

Narrow Gauge Railroads.

There were we copied from the Missouri Democrat an article relating to the failure of narrow gauge railroads in India. The article of its substance had been previously taken from the N. Y. Bulletin. The Democrat now reviews the subject and furnishes additional views. We omit our views of the views and facts contained in the Democrat which are acceptable, but take the liberty to express ourselves from memory in our own language.

The opposition to the United States has not been to correspond with India. They have not done so invariably. It would seem that the Denver Narrow Gauge Company are pushing their line along with unexampled rapidity. They have obtained the consent of the Mexican Government to construct a line from Mexico to the City of Mexico, thence to the Pacific Coast, and almost before we realize it, this brilliant feat will be accomplished and thousands of adventurous spirits will be flocking to the distant parts of the continent.

It is a pity that the many attempts to build a line from the City of Mexico to the Pacific Coast, and almost before we realize it, this brilliant feat will be accomplished and thousands of adventurous spirits will be flocking to the distant parts of the continent.

I will give another illustration of it as represented by Mr. Morgan's policy. It is a portion of a conversation I recently heard between a gentleman from Indiana and some of our town folks. The gentleman from Indiana, in alluding to our disagreement with Mr. Morgan, said that he had Antonio turned her trade from Indiana to Galveston, via Acapulco, A. C. Morgan would charge the same rate of freight from New Orleans to Galveston, as to Indiana; and if he induced a line of steamers in opposition to his, that he would establish in our city opposition to business houses, and under all, as he had done elsewhere, where a combination against him was attempted, and continuing until we came back to first principles, acknowledged his power, and submitted to his dictation in brief, that Mr. Morgan, with his little of eight or ten millions of dollars, controlled the entire trade of Western Texas. What say Bismarck & Co., Norton & Davis, and Sartor, in Hardware; Goldfrank, Frank & Co., H. Oppenheimer & Co., and that live man, Clapp, in Dry Goods; Grenet, Gross & Co., and Whittier & Co., in Groceries, and a host of other first class houses, to this threatened policy?

The assertion to me seemed very ridiculous, but coming from a merchant and property owner of Indiana, who would suffer so materially by such a policy of ours, it is somewhat reasonable. I know him as a gentleman of truth and business ability, but evidently the danger threatening his direct interests, has in his mind, magnified the power of Mr. Morgan, created an imaginary terror, and blinded him to the power which the body he represents wields, and which, if put in motion with the object in view, its grand influence—the combined mercantile influence of Western Texas—would crush Mr. Morgan, or drive him steamships from our coast, to give place to other and more worthy and just pocket lines.

Mr. Morgan is not the dictator—rather the merchant of Texas are. Their interests are mutual, as regards the steam-line; but Mr. Morgan has been taking the Lion's share for "for those many years," and it is time to change the programme. It is true that Mr. Morgan has done a great deal for the advancement of Texas, but Texas has returned the favor ten fold. This assertion on the part of the gentleman from Indiana, does, I believe, depict the policy as practiced by Mr. Morgan, but he magnified a mole-hill into a mountain. Texas can better do without Mr. Morgan than he can without Texas. Let us offer the same inducements—the trade of Western Texas—in the New York market, and how promptly it would be concluded for! But the day is near at hand when, without effort of ours, and despite every effort of Mr. Morgan's, he will have to submit to competing lines of steamships. It looks up in the great torrent of emigration pouring into the Eastern end of our State, following the railroad lines, and far in advance to anticipate them. And when we become connected by rail with the East, a live living stream will appear within the borders of, and setting up our country.

On several occasions opposition steamers were run against those of Mr. Morgan, and what was the result? The opposition boats ran on a lower tariff than Mr. Morgan, as at all times for the support of our merchants, thereby creating a healthy competition, and they promised to be a success. Mr. Morgan put his tariff lower, and instead of sustaining our real benefactor, our merchants looked back to Mr. Morgan and aided him in driving off our friends, the opposition, which was no accomplishment than Mr. Morgan raised his tariff and taxed our merchants and the waiting public, to reimburse him for with shippers whose sole aim is to rob us of our substance, and create monopolies whose managers will sit in some retired office in Wall street, New York City, and there control the legislation of the State of Texas. Of course we are authorized to speak only for ourselves; but we do say, that we prefer that the people of Texas should retain control of her own high-ways, and her own local legislation.

SAN ANTONIO, Dec. 18th 1878.

EDITORIAL EXPANSION.

As I stated in a former communication, an eastern railroad is the most important for us, as it will give a railroad connection with all parts of the Union. And if we succeed in that, a direct rail communication with Indiana will follow, without effort on our part; and with this view of the case we cannot afford to invest any portion of our country credit in a railroad to Indiana; but for the present, at least, let that connection stand on its own merits.

To show that Mr. Morgan feels no interest in extending his line to this place, until circumstances force him to, I will relate the substance of a conversation held with a gentleman on a visit here from Lockhart. He stated that Mr. Whitney and party, before coming to San Antonio, visited the former place and made certain propositions, promising that if accepted, they would not go to San Antonio. Not receiving such encouragement, they accepted our city, were "weighed, found wanting, and rejected," and subsequently again visited us in Lockhart, renewing their offers, with this gentleman apparently, a better prospect of success.

It is a pity that the many attempts to build a line from the City of Mexico to the Pacific Coast, and almost before we realize it, this brilliant feat will be accomplished and thousands of adventurous spirits will be flocking to the distant parts of the continent.

The following remarkable bit of criticism appeared in a Chicago Journal on the morning after Miss Jane Coombs and Robinson had each appeared in Chicago for the first time. After the extraordinary assertion that "the voice of Jenny Lind, with its magnificent volume, sweetness, and purity," was heard on the American public, "A. C. Morgan is made to play on the G string," as follows:

"Miss Jane Coombs, as Lady Teasle, fully sustains the great reputation she has so steadily earned, and we may say, literally wrung from us. Her impersonation of the young, fashionable, of the genius that breathes inspiration into them. The most striking feature of the evening's performance was her use of the G string in the little Barcarola of her final number." The above is probably owing to the blunders of a compositor; but it recalls vividly the well known "sibows of the Minnie."

A man thus related his experience in a financial way on the occasion of the failure of a local bank: "As soon as I heard of it my heart jumped right up into my mouth. 'Now, think I'm going I've got any bills on that bank! I'm gone if I have—that's a fact! So I put on my coat and 'put' for home as fast as my legs would carry me; but, I ran all the way; and when I got there I looked careful, and found that I hadn't any bills on that bank—nor any other! So I felt easier."

"Let that pudding alone, there. That's the desert!" exclaimed the waiter to a countryman, who was devouring the tarts on an early stage of the dinner. "I don't care if it is desert," testily said the countryman; "I'd eat it if it was a wilderness."

Why Endure What is Curable? "What can't be cured must be endured," says the proverb; but indignation can be cured, and therefore it is the merest stupidity to endure it. Dyspepsia has certainly a right to equipage dyspepsia to the end of their days if they choose, but as it is not supposed that any rational being prefers physical torment to ease and health, the probability is that if all sufferers from indignation were convinced that an absolute, infallible remedy for their complaint existed, they would with one accord resort to it. We most emphatically desire that such a remedy does exist, and that its name is Hostetter's Stomach Bitter. The record of its success extends over a period of more than twenty years, and it is fearfully alleged that during the whole of that time it has never failed to afford permanent relief in any disorder or derangement of the stomach that was not organic, malignant and incurable. The testimonials that go to establish this important fact can be counted by the thousands. Stomach complaints that had been aggravated by a total disregard of all dietary rules, and intensified and rendered chronic by medical treatment or drastic purgation, have in hundreds of instances been cured within three months by the systematic use of this celebrated stomachic and alterative. It should be remembered that weakness of the digestive organs involves many other ailments. Biliousness, headache, nervous debility, spasms, palpitation of the heart, flush of blood to the head, nausea, vertigo, and sleeplessness are among the concomitants and results; and for all these the great vegetable tonic is a specific. It acts first upon the stomach, and through the stomach upon the nervous and nervous systems and the bowels, its general effect being always genial and beneficial.
