o far in May, a heavenly day— chies were bright, the fields were gay blossoms, butterflies and bees, singing birds in the cherry trees; the air from gardens, woods and Was sweet with the breath of vernal flowers; And the waving wheat fields resmed to nd flocks and herds, in pastures green, Enlivaned far and wide the scene;

And here and there, on hill and plane,
Stood clustering stacks of hay and grain
And near the old-time mannion played
Its piccaninnies in the shade, While the "field hand" slave forgot his Of bondage in his cheerful songs,

That May day at Manassas. Aboutdance smiled on every hand; Peace reigned o'er the contented land, And houset welcome stood before The sun-browned farmer s open door, As on the nosutide breezes borne, Was heard the inviting dinner horn; And dark-eyed beauties smiled within, And graced the hespitable scene. That May day at Manaes

While musing there, as in a dream, On the gray stone bridge which spans'd the stream, Our shining horses pranced along.

Down from the hill, a merry throng of country belies and rustic knights.

And noisy with the day's delights— The escort of a grown and bride, Upon their marriage morning ride— That May day at Manassa

Yet once again I pass'd that way, In the merning of another May: But what an awful change was there-Affecting even the light and sir! Are these realities? They seem Are these resilines: They seem.
The horzors of a hideous dream.
I looked appail'd and in surprise.
On the blacken'd earth and smaky skies.
That May day at Mausses.

No fields of wheat the picture graced. Their very landmarks were effaced; No flocks or herds, or stacks of grain, Were visible on hill or pisin; But pits, redoubts, and many a mound. Where the bones of men in the shalle ground Lay buried from the battle's toil, Or partly whitening on the soil, That May day at Managean

Where I had roamed in fragrant woods I next explored the solitudes Of soldiers' cabins, far and wide, On the bills and by the water's side In dismal villages arrayed—
Till by their adors vile dismayed,
And sickened with a sense of four
Of deadly pestilence broading near, That May day at Mans

And the exhalations to the con And the exhalations to the sun From horses, with their tertures done; And from those dismal cabins, too, Where the sunlight were a sickly hue, And from that glastiy central post, Where the refuse of a warlike host Still smouthered and fermented, were The perfumes of the poison'd sir, That May day at Manage

LEROUX & COSGROVE ing him all he knows.

BY REINERCH HEINE. My neighbor, the old Grenadier, is seated at his threshold to-day, lost in meditation. At times he begins one of his old Bonapartist songs, but emotion chokes his songs, but emotion chokes his voice; his eyes are inflamed, and to all appearances, the old fellow has been weeping. He was at Franconi's last night, and while there, witnessed the battle of Austerlitz. He explained the faults of the play to me for he had fought at Austerlitz, where it was so cold that his fingers froze fast to his musket-while at Franconi's on the other hand, the heat was insupportable. He was well pleased with the powder smoke, and also with the smell of the horses, although he insisted that the cavalry at Austerlitz had not had such well-groomed grays. The powder-smoke at Franconi's was, as the old man said, excellent, and affected his chest so beneficial. and affected his chest so beneficially as to relieve him of his cough. "And the Emperor?" I asked him. "The Emperor," answered the old man, "was quite unchanged, the very picture of life, with his gray capote and his little three cornered. hat, and my heart throbbed in my breast. Ah! the Emperor," the old fellow added, "God knows how much I love him. During life I have often gone through fire for him, and even after death I shall have to go through fire for him again." Ricon, thus was the old man named, repeated the last words in a gloomy, mysterious tone. I had frequently heard him say that the expected to go to hell for the Emperor, and when I urged him to explain his strange words, he told me the following story: At the time that Napoleon caused Pope Pius VII, to be removed from Rome and carried to Savona, Ricou belonged to a company of greu-adiers who were placed a guard over him. The Pope was, at first, accorded many privileges; without hindrance he could leave his apartments at any hour and repair to the chapel of the castle, where he read the mass daily. When, on such occasions, he passed through the great hall in which the grenadiers were on guard, he would bless them. But one morning the greundiers received positive orders to watch the Pope's exits more strictly than beceived positive orders to watch the fore, and to prevent him from going through the great hall. As ill-luck would have it, the execution of this order fell to the lot of Ricou, who, being a Breton, was, of course an arch-Catholic and regarded the captive Pope as the vicercy of Christ.

Poor Ricou was standing guard before the spartment of the Pope when the latter, according to his wont, desired to pass through the great hall in order to read the mass in the castle chapel. Ricon, however, advanced and declared that he had received orders not to allow the Holy Father to pass. Several priests who were in the Pope's train endeavored to speak to his soul, to explain the sacrilege and sin he was committing, and the deep damna-tion he would draw upon his head, by preventing the Pope from reading mass. All was in vain. Ricouremained firm, always fell back upon the impossibility of disobeying orders, and when, despite this, the Pope attempted to advance, he cried out boldly "Au nom de l' Empereur !" and, with bayonet presented, forced the Pope to retreat. After a few days the harsh order was revoked, and the Pope was again permitted to pass through the great ball on his way to mass. He would then bless all except poor Ricou, whom he re garded with a glance of rebuke and upon whom he always turned his back where he extended his hand to bless the rest. "And yet I could not have acted otherwise," the old invalide added, when he had told me the story. "I could not told me the story. "I could not have acted otherwise; I had my orders, and it was my duty to obey the Emperor. May God forgive me! But, at his command, I would have run my bayonet through the body of the Lord himself!" I assured the poor fellow that the Emperor was answerable for all the sius of the Grande Armee, but that this would injure him but little, as there was not a devit in hell who would dare lay hands upon Napoleon. The old man gladly approved of my words, and, with voluble en-thusiasm, began to tell me of the splendor of the empire and of the empire and of the imperial times when all was flourishing and flow-ing with gold, while now the whole world seemed so taded and with-

Durney, an old "comp," awoke to find himself astride a salt barrel several feet from where he had been standing. There was a tingling sensation all through him, making his nerves feel like wires, and he could not find his voice for two or three minutes. Hugh Martin, proprictor of the Commercial Dining-rooms, on Griswold street, says he thought a powder explosion had oc-

Every other man in the house was similarly treated, some being even more roughly used, but after three or four minutes, seven of the nine got upon their feet, and found themselves still alive. The other two were senseless. One of them named Mike Dumford, was lying in wing the second room on his back, and the other was flat on the floor, and bleeding at the nose. Western Texas was represented so to speak, in the last Legislature by Judge Ireland of Seguin, and in Congress by the Honorable Jno.

There is no good reason for expressing any surprise at their elec-tion, but it is surprising that the Democracy has not become fatigued by worshiping these gilded calves. We have asked for bread and they have given us a stone, and Sung it at us in the bargain.

We notice in the Statesman that Ireland is no longer "a repudiationist" and there is something juicy and rich from his own lips to go to prove it. It is all a mistake. He is in full harmony with the Democracy, now. If the courts say so he will struggle no longer, but recognize the justice of giving the International those bonds they have been entitled to by their contract leng since,

But the Democracy of this sec tien know what Ireland and his crew have done for them already.

They not only know it, but, as we mentioned yesterday, they uphold him and glory in his and their shame. We are ut a loss to couceive what has made this man so popular of late unless it is the attacks which the Herald has been making on him.

It is unnecessary to go over his course in the Legislature and show ment of the bonds under any circumstances, and that the Democraey as there represented sustained

As to what his views are now that is of as little importance as the color of last year's clouds,

When we speak of the Democraey sustaining Ireland we mean of the most part, men who do but little to sustain the country. It is all one to them if the machinery of the Government stops by reason of reation destroying our credit or not. They are for the most part men who would be happier without any Government whatever.

But it is different with the capi lists, who wish to find safe invest ents. The industrious tax-paying German bas nothing common with men who would prefer to living like the wolves and swine.

The young Demodracy, men who have become tired of fumbling over he dust and ashes of "the Lost Cause" have nothing in common with Ireland and his policy. But they are in the minority in beir own party. They are not ocrafs, for every progressive neasure they advocate has its rise in the Republican party. Free schools, preservation of law and order, progressive ideas generally are never carried out in extreme Democratic States.

have a State Convention in September. A Democratic Convention has been called at that time, but we do not recollect to have seen it called Conservative by any Texas paper, though we hope its measures may be entitled to that name. It may be interesting to our readers to know the pintone of our neighbors in regard to Texas politics and parties, and we there-ere copy as tollows from the Avalanche: "One of the prominent, perhaps the leading question in the state canvass for governor, will be the payment or repudim of the debt of the International Railway Company. In the West there is a secret society called the League of Justice, organized on a broad basis of operation, and which has a good foot hold in Texas. The animating and controlling power is opposition to railroad companies, and especially the repudiation of all bonds and stocks voted by the people, or by connties and states to aid railroads. The League of Justice will probably co-operate with the Grauges, and succeed, in the Texas State Convention, in selecting or nominating a candidate on a platform of their own construction. The old political parties will have difficulty in preserving discipline, and the sectional aspect of the railrood question may force them to give it up altogether. East Texas and South west Texas must be made to harmonize on a state Ticket, but this can not be dene without disposing of the International Railroad bends in some way which will secure the building of the road. The immense influence which is yielded in every state by railroad interests is strikingly illustrated in Texas, where it is altogether likely the mere political considrention, as they may affect the Republican or Democratic parties, will be overlooked by the people, who are determined to have railroads or determined not to have them."—Galveston News.

Mr. Chase even dallied with the Muses, nd wrote poerry, though from the ex-mples handed down to us, it may be amples handed down to us, it may be considered fortunate that his ambition in that direction was quenched by a more mature judgment. But it serves to it lustrate the activity and fullness of his mind, that at a time when he was pushing his way at the bar, compiling the Statutes of Ohio, writing upon biographicsi, historical and scientific subjects for newspapers and periodicals, he also found time to write years and recreate himself in translations of the Latin poets into English. This specimen of his poetry is as lair as we could select;

City Affairs.

The following appears in the Herald under the heading of "The City Paupers": "We have been told, and we believe the statement to be true, that one of the paupers on the City list is now a porter in the store of a merchant, who is a member of the City Council. Now there are three merchants in the City Council, Mess. Michel, Groos, and Briam.

The name of Mr. Michel's porter is Wm Pflughaupt, an industrious man owning property and paying taxes. Mr. Gross has two porters, neither of them paupers. Mr. Briam has no porter. As the Herald believes the story to be true, we are auxious to hear what reason he has to do so. The truth is that the pauper list does need revision, and we all know in what

The Aldermen of Ward No. 4 have already revised the list of their Wards, and only four paupers remain on it. It is the same with Ward No. 3. But four fifths of the paupers are Mexicans from the only part of the City where Democratic Aldermen can be elected viz, over the San Pedro.

It was the Mexican vote that elected the present administration, and as the proverb says very accurately in this case: "one hand washes the other." It has been the custom heretofers for the Mayor to put anybedy on the list that chose apply. The case of Lametre will be remembered. He was a Belgian ; able to work, and owning property, but deserving of public sustenance because he was a victim to strong drink and had an insurmountable disinclination to work when seber. The Mayor was moved at the distressful condition of this poor devil, alone in the world, unable to keep up his establishment, and put him on the list, possibly 9-3-73dtf with many appologies for his seeming neglect in not having done so before. We exposed the fraud and Alderman Michel had him thrown upon his own resources at once. Let the rest of the Aldermen do as Mr. Michel has done and the list will come down to reasonable proportion. In Ward No. 4 there are only 6 paupers on the list. How many attend to roll call and answer to their name and draw their rations it is impossible for us to say, but it must be in the neighborhood of 60. An investigation will show that many of them are better able to earn a living than the Ma-

> DR. U. F. BRAWN'S Young American Liniment.

This Liniment has gained a lasting reputation, where it has been used, in most cases which require an external remedy, such as rheumatism, soreness and swelling of the breast, pain and weakness in the back and joints, sprains, bruise-cramps, numbness, frezen limbs, bites insects, old sores, fever sores, goitre or swelled neck, paralysis, wounds, erysipelas, bites of reptiles, bhadache, white swellings, mange, poison, burns, all swellings, salt rheum, corns, warts, sore eyes, run-rounds, &c. We daily hear of the most astonishing cures on animals by this saying that there never has been its equi as a curative for horses. We assert posi-tively that it will cure any case of sweeny in existence; also splint, galls, sprains or strains, bruises, scratches, wounds, big head, wind galls, sore eyes, swellings, ac.; and has never failed to ourse fistula, poli-eyil, ring-bone and spavin. When used in the beginning, strictly according to direc-tions, and given internally with the food, it is a harmless but certain remedy for worms. Do not fail to give it a trial; only 25 cents a bottle.

*Herse Epidemic.—This Liniment cured thousands of horses at the North during the prevalence of the horse distemper there. In such cases rub the neck and throat well every evening, and give a table spoonful of it in the horse's food for two or three evenings.
