THURSDAY MORNING, Feb. 24th, 1870.

The Herald says that Washington "had arrived at the greatest of rebels." The Herald should also state, however, that he never was a "rebel" against the Government of his own country.

The Constitution has a majority of 50 in Bexar county, because of the manner in which the rebels were printed. The county is not overwhelmed against it, as it is on Bexar, & itself, would show.

The "rebel" says that "the new Constitution, with all its infamy, has been adopted." There is not paper-only news in Western Texas that supports the new Constitution on its own merits.

Cook got 1400 majority in this country, where he had no practical opposition, the new Constitution being adopted in this 1400 majority, although there was no organized movement to defeat it. The people have directly condemned the Constitution, and have indirectly condemned Cook.

Hughes' majority overrules Bexar county, &c., &c. In Bexar, the rebels will be demoralized, & the rebellion is to be nominally overruled with out a dissenting voice, while it is the three-toe to nominally another man in place of McPherson. But, you see, Cook has plumped the Constitution.

The Dallas Conscription Assembly voted "about the military depots" last Friday. The statement of Gen. Van Velt, Adjutant Quartermaster General at Washington, that the work of the new depot building at Fort Antonio will be commenced as soon as contract can be made, after due advertisement, inviting proposals therefor.

The Herald says that the President's "own family does not escape his Private Secretary, therefore a man of unblushing character, stands disgraced at the bar as a criminal." The Savoy of the world had a worse man in his family, while on earth, than the President, even should Gen. Hancock turn out to be guilty, which is not the case as yet. Moreover, Judas is known to be a bad man, and Hancock is not.

The Herald says that "the companion of the President last night upon the course of the trial of John McDonald, who was to be tried as a felon, is to-day a condemned convict, still occupying a felon's cell. If the Herald means McDonald, the statement is not true, that he was the companion of the President last night upon the course of the trial of John McDonald, who was to be tried as a felon, is to-day a condemned convict, still occupying a felon's cell.

The Centennial Legion, to be composed of corps from each of the six Thirteen States, and which is to parade on the 4th of July next at Philadelphia, adopted the following toast for Washington's Birth Day, last evening:

"To the memory of the distinguished son of the father of his country, first in war, first in peace, first in the heart of his countrymen. These last to the country in his credit and honor to his countrymen, & to example."

"Honest men and continental soldiers, or "solid" Washington in that. They do not now live there."

Judge Brooks, who has been elected County Judge of Guadalupe county was once Judge of the District in which he lives, and made an able officer. He was forced out of his position by the political strife of the time and great injustice was done him by both Democratic and Republican officials, though he may have been somewhat independent himself. We have always sympathized with his misfortunes, and feel glad that the good people of Guadalupe county have shown their attachment to his friends again. The people of that county have elected a Republican Judge and Sheriff, and the rest of the officers are Democrats. They are all good men, and the voters have done themselves honor in their independent selection.

BALTIMORE—SAN ANTONIO—THE GOVERNMENT DEPOT.

ANOTHER REPLY TO THE COMMERCIAL.

About ten days ago we replied, at first sight, to an article in the Dallas Commercial of the 10th inst., headed "Government Depot Building," to which we now devote a more elaborate notice.

The malicious tone and temper of the article exposes completely the shabby disappointment of Dallas over the failure to secure the removal of headquarter offices from San Antonio and the erection of the depot buildings there.

A powerful influence, mostly railroad in its character, with Tom Scott as chief exponent, and an attempt to bring headquarters from San Antonio and place them at Dallas, the center, not of military operations, but of Tom Scott's railroad operations; the base, not of military supplies, but of greedy speculation.

The Commercial says "that San Antonio is out of the way, that the government can save thousands of dollars by the location of the department headquarters in some other place can be demonstrated by figures beyond the question of a doubt."

This can be demonstrated beyond the question of a doubt," why is it not done by the Commercial at once, and the bare assertion not left unsupported by a single figure, fact or argument, worthy of a moment's consideration? On the contrary, it can be demonstrated beyond contradiction that San Antonio is the natural base of supply to the greatest and most important portion of the frontier line of defense.

The Commercial says "San Antonio is isolated, while other cities have railroad facilities."

This is true, and no community has felt this fact more keenly than we have, and recently our citizens were voluntarily to the ballot-box and voted the largest donation to secure railroad connection that any county in the State has ever given to any county in the State. But if the cost of possessing railroad facilities governed the location of military operations, then Galveston, Houston, Waco, or Austin, or a dozen other towns equally as distant from the frontier as Dallas, would have equal if not superior claims as proper points for military installations.

The truth is that other places have been tried and the government has been put to thousands of dollars, hundreds of thousands of dollars extra expense in consequence of the experiment.

Dallas has splendid railroad facilities, but it has no facilities beyond the rail-road, and it is a fact that the attempt to supply frontier posts and troops in the field from Dallas, has failed, and the failure would have proven disastrous to the contractors and a series of great distress to the troops, had produced a complete failure of the important military operations being conducted by General McClellan two years ago, and the recent operations of Colonel Shafter, had it not been for the transportation furnished from San Antonio. Dallas, with its boasted rail-road facilities, was helpless when it came to moving military supplies to the frontier and securing the troops from starving. San Antonio is not without a rail-road, but for more than a quarter of a century it has supplied and sold its own wants, its commerce, has far reaching trade by wagon and cart transportation, and its trains of mule teams wagons have penetrated to the interior of Mexico, and at no time in its history has its transportation facilities been equal to the demand. To-day, without a rail-road, our merchants have cheaper freight than Austin merchants, and at a moment's warning the means for moving millions of pounds to any point beyond us, no matter how great the distance, can be had. Wagons freighting has grown here until it has answered all demands. It has become organized and mobilized, and has increased until San Antonio stands unrivaled in all the Western country as a supply point and a base of military and commercial operations. When McClellan, General Austin, San Antonio fit the work, and had the military headquarters removed to any other point, then San Antonio would have been obliged to supply the transportation to almost every frontier post. These facts are known at Washington, and nothing but the most bare-faced trickery and favoritism could have suggested the making of Dallas into the headquarters.

Col. Florynay we have known ever since we were boy law-student in Alabama. We had intimate knowledge of him during the war. We have known him well ever since. He has always been a gentleman, a highly amiable and slanderous epithet of "demagogue and tricky politician" than either of the other gentlemen named. The use of such epithets, in regard to him, is the secret work of some "demagogue and tricky politicians," and we should like to know who he is, that we may expose him and give him the indignation he deserves. We know all the gentlemen named, have known them long and well, and esteem them highly, and we shall take pains to see that even handed justice is done to all of them.

Col. Florynay we have known ever since we were boy law-student in Alabama. We had intimate knowledge of him during the war. We have known him well ever since. We know all the gentlemen named, have known them long and well, and esteem them highly, and we shall take pains to see that even handed justice is done to all of them.

Now we are going to the second question or two. Who tells us that "the use of Judge Devine's name is unauthorized"? Who tells us that the use of the names of the other gentlemen is not "unauthorized"? Who gives it this authority to take Judge Devine's name out of a list of men from whom a United States Senator may be chosen, and who gives it authority to put the other names on the list? We know all the facts in the case, and we shall not allow them to be misrepresented.

They, aside from our great facilities, and consequent ability to do the work of the government cheaper and better than any other point in Texas, there are other reasons which are very growing in importance. The line of frontier defense and military operations is being removed southward, and the Mexican frontier is becoming the all important objective point of all military operations. The northern frontier of Texas is fast falling up, and Indian raids have ceased, and it will not be many years before there will be no necessity for armed troops north of Fort Concho, within the limits of Texas, except upon the Mexican border.

The military authorities at Washington and the President of the United States understand this situation perfectly, and know that the answer is the best, the natural base for all military operations upon a line of Mexican and frontier border of over eight hundred miles in length. The foresight of the soldier and statesman is hardly necessary to discern an plain matter. And as to a military depot, intended not only for the present but for future military use, it might as well be placed at any other interior place as Dallas. Dallas is destined to be the great focus of all the Southwest, and being situated within easy reach of every post on the Mexican border, with the certainty of soon being the extreme railroad outlet toward Mexico, it would have been in a position of great utility to have located a general supply depot Dallas or any place north of us.

The Commercial says that "San Antonio is a pleasant place to live in; it is true that her citizens are liberal and fat sighted; it is right that the princely gift of $9000 home, elegantly furnished, to General Joe Reynolds, for whose services he has been honored with a well, we suppose that, in order to have equal claims with Dallas our city should be a mean place to live in; our citizens should be close-set, hillocky and short-sighted. General Joe Reynolds may, or may not have received a princely gift," but the assertion of the Commercial will be given to a great majority of our citizens at least he was succeeded in command by General Augur, over four years ago, and General Augur has been succeeded by General Ord; and if the "princely gift" mentioned by the Commercial has been sufficient to tempt the eminence of every General of the army, as intimated, and to poison the whole stream of official administration and corrupt the entire military department from Washington to the frontier, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, then the "princely gift" made a good investment. The ring of the Commercial is contemptible in its character and wholly false in its conclusion. It is also upon the integrity of the army, and its commanders that will meet its proper condemnation.

The Commercial says "that San Antonio is out of the way, that the government can save thousands of dollars by the location of the department headquarters in some other place can be demonstrated by figures beyond the question of a doubt."

MINISTER WASHBURN'S REMINISCENCES OF THE SURRENDER.

The following very interesting letter of Minister Washburn to Mr. John L. Winston, of Lynchburg, Va., has recently been made public to the Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Republic. As it refers to one of the most important events in American history, and speaks of several gentlemen now occupying prominent positions in public life, it will be read with peculiar pleasure:

LETTER TO THE UNITED STATES PARIS, June 17, 1875.—DEAR SIR—I have duly received your letter from New York, dated the 23d ultimo. At the epoch you speak of great events were so crowded together that it is impossible for me at this length of time, to recall the details of many of them. But I well recollect the arrival of the delegation of the three citizens from the municipal government of the city of Lynchburg at Appomattox Courthouse, and the object of their visit to General Gibson, then in command of the Union forces. I shall never forget the pleasant interview I had with those gentlemen and the interest I took in their narration of events and the state of things at Lynchburg. After hearing their statements I knew I was in sympathy with the purpose they had in view, and so expressed myself. But I was there as a private individual, and had no authority to move or scarcely to suggest. Perhaps my opinions may have some weight, but I could not claim even that, and I fear that the generous citizens of Lynchburg have given me credit for what really belongs to others. I can only attest my feelings of gratification at the success which attended the effort of the Lynchburg delegation on that occasion, and the pleasure we felt at the time of their having successfully accomplished their mission. Knowing Gen. Grant as I did, and knowing him to be as just and magnanimous as he was brave, I had no hesitation in saying to the delegation (and to others) that I had no doubt were he present he would at once accede to their request.

Your letter and your allusions to Gen. Gordon, revive many recollections of those eventful days. I arrived at Appomattox Courthouse on Tuesday, the 11th of April, 1865. Gen. Grant, after receiving the surrender of Gen. Lee on Sunday the 9th, had left the next day with his staff officers, en route for Washington. I met him the next evening at Prospect station. Desiring to see the two armies the next morning the General gave me a company of cavalry as an escort to Appomattox. Though the surrender had been made on Sunday, yet the details as to the parole and many other matters had to be agreed upon, and the laying down of arms was to take place at a future day and as soon as the preliminaries could be arranged. Three commissioners were appointed on either side for that purpose.

Gen. Gordon, Gen. Pendleton, (I think), and another gentleman whose name I do not now recall, on the side of the Confederates, and Gen. Gibson, Gen. Merritt, and a third, perhaps Gen. McKensee, on the side of the Union forces. When I arrived at the Courthouse negotiations and parleys were going on between the Commissioners at General Gibson's headquarters, at the house of a Mr. McClellan, and I then saw many of the general officers on both sides. From what one saw, there could hardly been conceived that these men had been in arms against each other through more than four years of deadly strife. The terror of the breach, the fury of the charge and the fatigues of the march seemed to have been forgotten, and these brave men came together more as friends than enemies. In all of their talk there was never a suggestion nor a word from either side that could have wounded the tenderest susceptibility. Many of these officers on both sides had served together in the old army, and it was touching and interesting to witness the sympathy between them, which had survived those long years of conflict and carnage. Gen. Cadmus Wilcox told with emotion how his old classmate, Gibson, accused him of having nothing but Confederates money, and taking from his pocket a new and crisp $50 greenback, to lay upon him. There was no sentiment among all of these men, which seemed to crop out in spite of themselves, and that was that, after all the bloody struggle of the past, they were still Americans. The only punishment I saw inflicted was that on some large jugs of brandy which had found their way to the Union headquarters, and under the peculiar circumstances that was not taken and deemed as a "furlough or quasi punishment" within the meaning of the Constitution.

I met on that occasion two gentlemen in the Confederate service with whom I had served in Congress: Hon. Alexander H. Dotel, of Virginia, and Hon. Lucius Q. C. Lamar, of Mississippi. Lamar was a member of the Committee on Commerce, of which I was chairman, and though we differed on all political matters as widely as two men well could differ, our personal relations had always been pleasant and agreeable. Though I had not much money with me, I proposed to divide with him, but he declined, saying he could see his way clear to get to Baltimore, and once where Winter Davis was he should be all right. I knew what that meant, for the intimacy and friendship that existed between those two brilliant and gifted men, so utterly opposed to each other on all political questions of the day, was well known in Washington circles. They were united together by a tie which binds together scholars, persons of similar tastes, and men of genius and eloquence, and which even the storms of war could not sunder. Had these men lived in France during the great revolution, Lamar would have rivalled Mirabeau in the tribune of the National Assembly, and Winter Davis would have been the peer of Vergniaud, the echoes of whose gracious but indignant eloquence resounded through all France long after his head had rolled into the basket of the guillotine and the blood ran in the gutters.

Barney Williams has refused a handsome offer from Mr. Southern to fill an engagement at the Haymarket Theatre, London. Alexandre Hamilton has been elected by the trustees of the Astor Library to fill the vacancy caused by death of the late O. B. Astor. The death of Major General Major, R. E., of England, is announced. He was born in 1811, entered the East India Company's Military College in 1827, and, after thirty-three years' service in the engineers, he retired in 1863 with the rank of Major General.

We learn that the Indian mound on Murphy's Island was opened, or rather entered, by a party a few days ago. This mound is one of the largest on the river, and has excited more than ordinary interest among our scientific visitors. But Colonel Hart, proprietor of the island on which it stands, however, persisted in his refusal to have this relic of past ages disturbed. On Wednesday, however, it was resolved to inspect thoroughly this monument of a prehistoric age, from the bottom up. The steamer for the island, where they arrived in good time, it was agreed to open the mound at its base. After making a breach of thirty-five feet, they discovered a hard wall made of granite or shell rock. This wall was cemented and covered with various figures of warriors with bows and arrows, and various reptiles. After much difficulty a breach was made in the wall, and by light of a torch, several of the party entered; much surprised, they found themselves within a vault of eighty feet high with a room twelve by fifteen feet long, with armed warriors encased in niches, all in a state of petrification. This is certainly a most wonderful discovery, and has produced a profound sensation. In view of this important discovery Colonel Hart has stationed a guard to prevent parties making away with these wonderful objects. Murphy's Island will, no doubt, become the Mecca of St. John's river. —Paducah (Kan.) Herald.

DAILY EXPRESS

THURSDAY MORNING, Feb. 21st, 1876.

CITY NEWS.

CITY AND COUNTRY DONS.

Many berries will soon be ripe.

A morning paper—the spirit of nationalism.

Notes that Coke will have over $10,000 ready for the order of the day.

The county officers chosen at the recent election hope to assume their positions on the 15th of April.

—Judge Schomberg has apparently recovered from his late severe illness to be upon the streets again.

Mary San Antonio merchants have gone North to make purchases to supply their trade for the coming spring.

Judge Schomberg has apparently recovered from his late severe illness to be upon the streets again.

This being St. Patrick's Day, religious services will be held in St. Mark's Episcopal Church at 9 o'clock this morning.

Some little differences have arisen between the two companies which it is hoped will be settled without affecting the strength of the Department.

The evening promenade and sweet strains of the Wallace Sisters' band will be greatly missed by the music loving public when the Combinations leaves the city.

Competition is the life of trade in the news, as well as in all other kinds of business. Walk up, Express, you've got the best start—now keep it, and the race is yours.

Our friend Mr. Bloody has just sold his interest in the Crystal Saloon, as some impressed themselves, but he allied himself with Mr. Joseph—just gotten fully into the business.

The Wm. Irwin and Mrs. Beggs fight near the store of Jack Humphreys, in the Post Office, was the most horrible affair that has stained the records of our country for many a day.

The Metropolitan cops, and the bells, for the city police, have arrived.

The balance of the uniforms are being made at our tailors. The suits will be according to the Metropolitan style throughout, the color being navy blue.

The Galveston News, noticing the surprise donation party given to Rev. Mr. Thrall, the Methodist pastor of this city, pays a high compliment to that gentleman. Rev. Hamilton Smart, of the paper, and Mr. Thrall, are both old Galvestonians.

We are requested to announce that the homely Presbyterian Church Sociable will be held at the residence of Mr. Morris Fawley, Dallas street, the second block north of the Presbyterian Church.

Those who were influenced to visit Mr. Fawley's last evening on the strength of a notice in the local of our contemporary, will be in hand this evening, the time appointed for the reunion.

A young Mexican was arrested by officers yesterday afternoon, charged with theft of a silver watch from a clerk at a military Headquarters. The watch was found at the pawnshop of B. Schwartz, and has been recovered by the owner.

The man was identified by the clerk of the shop. Persons wishing to interview the offender can now find him in the county jail.

We learn from good authority that Col. Price has accepted the $300,000 recently voted to be offered him, by the San Antonio Construction Company, and says that he will surely be able to build his road to San Antonio within twelve months. That's too long to wait—the Construction Company must push the matter and make him bring in the road sooner.

The Social Club gave the last of their hops, for the present season, at the Menagerie, last night. The attendance was very large, the hall being filled to an extreme that dancing could hardly proceed with the accustomed grace and ease which so notably characterized the grand embalming of those dancing. Everything, however, passed off in an exceedingly pleasant manner. We congratulate the Committee of Arrangements, having the management of these parties, upon the success they have experienced, and feel sure that not only all the members of the Club, but the young ladies who have attended the hops, will join us in expressing the above committee a vote of thanks.

The alarm of fire was given yesterday morning by the police in the vicinity of Military place. It was taken up by the postmen at the Catholic, Cathedral, and spread to the headquarters of Jim Company No. 1, and even as far as the Alamo. While the excitement of the alarm was at its highest pitch, a man mounted a two-story building on Main street, and pointed in the direction of ward No. 3, and thencewards a large part of the excited multitude upon the streets turned their faces, with a rapid gait. But it was only a hasty burning out at the residence of a Spanish family, near the Cathedral, just in the opposite direction from where so many were running, and was easily extinguished. Let there be no mistake in the matter of fire alarms.
