ANTONIO AND BEXAR COUNTY.

The press of the State is circulating a false impression in relation to the party strength manifested in the late election...

In the first place, the Republicans of Bexar county had voted in convention against any nomination for State officers...

The vote on the Constitution has never yet been made known, but if it is not defeated in the county and the district...

For the Legislature there was but one ticket, Mr. McLeary, a straight Democrat, was nominated by the party...

For the Judgeship of the district, Gen. Paris was the Democratic nominee, and Judge Noonan, a Republican, ran independently...

General Knox and Mr. Sam Smith were the Democratic nominees for Sheriff and County Clerk respectively, against Capt. Shardin and John Rosenheimer...

Had the Express been willing to engage in the fight over the local election, and had undertaken to engineer and support earnestly the People's Ticket...

As to the strength of the Democratic and Republican parties in San Antonio and Bexar county, we are satisfied that they are about equal...

The old committee men for years past have been the shame and the blemish of the party...

The Daily Express now ranks as the third newspaper in the State, in point of size and the amount of reading matter...

The Germans throughout the State, whether Democrats or Republicans, have voted almost unanimously against the new Constitution...

It is my opinion, that the bridge is not needed at present, and when they are needed, they will be of some commercial utility...

This Houston Telegraph very properly objects to the encouragement given in the Southern States to the lecture of Victoria Woodhull...

The Waco Examiner says that it is wonderful that "old Texas, men who have spent a quarter of a century in public life, and yet have believed that the new Constitution could be defeated."

Col. W. R. Baker, it is said, is defeated for re-election to the State Senate from the Houston District. He was the regular Democratic nominee...

It is only through the columns of an important journal that people of any time, have had the opportunity afforded them of discussing fully and freely all questions pertaining to the interests, well-fare and prosperity of a country or a community...

My attention having been called to this subject, and being, as I am, always ready and willing to assist in the promulgation of anything calculated to lead to the advancement and prosperity of the city...

1st. That, in my humble opinion, the wants of the city at present, neither the fire nor demands the immediate construction of these bridges.

2nd. That the tax-payers, who were never consulted however, don't want them built just now, and don't want them built until they have had some more of the local columns of the Herald to the contrary notwithstanding.

3rd. That if there is money to spare and expend for this purpose, why not use it in improving our streets and sidewalks, (their wretched condition, even in the very heart of the city, being a disgrace to any people) and not try to use it simply to beautify and adorn the streets.

4th. That the commercial revolution contemplated in the completion of the railroad, and military depot, may make it incumbent upon us to erect those bridges at some other points, not now spoken of, which would be more profitable to the city.

5th. That the Telegraphs bridge on Houston St., seems to have been taken as the criterion to show that the proposition of the agent of the "King bridge" is reasonable, when it is remembered that the Houston street bridge cost them three times more than it is worth, and that the approaches to the bridge, together with the work on the street, and the grading of Houston street, cost more than the bridge itself, and this will be the case in regard to all other bridges that may be built on our river.

It is all very well to say "it will cost only $20,000 to build those two bridges, but there is no mention made of the amount it will take, over and above, to build, in a substantial manner, the approaches to those bridges, and everybody knows that this is absolutely necessary, in order to render them available, otherwise the bridges would be entirely useless. It is somewhat like the bridge "over the falling river". The danger is only two shillings, but it is found absolutely necessary to have a mug or two of "A1" and "A2", and after a while a bottle of "Black", winding up with a bowl of punch, and other extras, so that they will be able to enjoy the view from the bridge.

Persons having mention sheep for sale by lots of 50, 100 or more, will please describe the age, grade and condition, and if shorn or not, and when last shorn. Terms cash. Apply or write to...

WASHINGTON WOMEN.

A Washington correspondent of the Houston Telegraph, a lady, and a very charming writer, by the way, gives the following picture of the principal ladies, wives of high officials, as she saw them in a round of calls. She says:

Mrs. Robinson is the first whom we shall greet. Up the steps and into the hall; the lady stands near the mantle. She turns, flashes a look as bright as her diamonds, gives you her gloved hand for a second, and then, unless you are somebody she is polite enough to cultivate, you are left entirely to your own devices. That's very well, if you happen to know any one present; if you don't, it's exactly awkward; but Madame has done her duty, you are quite at liberty to look at her as much as you please, and she does make a picture, for Mrs. Robinson is a strikingly handsome woman; her figure is superb, her dress faultless, and the masses of her silver hair over her still youthful face are a crown extremely becoming. Very different is the welcome you meet at Mrs. Bristow's. She is simply exquisite every way; never a hair out of place, you naturally, sizes some bright bits of thought, and then, if her attention is claimed by entering guests, she at once introduces you to some one who shall make your call agreeable. Yesterday it was pretty Miss Denison, of Ohio, who assisted, and very charmingly she talked, fascinating my escort till I ordered him away. Mrs. Bristow's picture is not so easily given. She is tall and slight, her features are always rich, but her whole charm lies in the expression of her mouth and eyes, such great, soft brown eyes, looking straight into your own with an earnest, questioning glance, while round the mouth there is always a smile so winning that were I a man I should envy the Secretary his right to bask in such radiance. This isn't gushing; I know Mrs. Bristow, and I love her. Our next call was upon the wife of the Secretary of War, Mrs. Belknap. The fame of her beauty needs no help from my pen; she is remarkably lovely; but what Miss Belknap is far more attractive than her mamma. You will find her throned on the piano, the sweetest morsel of baby food that ever came to gladden a household. She is delicious; you want to bite her just a little, you know, and you stand worshipping the year old darling, wondering if all her life shall be as rose-hued as now, hoping most devoutly that sorrow shall never blot that rare golden head. The child is the god-daughter of Mrs. Fish, and to her house I will take you next. Usually, every nook is filled with eager visitors, but sometimes your hostess has a minute's respite. How many years she has stood within her gates receiving all who chose to come! Her wonderful memory retains every name and every face; a dignified staidness marks her manner; but she is ever so slight a reason for getting over the first formality, and she holds the truest womanly heart that ever beat; so true that when Mrs. Fish shall utter any sentence, you may know that she means it; and so unselfish that weariness and care are counted naught if she may accomplish any good. Well, she has won the title—"the first lady in America."

At the Postmaster General's it is always pleasant to linger. Mrs. Jewell is so cordial, and Florence (named to call her Miss Jewell) such a tiny rosybud of a girl, that welcome seems warmer there than anywhere else. Young people are always to be found there; the tables of refreshments are very tempting, while there are pictures that will pay you for looking.

Mr. Pierpont, the new Attorney General, lives in the house built by General Leitch; his construction is peculiar, but never mind the house for the hostess; it well worth your attention. It is easy to see what her lifelong associations must have been; the high-bred faces, and its delicate features, the graceful manner, the low sweet voice, all mark the lady, born to that name. Mrs. Pierre is so winning love and admiration from every one she meets, tribute freely given, and accepted so charmingly that one wishes there were even more to be stow.

Now to Mrs. Chandler's. We know exactly how Mrs. Chandler will stand, and how warmly she will wrap our honored land, but we have not quite recovered from our surprise when we first saw her; on an hardly believe her a grand mother; that fair queenly woman with no wrinkles on her face, no trace of age anywhere; if you see possible. Yet Mrs. Hall, her daughter, has two lovely children. Mrs. Chandler receives with perfect composure and grace; she is never hurried, never at a loss for a word or phrase, and you are quite at liberty to wander about the splendid parlors at will. No party of the season has been more brilliant than the card reception given there two weeks ago.

An Ohio Representative has received a letter from a prominent New York merchant, saying that Hamilton, late Clerk of the Ways and Means Committee, who has become conspicuous for having named his son after John Wilkes Booth, was the person who prepared, as a surprise to the war, the famous black list of Northern merchants who held Republican sentiments, and with whom the Southern merchants were warned not to trade. The merchant says, in consequence of this black list, his house lost all its Southern trade.

HUNTING THE HIDDEN TREASURE OF A MISSISSIPPI PIRATE.

In 1875, three Spaniards, it is said, came to this country, and while at the Washington Hotel told a negro porter named Wiley that an immense "treasure" had been buried by their ancestors near the old Spanish fort, northeast of the Walnut Hills, some two miles above the city. Wiley communicated the information to some friends, and was finally persuaded to commence digging for the treasure. He had a good bank account with Brown & Johnson, and exhausted it all in the pursuit of the hidden millions of gold and diamonds. The matter then died away, but in 1866, Mr. Palaski Mann was interviewed by shadows in slumber, marking the very spot where the purest and most docile of all metals had been deposited by the Spaniards when pressed on one side by the French and on the other by the Indians. Shadows of the place came wandering by, but subsequently Mr. Mann abandoned the marks made by sleep's soft dominion, and moved to Delhi, Louisiana. During his residence there, in the land of dreams he would constantly see the spot which marked the hidden gold. Some months ago he returned to the city to reside, and committed to his son his belief. The place indicated was examined at night by Mr. Mann and two others; they used spades and picks freely, and were so encouraged, that early in January the owner of the land was consulted, and he became a partner in the "big bonanza." Others took stock in it, and three weeks ago men were employed to dig away the mountain just beyond the Walnut Hills. We took a buggy yesterday, and went out to see the work of digging. Passing the Moore place, we drove up the hill to the right, and just beyond the place where Jones' battery of Ward's artillery did good service during the siege of 1863, and found a test, with a negro preparing dinner. Some distance below could be seen five white men and one colored man, digging, picking, and otherwise excavating, under the supervision of Mr. Mann, whom we approached, and who showed us specimens of human bones, amber, primitive crockery, glass and sheet-iron, found some thirty feet below the top of the hill. Mr. Mann informed us the amber, used as the body of colored paints, would repay all the expenses of excavation, but he felt satisfied he was on the right track to gain the golden treasure of the Spaniards, as well as the wealth of the closely pursued pirate Mashu, who, the "oldest inhabitant" says, deposited his "golden eagles" near the mouth of the Mississippi river, some two thousand feet from the point where it empties into the Mississippi river. Mr. Mann also stated he was sufficient encouraged thus far to push on the digging, and we hope he will be abundantly rewarded. While there is no possession more uncertain than unknown gold, none more destructive of peace of mind, none more productive of crime and prodigality, yet there is nothing after which the majority of men grasp more eagerly, and for which they are willing to make greater sacrifices, than this. The scriptures say "money is the root of all evil," and we hope our friend Mann will discover the glittering coin without the sin of covetousness. Benyas tells of some pilgrims, who, on their journey to the Heavenly city, were induced to turn aside from their road, to look at a silver mine, recently discovered in a little hill called "Lucra." We hope our friend Mann has led to such a hill and that in labors he will encounter no Ananias and Sapphira to keep back any portion of the golden possession revealed in dreamland.—Vicksburg Herald.

On Wednesday forenoon, Miss Martha Tillotson, aged nineteen years, daughter of Harlan Tillotson, a farmer who resides on the road leading from Beryessa to Milpitas, committed suicide by shooting herself in the neck with a pistol ball.

Now to Mrs. Chandler's. We know exactly how Mrs. Chandler will stand, and how warmly she will wrap our honored land, but we have not quite recovered from our surprise when we first saw her; on an hardly believe her a grand mother; that fair queenly woman with no wrinkles on her face, no trace of age anywhere; if you see possible. An Ohio Representative has received a letter from a prominent New York merchant, saying that Hamilton, late Clerk of the Ways and Means Committee, who has become conspicuous for having named his son after John Wilkes Booth, the pistol with the intention to end her early life; that the unkind and unloving character of a letter she had received this night before from Norman Avery, a young man attending the University of the Pacific, had caused her to do the deed. He had been corresponding with her and had always addressed her by some affectionate title. The last letter contained nothing of this sort, hence she thought his feeling toward her had changed, and so she did not care to live longer. She stated that the young man had never compromised or promised to marry her. At 3 p. m. she died. Miss Tillotson was a young lady of many accomplishments of mind and person, and her untimely decease has cast a gloom over a large circle of relatives and friends.—From the Salt Lake (California) Mercury.

David Davis, of Illinois, Justice of the Supreme Court, is beginning to be talked about as a Democratic Presidential candidate. Several prominent Democrats in Congress have arranged a combination to have his name before the convention. They rely upon his hard money views and his political views as expressed in the Milliken decision.

READ AND BE CONVINCED THAT THE OIL STAR OIL STAR OIL

Best, Purest and Safest Oil EVER OFFERED IN THIS MARKET. A FEW OF OUR REASONS WHY WE CLAIM IT AS SUCH: 1. It is made upon scientific principles and guaranteed to be pure, containing no mixture nor chemical of any kind, no Naphtha nor Gasoline.

Why We Denounce Inferior Oils. It is a deplorable fact, but nevertheless frequently practiced in several branches of manufacture, that whenever an article has secured and attained a popularity and reputation on the merits for its good quality, those manufacturers, pretending to have established an unshaking demand for such, then see fit, for reasons best known to them, to send out an inferior article, under the same name and style of package and new we cannot and prove by the below substantiated certificate of our local chemists (known as competent and honorable men, who made six tests of STAR OIL and Astral Oil), that such is the case with the brand of oil introduced here in 1870 as Pratt's Astral Oil. At the time of its introduction said oil was then fully up to the standard of the certificate of G. H. Keltner, chemist. To what has it been reduced now? These recent tests show in one instance 1 1/2 degrees, and in another 25 degrees below the referred to boiling point of 157 1/2.

Unexcelled, Twice Distilled Star Oil. always uniform and up to the advanced standard, we have obtained an agreement with Mr. G. H. Keltner to examine each and every one and attach a certificate, with his signature to each, before offered to the public. The Star Oil is only furnished in cases of two five-gallon cans, and every can is stamped with our trade mark, of which this can is the true one.

OUR PROOFS. Certificate from Keltner's Chemical Laboratory, San Antonio, Texas: Messrs. Wagner & Rummel, City—San Antonio, Texas, Jan. 11, 1876. Gentlemen: Referring to the advertisement of Messrs. Charles T. Pratt & Co. in the city papers, I see your certificate, given in 1870, republished, which was then in accordance with the quality of the Astral Oil found in this market.

PRATT'S ASTRAL OIL—Flashing Point, 125—Burning Point, 136. PRATT'S RADIANT OIL—Flashing Point, 92—Burning Point, 102. Wagner & Rummel's Star Oil—Flashing Point, 134, Burning Point, 145. From the result of above the tests it will be seen that your STAR OIL IS THE BEST AND SAFEST.

Certificate: The undersigned Inspectors of Petroleum hereby certify that they have examined and found the same to be pure and of the highest quality.

CAUTION One Hundred Dollars Reward. Will be paid for any information which will lead to the conviction of any person or persons selling our case with other oil, and selling it for STAR OIL.
