There's something in the world. That I have never found; It hath an ancient name, With a complacent sound; Methinks it blossomed like old Aaron's In mystic times beneath the smile of God.

Posts have hymed its rare Poets have nymed its rare; Unchanged attributes; Pillenophers declars It once here golden fruits; God's children suck it o'er the Christian earth; Sorrow is 10th to credit its pure birth.

Millions have lived and died, Nor left a word or sign Of gralitude for this Sweet ministry divine; And I, alsa! not blind, may do the same Tonly knew its bonest fame and name.

This treasure so supreme Is rarely known to kings; It loves the cot and dells
Where dalay verdure springs;
And never laid its posceful head upon
Imperial pillows made of elder-down.

Friends, do ye ask me why For multiplying years? This potent "stone," "e "elixir," "amulet This wealth that never bought a coronet

First let me speak its name Then look into your souls, And put the question home, Where thought's vast current rolls And ye may know the mighty reason why To never were CONTENT, HOT ever L.
