As a rash and blinded Sunday School scholar, we may have spoken disrespectfully of J. Iscariot. The experience of the last six months shows that Mr. Iscariot may have been a gentleman who was much misunderstood by the people of the period. Some acribe probably placed the thirty pieces of silver where he thought they would do the most good, and when poor Ju das found that he had been brought into a lawsuit (the Hon. P. He ought to have sent the money down to Capernaum seminary, and then appealed to the generous confidence of a constituency with whose feelings and interests every throb of his heart beat in unison. The editor of the Gal litean Telegram would have made a very nice thing of that, and the Hon. J. Iscariot would have been one of the most prominent candidates at the next election.
