HOUSE.

The House proceedings were interrupted by the whole House proceeding to the Senate to make a formal impeachment.

McCreary argued that if the court exceeded its authority, the House had the remedy in its own hands, and could prasent articles of impeachment against the Judge, but if the House trampled on the rights of the court, and of the citizens, there was no power anywhere to call the House and the family of our Brother a kind and loving husband and father and the community a good citizen. The House proceedings were interrupted by the whole House proceeding to the Senate to make a formal impeasement.

McGreary argued that if the court exceeded its authority, the Heuse had the remedy in its own hands, and could present articles of impeachment against the Judge, but if the House trampled on the rights of the court, and of the citizens, there was no power anywhere to call the House to account. The argument was throughout of a legal character, and generally dull.

Tucker, of Virginia, proposed an Mr. Tucker, of Virginia, proposed an amendment to the resolution reported by the majority of the Judjeiary Committee directing the Sergeant at Arms to appear by counsel before the court and to make a motion to quash or diemiss the writ, or to take so ne other such procedure, as he should be obliged to raise the question of its logality and propriety of the issue of the writ on the facts stated in the patition and as a preliminary to ake return the writ on the facis stated in the patition, and as a preliminary to any retorn of the same, and it at in the meantime he would retain in cust-dy Kilbourne's body, and would not produce it without further order of the House. He declared himself satisfied with the legality of the question asked of Kilbourne by the remmittee and of the action taken by the House on the subject, and he was satisfied that any court which respected law and precedent would remand the enstedy of Kilbourne to the House, and he was so well satisfied that the American and English precedents sustained that position that if any judge should decide otherwise he would bring himself very nearly within the alternative, or dilemma, of either knowing nothing of law or corruptly defying it.

or dilemma, of either knowing nothing of law or corruptly defying it.
Garfield, of Ohio, suggested that in the Irwin habeas corpus case last session, where the same course was resorted to as the gentleman from Virginia now suggested, a motion to quash the writ, the indge would not hear the motion unless the body of the prisoner was produced.
Tucker—If he fefuses to hear the motion it will show that corruption has apread from the real estate pool, so as to even taint the origin of the indicisary. (Applanse on the Democratic side of the Honse)

Garfield-There would be just as good Garfield.—There would be just as good right to say that the statement which the geutleman has made would only have been made in case corruption has reached clear to the House counter, [applause on the Republican side], and caused it to strike at the judiciary. I would not say that that. Tucker-I did not hear the gentleman's Tucker—I did not hear the gentleman's remark, but I suppose there was nothing in it personal to myself.

Garfield—Oh, no.

Tucker—The Judge should be made to heed the House by bis douscience, if he has one, and by a power superior to it if he has one, and by a power superior to it if he has note.

Blaine, who was occapying a chair in the area on the democratic side, inquired bey a judge could be made to do anything by the House.

Tucker—The gentleman is no larger, as he has often shown in this House.

[Laughter on the democratic side.] And the gentleman is perhaps unaware that when a judge does not except his data he may be made to do so.

Blaine—By order of the House?

Tucker—No, ist. Not by order of the House. That shows again the gentlemen the petition'

Blaine said that he did not know why tleman from Virginia, Tucker should have manifested so much aspering in remarks addressed to him. He thanked in remarks addressed to him. He thanked God he was not a lawyer trained in the school the gruteman was. The getleman represents, and with great ability, that which is known as the great states rights achool, which received its chief inspiration from Mr. Jefferson, and others of Va, and yet he stands here to plend that this House possesses a power of which there is no review anywhere except in itself.

M. Jefferson said expressly in a lett r that this government was constructed so that absolute power red ind n sweets, and that abs-inte power re-ised a "where, and he defied any body to show that there was absolute power in any departmet of the government. The ultimate judgment of the Suprema Court of the U. . may seem absolute, but if the power of that court is abused, the power of the peachment resides in the House to punish the list the gentlement from Vergious. professing to represent the system Virginia.

That the issne was franciclent, and that the State received no consideration therefor. This decision is in accordance with the general public sentiment. A state ment furnished by the Auditor shows the present condition of the State debt to be as follower. THE EFFECT OF THE MILITARY

Whenever the government orders the establishment of a post upon the frontier, another village is added to the towns of Texas. It is the nucleus for population, around which cluster tradesmen, artisans and farmers. At Port Hudson the enterprising citizens are in quest of information for the purpose of building up a thrifty village, under the protection and care given by the adveturous army. The history of the majority of the towns this side of the Colorado commenced from the date when the government posts were established. It is a saving for the frontiersump, as the selection for loca-tions are always attended with care, the site fiely chosen, with surroundings possessing advantages for agricultural and other interests. In the course of events these resolutions to Mrs. James H. Taylor. more Western points are explored, the fort is deserted and the village left to care for itself, and depend upon its own exertions for progress and commerce. But It is the first impetus that we admire, the giving birth to settlements and towns is assuredly one of the effects of the military upon Western Texas. The hardy pioneer has recognized this, and is grateful to the government that has hand of death was deprived of the partner taken the lead and prepared the way for civilization and industry, by exploringthe country in advance of settlers, Auother instance is recently furnished that will prove of incalculable advantage to an extensive stretch of country that was always considered the Sahara of the South. Col. Shafter has the complete topography of the Liane Estacade, and his report is at variance with the long entertained opinion that the Staked Plains were steril and unprofitable territory. He has cognizance of certain localities where privileges to the stockmen and farmers could be enjoyed as full as in other inhabited portions of the West. His report to superior officers is lengthy and detailed, with a full description of the country traversed. He strongly recommends that posts be established at several points on the Plains for the ostensible purpose of impeding the incursion of depredating Indians, and in all pass we will have other towns, and ter-ritory will be reclaimed, and more limit

FACTS BY WHICH DECIDE

In those spacious but insignificant advertisements of C. Pratt & Co., they endeavor to convince the public that our STAR OIL, and PEERLESS are identically the same, which they know, even better than we could ever attempt to concince them, is not the case. Paerless is by no means one of the inferior grades of oil; it is in every respect equal and fully by to the actual standard (not the advecated) of hatful, and is like the latter 12 degrees below the burning point of our STAR OIL. Now we propose to Farnish the Poerless, guaranteed equivalent in every respect to hetral, at One Dollar a case less than our STAR OIL, which we sell at the price of hetral, although our STAR OIL is 12 degrees belier, hence mater, and 'consequently has the preference of the consuming public.

MR. STEWERT'S WEALTH. In regard to Mr. Stewart's wealth the World writer says: "During a successful business career of over fifty years Mr. Stewart has been a constant buyer of real estate in this city, his holdings of real property being only surpassed by those of the Astor family. Previous to the death of the late William B. Astor, in the fall of 1875, A. T. Stewart was the second largest holder of New York city property. Since the division of Mr. Astor's estate among his children, but principally between his two sons, John Jacob and William, many have thought that A. T. Stewart has been promoted to the first rank in the list of New York city real esfate owners. We are not of that 20 half bbls No. 2 Mackerel opinion.
