Europe. The provinces which are now formally engaged in the war are Herzegovina, Servia, and Montenegro. The first is a small and weak province, the real strength of which we do not now recollect. But the three divisions, Servia, Montenegro and Herzegovina, have, aggregated, not far from three millions of inhabitants, and as all are warlike, and the Great Powers have affirmed to Turkey their intention of not interfering In the struggle, we may now see a fight between vigorous, determined Europeans, smarting under the wrongs of five hundred years of oppression on the one hand, and on the other worn out Turks struggling to perpetuate an Asiatic despotism of the worst type.

Turkey has as yet been unable to conquer Herzegovina alone, and she will, of course, find her hands full when Servia and Montenegro are added. If Servia and Montenegro alone were to be Mr. Buchanan $750 damages. met, the danger of Turkish defeat would be great enough, but in addition to these Turkey must now be taken into account, ready to act against the Porte whenever they can see an opportunity. AFTER THE PRESS.

There is a disposition of late to distinguish between the liberty and the beense of the press, and to hold public journals to a stricter account than former ly for abuses of the freedom of the press. While we hold as strongly as any should for the liberty of the press, we are glad to see this movement to restrain the undeniable abuses that exist. As an illustration of the tendency we speak of, a short time since Robert Buchanan, the poet, sued Mr. Taylor, member of Parlinment for Liegester, the proprietor of the Examiner, for $25,000 for libels contained in the Examiner's toviews and in letters from Algernon Swinburne, the poet, elicited by Buchanan's criticism of Swinburne, and others, under the designation of the "fleshy school." The Oration of Charles Francis Adams at Taunton, Massachusetts,on the Centennial Fourtflof July, is one of the notable utterances made on that notable day. Taking as a text the germinal principle of the Declaration of Independence, that "all men are created equal;" that "they they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalionable rights," and that among these are "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;" Mr. Adams procooded to show what America had done during the first hundred years of her history as an independent nation for the diffusion and establishment of this principle among the rest of the nation; of the earth. Of sourse he assumed that the principle set forth to the Declaration was the vital principle of human liberty, and that America was the first nation upon earth to make it the central and seminal principle of government. That principle was vindicated and established by the success of the Revolutionary war. The Americans from hapture by the Barbary Anthorities while pavigating in the Mediter-Latitte secured the same freedom in the navigation of the Gulf of Mexico. Bestanck July 7.—General Gib bons' cavalry followed the Indians for about tep miles, and ascertained that they had moved to the south and west by several trails. A good deal of property had been thrown away by them, to lighten their march, and was found scattered for many miles over the prairie. Many of their dead were discovered secreted in ravines, a long distance from the battle field. Among them were Artaphaces and Cheyennes, as well as firm.

DESCRIPTION OF THE CARNAGE

WASHINGTON, July 7 -The non de plume tract from an account of the battle tract from an account of the battle:

A party was sent on Caster's track to look for traces of his command. Therefound awaiting them a sight to appal the stoutest heart. At a point about three miles down the right bank of the stream Caster had evidently attempted to ford and attack the villiage from the ford.

The trail was found to lead back up to the bluffs and to the northward as if the troops had been repulsed and compelled to retreat, and, at the same line, had been cut of from regaining the forces under to retreat, and, at the same time, had been cut off from regaining the forces under Rene. The blaffs along the right bank come sharply down to the water, and are interspersed by numerous revines. All along slopes and ridges, and in the ravines, lying as they had fought, line beltind line, showing where defensive positions had been successfully taken up and held, till none were left to fight, and then hadded in a narrow compass, horses and till none were left to fight, and then haddled in a nearow compans, lorses and men were piled promisencenty.

At the highest point of the ridge lay Caster, corrounded by a chosen band. Here were his two brothers and nephew, Mr. Reed, Cole. Notes and Cook, and Capt. Smith, all lying in a circle of a few yards, their horses beside them. Here, behind Yate's company, the last standhad been made, and here, one after another, these last survivors of Caster's five companies had met their death. The companies had met their death. The companies had met their death. The companies had necessfully thrown themselves across the path of the advancing enemy, and had been annihitated. Not a man lives to tell line tale, but it was inseribed on the nurses of the burson hills in language mere dequart than week.

FACTS BY WHICH DECIDE

In those spacious but insignificant advertisements of C. Pratt & Co., they en desvor to convince the public that our STAR OIL and PEERLESS are identically the same, which they know, even better than we could ever attempt to convince them, is NOT THE CASE. Peerless is by no means one of the inferior grades of oil; it is in every respect equal and fully up to the actual standard (not the advocated) of Asterl, and is like the latter 12 degrees below the burning point of our STAR OIL. Now we propose to Farnish the Poerless, guaranteed equivalent in every respect to Astral, at One Dollar a case less than our STAR OIL, which we sell at the price of Astral, although our STAR OIL is 12 degrees better, hence safer, and consequently has the preference of the consuming public.
