Heavy Rains—Horrible Story of a Man Found Dead—The Devilish Heed.

Special to the Express.]
PORT CONCHO, Sept. 26, 1876.

Heavy rains have visited this section of country. It began to rain at midnight of the 24th, and has rained ever since.

A man was found dead at the head of the Concho by some soldiers. His horse, with saddle on, was beside him, and his clothing was there, but the cayote had eaten the flesh off of him in places.

The clothing and horse were recognized as belonging to one Reese Dorse, a cattle man. This Dorse is one of a party supposed to have stolen cattle.

The Indians, on their return from a foraging expedition, took 500 feet of wire from the military telegraph line. The damage has been repaired. O. R.

THE ARMISTICE

Belgrade, Sept 26—The Diplomatic agents here presented the notes to Milan Monday morning announcing that the Partis has agreed to prolong the suspension of hostilities and the terms of peace proposed by the powers. The Serbian government asked their reply to the Partis's proposition for the extension of suspension of hostilities. The war party and Russian officers are working up heaven and earth to prevent the Serbians from assenting.
There is much doubt as to the course the Prince will pursue.

PARIS, Sept 26—The report of the im- minence of the insurrection in Algeria is denied.

TERRIBLE SUFFERING.

merly one of the richest cities of the Island. 4,000 rations are distributed in the market place to the poor twice a week.

SOUTHERN MEN IN CONGRESS.

A Western Republican organ recounts the number of members of the present House of Representatives who served in the rebel army, and complains that so many of them should now be sent to Congress and that a number of them were made chairmen of committees. It speaks of "Confederate supremacy," and tries to alarm its readers and to excite their hostility to Southern men, not on the ground that these have misconducted themselves in Congress, but on the score that in the late war they were in the rebel army.

This is a very unwise plan, and besides, more calculated to offend decent and thoughtful Republicans than to win votes. The war is over. What the best interests of the country demand is that all parts shall send their ablest men to Congress. In the Southern States, as everybody knows, and as General Sherman and other Union officers long ago recognized, the brains and ability did go into the rebel army. It is very natural, therefore, that men who served in that army should now be chosen to go to Congress. It is not only natural but right. Brains, ability, influence, character, must tell in every community, and ought to. It is the fault of the Republicans themselves that the brains of the Southern States are now generally ranged on the Democratic side.
With only fairly good management a large part of the most influential Southern politicians and statesmen would be on the firm Republican side. But they have been rejected by the Republican leaders, and this is one of the blunders which the wiser Republicans among them, Governor Hayes himself, now openly recognize. To cast suspicion upon such men is not good policy.—N. Y. Herald.

PROPERTY.

AN INTERESTING DISCUSSION OF AN IMPORTANT SUBJECT.

In commenting upon the first of Plato's paradoxes in the 'Republic,' the community of goods, which is mentioned slightly at the end of the third book, Professor Jewett says in his admirable introduction to his translation of Plato's masterpiece:

"It must be remembered that the sacredness of property is a notion far more fixed in modern than in ancient times. The world has grown older, and therefore more conservative. Primitive society offered many examples of land-held in common, either by a tribe or by a township, and such may probably have been the original form of land-tenure. Ancient legislators have invented various modes of dividing and preserving the divisions of land among the citizens. According to Aristotle there were nations who held the land in common and divided the produce, and there were others who divided the land and stored the produce in common. The evils of debt and the inequality of property were far greater in ancient than in modern times, and the accidents to which property was subjected in the former were more numerous. The early Christians are believed to have held their property in common, and the principle is sanctioned by the words of Christ himself, and has been maintained as a counsel of perfection in almost all ages of the Church. Nor have there been wanting instances of modern enthusiasts who have a religion of communism; in every age of religious excitement notions like Wycliffe's 'inheritance of grace' have tended to prevail.

"We can hardly judge what effect Plato's views would have upon his own cotemporaries; they would, perhaps, have seemed to them only an exaggeration of the Spartan commonwealth. Even modern writers would acknowledge that the right of private property is based on expediency, and may be altered with in a variety of ways for the public good. And if any other mode of vesting property were found to be more advantageous that would acquire the same basis of right; the 'most useful' in Plato's language, 'would be the most sacred.' The lawyers and philosophers of former ages would have spoken of property as a sacred institution. But they only meant by such language to oppose the great amount of resistance to any invasion of the rights of individuals and of the Church.

"When we consider the question, without any fear of immediate application to practice, in the spirit of Plato's Republic, are we quite sure that the received notions of property are the best? Is the distribution of wealth which is customary in civilized countries the most favorable that can be conceived for the education and development of the mass of mankind? Can the spectator of all time and all existence be quite convinced that one or two thousand years hence great changes will not have taken place in the rights of property, or even that the very notion of property, beyond what is necessary for personal maintenance, may not have disappeared? This was a distinction familiar to Aristotle, though likely to be laughed at among ourselves. Such a change would not be greater than some other changes through which the world has passed in the transition ancient to modern society; as, for example, the emancipation of the serfs, or the abolition of slavery, (a work which has only been completed in our own day), or that measured by the interval which even now separates the Eastern from the Western world. And to accomplish such a change in the course of centuries would not imply a greater rate of progress than has actually existed during the last fifty or sixty years. Many opinions and beliefs which have been cherished quite as strongly as the right of property have passed away, and the most untenable propositions respecting the right of bequests or entails have been maintained with as much fervor as the most moderate. The reflection will occur that the state of society can hardly be final in which the interests of thousands are periled on the life or character of a single person. And many will indulge the hope that the state in which we live will be only transitional, and may conduct to a higher state, in which property, besides ministering to the enjoyment of the few, may also furnish the means of the highest culture to all, and will be a greater benefit to the public generally, and also more under the control of the public authority. There may come a time when the saying 'Have I not a right to do what I will with my own' may appear to a barbarous relic of individualism.

"Such reflections appear wild and visionary to the eye of the practical statesman, but they lie fairly within the range of possibility to the philosopher. He can imagine that in some distant age or clime, and through the influence of some poet or philosopher, the notion of common property may or might have sunk as deep into the heart of a race, and have become as fixed to them as private property is to us. He is willing to believe that some day men's notions of property in our own country may materially alter, and private interests be much more subservient to public. In our own age even Utopias may effect, the spirit of legislation, and the philosopher may be allowed sometimes to feast his imagination with the speculations which he never hopes to see realized.

"The objections that would be generally urged against Plato's community of property are the oft-quoted Aristotle, that motives for exertion would be taken away, and that disputes would arise when each was independent upon all. Mankind could never become disinterested, or regard the interests of the community as the interests of the individual. But it may be doubted whether our present individualism is not rather an artificial result of the industrial state of modern Europe. Moral and political feelings seem, from time to time, to rise up and assess themselves, even in a world bound hand and foot in the chains of economic necessity. And, if we cannot expect the mass of mankind to become disinterested, at any rate we seem to observe in them the growth of a spirit of party and a power of organization which fifty years ago would never have been suspected. The same forces which have revolutionized the political system of Europe may effect a similar change in the social and industrial relations of mankind. And if we suppose the influence of some good as well as neutral motives working in the community, there will be no absurdity in expecting that the mass of mankind having the power in their own hands and becoming enlightened about the higher possibilities of human life, when they come to see how much more is attainable for all than is at present the possession of a favored few, may pursue the common interest with an intelligence and persistency which the world has not yet seen.

SEEKING LEGAL ADVICE.

A SUPPOSITION AND A QUERY.

One of Max Adler's characters enters a lawyer's office, and says: "I called in, Judge, to get your opinion about a little point of law. S'posin you lived next door to a man named Johnson. And s'posin' you was to say to Johnson that a splendid illustration of the superiority of the human intellect was to be found in the power of the human eye to restrain the ferocity of a wild animal. And s'posin Johnson was to remark that that was all bosh, and you should declare that you could hold the savage beast that was ever born if you could once fix your gaze on him: Well, then, s'posin' Johnson was to say he'd bet a hundred dollars he could bring a tame animal that you couldn't hold with your eye, and you was to take him up on it and Johnson was to ask you to come down to his place and settle the bet. You'd go, wouldn't you, and Johnson'd introduce a dog bigger'n any four-decent dogs ought to be, and ask him on you, and he'd come at you like a wild animal, and you'd get skeery about it and try to hold the dog with your eye and couldn't. And s'posin you'd suddenly coincide to break for a plum tree. You ketch my idea. Very well, then, Well, s'posin' just as you got three feet up the tree Johnson's dog would grab you by the leg and hold on like a vise, shaking you until you nearly lost your hold. And s'posin' Johnson was to stand there and holler, 'Fix your eye on him, Briggad' and so on; and s'posin' he kept that dog on that leg until he made you swear to pay that bet, and then at last had to pry that dog off with a hot poker. S'posin' this, what I want to know is, couldn't you sue Johnson for damages?"

WHAT IS QUEEN'S DELIGHT?

It is a plant that grows in the South and in the only actual blood purifier ever discovered, by which all diseases that centre in the blood can be eradicated at once and forever. It expels for life all Scrofulous, Syphilitic, Cutaneous and Rheumatic affections, and is the only true remedy for this class of diseases. Alone, it is a searching alterative, but when combined with Houdou's Sarsaparilla, Yellow Dock and other roots and herbs, it becomes a blood purifier unsurpassable and unequalled. Such is the combination of DR. TOTTEN'S SARSAPARILLA AND QUEEN'S DELIGHT.

forming the most powerful alterative known to Medical Science for the cure of Old Ulcers and Sores, Diseased Joints, Pustular Discharges from the Ears and Nostrils, Abscesses, Skin affections, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Kidney Complaints, Evil effects of Secret practices, Diseased Joints, Disordered Liver and Spleen, and all diseases that centre in the blood. It possesses the peculiar property of imparting a fine complexion and

CAUSES THE BODY TO GAIN IN SOLID FLESH.

Its value cannot be too strongly impressed upon the attention of those who have been exposed to a taint of improper character. The afflicted are assured that this is not one of the worthless nostrums of the day, but is prepared upon scientific principles, by a physician of thirty years experience. Sold every where.
