If irrigation from the river is not feasible, there are springs tributary to the stream, that can be abdirated and thrown at will over the land. The Perdensies, the San' Marcos, are a neighborhood of springs; and the Guadalupe is made admirable by the frequency of water sprenting near itsbanks. The Llano has elicited much praise on account of butbling fresh water that increases its dimensions, and makes the stream one of the most promineut of Texas rivers. The Conche is a long list of springs; the San Saba-Mr. Oliphant, photographer at Austin, can show you the waters forming this rivulet, in his art gallery, that are his best steredscopic riews.
