MAVERICK & KROEGER,

A MIDSUMMER ECHO.
BY D. W. BROWNELL.

Within the shade by willows made,
In softest summer weather, We sat beside the rippling tide—My love and I together.

Through clouds of white, with softened light,
The harvest moonbeams shimmered;
And on the stream a silvery beam With diamond luster glistened.

The summer breeze, from fragrant trees, Delicious odors brought us;
While sounds from o'er the farther shore In blanded sweetness sought us.

And so we, too, as in us grew The sense of peace so gentle—Attuned our song to Nature's throat—Beneath the evening's mantle.

We talked not much, but the soft touch Of hands, and eyes oft meeting, Told more by than words declare,
As heart to heart gave greeting.

Then, midnight come, we loitered home, Like brother new and sister,
To cheat surprise and trying eyes—Till at the gate I kissed her.

—Scribbler for September.

Hawmlet. But div ye really think noo, honesty, that Shakespeare could have written Tim O'Shanter? Deil the feirs o' him!"

"And Wordsworth?" punned Mr.
Carlyle, waxing uproariously merry as the sun went on.

"O' him I had just nae opinion ava. He drank naething o' his life but lake water, they say; and, trut h I weel believe it, for little else e'er

A Voice from Within.

Mr. Groesbeck, an eminently respectable gentleman of large ability, who for some years has been spitting upon the Democratic party, and declaring it worn out and an-useless, but still keeps his pew in it, and when it travels rides upon its platform, in a letter recently published, says:

"I believe the historical Democratic organization is spoiled.
Blundering constantly during the last ten years and shattered by many defeats, it surrendered finally at the last Presidential election. It cannot recall the surrender, or the confessions then made, and it has no longer strength enough for victory.
In this extremity it would be well to lay aside the old organization and enter into a new one."

When the members of an organization are divided in opinion as to whether it can honorably continue to exist or ought to be buried out of sight, it would seem there should be little ground for hesitation on the part of all them who are not bound so that organization by prejudice or interest, in deciding to contribute in no respect to bring it into power. — Morton Ohio

Carlyle at Home.

Speaking of Carlyle, I remarked that he is marvelously altered since I first met him, two and twenty years ago. Naturally enough it may be said. But I do not mean simply the change that increasing age brings. Of that, the old man has no reason to complain. Now, at seventy-eight he is a more marked man in appearance than he was at sixty-five. With his loose gown hanging to the floor and open to his heavy shoulders, his black necker-chief tied around an unstratched shirt collar, the ends half concealing unplaited lines behind the open waistcoat, his face haggard, forehead seamed, brows heavy and slightly raised, and eyes whose expression, as he sits meditatively, seems to be introverted, full, clear as a boy's, and with unkempt, matted, grizzly beard, he was, to my mind, when I last saw him at his house in Chelsea.

"The grandest Roman of them all."

But what I mean by his being changed so greatly is, in the seriousness that has frozen in this whole nature. It is not misanthropy, as the world calls it, for no man better loves his fellow men, nor curiosity, nor the sourness that comes from disappointment, nor dissatisfaction with his life's work, nor remorse, nor decay of intellect—God save the mark!—nor irritability. But ever since that terrible day in April, 1866, when, returning from his inaugural address as rector of Edinburgh university, he heard the tidings that his wife had been killed, he has never been the same.

Edward Irving gave her, when a child, her early lessons on the stars and flowers, and far off hills, and brought Carlyle to see her. Seventeen years afterwards the latter married his "bonnie Mollie Welsh," and took her to his little farm in Craigenputtock. If God ever made one woman for one man, he made

Mary Welsh for Thomas Carlyle.

She knew him, measured him, understood him, appreciated him and loved him, and when she died the whole joy of the old man's life closed its eyes as well. I have seen him many times since that awful day, but never since have I heard the ring of the old hilarious laugh.

There was never such a home, in the very best sense of the word as was found in that quaint Chelsea house when I knew it from 1851 to 1860. The master and mistress of it were always in good health, and always at home. There was a cozy bit of supper in the evening, and three or four persons were generally present, generally Scotchmen residing in London.

Among his "live Scotchmen" of that time was one Hugh Macdonald, since deceased, who frequently came up to London in the matter of a volume of poetry he was publishing.
He was one of those curiously impractical Scotchmen who, in spite of all difficulties had the knack of making friends of all with whom he came in contact. Though born in Glasgow, he was a Celt, as his name implies, in all his feelings. It was one of his whims, which aided the quaint effect of his talk, that he could not express himself clearly in English. This while Mr. Carlyle humored it to the best.

He was speaking in his funniest way one evening of Burns, when Mr. Carlyle said:

"Surely, Hugh, you do not put our Rabbie above Shakespeare?"

"Shakespeare!" he replied, debu-tatively shaking his head. "weelawee! Shakespeare! Nas doot a verr great poet!"

"And you don't believe that Burns could have written 'Hamlet'?

"Nai! Nai! I wadna just venture to say our Rabbie could have written 'Hamlet,' but there's aye twa way than others, judging from their prayers.

A YOUNG married friend tells a good joke on himself, perpetrated by a little three-year-old "pride of the family." She is the only pledge of love that has twined itself around the hearts and affections of himself and wife. A few evenings since a minister visited the family and remained until after tea. At the table the reverend visitor asked the wife to open her eyes to the fullest capacity in startled wonderment. She could not understand what had been done, and it was with great permanence that her mother could keep her quiet during the time they were at the table. When they left it she walked up to the minister, for whom she had formed a great friendship, and said, "What did you say at the table before we commenced eating?"

"My little darling, I thanked God for His goodness in giving us to eat so that we might grow and be strong." "Papa don't say that."

"What does your papa say?" "Papa says, 'Godlemighty, what a sup-

Exchanging Newspapers.

Some of the so-called metropolitan journals have been largely reducing their exchange list since the abolition of free postage of exchanges. Not so the New York Herald. It issues a circular in which it says that it desires largely to increase its exchange list by the addition of at least 500 papers. It adds the following:

"When the Herald is out, the news it contains belongs to everybody, but at the same time we are very happy to extend its distribution in such a way to give our colleagues of the country press, as well as the press of other cities, the benefit of its use. The weight of advantage in the extent and importance of the news exchanged is doubtless, on the side of those who receive the Herald; but we are far from being indifferent to the news that the country press gives in return.

An Anatomical Hint for Shoe-makers.

Dr. Herman Meyer, of Zurich, reports that a shoemaker ought not only to produce a shoe that does not pinch, but a shoe so constructed that it will give to a foot distorted by the pinching it has born already, a fair chance of return to its right shape, and full possession of its power as a means of carrying the body onward. He says that, in measuring a foot for a shoe or boot, the first thing to be considered is the place of the great toe. Upon this weep it walking, the weight of the whole body turns at every step; in a natural foot, therefore, it is in a straight line with the heel. A central straight line drawn from the point of the great toe to the middle of its foot, it continued, would pass very exactly to the middle of the heel. But, by the misfitting boot usually worn, the point of the toe is passed inward, the foot outwards. No last or model of a foot already injured by wearing ill fitting boots or shoes should ever be made of the exact size of such a foot.

TO THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION:

Having been solicited to sign a paper of ours, I freely consented to do so, knowing myself as a candidate for the office of Clerk of the District Court at the ensuing election, subject only to the will of the people. The paper was signed on the day of election at the Callahan Hotel, SAN ANTONIO, August 20, 1858.

The Indian Commission.

Commissioner Atkinson and Williams have returned to our city from the Mexican mountains, the former is stopping at the Steamer, and the latter upon his return from a conversation with Col. Atkinson, we obtained considerable information in reference to the Indians on the other side of the Rio Grande. The Indians had but little confidence in the efforts that were being made for their removal, until the train with supplies, blankets &c arrived.

The Kickapoos and Pottawatomies were more willing to go than the Comanches and Lipans, and of the first two tribes mentioned, about five hundred, big and little, are now en route to Kansas, for which State they had a preference over Fort Sill Reservation. The Pottawatomies lived in Kansas before they removed to Mexico. This change is a most excellent one. At Fort Sill, the young men would be apt to become acquainted with the Comanches and Kiowas, and be tempted to accompany them on the raids into Texas, but in Kansas as they will be surrounded by civilized community and will cease to visit us.

THE ROUTE.

The Indians will take it only known to themselves. They have a prejudice against Gen. Mackenzie and soldiers generally, and also against the people of Texas. They therefore object to going through Texas with wagons, but intend choosing their own road crossing the Rio Grande near the month of the Pecos river. They have a train of pack-mules with them and abundantly supplied with provisions.

They are now en route accompanied by Michael Thomas, the interpreter and their chief Che Quau-ka-ko. They did not desire their life men to follow them, as they would be in constant danger, and their presence might excite suspicion.

The campaign has been well and doubtless succeeded in removing all the Indians. Several of the most prominent chiefs will return as soon as the Indians are fairly settled in the new location, and Col. Atkinson has no doubt that as soon as there prove such tangible evidence of good faith on the part of the Government that will all accept the situation at once, and go out and join them.

The importance of the removal of these Indians to the people of Texas can not be overestimated. It will no longer be possible for the Indians to run and plunder our people, and then lay it to the charge of the Indians. The flourishing trade in Texas horses and mules will then stand to a stop, and our frontier will have some shooting for reaping the fruits of their labor.

Col. Atkinson has performed his difficult duty well, and if entirely successful, as we believe he will be highly interested. Then, unopposed on so long a stretch of the Rio Grande, Polk, and other rivers, and the Lake, Governmental forces will have a great benefit on the suffering frontier.

THE GREAT ALITERATIVE AND BLOOD PURIFIER.

It is not a quick nostrum.
The ingredients are published on each bottle of medicine. It is useful and recommended by Physicians whenever it has been introduced. It will positively cure

BUCOPULIA, SYPHILIS

in its various stages, RHEU-

MATISM, WHITE SWELL-

ING, GOUT, GOITRE,

BRONCHITIS, NERVO-

US DEBILITY, INCIP-

IENT CONSUMPTION,

and all diseases arising from an impure condition of the Blood.

Send for our ROSADALIS ALMA-

NA, in which you will find certificates from reliable and trustworthy Physicians, Ministers of the Gospel, and others.

Dr. J. H. Hall, of Baltimore, says he has used it in cases of Scrofula, and other diseases with much success.

Dr. W. G. Pease, of Baltimore, recommends it to all persons suffering from chronic diseases, and especially those requiring protracted treatment.

Dr. E. Confer, of New York, says he has been much benefited by it, and that he cheerfully recommends it to all who are suffering from Scrofula, &c., Druggists at Gor-donville, Va., say it never fails to give a G. Standard Morbus hominis, Tennessee, say it cured him of scrofula, and other diseases.
