I am the Princess Ilse. I dwell in Ilseustein Come down into thy castle And be forever mine.

Above thee and around thee My wave shall shimmer and skine Then shalt forget all trouble, Poor weary lover of mine!

Thou shalt rest on my snowy bosom, My white arms round thee I'll fold, And all the dreams of thy dreaming Shall be sweet as afortes of old.

And I will kiss and caress the My kisses stall charm and glow, Like those I kissed Prince Heary, Who died ever so long ago.

At an evening reception I observed a man who had neglected both broadcloth and gloves; his hair hung over his forchead, and his thin boots had no polish.

"That's Joaquin Miller," said my partner; 'he is living down in the theater of Marcellus, among the old iron and scrap shops, studying the people and neglecting the forms and ceremonies." Let us honestly admit the truth, and manfully apply the remedy. The peril in our American life is dishonesty. This the root of pauica. Slavery involved us in the flames of a civil war. Better it should have burned us to ashes than we should survive to perish bereafter in cor-ruptions. The urn is less offensive than existence is at stake. American life presents an anomalous spectacle. We are socially pure and commercially depraved. habitually and knowingly and systematically do wrong in their business. Nay even churches, to draw crowds, reut pews and raise revenues, will resort not only te sensationalism in choir and pulpit, but make earth blush and heaven weep over tricks which are degrading, demoralizing and insulting to all manliness and religion. Nor is the malady confined only to men in distinguished position. It affects all classes of our republic, the tainted streams of the summit percolate the engresser. Here there must be two parties 26-4-dtf

THE last Austin Statesman con- to the guilt, the man who gives and the man who takes Both are debased. There may be a daring in robbery, and courage in murder. The peculiarity of bribery is its cowardice. It sueaks, it cringes, it the grass to infuse its poison before crushing with its coils. A man who abuses his office, warps his judgment, and twists his conscience for a bribe, sells his soul by higher bidder for himself; and he is, like ser. Now it is a painful and mortifying fact that nearly everything in our counhave been bribed. Clerks, merchants, bankers have been bribed. Coustables, policemen, collectors, inspectors, weigh ers, measurers, gaugers, postmasters have been bribed. Lawyers, doctors, chemists, analysists, surgeons, witnesses have been bribed. We have soemtimes feared that it would be difficult to place a stone or a timber or a look or a screw or a nafl in passage left the stain of a bribe. It is doubtful whether the food which supports our lives, or the coffins which will convey us to our grave, can wholly escape contrust of our country and humanity, with a fear like a shadow that on all modern European and American societies is but the old doom of ancient Babylou and Rome. Our faith alone saves from despair. That is sufficient, but not here to be discussed. Certain is it that panics and the other evils we have named, are but eruptions of disease on the surface of the body politic. Our nation from our civil war has been preparing for our recent commercial disasters. The timbers of the edifice of our public credit had been decaying long before the weakened structure was threatened with its crash. Many underlying sands must be washed away to make the mountain fall. - [Internation

The diseased system should be sustained, tened, purified and regulated, and there is no medical preparation in existence so largely endowed with the properties required to effect these objects as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. In ordinary practice aperient, blood depurating, anti-bilious and sedative medicines are administered seperately. In Mostetter's Bitters all these agents are combined, and act together in perfect harmony, so that undue debility and undue excitement are alike preyented, and the strength of the patient rallies while the disease is losing ground. In dyspep-sis, liver complaint, chronic constipation, intermittent fevers, general weakness, and all aitments involving physical and meutal depression, this pure vegetable resto-rative is a sovereign remedy.
