Newspapers as Drummers

[Cameron Sentinel.] The business drummer and the newspaper are materially different, in that the one solicits business but bends its energies for the masses. The drummer, demands wages of DRY GOODS. from seventy five to one hundred per month, with traveling expenses, while the newspaper demands only one dollar per inch for putting your business before one or two thousand people in less time than five hundred drummers could do; and that too in the manner each individual wishes. We have been led to these reflections by being inform advertisement which he had put in the columns of this paper had brought bim a letter from an entire Which he offers at the lowest prices stranger, enquiring about the country and the land advertised, saying he had obtained information concerning the land offered for sale, LIBERAL ADVANCES the columns of the Senti

This shows the influence exerted. even by an unassuming inland weekly newspaper in inducing imi migrants to the State and county of its locality, and in aiding those having land or articles for sale 13 finding purchasers. And there are none who understand better than those who wish to purchase that, those who advertise the most, are having land or articles for sale in the most liberal in their trading; hence in seeking articles of any description, they invariably go to that business establishment which adver-tises the most. Why, a man be-comes so generally known to the reading masses through his judiions advertising, as to be almost familiarly acquainted with every-body in the State, although he may never have had the good fortune to meet most of them.

The Inauguration Ox.

One of the features of the inaugu ration for some years past has been a fatted ox bearing the President elect. Four years ago the gigantic bovine was exhibited in a shanty put up near Pennylvania avenue, and one morning Senator Wilson, with a friend, dropped in to see him. The triend, who believes that a lit the fun occasionally is good even for legislators, created quite a sensation in the Senate Chamber that afternoon by asserting that to his personal knowledge Senator Wilson had, called to see Gen. Grant, and that the General did not speak to him or take the slightest notice of "I knew it would be so" exclaimed Mr. Summer; "Grant quar-rels with every one."
