Mr. Finlay's Head.

Here is something remarkable. A woman in New Haven was recently bereft of her scalp by the misadventure of a shaft and belt. The doctors saw that to remedy the evil they would have to recourse to transplanting, and so they actually succeeded in getting a sufficient number of pieces from other people's heads to give this unfortunate woman a new scalp. We hope those New Haven doctors used more discretion than did he who attended a man named Finlay, who met with a similar accident in Oriskany, N. Y., some thirteen years ago. Bits of scalp from seventeen different persons were secured by this doctor and adroitly stitched to the head of Mr. Finlay. When it was done, people came miles to see Finlay's head, and Finlay himself, with his cheekboard crimson, was the happiest man in Oriskany. But when the capillary glands got in working order, and the hair commenced to grow, the top of that man's head presented the most extraordinary spectacle on record. The doctor, who was about half the time in liquor, had consulted rather than judgment, and secured that new scalp without any reference to future developments. We never saw anything like it. Here was a lot of black hair, and then a flame of red, and a little like silk, and more like tow, with brown hair, and sandy hair, and cream-colored hair scattered over his entire skull. And what a mad man that Finlay was, and nobody could blame him. He would stand up against the barn for an hour at a time and sob and swear. It was very fortunate that the doctor was dead. He went off two weeks before with the blue ague, which is a mild sort of a disease. Finlay kept his hair cut short, but that didn't make any difference. Then he tried dyes, but they only made matters worse. They got a wig, and this covered up the deformity, but sometimes at church he would get asleep, and the wig would fall off, and make the children cry. Once at the County Fair he fell asleep and the wig dropped off, and the Committee on Domestic Goods, when they came round, stood in front of Finlay's head for some five minutes in wrapt delight. They then immediately decided that it was the most ingenious piece of patchwork in the list, and never discovered the mistake until they attempted to pin the premium card to it. At that Finlay awoke, and knocked down the Chairman of the Committee and chased the others out of the building. We hope those New Haven doctors have been more particular, as it is not a subject to trifle with.

Luxury in England.

That luxury in England is not alone on the increase, but that it appears to be coming more unmanageable and dangerous every year is not a pleasant thing to contemplate. On the first of January last we had 60,184 lunatics in England and Wales, which, according to the last census, shows plainly enough that one in 375 of us must be a lunatic. But this would be of no serious moment if we could manage to take care of our lunatics and protect the general public against their wild depredations. The case of Broadmoor institution proves that we cannot do so. There are at the present moment two of the Broadmoor lunatics in our midst, and we are unable to recapture them. This is really fearful. We don't know but that we may be waylaid by them in the next railway tunnel we pass through, or during a quiet afternoon promenade in one of our parks, or on our way home at night. It is fresh enough for us all to remember that a dangerous murderer named Bisgrove, after killing one of the attendants at Broadmoor, managed to escape, and has not since been heard of. And since then one John Walker, another criminal lunatic, has managed to get away from the hospital and when in charge of a warder. Can it be possible that these two lunatics have been ever since mixing in society without their notorious condition having been discovered, and is it possible that the managers at Broadmoor will permit these lunatics to do work in open fields after the escape of these two men? Surely the least we should do with our lunatics, as soon as their lunacy is fully established, is to secure them as effectually as our prisoners. We should like to know what the managers of the Broadmoor establishment have to say for themselves.—London Standard.

Another name has to be added to the long list of actors who have died on the stage. Mr. Victor, a distinguished well-known in the provincial towns of France, while performing in Lyons a comic character, fell down, and was taken up dead.
