THE REAL SOURCE OF THE EVIL.

In the early days of the history of arms time, but liftle lawlessness and crime. To this day the surviving Old Textians take delight in telling as of the security of life and property, and the general freedom from gross outrages, which prevailed, in those early days. Althoughliving in a country which was a wide and vast wilderness, and with a very small population, scattered in a few small settle ents and villages at great distances from each other; yet there was no need of lucks on the doors of homes, snake-houses, stores, stables, and other receptacies of goods and Merick property. And, so it was in reference to smaller the security of their property, so it was in reference to the scourity of their lives They had no fear of each other in regard to either. Their only danger in regard to both was from their common enemies, the savage Indians and the hostile Mexicana.

In those spacious but insignificant advertisements of C. Pratt & Co., they en deavor to convince the public that our STAR OIL and PERILESS are identically the same, which they know, even better than we could ever attempt to convince them. Is NOT THE CASE. Poerless is by no means one of the inferior grades of oil; it is in every respect equal and fully up to the actual standard (not the advocated) of Astrai, and is like the latter 12 degrees below the burning point of our STAR OIL. Now we propose to Furnish the Peerless, glaranteed equivalent in every respect to Astrai, at One Dollar a case less than our STAR OIL, which we sell at the price of Astrai, atthough our STAR OIL is 12 degrees befter, hence safer, and consequently has the preference of the consuming public.

OUR GRAVEYARD.

Our graveyard will soon be enclose and then its general improvement will be properly in order. As it leas been in past years, persons or families not owning lote have found it impossible to keep the restfor stock would destroy shrabbery transplanted, and tramp upon the graves. Now however, efforts should be made to unprove and beautify the grounds, for such efforts would no longer be in vain. Our cemetery grounds are rich and damp, and trees and flowers would grow finely in any part of them. The mesquite bushes should be cut down and the grounds shared of subbish, and then, with but a moderate amount of labor, they could be made as beautiful as any in the State. Graveyards should be kept in the very best of order. The city of the dead should be as neat and clean as the city of the tiving. It can be more easily kept in such condition, when once placed in it. Around the grave, an idea of unbroken quiet always broods, and surround the visitor to that quiet scene with becoming attractions of art and cultivated shrubbery, and he or she will love to linger amid the selemnly quiet, yet lovely home of the departed. Chapin has said that the grave is a port, where the storms of life never beat, and the forms that have been tossed on the chafing waves lie quiet for evermore. There the child neetles as peacefully as over it lay in its mother's arms, and the workingman's hands lay still by his side, and the thinker's brain is pillowed in silent mystery, and the poor girl's broken heart is steeped in a balm that extracts its secret woe, and is in the reeping of a charity that covers all blame. In the grave lie the remains of by gone enerations, the remains of our fathers, nothers, brothers and sisters-to whom we must be largely thankful for our intelligence, our general knowledge, our civilization. We should dearly remember these remains, and as a token of such remembrance, keep their resting place neat and clean, and ornamented with shrubbery and garlands of flowers.

THE HORRORS of violence, bloodshed murder and general outrage and crime, which have so long afflicted our unhappy State, seem to increase in breadth, depth, and force of volume, rather than diminish. The leading journa's are daily filled with special telegrams from various and distant sections, giving accounts of crimes and outrages of all sorts and characters. The mind grows weary and the heart sick at the contemplation of the daily received, ever-varying and ghastly picture. The honest and sensitive fournalist hesitates between his duty and his inclination in relation to continuing the publication of the daily additions to the long and ever-lengthening catalogue of outrage and blood. There seems to be no present power of turning back and diverting from the State the tide of this dark and bloody flood. Yet the whole Statethe people, the press, the courts, the Legislature, the Governor, are alive to the enormous fearfulness of the evil, and are up in arms against it. OLD AGE IS HONORABLE.

This is true, but how few of us like to ook old. Age, with its grey hairs, is never welcome, and the various arts have een brought into requisition to hide its avages. In too many instances agents are used ifor that purpose, which inflict serious injury on the constitution. Especially is this the case with a large najority of the hair dyes of the present day. For an elegant preparation that will impart a perfectly natural color, without doing the least harm to the hair or health, we recommend that made by Dr. Tutt, of New York. It possesser qualities that no other hair dye does, and its analysis proves is as innocent as nountain spring water.
