SUNDAY MORNING, July 30th, 1876. ALL honor to the honest minority of the Texas Senate.

The Democrats held a grand ratification meeting at Austin on Thursday last, and I promised to carry Texas for Tilden by 100,000 majority.

TOM SCOTT threatens to dismember Texas. One spark to the fuel, and every thing belonging to Tom Scott, Coke, and the Fifteenth Legislature.

Let the honest and patriotic men of both parties in Texas unite, so far as the State affairs are concerned, to rescue Texas from the claws of Tom Scott, Coke, and the Fifteenth Legislature.

Tom Scott will fall to control the people of Texas this time, it matters not what the Legislature may do. The popular blood is up, and it will never cool again, until we have thrown off the yoke of the railroad monopolists and corruptionists, reelected our public lands, and elected an honest and brave Legislature.

Custer and his heroes will have a monument, and the credit will be largely due to the New York Herald, which started the subscription, keeps up the call, and will not stop till enough money is raised to complete the memorial shaft. It is a good work, and the people everywhere, rich and poor, should help a little. Custer and his men died for their country, at the post of duty, and their courage was as grand as that of the old demi-gods.

RECONSTRUCTION OF MEXICO. Much as we desire the prosperity of our sister Republic of Mexico, and valuable as that prosperity would be to Texas and the United States, we are discouraged by the news we receive of the disorders in that afflicted country. Mr. E. F. Moore, of the city of Ponce, in the State of Guanajuato, has recently arrived in St. Louis, and says that affairs in Mexico are very gloomy, and display a condition of things entirely contrary to what the public in general has been led to expect. He says that the insurrection under command of Diaz has steadily and regularly gained strength, until it has finally spread all over the country, and there is little hope that the Government will be able to subdue it. The rebels are composed of all the lower classes, who are poor and ragged and employ, and need very little encouragement in order to induce them to take to the road as brigands. They now possess the whole country, rendering the possession of life and property extremely uncertain.

Mr. Moore says that the Government troops have slightly more respect for the laws of arms and less than the rebels, but as if in mockery of this exemption from pillage, the Government has assessed an extra tax, which is rigorously collected, and amounts almost to insurrection. The Government forces hold only the towns and the territory they immediately occupy, while in the country the rebels have full sway. Men are about upon the slightest provocation, and often upon none at all, that a "reign of terror" is over the whole Republic.

The chances for getting the international railroad failed in any reasonable term of years are very gloomy. The contract for building the road was given to a Mexican company, which had no money, no credit, and could procure neither, though faithful efforts appeared to have been made, both in the country and in Europe; and so in Texas will have to give up, for awhile at least, the prospect of getting tropical from the interior of the sister State. Peace and credit are absolutely necessary to the completion of the road, and both are still very far from Mexico.

Mr. Moore has himself been a great sufferer, losing much valuable property and stock, by the depredations of the brigands. He owns two farms in the vicinity of Ponce, and states that he has seen neither of them in daylight for more than a year. He lived in the town, and when it was absolutely necessary for him to go to his farm of unavailing business, he took three or four companions, all heavily armed, went in the night, returned in the night, and was always ready to shoot "at the drop of a hat." Travelling across the country is only possible in extreme haste, and a small party, and even then not altogether safe, since large bands of robbers will wait, equipped with guns, and plunder the travellers.

WOOLEN FACTORIES IN SAN ANTONIO. Considerable interest has been aroused in our quiet old city in relation to the establishment of woolen manufactories at this point, where the wool is at our doors, abundant and cheap, where we have unlimited water power, and where any amount of labor can be obtained on easy terms. This new movement was originated by the articles in the Express last winter, setting forth the fact that Mr. James of Indiana desired to remove his woolen factory here. Since then he has arrived here, and is seeking to make up a stock company strong enough to remove the factory to this place, and to conduct it successfully after it arrives. We also learn that a gentleman of San Antonio, and a most public spirited citizen, intends in a short time to establish a first class woolen factory on his own place on the river. We also learn of the wish of still another firm to establish such a factory on a place on the river which they own. The city should give every encouragement to these things, for they will be the sources of great public wealth in the future, besides giving remunerative employment to thousands of hands.

Woolen manufactories are now more prosperous than any others in the United States. The New York Tribune says that notwithstanding the general depression in business during the past few years, the woolen industry of the United States has maintained a steady advance, and the increase in the demand for domestic woolen cloths has been great. The development of this manufacture has been going on steadily during a period of ten years, but it is only within the last five or six years that it has obtained its present perfection in the fabrication of woolen casimeres.

In 1870 the number of sets of cards engaged in the production of woolen fabrics was 4,130, divided among the different States as follows: Arkansas, 7 sets; California, 30; Connecticut, 4; Delaware, 14; Georgia, 13; Illinois, 97; Indiana, 131; Iowa, 79; Kentucky, 26; Maine, 164; Michigan, 30; Massachusetts, 1,155; Mississippi, 4; Minnesota, 5; Missouri, 34; New Hampshire, 156; New Jersey, 51; New York, 206; Ohio, 123; Pennsylvania, 660; Rhode Island, 206; Tennessee, 24; Texas, 5; Vermont, 29; Virginia, 37; West Virginia, 21; Wisconsin, 45.

At that time it was estimated that 25 per cent of this number were idle. It is stated that there are now about 7,000 sets in this country, the same proportion being idle as in 1870. An estimate of the quantity of cloth manufactured in the United States may be gained from the statement of the treasurer of one of the largest mills, that its manufactures amounted in value to $1,000,000 a year. Each mill is rated according to the number of its spindles.

Each mill consists of three cards, the first and second breaker, and the baler. Several of these mills, manufacturers of expensive worsted, make casimeres equal in quality, fineness of color, and fineness of finish, to any imported goods of medium price. It is also stated that although a heavy duty is levied on wool, American casimeres can be sold from 20 to 25 per cent cheaper than the foreign goods. The agents of woolen mills believe that if the duty were taken off wool, American casimeres would be exported to foreign countries which are supplied now from the European markets.

During the last four or five years the importation of fancy casimeres has been reduced more than one-half. The importation of foreign cloths is at present chiefly confined to novelties in black diagonal worsted goods and fine black cloths of high price. Another class of cloths including chinchillas, plain black and Equinox beavers, which some years ago was almost exclusively imported, is now manufactured in this country, of equally good quality, it is claimed, as the foreign fabrics. The difference in price has almost excluded the class of cloths of foreign manufacture from the American market.

It is only in the manufacture of fine black cloths that the American manufacturers acknowledge the superiority of the foreign maker. They attribute their inability to compete successfully in this branch of industry to various causes. Some assert that the difficulty lies in the water, which a chemical test might explain. Others state that in order to make black cloths equal to the foreign goods it is necessary that operatives should work together in the same mills for a long time, until by habit each would become as necessary to the other, as the different pieces of mechanism in an intricate machine. In European cloth manufactories the workmen seldom change employers, while in this country operatives are changing about continually. While this repeated changing is not detrimental to the making of the coarser fabrics, manufacturers say it is very much so with great quantities of cloths and dressings made in this country, vicinity of a business suited to the ready-made clothing trade. Merchant tailors use the imported black cloths and dressings exclusively in their custom trade. Some years ago the demand for foreign goods for ready-made clothing was in excess of the domestic goods, but at present that branch of trade is almost exclusively confined to home-manufactured articles. The style, durability and appearance is equal to that of the foreign cloths, and the cost much less. The manufacturers think that the hard times, which have had the effect of inducing people to buy cheaper goods, has had the effect of completely dispelling the prejudice against American cloths, and that the recent stagnation in business will be recompensed by the increased production and general use of American goods.

The Presidential electors of both the Democratic and Republican parties should now publish their campaign lists of appointments to address the people. They should, in a fair and friendly manner, discuss the merits of their respective tickets together, speaking truth about to the same audience. This is the only way in which the masses of the people can best be benefited. This plan, also, will make the speakers fairer and more truthful, and promote better feeling among the people than any other plan. Let us have joint discussions throughout the State.

DICK HUBBARD DOWN AT LAST. When the Tom Scott Pacific railroad bill was before the Senate on Tuesday last, and was being rushed through by Tom Scott's hirlings, the vote by which the President of the Senate declared that the bill had passed was taken without the bill having been read even by caption. The Statesman says that when the President announced that the bill had passed, Senator Storey very distinctly made the point of order that the bill had not been read a third time, and that the constitutional rule requiring bills to be ready on three several days in each house had not been suspended. The President took no further notice of the point of order than to say that it was too late to go behind this vote. The readiness of the presiding officer of the Senate to sustain a proposal of violation of a plain provision of the Constitution was a little too much even for the boys of the Senators who had pushed matters to such an extremity. It was felt to be absolutely necessary to have the journal show that the bill had been read a third time. The attempt to do this gave rise to proceedings as extraordinary as any that preceded them. The Senate had proceeded to the consideration of House bill No. 277, relating to the sale of University lands. An amendment to this bill, offered by Senator McLean, had been adopted, and another amendment, offered by Senator Terrell, was pending when Senator Finer arose to vote what he called a question of privilege, and moved to amend the journal so as to make it show that Senate bill No. 203 (the railroad bill) was read. After objection, which was overruled by the President, the motion of Senator Finer to correct the journal of yesterday so as to show that Senate bill No. 203 was read third time, was put to vote and received only the vote of the Senator making the motion. Senator Finer then moved to reconsider the vote passing the bill, and then moved that it be read, and then it was passed. The Senate then adjourned without returning to the consideration of the University land bill.

Tom Scott may buy enough Legislators to carry his point, but we do not think he can buy enough Judges to finally succeed.

VALUABLE INFORMATION. Boston, Dec. 13, 1868. Gentlemen—My only object in giving you this testimonial is to spread valuable information. Having been badly afflicted with Blood Disease, and the whole contents of my skin being covered with pimples and eruptions, many of which caused me great pain and annoyance, and knowing it to be a blood disease, I took many of the advertised blood preparations, among which was any quantity of Sarsaparilla, without obtaining any benefit until I commenced taking the Vegetine, and before I had completed the first bottle I saw that I had got the right medicine. Consequently I followed on with it until I had taken seven bottles, when I was pronounced a well man, and my skin is smooth and healthy free from pimples and eruptions. I have never enjoyed so good health before, and I attribute it all to the use of Vegetine. To benefit those afflicted with Blood Disease, I will make mention also of the Vegetine's wonderful power of curing me of this same complaint, of which I have suffered so intensely. C. H. TUCKER, Paw Ag's Mich. C. H. R. 50 Washington Street, Boston.

Miscellaneous Advertisements. FACTS BY WHICH DECIDE.

In those specious but insignificant advertisements of C. Pratt & Co., they endeavor to convince the public that our STAR OIL and PEERLESS are identically the same, which they know, even better than we could ever attempt to convince them, is NOT the case. Peerless is, by no means one of the inferior grades of oil; it is in every respect equal and fully up to the actual standard (both the advocates of Astral, and is like the latter 12 degrees below the burning point of our STAR OIL. Now propose to furnish the Poorless, guaranteed equivalent in every respect to Astral, at One Dollar a case less than our STAR OIL, which we sell at the price of Astral, although our STAR OIL is 12 degrees better, harder ester, and consequently has the preference of the consuming public.

Our certificates, formerly published, (originals of which can be seen at our office) from our local, disinterested chemists, Messrs. Geo. H. Kaiteyer, A. Nette and E. Dreiss, who tested both oils, and declare our Star Oil

At your request, I have tested the samples of Star Oil taken from the store of George Dalling, and find the flashing point at one hundred and thirty-three (133) degrees Fahrenheit, the burning point at one hundred and forty-four (144) degrees Fahrenheit. Astral oil, taken from the store of E. Kotula & Co., the flashing point at one hundred and seventy-one (171) degrees, and the burning point at one hundred and thirty-two degrees Fahrenheit. I am of the opinion that the Star Oil is by all means the best and safest.
