"WHAT THEN?"
"After the joys of earth—
After his songs of mirth,
After the hours of night,
After the dreams so bright—
What then?
Only an empty name,
Only a weary frame,
Only a conscious heart,
Only an aching breast."
After this an empty name,
After this weary frame,
After this conscious heart,
After this aching breast—
What then?
Only a sad farewell
To a world loved too well;
Only a silent hand,
With the forgotten dead.
After this silent farewell
To a world loved too well;
And foot of the silent hand,
With the forgotten dead.
What then?
THE REVEREND OF HEAVEN.
There is a pure and peaceful way,
That leads from the earthly shore away,
Where waters glad, as they have
The peaceful shores above.
While streams, which on that tide depend,
Stand from the lovely shores away,
And on this desert world descend,
O'er weary lands to stay.
There, O my soul! do thou repair,
And hover o'er the hallowed spring,
To drink the crystal wave, and there
To have thy weary wing.
There dropped that wing, when far it flies
From human care, and toil, and strife,
And foot of the silent hand, which rise
To reach the tree of life.
—Hymns of the Higher Life.

BY SOLON N. SAPP.
The azure lake is sleeping now
So sweetly and so still,
Soothed by the shade of maple bough
And shadows from the hill.
The little fold their lay hands
And lean upon her breast,
In dreamy groups along the banks
The oars are at rest.
Is drowsy lullabies the doves
Are cooing in the air,
They blissfully forget their loves
Or know that bus in drear.
No sound is there in all the brake,
No ripple on the level lake,
No motion anywhere.
A drowsy haze the mountains keep,
A dream is all the sky,
My dream of sleep to sleep,
To dream, and so will I.
A Conductor to be Trusted.
[Chicago Tribune Letter.]
One day, before Cornelius Vanderbilt obtained possession of the Hudson River Railway, he was traveling. It is said, from here to Albany, and, considering himself a privileged character, went into the baggage car to smoke. He had been enjoying his cigar but two or three minutes when the conductor came along and informed him politely that he must not smoke there. Vanderbilt said that it wouldn't make any difference—that it was all right, &c.; but the conductor was of a different opinion—declaring that it was contrary to the rules of the road. "You don't know me," said the speaker, "my name is Vanderbilt. I am sometimes called Commodore. I generally do about as I please." "I don't know, nor do I care who you are, Mr. Vanderbilt. I intend to obey the rules. If you were ten times a Commodore, I could not permit you to smoke here; and you must go elsewhere to finish your cigar." The loyalty to duty displayed by the conductor pleased the ancient Cornelius, and he went out, though not before he had said to the conductor: "You are the right kind of a man for your place. You don't respect persons. I think of buying this road, and if I do, you can stay on it as long as you like." Vanderbilt did buy the road, and retained the conductor. He frequently remarked that that man could be trusted; that he was never mistaken in judging of character; and that he knew from the first that the conductor was sound. The conductor staid on the road for five years, and in that time, as the story goes, stole himself into a pecuniary independence. So much for Vanderbilt's knowledge of character. Evidently the conductor knew Vanderbilt better than Vanderbilt knew the conductor.

THE OTHER DAY
The other day a young lady had occasion to leave her apartment for a few minutes, locked the door and left a little child of two years playing upon the floor. When she came back she was horrified to see the girl toying with a rat which she held in her hand, and who affectionately caressed with the other. With a scream of dismay the young mother rushed to its side, and, snatching up the rat, proceeded to do up her hair with it.

THE CITY COUNCIL
The City Council of Sherman has passed an act of prohibition, and den and sharp, against all dogs running at large in that city.

CREATE WOMEN.
The Creole woman is prettier than the French woman. There is a climate influence in America which refines features and gives delicacy to the complexion. This is especially the case in Louisiana, where finely formed women are to be found to be the descendants of noble-looking ancestors. The light olive tint of the woman seems to have been painted over a ground color of blushing lake, and this pinkish creaminess of the skin gives it from delicacy and softness. In a word, there is something of that transparency for which painters are always seeking. She inherits from her mother over the sea the physical characteristics of round limbs and delicate extremities, with a figure something slighter—another effect of climate, also that sense of art with which people are born, but can never entirely acquire. From the same source come her coquetry and her grace of speech and action, but modified. She does not wear crude colors or awry shapes; nor does she express herself with unbecomingly gaudy or discordant colors. Her dress is rather simple than gay, and her carriage simple and conventional—for they all walk alike. Smoothness and gracefulness are hers. In a word there is an absence of angles in her general conduct.—Louisiana Oracle, by Albert Rhodes, in August Galaxy.

Never go to sleep in a auction room. A man lately nodding in one found himself charged with half the goods sold during the evening.
An Illinois town boasts among its steaming attractions that she has the largest distillery and collin factory in the state.
A boy fifteen years old was lately sentenced to the penitentiary for five years, for stealing a horse, in Leavenworth County, Kansas.
Smutty Nose Island, Isle of Shoals, the scene of the Wagner tragedy, is said to have been entirely deserted by the superstitious fishermen living there.
The Illinois railroad commissioners decide that special freights on articles intended for the industrial fair do not constitute the unjust discrimination prohibited by statute.
A New Orleans girl ate a box of castle soap to get rid of the freckles. The mourners remarked a very peaceful expression about the mouth at the funeral, but the freckles were as numerous as ever.

INSTEAD OF USING YOUR INFLUENCE to retard improvements, exert it to encourage every laudable enterprise which builds up the town and country. The latter course is wisdom, while the former is foolishness.
To prevent the teeth from decaying, brush them with lime-water. Even if they are far gone, it will cause them to decay with little or no pain. Saturate the brush well and use with tooth powder.
All shipments from St. Louis to the East by rail must go across Illinois. The Democrats say that the new law has increased the rates on flour 20 cents per barrel already, and that it is likely to enforce an addition of 30 cents.

GRASS GREENWOOD
passed the following ordinance to Senator Carpenter some time ago, but at last accounts had received no answer: "If it is hard for a Senator to be a good Christian on $5000 a year, what are a poor clerk's chances of salvation on $1450?"
Some excitement was created near Baker City, Oregon, last week, by a woman on horseback, armed with a sixshooter, riding at break-neck speed, and inquiring if the stage was ahead. She overtook the stage, but the man she wanted was not in it.
A singular epidemic broke out in a Kansas town last week. Every wife in the town was suddenly attacked by an irresistible desire to present her husband with a nice little dressing case, with shaving material complete. An attractive young woman had opened a barber shop in the village.

who advocates plenty of air and exercise, prescribes the following course of treatment for all who are troubled with weak lungs. Take a strong rope, and fasten it to a beam overhead; to the lower end of the rope, attach a stick 3 feet long, convenient to grasp with the hands. The rope should be fastened to the center of the stick, which should hang six or eight inches above the head. Let a person grasp this stick with the hands two or three feet apart, and swing very moderately at first—perhaps only bear the weight, if very weak—and gradually increase, as the muscles gain strength from the exercise, until it may be used from three to five times daily. The connection of the arms with the body, with the exception of the clavicle with the breast-bone, being a muscular attachment to the ribs, the effect of this exercise is to elevate the ribs and enlarge the chest; and as Nature allows no vacuum, the lungs expand to fill the cavity, increasing the volume of air, the natural purifier of blood, and preventing the congestion or the deposit of tuberculous matter. Every one who loves to live should cultivate a well-formed, capacious chest. The student, the merchant, the sedentary, the young of both sexes—yes, all—should have a swing on which to stretch themselves daily. We are certain that if this were to be practiced by the rising generation in a dress allowing a free and full development of the body, many would be saved from consumption. Independently of beneficial results, the exercise is an exceedingly pleasant one, and as the apparatus costs very little, there need be no difficulty about any one enjoying it who wishes to.

A TRAVELER
stopped at a public house in Maine for the purpose of getting his dinner. Dismounting at the front door, knocked, but received no answer. Going to the other side of the house, he saw a little white headed man in the embrace of his wife, who had his head under her arm, while with the other she was giving her little lord a pounding. Wishing to put an end to the fight our traveler knocked on the side of the house and cried out in a loud voice:
"Halloo here! who keeps this house?"
The husband, though much out of breath, answered:
"Stranger, that is what we are trying to decide."

A MEMPHIS GIRL
was married the other day, and immediately sold her piano, bought a sewing machine, and made her husband a suit of clothes and herself two calico dresses, and now fourteen young men are seeking the hand of her unmarried sister.

ABOUT THE ELEVENTH CENTURY
the Chinese invented paper money. In the thirteenth century, this paper currency, made from the bark of the mulberry tree, was the legal tender of the empire.

SUNDAY, AUG. 16, 1873.

We are authorized to announce FRANK NEWTON as a candidate for the office of District Clerk of Bexar Co. at the next election.

We are authorized to announce JAS. R. SWEET as a candidate for the office of Justice of the Peace, Precinct No. 7, at the coming election subject to the approval of the Democratic Convention.

Do you demand equal and exact justice for all men and all classes? That is the very essence of Democracy.

We were under the impression that it was the Republican party that had made an end of African slavery, much against the will of the Democracy.

It is generally believed that if the South had been willing to sacrifice slavery and arm the negroes that an independent government might have been established, but rather than do equal and exact justice to all men and all classes, the Democratic party preferred to give up even the cherished Confederacy.

In Texas we have seen one Democratic Legislature pass a labor law so grinding on those in the humble walks of life, the party press has never dared to defend it, and in 1873 we have the childish aping of the feudal despotism of the middle ages.

Equal and exact justice to all men and classes, the essence of Democracy. What kind of a bird is that chaff intended for? Does the Statesman know why the pig was killed.

It was because he had too much cheek. Or, perhaps, there is a lying match going on among the Democratic papers.

The Free Press attributes Gen. Clark's extraordinary statements to the reporter of the New York Tribune in reference to Gov. Davis to improper indulgence in alcoholic stimulants, and has also the following summing up of what Clark has done for the republican party.

tible, yes, he is even black, says the doughty General. It seems that he built his hopes on Gov. Davis giving him a false certificate, and with charming simplicity he fooled himself.

What wonderful ideas sometimes revolve in the brain of a carpet-bagger! But enough of this insubstantial subject. His very presence in Texas is a disgrace to the Republican party.

Feris of Baltimore. Mr. La Mountain's terrible death by a fall from his balcony, on the 4th of July, near Louis, Mich., recalls to mind some of the fatalities which have heretofore happened to balloonists in their perilous undertaking.

At last we began to hear pistol-shots near by in the next ravine. We knew what that meant! The other party were out practicing too. Then I was in the l. at degree distressed, for of course those people would have our shots, and they would send spire over the ridge, and the spire would find my barn-door without a wound or a scratch, and that would simply be the end of me—for of course the other man would immediately become as blood-thirsty as I was.

Well, I practiced and practiced at the barn door, and could not hit it, and I practiced at the rail, and I could not hit that; and I tried hard for the squash, and could not hit the squash. I would have been entirely disheartened, but that occasionally I slipped one of the boys, and that encouraged me to hope.

armed to the teeth, and all sights and insults had to be stoned for with the best article of blood your system could furnish. In the course of my editing I made trouble with a Mr. Lord, editor of the rival paper. He flew up about some little trifle or other that I said about him—I do not remember now what it was. I suppose I called him a thief, or body-snatcher, or an idiot, or something like that. I was obliged to make the paper readable, and I could not fail in my duty to a whole community of subscribers merely to avenge the exaggerated sensitiveness of an individual. Mr. Lord was offended, and replied vigorously in his paper. Vigorously means a great deal when it refers to a personal editorial in a frontier newspaper. Duffing was all the fashion among the upper classes in that country, and very few men would throw away an opportunity of fighting one. To kill a person in a duel caused a man to be even more looked up to than to kill two men in the ordinary way. Well, out there, if you abused a man, and that man did not like it, you had to call him out and kill him, otherwise you would be disgraced. So I challenged Mr. Lord, and I did hope he would not accept; but I knew perfectly well that he did not want to fight, and so I challenged him in the most violent and implacable manner.

And then I sat down and suffered and suffered till the answer came. All our boys—the editors—were in our office, helping me in the dismal business, and telling with a lot of aged ruffians who had had experience in such things, and altogether there was a loving interest taken in the matter, which made me unaccountably uncomfortable. The answer came—Mr. Lord declined. Our boys were furious, and so was I—on the surface.

I sent him another challenge, and another and another; and the more he did not want to fight the bloodthirstier I became. But at last the man's tone changed. He appeared to be "waking up." It was becoming apparent that he was going to fight me after all. I ought to have known how it would be—he was a man who never could be depended upon. Our boys were exultant. I was not, though I tried to be.

It was new time to go out and practice. It was the custom there to fight duels with navy six-shooters at fifteen paces—load and cure till the game for the funeral was secure. We went to a little ravine just outside of the town, and borrowed a barn-door for a target—borrowed it from a gentleman who was absent—and we stood this barn door up, and stood a rail on end against the middle of it, to represent his head. He was a very tall lean creature, the poorest sort of material for a duel—nothing but a live-shot could "fetch" him, and even then he might spit your bullet. Exaggeration aside, the rail was of course, a little too thin to represent his body accurately, but the squash and his head, it was in favor of the squash.

Well, I practiced and practiced at the barn door, and could not hit it, and I practiced at the rail, and I could not hit that; and I tried hard for the squash, and could not hit the squash. I would have been entirely disheartened, but that occasionally I slipped one of the boys, and that encouraged me to hope.

At last we began to hear pistol-shots near by in the next ravine. We knew what that meant! The other party were out practicing too. Then I was in the l. at degree distressed, for of course those people would have our shots, and they would send spire over the ridge, and the spire would find my barn-door without a wound or a scratch, and that would simply be the end of me—for of course the other man would immediately become as blood-thirsty as I was.
