TOM SCOTT DONE FOR.

The impression obtains that the election of Kerr, the declared enemy of appropriations by Congress to railroads and steamships, is fatal to the scheme of Tom Scott, who must now settle with the creditors of the bankrupt Atlantic and Pacific (St. Louis and Vinita) Railway. Mr. Scott will be forced to pay the paper of the concern which he endorsed for some millions. It is rather rough on Tom Scott, but a good thing for Texas. In fact, the completion of the Texas and Pacific to Fort Worth will satisfy the country for a time, and, meanwhile, the Texas and California company, which has expended fifty millions of its own money and never received a dollar from the government, on the line from San Francisco to San Diego, will find money to complete its road to El Paso. There the Fort Worth and Dallas line will meet one from Galveston, Houston and Austin, and Texas, rather than St. Louis and Philadelphia, will be enriched by the vast cession of land proposed to be given to a California and St. Louis company. But Tom Scott is dead. The triumph of Kerr over Randall—who belongs to Tom Scott's ring—was Scott's final overthrow.—Austin Statesman.

So it seems that Texas is going to repudiate the so-called Texas and Pacific railroad of Col. Tom Scott, whatever the Convention has done with regard to its relief from the penalties of forfeiture.

But in reply to what the Statesman has to say about a railroad to Fort Worth, to tap the so-called Texas and Pacific, from Galveston via Houston and Austin, we have a suggestion to make. It is, that while Galveston, Houston, Austin, San Antonio, Dallas, Fort Worth, and other cities and towns of Texas should do what they can to procure all the railroad facilities needed by their special interests, the press and people of the State should be as nearly united as possible in relation to the Southern Pacific railroad through Texas, certain to be built after a while, and that with the help of Texas and the United States Government.

The proper route for that road should be, from San Antonio eastward, first on the line of the International via Austin, Little Rock and Memphis; second, on the line of the Pierce road via Houston, New Orleans, Mobile, to Savannah. From San Antonio westward it should run the shortest and best route through Mexico to the Pacific.

Colonel Scott's Misnomer.

(From the New York Daily Bulletin.)
We learn through a United States Senator from a Southern State that the Southern legislatures have in every instance instructed their senators to vote at the next session of Congress in favor of Government aid to a Southern Pacific railroad. Whether these instructions have been given in each instance in favor of Colonel Scott's scheme we are not informed. No means have been spared to influence opinion at the South in favor of that route. General Beauregard has been retained in that special interest, and it is to be presumed that his efforts have not been entirely in vain. It is, however, a matter of the first consequence to the South that it should know just what is to be asked in their behalf. Col. Scott's scheme is in no sense a Southern road. It gives the South the go-by, making a western and south-western circuit of the Southern States, really calculated to draw trade from that section, rather than to develop it. It is a total misnomer to call it a Southern Pacific road; but mere names are sometimes potent; and this Scott pseudonym is calculated to lead the South into clamoring for the very thing it does not want. We can easily understand how some of the border cities of the South-west which Mr. Scott's road proposes to touch should be earnest in the advocacy of that project; and for this reason we are not surprised at the strictures of the Louisville Courier-Journal upon our recent remarks on the question; but the South will not be long in discovering that a road which touches its territory only at its most northern boundary can be of no advantage to the ten cotton States it passes at such a distance.

Our Louisville contemporary intimates that we are indifferent about whether the South has a Pacific road or not, because we have expressed an opinion against the Government aiding any such enterprise. We are opposed to the Government leading its credit to any more railroad enterprises. First, because the Government has no business to bolster up schemes which cannot command confidence on their own merits; next, because Government aid begets political and corporate corruption; next, because it fosters vicious speculation and next, because, if donations of domain and endowments of bonds are to be renewed after the signal break-down of railroad speculation, in 1875, we show ourselves incapable of profiting by the severest lessons of experience. But while thus generally opposed to more Government aid, we are especially so against a scheme that demands the regnum donum under false pretenses. It is argued that to make the Government sponsor of Col. Scott's road would be an act of political wisdom, inasmuch as it would show a spirit of generosity towards the South that would tend to the healing of rancorous meannesses. What an admirable specimen of sugar-coating. But how much healing would such an act effect when the South discovered, as it ultimately would, that this generosity was not intended for it, did it no good, prevented the possible building of some other road that might be of great service to it, and that the real object was to render available a few hundred miles of railroad in the wilderness, foolishly built in the times of railway mania, and which must become a total loss to its speculative constructors unless the Government can be made responsible for it? We are inclined to think the South would, in the long run, conclude it had been shrewdly practiced upon by Northern speculators, and that, under the pretense of political generosity, it had been made a party to a new national burthen, to its special injury. To all intents and purposes this is a scheme to benefit Northern speculators, and we cannot imagine how the South can be hoodwinked into supposing it has any other concern with it than to pay its share of the additional taxation that must be saddled upon the country to pay the expense of maintaining it. These pretences are too hollow to stand the scrutiny to which they will be subjected. If there be really good reasons why the South should have a railroad running through its heart and connecting with the Pacific coast, it is only necessary for good, practical railroad men of resource and character to place the question before the public purely on its merits, and with due guarantees that it will be constructed with honesty and economy, and there will be no lack of the means to build it. There must sooner or later, be a central Southern railroad of this kind. If Col. Scott succeeds in committing the Government to his border route, the realization of the route that would really benefit the South must be indefinitely deferred. If the South demurs to waiting until it can have a road to suit its wants, constructed upon proper conditions, it certainly cannot afford to accept the alternative of backing Mr. Scott's proposals.

Miss Willie Greer of Kimball, Texas, made the error in love of bestowing her affection upon two men. She was only seventeen years old, and courtship was so new to her that she could resist neither Simms nor Frazier when they simultaneously pressed their suits. She promised to marry both. Of course there had to be a definite choice by Willie after a while, and she decided that she most wanted Simms; but he had murdered a man a few years before in another part of the State, for which crime he had never been tried. She said she would marry him only after he had been acquitted by a court. The condition was hard, because it involved a likelihood of his being hanged, and he declined to take the risk, whereupon Willie formally accepted Frazier. Simms went away, but returned a few days ago, found her with Frazier, and shot her and himself to death.

A GRAY man, named Lincoln, in Houston, killed his wife a few days since, chopping her head to pieces. He also tried to kill his son, nearly grown.

ON THE STREETS.

WHAT FOLKS TALK ABOUT.

The average citizen, as a general thing, is possessed of a tendency to pass a short portion of each day upon the streets. But it must not be supposed that he is led into this habit alone by a curiosity to learn what is going on in the world, or by a propensity to stare at strangers and the many queer looking mortals that pass their way. While it is true, he is governed by these motives to a certain extent, there is a more noble impulse above and beyond these—a desire to meet those whom he is acquainted with and for whom he may entertain a more or less esteem, to talk with them upon things of individual or common interest.

If there ever was a place that had sufficient such things to be considered by her citizens, why San Antonio must be that place. Whenever we observe a first-class citizen, therefore, standing upon a street corner, one foot elevated to the top of some post fixed in the ground to keep teamsters from marring the evenness and beauty of our sidewalks, his hat thrown gracefully backward, showing fully the nobleness of his forehead, and with a fifteen cent cigar in active operation, it is hard for us to pass him. There is an attraction about just such a looking individual which none but those who know the state of a man's mind under such circumstances could properly appreciate.

Would you know how he feels? It is just so: He is at peace with all the world—no plans, no schemes, no ambitious longings trouble his mind. He is only disturbed, if at all, by the hope that you will stop a few moments, and pass a word or so with him. These are the kind of men to hunt up when you want an opinion fairly expressed on some matter of great political, commercial or personal interest. Passing down Main street last evening, we upon three different occasions, each time with different individuals and at different places, drew ourselves, in our usual unobtrusive manner, into the near presence of no less than three very prominent members of the highly respectable class alluded to. Our first victim was Mr. W., who resides temporarily in the eastern portion of ward number two. Now, with most persons, one's self is made the common topic of conversation or object of praise, but being of a modest nature, we avoided alluding directly to ourselves, but spoke of our business—for a man's business, next to himself, is the most important.

Mr. W. was perfectly alive to the necessity of a good paper in San Antonio. He had watched the course of the EXPRESS carefully, and never failed to read every line of news it contained. He had one regret, and that was that he had paid his subscription about a month too soon—Asabeek had collected six months in advance, and we were furnishing him the paper at a loss to ourselves. He made a kind offer to pay over again, which, of course, we would not listen to, telling him that we were striving to redeem that popularity for the EXPRESS—which it possessed just before it sunk under the management of Mr. A., and which popularity was, by the way, brought about by the very man who now has the paper, and not by anyone who has been forced to give up all connection with it. He spoke very commendably of the course of the EXPRESS had taken on the Mexican border question, and perfectly agreed with us on all our points relative thereto, except that we were hardly strong enough—he would like a bit of war—is would be the making of West Texas, and San Antonio would be blessed with more railroads than she would know what to do with. "Railroads" remarked we; it reminded us of what was contained in our supplement yesterday, and Mr. W. took the hint from the expression of our eye, and led off into a general railroad conversation—unexpectedly to us, agreeing with the EXPRESS to word. Mr. Pierce was an injured man, and if the people of San Antonio were all like him, it wouldn't be long before that $500,000 was raised and the work on the road encouraged. We found Mr. W. to be all right. A man disposed to think and reason, a devotee to our paper, and one whose whole soul seemed to be enlisted in the prosperity of our city.

We bade him good evening, and strolled along some distance, when we met Mr. M. Mr. M. is a Granger, and as we were anxious to have a moment's interview with just such a man, we decided that this was the accepted time. Mr. M. had joined the Order upon its first introduction into Western Texas, and had greatly profited by his membership. He had been led to study agriculture, and having a good, practical system upon which he had established himself by years of experience, the theory, so to speak, of a scientific mode of agriculture, had never come to him until an increased trade was opened up, and necessity demanded that he should study to keep pace with his neighbors. It was through this studying that he had made enough to spend this winter in San Antonio, and enjoy the comforts of city life. He spoke of the efforts of the EXPRESS to help the Grangers, with the greatest praise, and remarked that he didn't want a better Granger paper than the EXPRESS. It was an independent sort of a concern, and pleased him first-rate. He intended visiting Atascosa county soon, and was sure every Granger in that county could be induced to take the paper. We told him we were just as good a friend to the Grangers as could be, and only wanted them to find it out. This talk cheered us anew, and we passed along. Scarcely had we reached the corner of Main Plaza when we met Mr. P. He is a real friend of ours—no doubt about it—just such an one as can make us believe almost anything he tells us. He shook our hand, remarking that we were getting out early now of evenings with our paper, beat the Herald two hours; and had more and better reading matter; didn't have too much politics—only just enough, and when he wanted to get the city news, always went to the EXPRESS to look for it. Said we were doing the best we could—that we were an independent and hard-working set of young men—we were determined to succeed if success was possible; we didn't want to injure our neighbor; if we had any feeling for it, it was a friendly feeling—San Antonio was large enough for both of us; didn't expect to deal in politics—seeking to avoid the filthy sloughs into which the political papers of the day run themselves; hoped he would continue as good a friend in the future as he was now—that we expected to add very great improvements by the first of January, and should steer for the acme of journalism, coveting but the good patronage of the people to give us the means to man our vessel. He then referred us to three or four friends who were thinking of announcing themselves for office, and we moved off with a ray of hope upon our brow, and increased encouragement to push things ahead.

AN ERROR.—We don't know who was to blame, but the EXPRESS made a mistake in the announcement of J. B. Sweeney. It is a desire to be Collector, and not Assessor, that influences Mr. Sweeney in making his appeal to the voters of Bexar county. We ask all our readers to make a note of this. Mr. Sweeney doesn't want both offices, but says he will be satisfied with one, and if the impression created yesterday is not removed, no telling what might be the result of the expression of the people.

FRATERNAL.—We are in the regular receipt of the Daily Journal of Commerce, of Kansas City, Missouri, and have placed it on our exchange list. It is a large, live, well edited, and excellent daily morning journal. We also receive regularly the Daily Mail of Kansas City, which is a very able and interesting evening paper. We are glad to exchange with it. We believe it is the paper our Mr. Steduff was formerly connected with.

JUDGE NOGGER says he does not believe the judicial offices should be mixed up in party nominations and canvasses. He says that although his political views have been well known, he has kept aloof from partisan politics during the whole time he has been on the bench. He says, therefore, that he is running for election to his old office before all the people without regard to party affiliations.

CITY ELECTION.—Early in January we are to have an election in this city for one Alderman in each Ward. In the excitement of the election for county, judicial, legislative, and other offices, this matter seems to have been almost overlooked. Yet, to the city, and the inhabitants thereof, it is of the very highest importance. We have now a good city government. The evils of the past are being reformed, a sound general policy is being pursued, the finances of the city are being safely administered, a progressive system of improvements has been adopted, much hard work has already been done. Now, we want the new Alderman from each Ward to be a sound, wise, hard-working man. Let us have no other sort!

THE railroad has treated Ernst badly in keeping back his oysters, but he is looking for them every hour. We shall vote for the candidate who first invites us to see Ernst.

THE RAILROAD MEETING held at the Menager Hotel last night, voted to give Mr. Pierce $300,000 in Bexar county bonds, and to raise in cash whatever else was needed to complete the road to San Antonio within the specified time. The vote in favor of the bonds is good as far as it goes, but the cash part is subject to many objections, which we have heretofore set forth. Nobody can tell how much it will be. There is no certainty of raising it. We do not believe it will or can be done. If done, it will cost more in the end than the $300,000 plan. This plan, had it been adopted, would have settled the matter at once, but now we shall have a lay upon delay. Let us adopt the $500,000 bond plan, and get the road.

KILLED.—Just as we are going to press we learn the sad news that Mr. Sam'l Switzer, of Laredo, was found dead in his store, with a bullet hole through his head, and a new pistol lying near by. It is as yet unknown how he met his death. These brief particulars were sent by telegraph to Mr. E. Morris of this city, by Calvin G. Brewster, of Laredo. The fatal occurrence happened yesterday.—Las Cruces Times.

Our Family Bread.

Truly the most important adulterations to avoid are those which are calculated to injure the "staff of life," our family bread. We know that merchants who supply their customers with pure articles like Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder and his True Flavoring Extracts, retain better patrons, have a larger trade, and make more money, than those who buy and recommend articles that are poor and cheaper. Besides it's a pleasure to have articles that never fail to give satisfaction, and that can be used with safety. Aside from its excellence, Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is one-third stronger, two cans equal to three of other kinds.

Brownsville Items.

We gather the following from the Brownsville papers of last evening:

A sad accident happened in Matamoros Thursday morning. A young man by the name of Abelardo Pena, was shot dead with a pistol in the hands of his fellow-clerk. There is no doubt that the accident was caused by the careless handling of the pistol, still the authorities will investigate the affair. Young Pena was the sole support of his widowed mother.

A private letter from Edinburg has the following items:

Two soldiers deserted lately from the company stationed at Edinburg. One of them is supposed to have taken Maj. H. Chamberlain's gold watch before departing.

Two soldiers got into a quarrel, one threatened to kill the other, having his arms ready; another interfered to separate them, when the other fired, wounding him dangerously. It is thought he will die from the effects of the wound.

Captain McNelly is in town. He looks well after his recent expedition.

We notice Gen. Haleh is in town. He arrived on the steamer I. G. Harris.

Ranch La Flor de Mayo four miles from this city, has picked one hundred bales of cotton this season, and will possibly make from five to ten more. The ranch is owned by Messrs. Marion & Follain, and the crop raised under the supervision of Mr. F., who has certainly demonstrated that this is a cotton country, and is entitled to the credit.
