The days are gone when Eris's barp Swelled high in bower and hall. When mail clad warriors girded on IIO The sword at Erin's call; The sword at Erin's call;
When kings and tyrante qualled to hear.
The war cry of the Gael,
And Freedom's banner proudly waved. In Throughout Green Innisfail.

Hushed in the barp, and silent new The strains that once were poured In streams of gushing melody Around the kingly board; Silent and lone in death they lie Who sing Green Erin's name. Her glery and her chivalry, And proud enduring fame. BUILDERS AND BUILDING

The forman's hand has dimmed the ligh That once so bright y abone.
And hard and mineted sing in tains Of glories past and gone;
But hope still cheers the patriot's hearf,
Though bound is slavery's chain,
And Freedom yet shall strike the harp
In Erm's fule again.
