billions more through lost markets or by placing our producers and manufacturers at a pricing disadvantage. This report spills out what increased unemployment in Gulf Coast and farming communities and business failures could mean to our State.

Texas more than any other state will suffer from the turn-over of the Canal under the treaties as now represented because of our proximity to the Canal and our vigorous export and import economy. While there may be reasons for the United States to negotiate a new treaty it becomes apparent from this report alone that there are some necessary changes that must be included in the treaties if Texas and other states are not to suffer inordinate economic losses. There should be ceilings placed on the amount of increases allowed in toll charges. If it becomes clear that operation of the Canal is not efficient and ships are not expedited and charges not contained, then the U.S. should have the prerogative-guaranteed by treaty—to take over control of Canal operations. Our leaders should consider the hardships that will be placed on Texas and many other states if constructive amendments are not added to the documents. I call on Texas' Senators to look out for the good of the citizens of Texas. I ask that the U.S. Senate take the time to consider carefully what they are doing to Texas and reflect on how their own states are impacted. I call on the citizens of Texas to express their displeasure at this unnecessary intrusion on the economy of Texas and all Americans who disagree with this form of diplomatic relations to appeal to the President and the Senate.

General Telephone Company of the Southwest has filed tariffs with the Public Utility Commission of Texas to implement the Federal Communications Commission's telephone equipment registration program (FCC Docket 19528). The tariffs have an effective date of April 15, 1978. The proposed changes will reduce rates for extension telephones and 25 foot long cords; will restructure one-time charges for service connection, moves and changes, increasing some and reducing others; and will offer reduced monthly rates for one-party business and residence customers who provide their own primary telephone instrument. The proposed changes in rates, with some increasing and others decreasing, will reduce General's gross revenues from its Texas operations by $2,565.00.

Fine Arts Host Dinner, Play For Residents

Friday, March 31, the Muleshoe High School Speech Department presented Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" during the Fine Arts Boosters Dinner Theatre. This annual program provides a money-making project for the Fine Arts Department and at the same time gives the people of Muleshoe a chance to see the UIL District One Act Play before their competition actually begins. The comedy involved the Countess Olivia, four of her household servants, and the chief servant Malvolio. These four servants became so outraged at the conceit and egotistical actions of Malvolio that they decide to play an infuriating and embarrassing prank on him. The Fool, Sir Andrew, Sir Toby, and Maria all share their pleasure as they view the predicament of Malvolio. Approximately 350 people were on hand to see the show. Before the show began they were treated to a fried chicken dinner that was accompanied by a performance of the stage band. These students headed by Mr. Faulkner provided good, enjoyable entertainment that helped make the evening a success.

AG John Hill Said Surprised By Surplus

Attorney General John Hill said today he was pleasantly surprised by the state Comptroller's admission there will be a $3 billion surplus when the legislature meets next year. "Bob Bullock recently had good news for Texas taxpayers. Although he said several months ago the state surplus would be only $650 million, now he admits there will be a $3 billion surplus next year. "That means that there is no question that my proposal to give the local property tax relief by upping the state's share of the cost of education can be implemented without new taxes, as I said all along. "The $3 billion surplus revelation leaves Gov. Briscoe's scare tactics about my programs causing new taxes high and dry without any foundation in fact. "My education spending programs total $1.3 billion, and we spent $1 billion on new education spending last year. Last year we had a $3 billion surplus, and next year we will have a $3 billion surplus. Gov. Briscoe is going to have a hard time scaring people into believing my programs will cause new taxes by using figures like those."
