A LAND OF ROMANCE.

All that part of the reading public which is familiar with the faccinating and veracious teles from time to time issued from the press by Captain Mayne Reid know that the modern land of poetry and romance to to be found norther in the dreamy East mor on the shores of the Mediterranea. It lies, on the contrary, somewhere—it is difficult without more negative geograpical knowledge than we pretend to express to say exactly where—vest of the Massasppi, and embrace at least the States of California, Mexico, new and old, Texas, and, in fact, a large part of the ancient seat of the Axtec Empire, more recently made romantic and interesting by the wonderful imaginations of the historians, so called, of the Spanish American conquest, and still more recently by the mighty invasion of that poetical. which is familiar with the fascinating and St. Louis, July 1—The following lie w part of an editorial published to day in the Westliche Post, the newspaper which Carl Schurz is connected with "Tilden well mounted and harghty enballere, with his boots and spars and sombrero, careers in chase of the dark eyed generita, fainttiples for the presidency. Evidently, the memination of Heudricks was a matter concerted beforehand; and the gallant Americano at the stake to lift his eyes in heaven in gratuate? It is the whistly the signal, known from one end of the L'ance Estacades to the other, of the gallant Arthur Jones, braves in Titler his embediment of hon-set reform. Such might be the case for the chert, of the gallant Arthur Jones, bravest ranchero in all Texas, best denor at the fandango, and the quickest shot at the shindy which so frequently follows the time being, but there is nothing in all the time buing, but there is nothing in all the fautungo in all the Southwest. That this talk of reform on the Domozratic is why the Piutes mount their steeds in side, and the cities as and that is why a long-range shot they can serve two masters, will have to at a distance of a mile and a quarter, look in another direction, and centre their brings down their chief. Those ropes will now soon be unbound by the rescuing party, and the savages who have not decamped will be lifeten corpees, wome on the sward and others on trees.—Pall Mall

CAPED FROM AUSTRALIA.... On Easter Monday there was a regatta near Freemantie, and the Comptroffer General and the Cappein of the Pensioners were present. The usual force of pensioners and police, however, remained in Freemantle. While the regatta was pro-Freemantle. While the regats was proceeding, six or seven of the prisoners man aged to escape to a piggery about a mile from the prison, while there changed their clothes, and got into converse which were waiting for them. SUNDAY MORNING, July 24, 1876. EXPLORATIONS IN PALES

The English Palestine exploration party have accomplished the survey of three hundred and thirty square miles of the Dead Ses desert, from the line of Wady El Tramirch to Wady Seigal; the work being accomplished in the teeth of storms, in a forlorn country, and in great privation and wearlness. The route the party took differs from those of Triatram and Robinson, much of it quite dangerous, where a false step would have been fatal. The identification of ancient places does not seem to be remarkably successful, the descriptions and travel notes are better. The survey has since been progressing through the plains of Judah and off towards the ancient country of the Philistines. Lieutenant Conder in his report jusists upon the "canon" that the order of a list of places mentioned in Joshua is a pretty sure indication of their relative situation, M. Clermont-Gaussan identifies the site of Adullam with Aid el-mis so clearly that Lieuten. ant conger thinks the identified site should be accepted.
