SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS WEDNESDAY EVENING DECEMBER 8, 1875.

NO. 80

A MICHIGAN SENSATION.

THE DAUGHTER OF AN EX-CONGRESSMAN ENTERS INTO A MARRIAGE CONTRACT WITHOUT THE INTERVENTION OF MINISTER OR MAGISTRATE.

The Cincinnati Commercial has the following special telegram from Detroit: In the contest over the woman's suffrage constitutional amendment in this State, last year, ex-Congressman Randolph Strickland was quite conspicuous, acting as President of the State Association part of the time. His daughter also delivered a series of addresses upon the subject of different points in Michigan, displaying considerable oratorical piquancy and force. Within the last few days many of the people of St. John's, in this State, where her family lives, have received printed copies of what was termed a contract, civil and conjugal, entered into recently between Miss Strickland and Leo Miller, the well-known Buffalo Spiritualist, beginning: "The undersigned, this 2d day of November, A. D. 1875, enter into a business partnership under the name of Miller & Strickland on the following conditions, to wit: That all earnings and profits arising from our individual and joint labors whether in departments of literature, mechanics, agriculture, or trade, shall be shared and held equally." After next declaring that love is the only binding law in the conjugal union of sexes, the contract proceeds: "Should this union be blessed by offspring, we jointly and severally pledge ourselves, our signs and our administrators, to foster and support them during the dependent years of infancy and youth, supplying their physical wants, and rearing them in the principles of virtue and knowledge to the best of our ability and judgment." This remarkable document concludes with the declaration that its signers repudiate the laws and customs which men assume to make and control an affection between the sexes, which we believe is, and of divine right ought, to be free. Miss Strickland has also addressed some Woodhullian letters to the St. John's papers, declaring her revolt against the legal bondage of marriage, which she says rests only on the principle of master and slave. Naturally the course she has taken created no slight excitement in the community, where she has always been respected, and this excitement has been naturally stimulated by the appearance of the following:

CARD.
"We ask the sympathy of our friends, to our sorrow for the course pursued by our poor, deluded, misguided and insane daughter, and we extend our thanks to the kind friends that have labored with us during the last year so earnestly to save her. We bow our heads in grief."
"RANDOLPH STRICKLAND,
"MARY STRICKLAND."

Information Wanted.

In the Spring of 1836 a company called the "Mobile Blues," sailed from this port on board the schooner Emily, bound for Galveston Texas. The company was equipped in Mobile to take part in the Texas war of Independence. The schooner was wrecked in Matagorda Bay. If there is a survivor of that company within reach of this notice, he will confer a favor by communicating with the editor of the Mobile Register.

WHAT IS A GOOD BROOD MARE?
In reference to exhibitions of brood mares at fairs, Wilkes' Spirit says: "A good brood mare is one that produces good foals. One that has never produced a foal should not compete in such a class. In judging in this case, reference should be had to the quality of the foals as well as to that of the mares themselves; but if the foals are not shown with the mares, the judges should be governed by the quality of the animal shown, unless they have a personal knowledge of the produce. Prices are not always correct gauges of quality."

The Patrons of Ohio and Indiana are buying shingles direct from the mills in Michigan upon which the mill owners get ten per cent. more per thousand than from dealers, and yet the Patrons save 40 per cent. by the transaction.

A writer in the Country Gentleman says: The presence of black walnut trees in an orchard is sure to kill apple trees. The effort of a small walnut on a large apple tree is small at first, but will show itself after a little and death will be the result.

PERSONAL.

"Who is to beat Grant?" exclaims the Philadelphia Times. "Why, anything to beat Grant of course. You've been there.—Williamsport Bulletin.

Edgar Allen Poe, the poet, was the grandson of Benedict Arnold. His mother Elizabeth Arnold, an English actress, was the natural daughter of the traitor.

It is reported by a lady who used to be a schoolmate of Mrs. Sartoris, the President's daughter, that she and her husband contemplate a visit to Galena (Ill.) this winter.

John Logan says he never, so help him, had anything to do with distillers, and is $40,000 or so poorer today than when he entered the Senate. Why John! Such a good player as you used to be, too!—Springfield Republican.

Statuettes of Messrs. Moody and Sankey, the revivalists, have been prepared and will be for sale. They are the work of Mr. Fritz Kaldenberg, are about eight inches high, and represent the originals as they appear when they are about to address the audience.

A passer girl wrote home: "Dee Paw paw, we study Latin fo' ovals a day, French, seven up and science evah let us go ovet. Won't you send me my leggins and skates for a poo' little girl who lives in the village! Don't forget the heel straps."

Two ladies got hooked together by their clanking chains in a street car the other day. "It is of no consequence," said one, as she struggled. "Don't mention it," said the other, as she grew red in the face, pulling to get free. The chain broke, the passengers laughed, the ladies smiled a smile of hatred, and the car moved on.

Paris artists are getting to work for the year. Cabanel and Bouguereau have stretched their canvases for scriptural subjects, and Lefevre is putting grace to a work, with Platond, for the Luxembourg. American artists are busy with subjects with which they hope to make fame at the Centennial.

The marriage of Miss De Wolf, younger sister of Mrs. Lloyd Aspinwall, and probably the wealthiest young lady in America, to the Right Rev. William H. Hare, whose evangelistic work among the Indians of his Niobrara has been very faithful has been deferred on account of the glooms illness.

Interview with Gen. McDonald.
St. Louis, December 5.—The press having charged so frequently that the St. Louis Whisky Ring extended to Washington, and even involved the President's household, your correspondent was anxious to find out what General McDonald had to say on that subject, and so inquired him to day.

"What do you think of President Grant?"
McDonald immediately, and with much warmth, replied:
"General Grant is one of the best and purest men this country ever produced. There is no man for whom I had more admiration than him. So far as he is personally concerned, he is utterly incapable of perpetrating a fraud, and he meant what he said when he remarked, 'Let no guilty man escape.' Grant could not do a mean thing, and if he has read the evidence in my case I know he does not approve the verdict. His sense of justice would not permit him to do it. Grant will be elected for a third term as sure as I am now in this jail. He is the man for the times, and the people know it, and intend to keep him where he is."

"Did he refuse to see you when he was here last?"
"The story that I sent up my card to the President and received a reply that he could not confer with officers of the Government resting under indictment, is purely imaginary. No such transaction occurred. I had too great a sense of propriety to seek a private audience with the President under the circumstances. THE PRESIDENT DID RECEIVE ME, just as he received everybody who called at his reception. I paid him my courtesies, and passed out. For years I have been on terms of social intimacy not only with President Grant, but also many members of his Cabinet, but since my reputation has been darkened by a shadow, I have been too much of a gentleman to take advantage of past associations and intrude myself upon them."

That Third Proposition.

It will be seen that we re-publish in the form of a supplement, our editorial in yesterday's EXPRESS on the "Pierce Railroad." We do this because the article was so badly mixed in making up the forms as to be unintelligible in certain parts, and also because it has, even in its mutilated shape, excited general interest.

And now, as we expressed the opinion in that article that the third proposition would be the best one for speedily completing the road, we wish to say a little more about it. We leave the second proposition out, because we have but little hope that the cash required under it can be raised. The question is, therefore, narrowed down to a choice between the first and third propositions. These are both set forth in our supplement in this issue.

The first proposition—to organize here a Construction Company and prepare the road to the Guadalupe for iron bridges, rails, and rolling stock—is open to other objections besides those stated in our article of yesterday. It will bind that Company for the whole cost of the work, and everybody knows that such things—always—cost far more than the estimates. It will involve far more delay than the third plan, and delay is the very thing we ought to avoid. We want the road as soon as possible. The very moment its early completion is made a certainty, San Antonio will spring forward in business and progress, and will be worth a million more than she is now.

It will also involve the trouble of negotiating our own bonds, and in connection with this, and the letting out of contracts, will be the temptation to speculation, the strife of rival speculators, and general distrust and disgust. The whole thing will have the taste of jobbery, justly or unjustly. It will involve an infinite variety of details, all which will have to be carried out by men unaccustomed to such things, and whose whole time is taken up with other interests.

The third proposition, on the contrary, saves all trouble, admits of no delay, saves from all temptation or taint of jobbery, and in the end, will prove to be the cheapest of all. It will give the road in six months, certainly, and in six months probably. And, by the time it gets here, it shall be worth $500,000 more than we are now.

A Washington special to the Galveston News says that it is reported on good authority that Secretary Hobson has ordered a number of recruits in use there by the navy. The army and navy are cooperating under General Ord against the cattle thieves.

Minister Foster is on his way to consult with the President as to steps to be taken to secure the treaty provision, under which the United States troops will be permitted to cross the border in pursuit of raiders. There is reason to believe that such concessions can be obtained from the Mexican government.

The Texas Pacific Railroad

INTERVIEW WITH MAJ. BRACKENRIDGE.

We learn from Maj. Tom Brackenridge, one of our representatives at the great railroad convention recently held at St. Louis, that the action of that convention was far from being satisfactory to many of the Texas delegates. He says that everything was "cut and dried" beforehand, and the course of action determined and that Texas delegates were only brought in to swell the numbers of the convention, and to give apparent importance to its action. But their own views and wishes were not in the least regarded. They were listened to politely in committees, but it was plain that all they had to say had been anticipated and provided against.

Maj. Brackenridge says that the proposed road, for which Texas has done so much, and for which the United States expected to do so much more, is a Texas Pacific railroad only in name. He says it might be called a Kansas Pacific, or Missouri Pacific railroad with equal propriety. As to its being a Southern Pacific railroad, taking the shortest route to the Pacific ocean, and so opening the heart of Texas, from North-east to South-west, and penetrating the richest mineral and agricultural regions of Mexico, the great object of such a road, so far as Texas is concerned—as to entitle it to be called the Texas Pacific railroad, it is all a mistake. Instead of following this great natural route, demanded by the interests of Texas and the South and especially demanded by the vast latent riches to be developed in Mexico, it only skirts along our Northern border, benefiting only a few counties.

Thus, Maj. Brackenridge says, the vast land subsidy of Texas, and the credit of the United States Government, are to be given to what is called the Southern Pacific—railroad through Texas, the last great State—and national help that ever will be given for such a purpose, and yet that the great objects aimed at in such an enterprise will not be attained. A Southern Pacific railroad, proper, will not be built; the heart of Texas will not be developed; her cities and ports will be ignored, and the untold wealth of Mexico will be untouched.

And we see from an article quoted by the Galveston News from the Jeffersonian-Journalist that Col. Culberson, who was also a delegate to St. Louis holds similar views to those of Maj. Brackenridge. He says that the real plan, and on which the influence of the convention will be used to carry the bill through Congress, is to secure a guarantee of the interest on the bonds of the company at the rate of forty thousand dollars per mile from Sherman to Fort Worth, and thence to San Diego, California; from Shreveport to Vicksburg, and a branch from Shreveport to Memphis. The Atlantic and Pacific road is to turn a junction with the Texas and Pacific railway two hundred and fifty miles east of El Paso. Six hundred miles of this road is to receive the same aid from the government; and from the junction westward they shall constitute one road. It will be observed, if this project is accomplished, that there will be a direct line of railway from San Diego to St. Louis, then to Chicago, New York and Philadelphia, and will, doubtless, become the great highway across the country, bestowing in a large measure the benefits of the Pacific trade upon cities and sections which are now enjoying the benefits of a monopoly of trade from the present completed road to the Pacific ocean, to which the government issued over fifty millions of dollars and the construction thereof. The lower, or Texas route, will be greatly crippled in this combination, and the benefits which will flow from this line will be restricted to local trade. The coast cities of Texas, as well as the cities on her eastern borders, are entirely ignored in the combination, and the Gulf and Atlantic cities deprived of legitimate share of the Pacific trade. The expense of the road from Shreveport to Savannah, and an abandonment of the combination northward, would have made the enterprise truly what now it is only in name.

Our friend, the Pleasanton Stock Journal, has this to say of our active agent, Mr. L. L. Martin:

We had the pleasure of a call from our young friend, L. L. Martin, last Thursday evening, who comes here in the interest of that spicy newspaper, the San Antonio Express. He is traveling agent for that paper, and is authorized to receipt and receive subscriptions and advertisements, and also to collect all back claims due the old firm of A. Stenning & Co. Mr. Martin is well known all through the West, and we bespeak for him a prosperous tour in his solicitation of the patronage of the people. The Express is now published by a Stock Company, the members composing it being all practical printers, who learned their trades in San Antonio, and who began as "devils," and of course they are not strangers to the people, nor new beginners at the business. They all have gone into it with the determination to succeed, and to make the Express a first-class newspaper.

Mr. E. S. Tow, of Boston, appointed by the President as Commissioner of Indian Affairs, has died.

GORTSCHAKOFF AND BEMARCK.—Prince Gortschakoff had an interview with Bismarck to-day, which lasted an hour.

From Pleasanton.

DEAR EXPRESS—Monday, December 8th, will find us here with the good people of Pleasanton, enjoying their hospitality. Pleasanton, Atascosa County, having once been the home of your humble correspondent, he can, probably, appreciate that big-heartedness and liberality which characterizes the people of this county, better than any one who has never lived among them, nor had any transactions with them. The immigrant will find, especially if he is a poor man, and the people of Atascosa are liberal and accommodating in every sense of the word. They want immigration, and treat all those who pitch their tents among them so well, that they never want to leave.

Any man in the world can do well in Atascosa County, almost at anything he goes at. If he is a poor man and wants to farm, he will find every encouragement, and the best farming lands in the world. The Somerset settlement, 20 miles Northwest of Pleasanton, is considered, for farming purposes, superior to any in Texas. There are good school facilities, and cheap, so that the poor man can educate his children. For instance, there is the "Pleasanton High School," taught and superintended by Prof. Hendricks, a very efficient and able teacher. Board and lodging being very cheap in Pleasanton, parents who live at a distance can board their children and send them to this school; or if he is a mechanic and wishes to work at his trade, he can come to Pleasanton, and we are confident he can get as much as he can do, and more, especially at this very time, for Pleasanton is growing so rapidly that workmen of every description are in great demand. Atascosa County is the place for poor men to seek their homes.

Last Saturday night the Pleasanton House was opened by Mr. F. M. Mansfield, who bought out Mr. Johnson, the former landlord, and invited the public of Pleasanton, and all seemed as gay and happy as it was possible for them to be. The health and prosperity of the new landlord and his lady, were drank by all many times. Mr. Mansfield is just the man wanted at that hotel; he understands the business and will make the house one of the best in the West.

Yesterday evening we procured a horse, and rode to the Broom Factory of Messrs. Wheeler & Bro., on the Atascosa Creek, two miles above this place. We found Messrs. Wheeler at their post of labor, as men of their industrious habits are always found. They took great pleasure in showing us through their factory, explaining as we came to the different machines, what they were for, and how used, &c. Of course we were as "green" about the broom business that we could not understand the "thing," so Mr. Wagenfehr went through the proper process, and in less than five minutes he handed us a new broom, finished off, and ready for immediate use. We had never seen a broom made before, and were not a little surprised at the quick work Mr. Wagenfehr made of it.

We will here mention that the Express was mistaken last week in its notice about the factory; it is not "Wagenfehr's Factory," but "Wheeler & Bro." Mr. Wagenfehr being an employee in the factory. Wheeler & Bro., make the best of brooms, and are now prepared to furnish the market in any quantities, and at very moderate rates. Brooms are a household necessity, something that every family is bound to have, and the Wheelers are known men to get them from.

It will be but a very few days ere we turn our face towards San Antonio, as we have made most of the Pleasanton people patrons of the Express; so we will take another course, determined to labor until we shall the circulation of the Express to at least five thousand.

Yours, &c. L. L. M.

The Ship Canal enterprise between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, across the Isthmus, is likely to be pushed to a successful termination. The Commission appointed by our Government to inquire into the best route for the proposed ship canal, report that they are of opinion, after full investigation, that Nicaragua is the best, and estimate that the work from the harbor of Brito, on the Pacific, to Gray Town, on the Atlantic, can be constructed at a total cost not exceeding $60,000,000. From this investment the commission claim an enormous return would be made, especially in shipments to Europe and American ports of Atlantic and California products. It is regarded of the highest importance that the United States take some action at once to carry out the plans of the ship canal, in order to prevent France or England from reaping the honor and profit of this great enterprise.

Another Richmond in the field. Mr. Phil Shardin, who desires to be placed favorably before the suffragans of Bexar County as a candidate for the office of Sheriff. Mr. Shardin is a much esteemed citizen of San Antonio, and his past deportment as detective, and his general business relations with our people, will carry great weight in commending him to public favor.

District Judge. Hon. G. H. Noonan announces to the voters of the 22nd Judicial District, composed under the new Constitution of the counties of Atascosa, Bexar and Comal, that he is a candidate for the office of District Judge. Judge Noonan has long presided over the sittings of the District Court in this city, under appointment, and has given almost perfect satisfaction to both the bar and citizens in general, and, although we can not justly commit ourselves, we must say that there are few, if any, among us, better suited to this office than he is.

The Express has made arrangements with the publishers of the National Granger, to club the two journals together, making the subscription of the two combined only $2.50 per annum. All interested in the cause of Agriculture, the Stockman, every real interest of Western Texas, will find a support and great benefit in this combination. Both papers together will give to the subscribers, during the year, the large number of 1964 pages of excellent and instructive reading matter. The Grangers are the kings of the soil, and seek to rule nothing else but the soil; to see them prosper, then, is our ardent wish, and it is to encourage the Order, that we have made this arrangement with the National Granger.

We say a freighter this morning stop in front of one of our prominent business houses, and hand a member of the firm a small package from Kingsbury. "How much?" said the merchant. "Three dollars," said the freight man. With this, the merchant blushed in language more emphatic than elegant. "H-h-h! You don't mean to say that you charge me three dollars for bringing this handfull from Kingsbury?" "man, who will be such a thing as that is a dam thief!" and the independent-looking freightman measured his full length on the bed of his wagon. We left the scene thinking it a knock-down argument in favor of the speedy construction of a railroad and the consequent lessening of low freight.

An Urchin's Complaint.

My dear, pious mother, when I was a boy, Found reading the Bible her greatest joy; But it struck me one day, She perused in a way, That gladdened her soul, but reflected much woe, On my poor little self as the sequel will show.

With Solomon's proverbs, she hours be, guiled, There she frequently read of "the rod," and "the child."

They were proverbs, I thought, With a sentiment fraught; That jarred most unpleasantly on my ear, And produced an impression most painful to bear.

I recalled the first time that I wandered astray; The "rod of correction" was brought into play; Grandmother declared 'twas "an excellent thing; I was blind to the good, but awake to the string, And I inwardly thought—What a Book it must be!

Here's a practical use of the Bible on me! Can I ever forget, as I lay on that knee, How I panted, and struggled, and fought to be free; My struggles soon ceased, Though my torture increased, And I secretly wished from that terrible day, I could throw all of Solomon's proverbs away.

"The rod is a gem" all grand parents will say; (I'll be hanged! I never could view it that way.) Let the tables be turned, And their persons be burned, Let them frequently have a good touch of "the gem."

(And one in the rough it will prove to them;) When they find it needs polish, Perhaps they'll abolish The use of the once "indispensable gem."

Man's Recessionary Health List.

Truly the most important adulterations to avoid are those which are calculated to injure the "staff of life," our family bread. We know that merchants who supply their customers with pure articles like Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder and his True Flavoring Extracts, retain better patrons, have a larger trade, and make more money, than those who buy and recommend articles that are poor and cheap. Besides it's a pleasure to have articles that never fail to give satisfaction, and that can be used with safety. Aside from its excellence, Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is one-third stronger, two cans equal to three of other kinds.

We notice a new arrival in our city, Rob. Roy—not he so intimately connected with the chivalric history of Scotland, but Robert the great pedestrian. He will appear at the "Chief" on Thursday evening, and will walk from setting sun till dawn of day. This will necessitate the "Chief" being kept open 48 hours. The public are invited to be present upon this jolly occasion.

The meeting of the Dramatic Club last night was excellently attended, and increased interest was manifested in the proceedings, particularly by the ladies. The Club seemed so well satisfied with its officers for the previous term, however, that they re-elected them; for the ensuing term, the officers being as follows: President, V. O. King; Vice-President, W. Shewalter; Secretary, G. W. Bartholomew; Treasurer, Sam. Maxwell.

The committee on obstinacy and cast of character is composed of V. O. King, ex-officio Chairman, Miss Maggie Bell and Miss Josephine Houston.

We wish the Club the greatest success in the future.

TO-DAY being the occasion of the celebration of the "Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin," our four different Catholic Churches threw open their doors this morning to receive the devoted worshippers, who were aroused and reminded of their duties by an early chiming of the many bells. We suppose that it would be no exaggeration to say that two thousand faithful Catholics attended the churches to-day, to pay homage to the Blessed Virgin. St. Mary's Church was the chief attraction, of whom Father Johnston's learned eloquence and his power to interest his hearers. The Father is a most excellent speaker, and his sermon this morning is alluded to in the highest terms of praise.
