Carter says energy policy will alter American life

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says his proposal for a national energy policy will make his popularity rating plummet because his plan "will substantially change the lifestyle of the American people."

Chatting with reporters Thursday night as he neared the end of his first meet-the-people trip, Carter said his energy plan means "some very difficult decisions will have to be made by Congress."

The President said, "I'm going to take as much of the disapproval and disappointment of the American people on myself as President to make it easier for Congress to move forward."

Carter signed today legislation that will halt the importation of chrome from Rhodesia. Carter had supported the measure, saying it would underline U.S. commitment to black majority rule in the African nation, now controlled by a white minority.

On his whirlwind two-day trip, the President participated in an energy roundtable in Charleston, W. Va., where he said:

"We now have above a 70 per cent favorable rating in the polls for our job so far, but when we come out with an energy policy on April 20 we will probably lose about 10 or 15 per cent of that."

That was a reference to the most recent Gallup Poll, which showed 70 per cent of those questioned saying they approve of Carter's performance as President, while 9 per cent disapproved. The rest had no opinion.

Carter said he was willing to sacrifice some of his popularity among the people "to require them to face the brutal facts that we all are going to have to work together to deal with the impending crisis... as energy runs out" in the years ahead.

The President gave few details of what he has in mind beyond emphasizing conservation programs and greater utilization of coal.

He did say he wants to provide "an easy way for homeowners to heat their homes" and urged investments in insulation.

The trip that began Wednesday afternoon took him to Clinton, Mass., for a town hall meeting, to Charleston and then to United Nations headquarters in New York where he addressed world diplomats. He returned to the White House late Thursday.

Referring to his Clinton and Charleston appearances, Carter told reporters: "That's the kind of thing I like to do. It makes me feel sure of myself when I go back to the White House."

In Charleston, he seemed sure of his moves to cut the budget by scrapping federal water projects. He declared: "This will be a major struggle between me and the Congress... I hate, as a brand new Democratic president, to have an argument with Congress, but I'm determined to let the American people know about this."

At the United Nations, Carter vowed to end the arms race and to continue his emphasis on human rights. Human rights, he said, will be the "backbone of our foreign policy."

THE SON-IN-LAW of Hanafi Moslem leader Hamaas Abdul Khaalis, Abdul Azziz, escorts Khaalis' wife and two other veiled women outside Hanafi headquarters Thursday in Washington, D.C., where she read a statement to reporters. Begum Khadyja Khaalis warned the Jewish Defense League that, if they carried out a threat to mass at Hanafi headquarters and ask for a fight, "they will write their epitaph in self-destruction and the blood of their people."

Association taps Barbara Culver West Texas' outstanding judge

By JUDY JOHNSTON

Midland County Judge Barbara G. Culver was named 1976 outstanding county judge Thursday night by the West Texas county judges and commissioners during the opening night banquet of their association conference at the Midland Hilton.

Judge Culver received a dozen long stemmed red roses from the four commissioners on her court and a plaque and necklace from Plains Machinery Co., the banquet sponsor.

"It is a very, very nice honor from the commissioners and judges of West Texas," she said.

Judge Culver said she was surprised by the honor because she thought the association delegates would choose a commissioner this year. This was the third year the honor has been awarded, she explained. The first year a commissioner was named and the second year a judge was chosen.

Judge Culver has been county judge of Midland County since her election in 1962.

Judge Culver, a Dallas native, was graduated from Highland Park High School here and received a bachelor degree in journalism from Texas Tech in Lubbock.

She was graduated from the ## Committee increases deduction

By JIM LUTHER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee today approved an increased standard deduction that would mean a tax cut averaging $100 for 46 million couples or individuals.

The change, approved without dissent, would result in a tax increase of about $51 a year for 2.1 million single persons.

The higher standard deduction was approved as the committee neared a final decision on a House-passed tax cut bill that includes the $50-per-person rebates proposed by President Carter.

The new standard deduction would have no effect on those persons who itemize deductions, although it is estimated the change would prompt 6.7 million couples or individuals to

Zaire denies takeover

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — President Mobutu Sese Seko's government today denied reports that invaders from Angola captured the copper mining center of Kolwezi, and diplomatic sources confirmed the denial.

The diplomats said the invaders, believed to be foes of Mobutu returning to their native province in southeast Zaire, were reported about 90 miles west of Kolwezi, but were advancing eastward and meeting little if any resistance.

Other sources reported on Thursday that the invaders had advanced more than 200 miles from the Angolan border to take Kolwezi, the center for the vast copper mines that provide Zaire's biggest export commodity and its chief source of foreign exchange.

Foreign missionaries in the area also said the invaders were progressing without opposition and were not molesting the local population.

switch to the standard deduction. Present law allows a standard deduction ranging from $1,700 to $2,400 for single persons and $2,100 to $2,800 for couples filing a joint return.

The Finance Committee approved a flat $2,200 for singles and $3,200 for couples. That compares with the $2,400 for single persons and $3,000 for couples already voted by the House.

Port Arthur fire claims first victim

PORT ARTHUR, Tex. (AP) — The fire at the Texaco refinery in this Southeast Texas city Thursday claimed its first victim today.

A spokesman at Hermann Hospital in Houston said Lawrence Guidry, 56, died early today. Guidry had suffered burns over 97 per cent of his body after being trapped in the flames.

A total of 22 persons were taken to three Southeast Texas hospitals after the blast occurred at 7:55 a.m. Thursday, sending shock waves that were felt as far away as five miles.

Nineteen of the injured were Texaco employees working on a stabilizing unit when, company of-that prices will begin moderating once the impact of the winter weather runs its course.

Economists rely more on trends in nonfood prices as a more sensitive measure of inflation than food costs.

Guatemala nixes U.S. assistance

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala (AP) — Guatemala's government has become the fifth Latin-American military regime to reject U.S. military aid because of attempts to link it to respect for human rights.

An estimated $75 million is involved in the grants and credit programs rejected by the five countries. Guatemala gave up its aid programs Thursday, while Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay and El Salvador took the same step earlier.

The five governments turned down U.S. aid after their conservative regimes were accused in U.S. congressional hearings or State Department documents of violating the human rights of their citizens.

Chile, a sixth Latin-American country governed by conservative military men, withdrew from the aid program last year prior to congressional hearings that were expected to lead to the program's suspension.

Consumer price surge biggest in 2½ years

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices leaped one per cent in February, the biggest inflationary surge in 2½ years, largely as the result of the severe winter weather's impact on food supplies, the government said today.

The Labor Department said about half the increase stemmed from higher food prices as killing frost in the South and drought in the West curtailed supplies.

Food prices alone rose 2 per cent in February, the sharpest rise in three years, with fresh vegetable prices jumping a record 20.9 per cent.

Most other food prices also were up sharply, including fresh fruits and coffee which jumped another 9.9 per cent last month for a total increase of 82.9 since February 1976.

Higher prices for gasoline and other fuels also reflected winter's impact.

The February price increase, following January's eight-tenths of a per cent rise in consumer prices, was certain to add to fears that inflation may be worse this year than in 1976, when prices rose only a moderate 4.8 per cent.

If prices continued to increase for the full year at the February rate, it would translate into a 12 per cent jump in prices. However, the Carter administration believes the underlying inflation rate probably is still between 5 per cent and 6 per cent and

Midland gunsmith takes pride in work

"All I've got to sell is my time," says R. J. "Bob" Maberry, gunsmith. And his time is precious. So are his wares, his skill, the craft of gunsmithery, and the rifles — the net product of his labors.

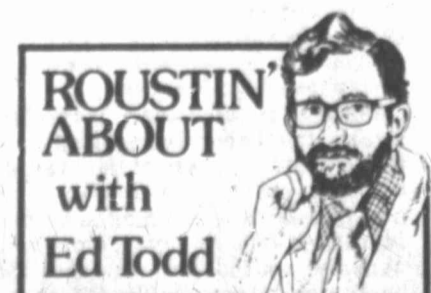

Maberry, the proud artisan that he is, takes his work to the utmost of seriousness.

"I don't put my name on these (firearms) until I get the quality built in."

Sounds commercial; it is. It's also his livelihood, his heritage, his self-esteem.

Maberry, and he's done this hundreds of times, will order a blank piece of wood, say walnut, and a plain rifled barrel, say stainless steel or steel to be blued.

Then comes into play the lathe, the drill press, the welder, the firing bluer, the engraver, and fine tools for carving and for embedding designs of most any description.

He also makes precision working parts for new firearm creations and

Governor to announce White successor Monday

DALLAS (AP) — Saying Texas Agriculture Commissioner John White will be "hard to replace," Gov. Dolph Briscoe says he will name White's successor Monday.

White resigned officially Thursday after his confirmation by the U.S. Senate as first assistant U.S. Agriculture Secretary in the Carter administration.

"I have mixed emotions about his leaving," Briscoe told a news conference. "We are going to miss him in Texas."

Asked his opinion on the possibility that the legislature may pass a local option pari-mutuel horse race betting bill in the current session, the governor said "I do not see it even as an issue in this session."

The governor said his staff is studying the proposed local option hotel occupancy tax increase and said he expects a report next week. He had no comment when asked if he believed the bill would violate his "no new taxes" pledge. He said he would make that decision after studying the upcoming staff report.

County chiefs set resolution vote

By JUDY JOHNSTON

Delegates to the West Texas County Judges' and Commissioners' Association conference in Midland were to vote today on 13 proposed resolutions from a resolutions committee meeting Thursday.

The committee chose to word the resolution in a somewhat milder version than the three proposed to the resolutions committee because members said they wanted to be able to work with legislators on the matter and to show good faith in wanting to comply in equal evaluation.

the option of hiring evaluation engineers if they chose, just as they do now.

The proposed Tax Reform Code would create a central evaluation commission which theoretically would equalize tax evaluation throughout the state.

However, Attorney General John Hill has ruled that the Texas Constitution allows county voters to choose a tax assessor-collector, so the bill was revised to allow the counties to keep their own evaluators.

Members of the association resolutions committee, however, agreed the proposed code would encroach on the autonomy of local governments.

The resolution further recommended that the state furnish tax assessor-collectors with books and instructions and that greater penalties be placed on persons who fully render their property for evaluation.

Other resolutions reported from the resolutions committee for consideration by the entire delegation Friday include:

- Urging prompt passage of a bill which would add about $561 million in additional highway revenue in the next two years, drawn mainly from existing tax on motor vehicles and parts and accessories;
- Supporting open records of the Industrial Accident Board for workmen's compensation;
- Urging the Legislature not to change the date of terminating salaries of ex-officio county school superintendents from Dec. 31, 1978 to

Dec. 31, 1977.

- Requesting the Legislature to amend Texas statutes to allow the purchase of used equipment and to purchase insurance without the requirement of taking bids (counties could still use the competitive bid method if they chose);

- Supporting a bill creating or disincorporating powers for the county on a local-option basis to enable the counties to control substandard building within the county;
- Calling attention to the deflated economic condition of irrigated farmers in the Panhandle area;
- Supporting a request to designate the Panhandle area as a drought disaster area;
- Supporting a bill by which the counties would receive one-half of one cent of the state sales tax;
- Supporting a bill which would give county commissioners some jurisdiction in water districts (of other counties) which are within that county;
- And supporting four bills which would allow district and county clerks and county tax assessor-collectors to raise fees they charge for various services.

Group taps Judge Culver for honor

Southern Methodist University law school. For 10 years before her election as county judge she had practiced law with her husband, John R. Culver, in Midland. The couple has two sons.

Judge Culver has served in various capacities at local, state and national levels in her major areas of interest, including children and youth, county government, regional planning commissions and bar associations.

In addition, she is involved with civic and social agencies and organizations in Midland. She is the immediate past president of West Texas County Judges' and Commissioners' Association and chairman of the host court for the 1977 convention. She is president of the National Association of Regional Councils.

R. T. Andersen, new president of the West Texas County Judges' and Commissioners' Association, presided at the dinner. Morris Bailey, president of Plains Machinery Co., presented the award to Judge Culver.

The dinner marked the end of a busy work day for the delegates, who attended opening addresses that morning in the Midland Hilton banquet hall and many of whom attended committee meetings that afternoon.

Special guests at the dinner included Rep. W. S. "Bill" Heatly Jr. of Paducah and Mark W. White Jr., Texas secretary of state, who accompanied K. Bert Watson, president of Pioneer Corp. to the dinner. Watson had presented a report on the status of the natural gas industry before the Texas Railroad Commission earlier Friday.

Officials said, an emission of light hydrocarbons was released from an unknown source and ignited.

The other three hurt are employees of a Port Arthur construction company. At least two of those hospitalized, James Row and Thomas Ceniceros, both of Port Arthur, were reported to be in extremely critical condition at the John Sealy Hospital burn center in Galveston with third degree burns over most of their bodies.

Another victim trapped in the flames, Lawrence Guidry of Bridge City, was in critical condition at Hermann Hospital in Houston with burns over 97 per cent of his body.

The explosion occurred, a Texaco spokesman said, as the plants No. 1 stabilizing unit was being tested and inspected on the west part of the refinery. Stabilizing units are used to remove light hydrocarbons from streams of gasoline.

Carter urges human rights in U. N. talk

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — President Carter in his first speech to the United Nations urged the world organization to take more vigorous action to advance the cause of human rights.

The President's defense of his human rights policy drew praise from such diverse delegates as those of Niger, the Bahamas, the PLO and Israel.

A Soviet representative declined comment on human rights questions but praised the President's statements on U.S.-Soviet relations and disarmament.

A capacity audience in the General Assembly hall interrupted Carter four times during his 30-minute speech Thursday night, twice to cheer his statements on human rights, and gave him a prolonged standing ovation at the end.

Outlining his administration's broad foreign policy aims, the President made these points:

"No U.N. member nation can claim that mistreatment of its citizens is solely its own business." He called for strengthened international machinery to help close the gap between promise and performance in protecting such rights, but said the effort should not block progress on issues affecting security and world peace.

"The U.S. government would like to negotiate a Soviet-American treaty freezing or controlling the development of new types of weapons, along with a 'deep reduction' in the nuclear arms of both sides.

"The U.S. Congress is being asked to provide $7.5 billion in foreign assistance in the coming year.

"The United States believes the change to black majority rule in southern Africa can be achieved peacefully.

"The United States will work for a 'flexible framework' in Arab-Israeli negotiations, stressing the areas where agreements already exist.

The brief encounter between the President and Hasan Abdel Rahman, PLO observer to the U.N., occurred at a reception given by U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, to which the Palestinian was invited along with all other chief delegates and official observers accredited to the United Nations.

Rahman said he thought it was important because "it is the first time that a PLO representative shakes hands with the President of the United States. But Carter said the meeting would lead to nothing 'until they change their attitude.'

Fire destroys 1,900 acres

ANDREWS — A grass fire that started about 15 miles west of Andrews destroyed approximately 1,900 acres of land Thursday.

Andrews County Sheriff's Department said the fire started about 3 p.m. and was contained about three hours later. It flared about 10 p.m. and lasted until midnight.

The only reported damage was the destruction of approximately one mile of fence. No injuries were reported.

for repairing older or obsolete and antiquated weapons.

"As far as gun work is concerned," he says, "...I make guns and send guns all over the United States. I'm always behind. Of course, I don't want to get ahead."

Maberry, an ex-bank executive in both Dallas and Odessa and a former dabber in the oil business, grew up in the gunsmithing trade.

He was born 58 years ago in Carrollton. His father, Charlie Maberry was a building contractor, blacksmith and, you guessed it, a gunsmith.

His father, a "powerful man" and a "mean" fellow, grew up with the outlaw James brothers in Missouri, laid cobblestones in St. Louis in 1903, and moved on to Texas, near Dallas, where he married and reared a family.

Maberry has been into gunsmithing for more than 50 years. But it was mostly a hobby until he turned it into a profession in Midland some 21 years ago.

"I just never did think the people out here were getting a fair shake (in gunsmithing)," Maberry says in explaining why he decided to transform a hobby into a livelihood.

He is a master gunsmith. Few are. Maberry thinks highly of his craftsmanship. So do experts in the gunnery field.

"I make lots of guns," including bench-rest target rifles and sporting and hunting shoulder arms. Photographs of Maberry-made firearms often appear on the front covers of sporting magazines.

"It takes a lot of work" to make a proud-to-own firearm, he says. "I charge for it. I don't give it away." He may charge $1,500 or more for crafting a rifle.

On the other hand, Maberry says that he had rather be rooked out of $10 himself than to "take" somebody for a mere penny.

"I'm pretty 'straight-laced,'" he says. "...I've just got one way to run my railroad and that's straight down the middle of the track."

Maberry, who claims he "works like a dog and lives like a hermit," does, however, make the time to enter state and national rifle-shooting tournaments.

Primarily a bench-rest shooter, he has won more than 200 trophies, including a second place in the nationals.

Otherwise, he's either playing hermit or working in the shop. (The wife looks after his quiet hours.)

"I could make more guns than I do a year," Maberry says, "but I don't have the time."

"All I've got to sell is my time."

Odessa toddler dies in mishap

ODESSA — A 17-month-old child was killed Thursday morning after he reportedly walked in front of a car driven by his father in front of their Odessa home, police said.

Jason Thorp of 510 Zeneta Ave. was pronounced dead on arrival at Odessa Medical Center shortly after 7:12 a.m., police said.

The car was driven by Lee Roy Thorp, 20, the child's father.

Boy (and girl) scouts are still Boy Scouts

The Boy Scouts of America are still just that — despite rumors to the contrary, Buffalo Trail Scout President Ed Magruder said.

There has been a misunderstanding over the BSA's adoption of a new communicative symbol using the words "Scouting/USA," which mistakenly was reported as the new name of the 67-year-old Boy Scouts of America, Magruder said.

falo Trail Council, Boy Scouts of America, Magruder said. The council will gradually incorporate the new symbol on its printed material, signs and other places where a strong, recognizable identification is required, Magruder said. "Scouting/USA" was selected as the BSA's communicative name because women now are serving as volunteers and professionals and girls have full membership in the Exploring program, according to scout leaders.

'Honeymoon' helps rebate get out of committee

By JIM LUTHER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thanks to the "honeymoon" that Congress traditionally grants to a new chief executive, President Carter apparently has the votes to win Senate Finance Committee approval of his $50-per-person tax rebate.

But Carter can expect a stiff fight when the measure reaches the Senate floor.

A final committee vote on the tax bill could come today.

Democratic members of the committee stuck together when the panel refused on separate 10-8 votes Thursday to substitute a permanent tax cut for the rebate. Four Democrats admitted afterwards they had misgivings about the rebate, but voted from party loyalty.

Independent Harry Byrd of Virginia joined the seven Republicans in voting against Carter.

The President's program did not fare so well in the Senate Appropriations Committee. By a 10-7 margin, the panel stripped from a House-passed bill $3.2 billion that had been earmarked to pay for a portion of the rebate program. That decision is subject to review by the full Senate.

It took a last-minute pitch by President Carter's chief economic adviser and all the persuasiveness of Chairman Russell B. Long for the finance committee to reject GOP alternatives to the rebate.

Democratic Sens. Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut, Daniel P. Moynihan of New York, Floyd Haskell of Colorado and Lloyd M. Bentsen Jr. of Texas conceded they voted against the GOP plan mainly because they think Carter's program should be given a chance to boost the economy.

That didn't sit well with Sen. William Roth, R-Del., who had proposed an across-the-board tax cut in place of the rebate.

"Several Democrats said they agreed with what I was trying to do but they didn't vote with me," Roth said. "Unfortunately, we're in a honeymoon period, so Congress again is reacting to what a President does instead of taking the initiative on its own."

Republican aides concede there is no chance of killing the rebate in committee and virtually none of stopping it on the floor. All 38 Republican senators oppose the rebate.

Some admit privately there is no way to convince the necessary 13 Democrats to join them in fighting the rebate because the Democrats don't want a role in handing Carter what would be a crushing defeat.

The rebate also had a narrow escape in the House on March 8, when a Republican floor amendment to substitute tax rate cuts for the rebate lost, 219 to 194.

GOP senators were successful in one fight in the committee on Thursday. Over Long's objections, the committee voted 10 to 7 to grant "heads of household," who mainly are divorced or widowed women with minor children, the same standard deduction allowed married couples.

Present law gives heads of household the $400 lower standard deduction used by single persons, even though heads of household usually have job-related and household expenses similar to those incurred by couples.

Reorganization authority bill passes, to go to full House

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The bill giving President Carter the authority he sought to reorganize the federal government was approved Thursday by the House Government Operations Committee, 40 to 3. The measure is scheduled for consideration by the full House the week after next.

The bill permits presidential plans to make government more workable to take effect after 60 days unless disapproved by either house of Congress.

Committee Chairman Jack Brooks (D-Tex.), had contended that since only Congress has constitutional power to legislate, congressional approval should be required to put the plans into effect.

But realizing that he lacked the votes, Brooks gave way on this basic point Tuesday in subcommittee debate and supported the bill after several of his amendments were adopted, including one that guarantees both houses a chance to vote on each plan.

Brooks supported the measure Thursday as "the best unconstitutional bill we could write." Rep. Frank Horton (R-N.Y.), the committee's senior Republican, called it a "rational compromise."

Brooks' amendment would automatically send each plan to the floor of both houses after 45 days if committees had failed to act. Any member could then demand a vote. Brooks said this would retain a "considerable amount of participation" by Congress.

Other amendments adopted by the committee limit the authority to three years instead of four, require that each plan deal with only one "logically consistent" subject, limit to three the number of plans that can be pending before Congress at one time and prohibit a plan from abolishing or transferring an independent regulatory agency or abolishing statutory programs. Otherwise, the President could reshape agencies short of creating cabinet-level departments.

Earlier this month the Senate approved the reorganization authority bill, 92-0. The Senate bill closely resembles the House version but does not contain Brooks' amendment on the voting procedure.

Legislation to reorganize the government agencies would come along after the authority bill is approved by the full Congress. In his campaign for the presidency, Carter promised a drastic consolidation of federal agencies.

Cereal requires magnet

SEATTLE (AP) — Rick McDonald eats his breakfast cereal with a magnet — quickly, before it rusts.

McDonald discovered the other day that the cereal he was eating — "Frosted Rice," a mineral-enriched cereal made by the Kellogg Co. — was laced with so much iron he literally could pick up bits of it with a magnet.

"Tiny black specks, that's what I saw," McDonald recalled. "They were all over the bottom of the dish, floating in the milk."

The 29-year-old television repairman suspected the residue in his cereal bowl was dirt or a form of iron used in cereals which are enriched with vitamins and minerals. The body requires a certain amount of iron in the daily diet, mainly to produce hemoglobin, the part of blood which carries oxygen.

McDonald checked by holding a magnet over the specks. They clung to the tip. A few sweeps and the dish was spotless.

Castro reportedly makes trip to Somalia to push federation

The Washington Post

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — Cuban President Fidel Castro was reported Thursday to have made a secret trip from here to Somalia and back in a Soviet-backed effort to establish a federation of radical states aimed at blocking the growing influence of the conservative Arab countries in the Red Sea region.

After leaving the Ethiopian capital for an unknown destination Wednesday morning, Castro returned here briefly Thursday to be officially seen off at the airport by Ethiopia's top military rulers. He then traveled onward to Dar Es Salaam, Tanzania, where he had initially been expected to arrive Wednesday.

The Ethiopian military government gave no hint of Castro's whereabouts during his 24-hour absence from Addis Ababa. Although no Western diplomatic sources here could confirm definitely that he had indeed made a secret overnight mission to Somalia, it was the prevailing view that he probably had.

Wherever he went, it has become increasingly evident in the past few days that there is a major diplomatic battle under way between conservative, pro-Western countries, led by Saudi Arabia and Egypt, and an alliance of radical forces comprising the Soviet Union, Cuba, Libya and Ethiopia for a dominant influence over the entire Red Sea region.

Saudi Arabia has reportedly offered Somalia an initial sum of $300 million in financial and military assistance to entice Somalia President Siad Barre away from the Soviet orbit of influence and into the conservative Arab camp.

The Arab states have apparently launched a major campaign to win over both Somalia and South Yemen to their side. Sudan's president, Jaafar Nimeri, is currently on a tour of North Yemen, Oman, South Yemen and possibly Somalia. Some reports say a mini-summit including Nimeri, Barre and South Yemeni leaders will be held in Aden to discuss the possibility of a common Red Sea policy.

Nimeri almost certainly has the strong backing of both Saudi Arabia and Egypt for his "Red Sea Mission." In fact, some reports here say that Nimeri is acting on behalf of these two key Arab states to propose that Somalia and South Yemen join the "joint political command" now made up of Sudan, Egypt and Syria.

The effect of such a development, if Somalia and South Yemen agreed, would be to isolate the Ethiopian government and consolidate the hold of the conservative Arab states over the entire Red Sea region. Already, they have made clear they want this sea to become an "Arab lake," a position that Ethiopia rejects as intolerably arrogant and "imperialistic" on their part.

'Lord' Jumblatt's burial sparks intense revenge

The Washington Post

BIERUT — As leftist Moslem leader Kamal Jumblatt was buried Thursday with all the pomp of a feudal lord, his followers began avenging his assassination.

At least 60 persons, mostly Christians, were reported slain here and in the area near Jumblatt's ancestral mountain village of Mukhtara, where he was buried.

"Revenge, revenge, revenge, oh Walid (Jumblatt's son)," cried grief-stricken women of the Druze sect, wearing the traditional mourning garb of black dress and white headbands, as the 59-year-old leader of the leftist Moslem forces during Lebanon's civil war was lowered into a grave next to his father and sister, who were also assassinated.

The killing of Jumblatt Wednesday on a curvy mountain road near Mukhtara by four men armed with machine guns and equipped with a two-way radio poses a grave test for the Syrian-dominated Arab peace force that brought Leganon's 19-month civil war to an end last November.

Explosions rocked Beirut Wednesday night, and gunfire sounded throughout the city. In the Christian sector, much of the shooting was in celebration of the death of Jumblatt, who won the Soviet Peace Prize in 1972 and was considered by many rightists as the one Lebanese — as distinct from the Palestinians — who was responsible for the civil war.

Ten bodies were seen lying by the side of the road near Mukhtara, six with their throats slit. Nearby, the hulks of more than a dozen freshly burned cars littered the side of the road.

Bands of armed men roamed the streets of Beirut Thursday, stopping cars at will as they did during the fighting. But they evaporated once Syrian troops came near. Areas near Jumblatt's party headquarters and sections of the city heavily populated by Druze, a secret Moslem sect, were cordoned off by residents. The Syrians sent an extra 4,000 soldiers into the mountain villages around Mukhtara, 23 miles southeast of here, in an attempt to stop the revenge killings.

Despite the violence, no clear idea emerged here Thursday as to which faction was responsible for the assassination of Jumblatt.

He was certainly hated by some Christian forces because of the alliance he forged with the Palestinians. Many right-wing Christians had insisted there would be no peace in Lebanon as long as Jumblatt remained alive and a political power.

The Syrians tried to muzzle Jumblatt because he opposed forcing the Palestinians to give up their heavy weapons. Even though he was a member of Parliament, newspapers here which are under strict censorship, had been forbidden to mention Jumblatt's name or carry any of his pronouncements.

Women's advocate denies she'll run for city council

HOUSTON (AP) —

This city's municipal women's advocate has denied saying she might run for city council if the council abolishes her job. Dr. Nikki Van Hightower said Thursday she does not consider herself fully qualified to be a member of the council and that is one reason she would not be a candidate.

Six members of the council voted last week to cut Dr. Van Hightower's $18,400 a year salary to $1. Now some members favor abolishing the position. Final action on cutting her salary or eliminating the job has been delayed until March 29.

Dr. Van Hightower has said she will resign rather than work for $1 a year. The council heard a record number 106 speakers pro and con on the issue at its Wednesday night church meeting.

Merylyn Whited, a city employee who so far is the only announced candidate for the council, the rally.

About 200 persons interested in finding a slate of candidates for city offices this year attended the rally.

Travel order expires today

WASHINGTON (AP) — An executive order that has kept Americans from traveling to four Communist countries is expiring today and that means U.S. citizens are free to travel anywhere in the world for the first time in 27 years.

President Carter announced nine days ago that he would not renew the ban on travel by Americans to Cuba, Vietnam, North Korea and Cambodia.

The restrictions had been renewed semi-annually by previous administrations but Carter decided they were inconsistent with his commitment to international human rights.

The ban on travel by U.S. citizens to North Korea was imposed 26 years ago and to Cuba 16 years ago. The State Department banned travel to Cambodia and what formerly was South Vietnam in 1975; travel to North Vietnam was banned previously.

Technically, only the use of a U.S. passport for travel to the four countries had been barred, not the travel itself.

From 1950 until 1971, the United States restricted travel by U.S. citizens to Communist China.

Thousands of Americans in recent years have circumvented the regulations by traveling to Cuba without the use of a passport and with the prior consent of the Cuban government.

From the U.S. government standpoint, only journalists, members of Congress, scholars or persons on humanitarian missions were exempt from the regulations.

The end to the restrictions is not expected to have any short-term impact on travel to North Korea or Cambodia. Only a handful of Americans have visited North Korea in the past 26 years and no American is known to have visited Cambodia since the Communist takeover there in April 1975.

There is no sign that either of these countries is about to relax its policies concerning American visitors.

The greatest potential impact of the new U.S. policy is expected to involve travel to Cuba, which has shown increased interest in developing its tourism industry.

Because of the absence of a direct airlink, however, Americans wanting to visit Cuba will have to go by chartered airplane or by way of Canada, Mexico or Jamaica.

Panola lawman sidelined

CARTHAGE, Tex. (AP) — An April 1 hearing has been set for the Panola County sheriff who has been temporarily removed from his office pending an official investigation.

State District Court Judge K. Bates removed Johnnie Spradley as sheriff of the Deep East Texas county Thursday after a petition was filed with the court citing five times the sheriff had been intoxicated.

District Attorney Bill Warren and County Attorney Bobby J. Phillips filed the petition for removal.

The petition said Spradley's intoxication prevented the residents of the county, numbering about 16,000, from having adequate law enforcement.

A spokesman for the Panola County Ambulance Service said Spradley had been taken Wednesday night to a private hospital in Shreveport, La.

Judge Baker's order directed that David Clabaugh, 52, be sworn in as temporary sheriff. Clabaugh, the former postmaster of Carthage, has been news director of a local radio station.

Eager Adley helps clear tunnel

Editors Note: After the agonizing hours waiting to tell rescuers that he was alive, trapped coal miner Ronald Adley had to wait again. It would take rescue crews 56 hours to chisel an escape tunnel through 50 feet of coal. In this last of three articles, Adley tells of his rescue from the black hole where he was imprisoned for six days.

By RONALD ADLEY
As Told To LEE LINDER
Copyright (c) The Associated Press 1977

TOWER CITY, Pa. (AP) — It's Ronnie Adley. It's Ronnie Adley. I must have yelled it about six times before I heard the voice of my foreman, Palmer Mervine. 'Ronnie, are you all right?'

'Get me out of here.' 'It's good to hear your voice, Ronnie.'

Palmer's voice was the first human being I heard since the water gushed through the mine and left me trapped in darkness. It seemed like a lifetime but it was only a little more than a day.

It took about three hours after I heard the tapping to cut the first tiny hole through the 50 feet of coal above me.

I barely saw a pinpoint of light and it was even harder to hear anything clear.

I shouted back to Palmer to tell my wife I was okay. I knew it was going to take some time. They told me to relax, to sit still, and they'd get food and water.

Right off I told them about my buddies who were dead below me, Ralph Renninger and Donald Shoffer. They asked me if I heard anybody else, any other tapping.

'No. Nothing.'

And I had no idea where the five other missing men might be. They punched a second hole pretty quick, angling down from the other side of the pillar of coal that separated us. A couple of plastic tubes were pushed through and some orange juice was poured through. It tasted great.

Then they started drilling and drilling and drilling. Trying to get a hole big enough to pass me some food. It was the longest time. I went into the mine Tuesday morning and the hole was finished.

Now I could talk better to them.

First they passed through a rope, and hooked on a miners lamp connected to batteries on the other end. It felt good to see things again. The rope became a conveyor, carrying plastic bags of water, of coffee, of soup.

After I ate I felt even better. I asked for a chewing tobacco, and got it. It tasted really good, made my mouth moist.

I asked for a shot of whisky. 'We can't give you that in the mine, Ronnie.'

'I know that, I'm just kiddinx.'

They sent me blankets. And I got long underwear, a dry shirt and pants, a cap, and gloves. I changed my clothes.

They started drilling lots of holes. The plan was to drill enough holes and then break open a tunnel, about 20 inches wide. It would be wide enough for me to squeeze through. I couldn't wait.

I'd ask each shift that came on what time it was, and what day it was, because my watch had stopped. And every day that passed the waiting got tougher.

It seems that the closer they got the further away they felt. I wouldn't talk to them very much because they told me: 'We can stand and blab all night and it's not going to get you out.'

But it felt good that I could talk to somebody.

I knew it was going to take a while, them cutting just inches every hour. They couldn't fire any dynamite at all. They couldn't chance shaking anything. They didn't want to lose anything that might fall on me or them.

I was worried about another collapse as they drilled toward me.

So I just lay back on the blanket thinking of my wife and my kids, to keep my mind away from the mine. It was an experience I hope no one ever had to go through.

I wiped everything out of my mind about my two buddies, down there, dead. I didn't want to lose any sense of balance, or crack up. This could happen to anybody.

I kept exercising. I felt my knees hurting and my shoulders, and all my joints. I knew what was happening. I was getting a cold. And I also knew if I would just set there I could possibly catch pneumonia. So I would move my arms around, my legs. I would move my neck, my back, all my moving parts.

Then on Saturday night, they finally punched through the escape tunnel but it had to be widened.

'Give yourself a break and let me use that hammer for a while,' I told the guy with the air drill.

So they passed it in and I was cutting that coal.

Boy, it felt good to cut my own way out. I cut for the longest time and then they said they were going to try to pull me out.

I tried but my shoulders couldn't make it. There wasn't enough room. The hole was head high and I had to pull myself up and into it.

So I got down again and they started drilling again and I started ripping all the stuff loose at my end, pulling at the coal with my bare hands.

It took about another 8 to 10 hours to widen the hole. And when I squeezed through to the other side, to freedom, it felt so great — just like being born again.

'Do you want to be carried out on a stretcher?'

'Hell no, I want to walk out of here.'

And I did, right to the mine cars that had carried me into the mine six days earlier. Riding out took just four minutes.

The ambulance people asked me if I wanted to lay down, and I said, 'No.'

Preparations complete for annual pancake fest

The griddles are in place, the tables are set and everything is in perfect readiness for the flipping and serving of pancakes, with all the trimmings, all-day Saturday in the Dellwood Plaza Mall.

The occasion is the 21st annual Midland Downtown Lions Club's Pancake Jamboree, with club members, aided by members of the Lion Tamers and Leo clubs, handling all the chores of the big community-wide pancake-consuming festival.

The serving hours are from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m., with the public invited to eat one, two or all three meals at the Jamboree.

Special musical entertainment, provided by some of the community's top entertainers, will be presented continuously throughout the day, beginning at 8 a.m.

Garland Chapman, general chairman of the event, said preparations have been made for serving at least 10,000 persons during the day. Last year's figure, he said, was approximately 8,500.

Sausage, orange juice, milk or coffee will be served with the pancakes, along with plenty of butter and syrup. Crews of cooks, servers and cleanup men have their assignments and all will be ready for the crowds expected from early until late Saturday.

Everything possible has been done to speed up the mixing, cooking and serving, John Berry of the equipment committee said, thus assuring patrons of a minimum of waiting in line.

Horace Robb, club president, said all proceeds will go to the club's special projects fund for use in financing the many and varied projects and programs carried on by the club each year. The Pancake Jamboree is the club's one big annual money-raising project. The club's special projects budget for this year totals more than $13,000.

All of the pancake mix for the big feed is being furnished free of charge by Sambo's Restaurant.

Proceeds from the advance sale of tickets late Thursday had exceeded the $10,000 figure.

Tickets also may be purchased at the scene of the big Pancake Jamboree Saturday.

Yoshimura puts blame on Patty, SLA

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Wendy Yoshimura, sentenced to 1 to 15 years in state prison, claims past ties with Patricia Hearst and the Symbionese Liberation Army led to her trial and conviction in a weapons cache case.

But Alameda County Superior Court Judge Martin Pulich cited the association with Miss Hearst as one reason for granting Miss Yoshimura bail after he imposed sentence Thursday.

"It would be a little anomalous that someone whose financial resources are $1.5 million gets bail and someone who is dependent on welfare goes into jail," Pulich said.

He hiked Miss Yoshimura's bail from $25,000 to $50,000 but allowed her to remain free while she raises the bail money. Miss Hearst is free on $1.5 million bail pending appeal of her armed bank robbery conviction.

Miss Yoshimura, 34, was convicted on Jan. 20 of illegal possession of weapons and explosives found in a Berkeley garage five years ago.

During the trial, Miss Yoshimura maintained she was unaware of the contents of the garage. The defense said her activist boyfriend, who pleaded guilty to weapons charges, was responsible.

She stood calmly when Pulich pronounced sentence. Her parents, gardeners from Fresno, Calif., strained to listen and her mother later wiped away tears.

It appeared likely she would serve far less than the maximum sentence, imposed under a law that expires on July 1. Under a new fixed sentencing law, Miss Yoshimura would face an average sentence of two years, with provision for parole after 18 months. The judge said 92 days served prior to the trial would be counted as time served.

"I believe I was convicted because of the clear racism and sexism of my trial," a weary Miss Yoshimura told reporters after the all-day court session.

"Additionally, my trial is not really about the charges stemming from 1972. I was tried for my association with Patricia Hearst and the Harrises ..."

Rotarians hear guest

Dr. Edward Marcin, head of the Business Administration Department at Sul Ross State College, Alpine, was the speaker Thursday noon at the meeting of the Midland Downtown Rotary Club in Midland Hilton.

"New Theories in Personnel" was the subject of his address, in which he used slides to illustrate some of his remarks.

The speaker discussed new theories in human motivation, particularly as they apply to employee behavior and productivity.

Dr. Marcin then listed and described the various levels of psychological existence, suggesting how they may be applied in management practices for the benefit of all concerned.

Viets give remains of 12

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP)—The Vietnamese government today gave a U.S. presidential commission human remains it said were those of 12 American pilots killed during the Vietnam War, diplomatic sources in touch with Hanoi reported today.

The diplomats said the remains were handed over at the end of the Americans' last meeting with Vietnamese officials. The Americans will give a dinner for their hosts tonight and fly to Vientiane, Laos, on Saturday to seek information about missing American pilots who were shot down in that Indochinese country during the war.

The plane that takes the Americans to Vientiane was expected to bring the remains on to Bangkok for processing and identification before they are sent on to the United States.

The names of the pilots were announced by the Vietnamese last September. The remains of 28 other Americans have been returned from North Vietnam since March, 1974.

The Pentagon lists 795 Americans as still missing in action in the Vietnam War and says the remains of 1,710 others killed in action have not been recovered. Information about them was the chief assignment of the commission President Carter sent to Hanoi as a first step toward establishment of diplomatic relations between the two governments.

The mission's leader, Leonard Woodcock, the president of the United Auto Workers, said Thursday that the talks were going well and if they continued in that manner, "we will have a constructive report to present to President Carter."

Woodcock expressed the hope that the United States and Vietnam could forget the wounds of war and forge a new relationship.

106-year-old grandchild of legendary Texan dies

HOUSTON (AP)—Mrs. Jennie Bell Morrow Decker of Houston, a grandchild of Gen. Sam Houston, will be buried Friday in Georgetown.

Mrs. Decker died Wednesday at the age of 106. She died at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Margaret D. Everitt, 80.

Two other grandchildren of the legendary Texas revolutionary survive. They are Mary Henderson of San Antonio, a daughter of Temple Houston; and Mrs. Joseph Houston Paulus of Floresville, a daughter of Andrew Jackson Houston. Mrs. Everitt once spoke of her mother's connection with the past and present.

"It's really fantastic when you think of all the history she saw... and, although she never could understand why we wanted to go to the moon, Mama loved to fly and drive fast in cars," Mrs. Everitt said.

"She was never old, at least in her own mind," said Margaret Young of Pekin, Ill., a great-granddaughter.

New London memories painful

NEW LONDON, Tex. (AP) — The physical losses suffered in New London 40 years ago were chronicled around the world, but the emotional traumas of the worst school disaster in history are still being suffered.

Time, it is said, heals all wounds so a large group is expected to flock to East Texas for a memorial service and dinner for the survivors of the March 18, 1937 explosion that killed 269 persons.

But organizers of the reunion say two of those contacted said they wouldn't come. The memories of that day, even after 40 years, are just too painful.

"Humans never forget, but they can accept things after a while," says one of those who will come, John Baucum, 57, of Fort Worth.

"I'm sure the memorial service will be solemn, but the day will have a lot of aspects at most school reunions."

Baucum, a junior in high school at the time of the explosion, lost his sister, a freshman, in the explosion.

The tremendous blast is believed to have been caused by an electrical spark that ignited natural gas that had accumulated in the basement of the school. Classes were held at two levels—the basement and the ground floor.

"I was in English class when the explosion came and the roof came down on us," said Baucum. "Nearly everyone in the class was killed, but I had instinctively hit the floor and nothing heavy hit me. I dug myself out in about 30 minutes and helped carry bodies away."

Wayne and Glorietta Ragsdale Shaffer, who organized the reunion, were childhood sweethearts at New London.

Both were in the fourth grade 40 years ago. They survived because most of the first through fifth graders were dismissed earlier and were on the way home in buses.

"The students in the building where the explosion occurred would have been dismissed at 3:30. The explosion, I recall, was at 3:20," said Mrs. Shaffer, who lost her brother Gabe in the blast.

Mrs. Shaffer said Gabe had asked to stay home from school that day, but mother refused.

"My mother blamed herself for Gabe's death," she said. "She never recovered and died four years later."

She says former New London residents from Iowa, California, Louisiana and Oklahoma are planning to be here Saturday, as well as a large number from Texas.

"We are expecting at least 150 for the dinner and as many as 450 for the memorial service," Mrs. Shaffer says.

The dinner will be at 5:30 p.m. at Kilgore, about 12 miles away from New London. The memorial service is scheduled at 2 p.m. at the site of the explosion, where the present school is still located.

At the time of the blast, the death toll was higher than any explosion disaster in history. Two subsequent explosions, both at ports, surpassed the New London fatality figures.

The Associated Press story marking the 15th anniversary of the explosion said it was so tremendous that children were blown 75 feet and that an automobile 200 feet away "was crushed like an eggshell under a slab of concrete blown from the school."

Legislator claims bill will raise phone costs

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Every telephone bill in Texas would go up if the Senate finally approves a bill to prohibit separate charges for "information" calls, says Sen. Bill Meier, D-Eules.

The Senate gave the bill preliminary approval Thursday by a vote of 19-9 despite Meier's warnings. The measure will be on the Senate calendar Monday ready for a third and final vote to send it to the House.

Both the Senate and House quit until Monday. The House recessed after a 35-minute session without transacting any business.

"What this bill means is there will be a $41 million reduction in the rate award given Southwestern Bell by the Public Utilities Commission," said Meier. "There is no doubt this bill will cause every telephone bill in the state to go up a minimum of 50 cents a month... They (the Public Utilities Commission) will have to reopen that rate case and raise $41 million some other way."

Meier said Southwestern Bell originally asked for a $298 million statewide rate increase but was granted only $57 million by PUC because "he commission found that was the fair amount due Bell."

A part of that decision was authority for Bell to charge 20 cents for each director assistance or 1-411 "information" call over 10 calls each month.

Meier said PUC chairman Garrett Morris estimated such action would take away $41 million of the $57 million raise given Southwestern Bell.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, sponsor of the bill, did not speak in defense of his bill Thursday.

Earlier he said the telephone company charges for "everything except not having a phone—and they'd do that if they could find a way."

"Telephone solicitors are the ones who make a living out of using 1-411," said Sen. Betty Andujar, R-Fort Worth, "and this bill means they will be getting a free ride and everyone else will be paying for them."

Later, Southwestern Bell issued a statement saying Doggett's bill was "an anti-consumer action" pushed by organized labor to keep some telephone operators now answering 1-411 calls from being laid off. The company said only about one per cent of all their customers account for 87 per cent of the directory assistance calls made.

The Bell statement said if the Senate bill becomes law the increase expense "almost certainly will have to be covered through increases in basic monthly rates."

Other action by the Senate Thursday included:

—Approved House amendments and sent to the governor a bill that would prohibit the selling of babies.

—Sent to the House a bill that would raise probation administration charges from $10 to $25 a month.

—Sent to the House a bill creating a University System of South Texas that would include Texas A&M at Kingsville, Laredo State University and Corpus Christi State University. The House has passed a similar bill.

—Approved 27-1 a proposed constitutional amendment that would deny bail to felons or those charged with offenses involving firearms if they are already free under bond.

'King' chapter planned

AUSTIN (AP) — UT Press, a publishing arm of The University of Texas, says it will release for publication this fall the final chapter of a book by novelist T. H. White that inspired the musical "Camelot." The last chapter of "The Once and Future King" was left out of the original book in 1941 because of a wartime paper shortage.

Admiral backs MIA probe

DALLAS (AP) — An admiral who spent seven and a half years in a North Vietnamese prisoner of war camp says he cannot even speculate on the outcome of the current White House mission to Vietnam in search of persons listed as missing in action in the Vietnam war.

But, Rear Admiral Jeremiah A. Denton said the mission may "establish once and for all the status of these guys."

He said he was basing his uncertainty about the mission on his own personal experiences, noting that the North Vietnamese did not always tell the truth about prisoners of war and the conditions under which they were held.

Denton, in Dallas for a speech, said "I support and agree with President Carter's efforts." He also said he agrees with President Carter's action in pardoning draft evaders.

"The same motivation that caused us to survive the suffering causes me to say I support my president," Denton said.

Denton came into prominence in 1973 when as senior officer aboard the first aircraft load of prisoners of war returning from North Vietnam, he was chosen to say a few remarks.

"We are proud to have had the opportunity to serve our country under difficult circumstances."

'Brother' eyes Texas courtroom

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Judge Darrell Hester's courtroom is ahead of its time, about seven years to be exact.

Hester has borrowed a chapter out of George Orwell's "1984" by breathing life into Big Brother.

Electronic surveillance made its debut in a Texas criminal court this month during a capital murder trial.

"I programmed myself to not even whisper... I don't talk about the judge at all, unless I want him to hear me," said Cameron County Asst. Dist. Atty. Joe K. Hendley.

"The fact that I was in front of a camera all the time didn't affect me at all," offered defense lawyer Glen Barnard.

Big Brother is always listening and watching. The experimental system consists of four cameras and four microphones strategically spread around Hester's 197th district courtroom. A $28,000 state grant paid for the electronic eyes and ears.

"The thrust of the experiment is to try and alleviate the terrible problem of getting records to the appellate courts without a long delay," explained Hester. "The hardest working man in our system is a good court reporter. He spends all day in court and half the night preparing transcripts of testimony."

The courtroom proceedings are taped on cassettes which cost $25 each. Fourteen tapes were used during the trial.

Body found in rockpile thought to be Bramlet's

The Los Angeles Times

LAS VEGAS — The nude body of a man, believed to be missing labor leader Al Bramlet, was found in a rockpile Thursday in a remote desert area 45 miles southwest of here.

A husband and wife on a rockhunting expedition came across the body in the same general area where police earlier conducted a fruitless seven-day search.

The 60-year-old Bramlet, head of the 22,000-member Culinary workers' Union and president of the state AFL-CIO, was one of the most powerful men in Nevada. He disappeared Feb. 24.

The rockhunters found the body Thursday afternoon about 100 yards off a road in the vicinity of Spring Mountain, a foothill desert community. They saw a protruding hand and a partially-visible face as they neared the pile of rocks.

Police said no clothing or weapons were found. Authorities cordoned off the area and began tests seeking to establish a positive identification.

An autopsy will be done Friday.

Arafat praises remarks

The Los Angeles Times

CAIRO — An obviously pleased Yasser Arafat Thursday welcomed President Carter's latest statement concerning a Palestinian "homeland" and called it "a very important note and a progressive step."

Excerpts from the President's Clinton, Mass., remarks about Middle East problems and peace prospects were read to Arafat during a break in the Palestine National Council, the "parliament" of the Palestine Liberation Organization which is meeting here.

The PLO chairman smiled when he heard Carter's statement that "there has to be a homeland provided for the Palestinian refugees who have suffered for many, many years." No American President has so directly addressed the Palestinian question before.

"He has put his hand on the heart of the problem of the Middle East crisis," said Arafat. "If it is true what he said, it helped the whole situation in the area. A good step."

Whether the Carter remark and Arafat's reaction portend a break in the long-standing impasse over Palestinian representation at any future Arab-Israeli peace negotiations remains to be seen. However, it was clear from the reaction of some of the delegates to the national council that they were surprised and pleased by what appeared to be a more conciliatory American attitude toward them.

"We welcome this new declaration and we hope it will be set into practice," said the council's official spokesman, Mahmoud Labady.

WT medical care discussed

BY PATSY GORDON

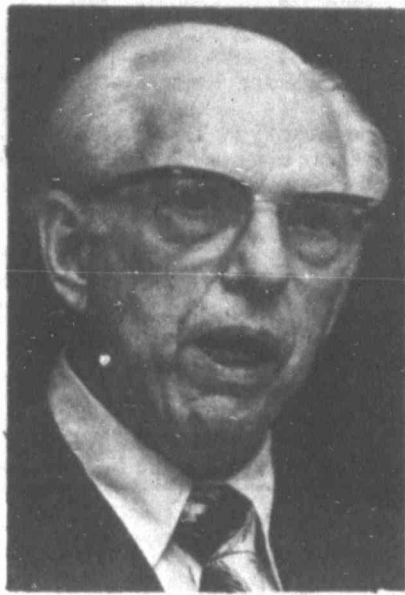

The people of West Texas shouldn't have to go so far to get important medical treatment, Dr. P. W. Malone of Big Spring told members of the American Legion Auxiliary Unit No. 19 at a meeting of the group in the American Legion Hall.

"There are no more brains or money in Houston than we have right here in West Texas," he said.

Malone was speaking to the group about the Malone and Hogan Foundation which has been started to establish a therapy center for cancer and its allied diseases in Big Spring.

The center will be located on the 34-acre plot of land west of Big Spring where both the Malone-Hogan Hospital and the Malone and Hogan Clinic are situated. The land will be furnished by the Foundation and funds will be solicited throughout West Texas.

In addition to establishing the center, the Malone and Hogan Foundation will foster educational programs in allied health fields by making grants to already established training programs and to needy students in or entering such training programs such as x-ray technicians, laboratory technicians, student nurses and physicians assistants.

Malone emphasized it is not the purpose of the Foundation to "establish any such training programs or schools."

The Foundation also will aid financially needy cancer patients in receiving treatment locally or in other cancer therapy centers, as contributions are received, said Malone, until the Big Spring center is built. Malone said he anticipated it will be several years until ground is broken for the center.

According to Malone, the Foundation will assist with living expenses of the family of these needy cancer patients in any other treatment center.

The Foundation also may engage in cancer research or may make grants for such research to other cancer centers if funds are available, said Malone.

A visitor at the meeting brought up the fact he was told at M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston that there is a greater evidence of cancer in West Texas than any other section of the state. He asked Dr. Malone if this were true.

"It is quite probable certain types of skin cancer are more prevalent," said Dr. Malone. Cancer is the last enemy number one and nobody is too good or too bad to have it."

Card-carrying feminist sells sassy messages

By NANCY YOSHIHARA The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Babara Jo Slate is a card-carrying feminist who sells her sassy — and sometimes sweet — messages for 50 cents apiece.

The former commercial artist scribbles such lines as "I know I'm not easy to live with ... but you're no bargain either," or her Ms. Liz greeting cards, and a half million have been sold since they were introduced seven months ago.

"It's a line of cards for today's woman who speaks her mind," Ms. Slate said in an interview at the Convention Center. "I wouldn't say it is for liberated women because I don't know what that means anymore."

Ms. Slate founded her company, Barbara Jo Slate, Inc., in New York nine months ago after walking in off the street and selling her first 19 dozen of the Ms. Liz cards to Bloomingdale's. Since investing their nestegg, she and her husband-partner, Stephen M. Rediker, have sold the cards nationwide to such stores as Broadway, Bullock's, Jordan Marsh, R.C. Macy's, Gimbel's and others.

Noting that most greeting cards range from the corny "Ho, ho, ho, you're 29 again" type to the syrupy "I love you because you smell like a rose," Ms. Slate described her Ms. Liz cards as an amusing expression of what is going on between two people.

She drew from her own experiences as a single woman for seven years in New York City after leaving Harrisburg, Pa. to create Ms. Liz as somewhat of a caricature of herself — although "I didn't intend to."

The greeting card character wears long bangs and round glasses, is plain, has big feet, but is "wholesome and sassy," says her creator, Ms. Liz, along with her boyfriend Henry and a bird of an undetermined breed make up the line of 54 birthday, anniversary and general greeting cards. Twenty-seven more will be coming up as a Valentine line.

Aimed primarily toward women, the cards "don't fit everyone" and some may be a little strong, Ms. Slate concedes. For instance, one card reads "Congratulations! A computer selected you as an ideal mate ... for a computer." Another says, "For the man who has everything ... except my phone number." (A dotted line is included to write in the sender's number.)

Ms. Slate declines to say how profitable the Ms. Liz cards have been. "I would like to say we're into our third million but we're not."

Villain-hero, Peter Townsend, profits from his old romance

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In 1955 the curtain went down on one of the last great royal fair tales. The heroine dropped the romantic ingenue role and took up the lead in a complicated psychological drama. The villain-hero got left behind on the ramps, pondering the old values.

You remember the scandalous story of Princess Margaret, sister to the Queen of England, and Group Capt. Peter Townsend, Dashing Divorce. The wicked commoner captivated the heart of the young princess, who was then forced to renounce personal happiness to preserve the public morality.

He then had a quick change of eras. The princess married a commoner, after all, and took up commonly practiced standards of behavior. She fought with her husband in public, officially split from him and got herself a new boy friend. The dynasty has survived it all.

And what of Peter Townsend, whose divorce was such a threat to the royal family he sought to enter? He is now 62 years old, silvery, handsome and charming.

On the personal side, he has been "very happily married" for 18 years to a Belgian and says he doesn't even read about Princess Margaret. Professionally, he continues to profit from the publicity of his old romance but agonizes over his effort of "conform to standards of decency, discretion and humanity" while doing so.

Townsend has just published his fourth book, a study of Princess Margaret's father, George VI, whom he served as Deputy Master of the Household. The subtitle of "The Last Emperor" claims it is "an intimate account," but Townsend is quick to point out that it is not.

Here to promote the book, he acknowledged that he had not been asked to write about George VI because of any groundswell of interest in that monarch's blameless life.

Townsend says he felt an obligation to produce a book that "maintained the proper respect. If it is admired for nothing else, it will keep to those standards. I would never let out any secret. After all, I was trusted servant, if you will."

The son of a British high commissioner in Burma, Townsend fell in love with flying at an early age and had a distinguished Air Force career before he was tapped, "as a compliment to the fighting services," to be an equerry at Buckingham Palace.

"I went clean from the cockpit into the court," he said. Serving as a personal aide was "not a very big drain on one's intellectual capacity," he said, "but one was close to the king, and it was a very enriching experience."

At this point one expects secrets, intrigue, excitement, never-before-revealed information, gossip, intimacy.

Certainly not. If the royal family has turned relatively informal, Townsend has not.

Although he knows that "the royal family now invites in the television cameras," he refused to perform a similar task. The most he will reveal is that behind the facade of the model king was a model husband and father.

In Townsend's description of the king's reaction to losing his ancestors' empire — the theme of the book — "the king certainly didn't remain indifferent to all those ghastly goings on, but I don't know what his inner thoughts were about himself. Never in my presence did he mop his brow and say, "Oh, this is terrible."

Nor does Princess Margaret appear except in the most casual of references: "She had nothing to do with the unwinding of the empire."

While he is now working on his autobiography, Townsend promises that "I'm not revealing any details" about his romance there, either.

DEAR ABBY

Mother advises leaving child to teach responsibility lesson

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: About advising that an 8-year-old child should not be left alone for three hours after school: At 8, my daughter not only stayed alone, she started dinner. At 10 she could prepare any meal as well as I could. At 12 she is learning to make her own clothes. Society today is plagued with irresponsible youths who are coddled until they are 16, after which someone tries to teach them "responsibility." The result: Many healthy young adults on welfare.

Of course, there is a risk in leaving a child alone. But then again, when we send our children to school, they can be picked up, kidnapped or even murdered in broad daylight. But we don't quit sending them, do we?

If this 8-year-old has been properly taught, and if Mom calls regularly to check on her, she will be safe and responsible. And when the time comes where she has to handle a situation and Mamma is not there, she will be prepared.

Change your mind, Abby.—A RESPONSIBLE MOM

DEAR MOM: I applaud your efforts to teach your child responsibility, and wish all parents would follow your fine example, but unfortunately you are the exception—not the rule. Most 8-year-olds without supervision are not as "safe" as your lucky youngster.

DEAR ABBY: My dad takes a bath at least three times a week—but not alone. He takes MY TV into the bathroom with him. I've tried reasoning with him, but it doesn't work. (I'd like to cuss him out, but since I'm only 13 years old, that wouldn't be a good idea.)

Dear old Dad is not a dumb man, but he just won't quit taking my TV. And my mom says she won't get involved. Can you think of an approach that would help?—STEAMED DAUGHTER

DEAR STEAMED: Ask Pop to pop for a mini-TV and a suggestion on how you can earn it—for him! (P.S. And respectfully tell him not to touch the TV while he's in the tub, or he could get the shock of his life.)

DEAR ABBY: Will you please say a few words in defense of us wives who are constantly being accused of "murdering" our husbands by feeding them fattening foods?

My husband is overweight, and I am sick and tired of having people tell me it's my fault—and that I should "watch him." I serve well-balanced meals and try to keep the calories down. I never make rich desserts. I give him fruit instead. But he raids the refrigerator every night.

He took up golf, but he rides around in a golf cart, eating candy bars, so a lot of good "golfin'" does him. After dinner he goes out to buy a paper, and he stops for a hot fudge sundae. So, how can I help him, Abby?—A FOOL'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I could say a few words in your defense, but it won't help your husband. The only one who can help him is the one who does his eating.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "HURT MOTHER": Don't ask your son to make a choice between his wife and you. If you've raised him right, you'll lose.

Tricentennial plans described to city business women's group

Mrs. Charles Linehan gave a program on the "Winding Up and Closing of the Bicentennial" and preparations being made for the Tricentennial at a meeting of Tall City Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association in Rodeway Inn.

Mrs. Linehan said the Bicentennial Commission is preparing a scrapbook, so that in 2076 persons can observe 1976 fashions, transportation, government, business, education and celebration events. In the planning stages is the design of a time capsule, filling it with the Bicentennial scrapbook, fashion catalogues, car books and other items depicting the 1976 era.

The commission, Mrs. Linehan said, is donating $6,000 to the Midland County Public Library. The remaining $2,000 profit of the commission is to be dispensed.

Mae Baucum, who is retiring after being associated with Skibell's the last 13 years, gave the vocational report. She plans to travel, accepting speaking engagements. Her topic will be "Rights, Liberties and Opportunities of Living in These United States."

Alma Norman, tea chairman, reported on the enrollment tea to be held Monday. Anyone interested in attending or joining the organization may contact Norman at 684-4404 or 694-5706, or Patsy Horton, 682-2370.

The Rev. Christian W. Matthews of Fox Chapel Presbyterian Church performed the double ring ceremony. The organist was the Rev. Robert Johnson.
Diane K. Donovan, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. The bridesmaid was Julie T. Kromer, also a sister of the bride. The father of the bridegroom was best man, and David Flinn of Midland, brother of the bridegroom; Thomas A. Donovan, brother-in-law of the bride, and Douglas R. Wilson were groomsmen.

Mr. Kromer presented his daughter in marriage. She wore a floor-length gown of white jersey with highrise bodice and high neckline with a cameo illusion yoke accented with silk Venise lace. The A-line skirt ended in a chapel train. She also wore a fingertip Venise lace mantilla, and carried a bouquet of white roses, baby's breath and stephanotis with white orchids.

Tutus, toeshoes leap ahead in popularity with Japanese

By KATHRYN TOLBERT
TOKYO (AP) — Tutus and toeshoes have not been long in Japan, but suddenly the ballet is making itself known here in a field dominated by the Soviet Union, the United States, England and France.
Coming to this country only a half century ago, ballet has grown quickly in popularity and professionalism.
Yoko Morishita won the grand prize for female dancers at the seventh international ballet competition in Varna, Bulgaria, in 1974, the first Japanese to do so. Hidetaru Kitahara, a leading dancer and a ballet company artistic director, last year became the youngest, at age 35, to receive one of the education minister's culture prizes.
The first "Tokyo World Ballet Concourse" took place early in 1976 and joins the Varna and Moscow competitions as a regular international event.
While there is no figure for the total number of ballet dancers and students in Japan, there are an estimated 200 small, private schools. The government supports four groups — the Japan Ballet Association, which has 430 dancers and teachers as members, the Tchaikovsky Memorial Tokyo Ballet Company, the Maki Asami Ballet Troupe and the Star Dancers Ballet Troupe.

The Tchaikovsky Memorial Tokyo Ballet Company, usually called the Tokyo Ballet Company, is one of the country's largest and best known. It was founded 13 years ago by Tadatsugu Sasaki, then a young opera producer and now the company's director. He made more than 50 trips abroad to find teachers and regularly invited Soviet dancers to work with his company.
"This brought a level of professionalism previously unknown to ballet in Japan," he said.
"We are using the Soviet technique and adding it to the Japanese style. The smallness of Japanese dancers gives them an ability to perform jumps and turns particularly well," he said.

Without a national ballet academy or theater, working conditions vary widely in Japan. Dancers are quick to decry the lack of government support for cultural activities in general and Western performing arts in particular. There are plans to build a national theater for ballet, opera and orchestra similar to the one located in central Tokyo for Kabuki and other traditional Japanese arts. But the problem is land, of which there is none available in Tokyo now of the size needed, said a Culture Agency official.
The agency's budget for a year's cultural events is $2.3 million. The promotion and support of ballet amounts to $192,000.
The popularity of ballet in Japan was aided by tours of the country by the Bolshoi Ballet, the New York City Ballet, the Leningrad Ballet, the British Royal Ballet, L'Opera de Paris, the Stuttgart Ballet and others.

It was not until 1920 that Ilana Pavlova came to Japan from Russia and started an interest in classical ballet.
"In the past several years the technical ability in particular of Japanese dancers has advanced very quickly," said Chieko Hattori, president of the Japan Ballet Association.
"Japanese dancers train very hard, but if we hurry too much, we will lose something important. Sometimes we get stuck on technique. When we see something new, right away we want to try it, without understanding the feeling and most important, the reason why."

Chinese having trouble keeping order

GEORGES BIANNIC
Agence France Presse

PEKING — The Chinese Communist party leadership continues to have difficulty maintaining order in certain parts of the country, according to reports from travelers and stories in the official press.

Foreign travelers who have visited Shanghai and Canton said Thursday that at least 20 persons have been sentenced to death in the two cities for various crimes, including political offenses.

Meanwhile, the official press has reported that a nationwide conference on "security and public order" along the country's vital railway network was held in Peking during the past two weeks. The meeting focused exclusively on public security, according to press reports.

The official party newspaper, The People's Daily, said rail service in many areas was disrupted during 1976 "under the interference and the sabotage of the gang of four." This is the government's name for the so-called "radical" party leaders who were arrested last October in the power struggle that followed the death of Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

The government of Mao's successor, party Chairman Hua Kuo-feng has called for "resolute suppression" of people causing trouble for the rail network, the press has reported.

According to the foreign travelers, a Supreme Court notice displayed in the streets of Shanghai announced that 53 people were sentenced for various crimes and counter-revolutionary activities, with 26 death sentences to take effect immediately.

The other people condemned were granted a two-year suspension to repent and demonstrate good behavior, the travelers said.

Observers commented that the indications were that the suppression of troublemakers, criminals, counter-revolutionaries and "class enemies" is growing.

Only two of the 26 people sentenced to be executed in Shanghai were charged with political crimes, the travelers said. Shanghai had been a stronghold of the party radicals.

The official notice said one was accused of having hindered the criticism of the "gang of four" including the leader of the party radicals, Mao's widow, Chiang Ching.

The second criminal was executed for opposing the policy of sending young people to the countryside. There was no elaboration.

The other 24 condemned to execution were sentenced for other crimes including murder, mail theft and looting of grain.

The notice said these cases were examined by the masses, workers and peasants, in a trial conforming with Chinese law, the travelers said. The sentences were based on the directives of the party Central Committee concerning counter-revolutionary activities, according to the travelers' report.

Travelers from Canton said that three persons were executed there for espionage. They had already been imprisoned for two years while their cases were being investigated, the travelers said. No details on their activities were given.

Foundation being laid for return of Teng

By JACQUES LESLIE
The Los Angeles Times

HONG KONG — China appears to be laying the groundwork for the return to power of Teng Hsiao-ping, the twice-purged former first vice premier.

It is widely speculated that Teng will be given a high position in the Chinese leadership by April 5, first anniversary of the riots in Peking's Tien An Men Square that led to Teng's second purge.

A comeback would mark the second time that he had fallen from posts of great authority only to return to power. It would be unprecedented in the history of Chinese communism.

Although it is not certain that the 73-year-old Teng will return to power by April 5, it is clear that China's leaders are intent on restoring some of the luster to his name. One reason may be that if Teng does not return by April 5, there could be disturbances by his supporters.

Among recent indications of Teng's growing stature are these:

—An article taking up the entire front page of Monday's Peking People's Daily offered ideological justification for a comeback by purged leaders, almost certainly including Teng. Since Teng was purged last April, allegedly for serious ideological errors, some theoretical explanation for his return is necessary.

The article interpreted a quotation by the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung, which was often cited by China's radicals as justification for the purge of their enemy, Teng. The quotation:

"You are making the Socialist revolution, and yet don't know where the bourgeoisie is. It is right in the Communist Party — those in power taking the capitalist road. The capitalist roaders are still on the capitalist road."

The article argued that while the quotation indicated that individual capitalist roaders existed inside the party it did not mean — as the radicals alleged — that an entire class of capitalist roaders thrived in the party. Thus, according to the newspaper's argument, the number of capitalist roaders was quite small. The article offered as examples the best-known victims of purges over the last decade: Former President Liu Shao-chi, former Defense Minister Lin Biao and the radical "Gang of Four," which includes Mao's widow, Chiang Ching. The four radicals were purged last October, opening up the possibility of Teng's return to power.

The article also took a halting step toward disassociating Mao from the effort to purge Teng. The fact that Mao approved the action against Teng has presented China's current leaders with a major dilemma in trying to restore him: how to do so without implicitly attacking Mao's judgment.

Jersey Village wants highway to go elsewhere

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Residents of Jersey Village, northwest of Houston, asked the Senate Intergovernmental Relations Committee Thursday to stop the new outer loop from going through their bedroom community.

"We are a one square mile city, with a freeway about to cover us up and relegate us to living under a bridge," Mayor Lonnie E. Crawford told the committee.

Crawford testified in support of a bill by Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston, that would require approval of the Jersey Village City Council before the highway department could split the community with the freeway.

Crawford said it would cost $7.6 million more to build Beltway 8 through Jersey Village, population 3,000, than to bend it to the east, where only "one or two businesses and three or four residences" would be affected.

In addition, Crawford said, more $60,000 to $70,000 homes have been built in Jersey City since the last estimate on cost of buying the right of way through the community, and the expense of raising the freeway and constructing sound barriers also would be added to the cost.

Jim Short, director of Transportation Development Group, a nonprofit corporation promoting Beltway 8, testified against Mengden's bill, arguing that a lot of people had invested money and made plans based on the proposed route.

That route was known in 1952, before Jersey Village existed, Short said. In fact, the developer of Jersey Village "purposely chose the location because it was on the proposed Beltway 8 route," he said. Everyone who has built a house in Jersey Village has been aware the freeway would someday be built there, he said.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, expressed reservations about the bill and asked several questions. Finally, he turned to Short and said, "I guess what I'm really asking is, will there be a lawsuit if we pass this bill?"

"I can assure you there'll be a lawsuit," Short replied. Parker, a lawyer and quipster, had one more question — "Do y'all need a lawyer?" That broke up the hearing.

A moment later, Parker told Mengden he really was worried about making exceptions for individual cities. "We're likely to become the highway commission, located in the Senate," he said.

Majority opinion maintains exercise strengthens heart

EDITOR'S NOTE — Your heart pumps some 100,000 times a day, nearly 40 million in a year, so it's no stranger to exercise. If the rest of you is, most experts believe, you're doing your heart no favor. Reasonable physical activity can be a tonic for it. Last of three articles.

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — Looking at the indolent, power-assisted American way of life, a physician who plays vigorous tennis at age 73 says: "Most of us don't wear out. We rust out."

Most heart specialists might well agree with that statement of Dr. Theodore G. Klumpp of New York, medical consultant to the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

Exercise, they say, is a heart tonic. It helps to prevent heart attacks. It probably makes attacks less severe if they do occur. And carefully prescribed, graduated exercises are one of their antidotes against another attack.

The American Heart Association says regular exercise "is at least prudent" as a hope of avoiding heart attacks and making heart transplants or artificial hearts unnecessary for potentially millions of men and women.

No one can actually prove that exercise is protective.

Some doctors, including those who don't exercise, say exercise is not necessary, or that it might even be harmful. True enough. Joggers sometimes fall dead. So do some tennis players. But so also do some golfers, whose exercise may be no more than a leisurely walk, if they don't hop aboard golf carts.

About half of all heart attacks occur during sleep.

"Hard work never hurt a healthy heart," said the late Dr. Paul Dudley White, the eminent heart specialist who championed bicycling and hiking and life-long exercise. He died at age 87 from a stroke.

At age 88, Eula Weaver of Santa Monica, Calif., keeps winning gold medals for running mile and half-mile races in Senior Olympics events. She has six medals so far.

Seven years ago she was crippled with congestive heart failure, anginal pains, had galloping high blood pressure and severe arthritis.

She followed an ultrastrict, almost fatless diet designed by Nathan Pritikin, a nutritionist, to correct her artery-clogging disease of atherosclerosis. Initially, she could walk only 100 feet before heart pains hit. Gradually increasing walking exercise was prescribed, then later she turned to jogging and running.

Pritikin says he thinks the vigorous exercise can be credited with 10 to 20 per cent of her remarkable transformation. The major benefit, he says, came from the diet of 10 per cent protein, 10 per cent fat, and the rest carbohydrates, with salt restricted, and no cholesterol.

Director of the Longevity Research Institute founded a year ago in Santa Barbara, Calif., he tells of other men and women who he reports have returned to health, some having avoided anticipated coronary bypass surgery.

Pritikin has some medical supporters as well as critics who he says will be answered soon when he publishes research results.

Cardiologists blame the soft, inactive way of life for sabotaging Americans' hearts. We ride rather than walk a few blocks. We have power steering and electric lawn mowers and machines perform our labors at work or at home. We watch rather than participate in sports.

Less physical activity means spending fewer calories, so too many Americans "bank" more calories as savings than they spend, with resulting bulges or outright obesity. Being overweight is not considered healthy for the heart or body in general.

"Physical inactivity should be fought as much as crime in the streets, and as a disease as serious as cancer and tuberculosis," says Dr. Zenonas Danilevicius in a recent editorial in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Exercise burns calories. A really brisk walk can withdraw five to six calories per minute from the "bank." One pound of fat represents 3,500 stored calories, usually banked by the habit of consuming somewhat more calories per day than are spent.

Specialists say regular, rhythmic and vigorous exercise gives the heart reserves to meet emergencies. They mean real exercise, several times a week.

Exercise often can help reduce elevated blood pressure and help control diabetes. The physically fit person is less likely to suffer low back pains and is more likely to sleep better. Exercise can reduce muscular and emotional tensions. And, say some, one's sex life is likely to improve, too.

All specialists warn against sudden ventures into strenuous exercise on your own. Have a physician check your heart and general fitness and consult how best to begin.

Recommended are exercises that involve the large muscles of the legs, to improve circulation and work for the heart. This means physical movement as in brisk walking, jogging, tennis, swimming, dancing, table tennis and the like. And of course it helps if the activity is fun rather than just dutiful.

Isometric exercises, opposing muscles against one another, or weight lifting can build stronger muscles, but don't confer the same kind of benefit for the heart, the specialists say.

See to it, they add, that your children develop physical activity as a lifelong habit.

Some studies indicate that vigorous, regular exercise helps reduce the blood level of cholesterol, the fatty substance blamed as a main culprit in narrowing and clogging heart arteries, setting the stage for heart attacks.

Over-all, the majority opinion is that you help your heart by being physically active, at work or play or both.

Snake-shy persons counseled Grad schools change

By ROBERT W. WELKOS

RENO, Nev. (AP) — King Kong tapping at your window or Alfred Hitchcock's birds scratching at your screen door are enough to give anyone nightmares, but probably nothing frightens humans in the real world more than a snake.

Just ask Nancy Adams. The 26-year-old master's level psychologist counsels people who are deathly afraid of snakes.

"I think part of the reason for a fear of snakes is that you never expect to see them," Miss Adams said. "I don't care what you see, if you don't expect to see it you're going to jump."

"There are some people who are incapacitated by their fear of snakes," she continued. "Often it is characterized by nightmares or really strong physiological arousal and fear."

"I think most people have fears of one kind or another," she said. "It's just difficult to understand the intensity of fear some of these people have."

Since last June, Miss Adams has worked under a federal grant counseling persons with snake phobia. Sessions are held at the University of Nevada.

Since then, she has counseled approximately 40 persons from the Reno area in an effort to cure them of their snake fears.

"Quite a number of people are afraid of snakes to the point where it interferes with their enjoyment of life," Miss Adams said. "They're not comfortable hiking or camping or going to the zoo or seeing a picture of a snake," she added.

"We're helping people to reduce those fears," she said. "I think it's very realistic but the types of people we work with are people who have fears so severe that it really interferes with their enjoyment of life."

People who sign up for Miss Adams' counseling service usually tremble at the sight of any snake, whether it be a venomous water moccasin or a harmless garter snake.

And, she noted, the persons seeking help have ranged in age from 14 to 65 and she has counseled as many men as women.

Miss Adams blames parents, the news media and myths as major reasons persons develop fear of snakes.

"I think a lot of fear comes from parents," she said. "It's amazing to see how often children look to their parents to see how they react."

schools change

Three of the nation's top graduate business schools, long the hunting grounds for large corporations, now are rolling out the welcome mat for small business executives.

Recruiting days, special courses and student clubs that cater to the small business executive have been organized at Harvard, the Wharton School of Finance and Stanford — mostly because of student demand.

"There are any number of students who feel they can do their own thing better in a small company than in a larger one," says William Zucker, professor of management at Wharton.

For the first time in its history, Harvard Business School held a recruiting day last month just for small businesses — that is, companies managed by only five or six executives. It was so successful, the school has scheduled another one.

"They don't have to elbow their way in between Chase Manhattan and U.S. Steel," graduate student Richard Roll said of the February career day. "They feel Harvard rolls out the red carpet for larger corporations but not for smaller businesses," and that's why they've stayed away.

The activities at Wharton, Harvard and Stanford are setting examples for other business schools.

"It's not hard data that you can wrap up, but a large number of schools will write me or call me and want to talk about courses," says Harvard's Prof. Richard Dooley.

He runs the school's Smaller Business Management program.

Line busy on issues

President Carter's first "phone in" was a smooth performance. The word performance is used advisedly, and not to disparage the sincerity of Mr. Carter's desire to keep in touch with the American people.

But a performance it was, in the context of politics. And politics is the only context in which the "Ask President Carter" show can be placed. It revealed nothing new about administration policy, nor could talking to 42 of the nine million or more Americans who dialed the White House be much help to Mr. Carter in formulating that policy.

The President spoke warmly and candidly with those whose calls got through. He is very much at home in this sort of performance.

At the end of the show, Mr. Carter commented that he liked it, and it is likely that CBS also was happy with it. This doesn't mean, however, that everyone in Washington was satisfied with these manifestations of Carter's presidential style.

House Speaker Tip O'Neill and Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd are said to be grumbling privately that the President is busy wooing the public when he should be wooing Congress. Liaison between the White House and Capitol Hill has been a problem, according to some observers, ever since Mr. Carter made some early appointments without checking them with party leaders in Congress. The "honeymoon" period is said to have cooled considerably.

We must agree with a Copley News Service writer who said that congressional leaders cannot be blamed for worrying that Mr. Carter is going over their heads to build popular support. From a political standpoint, this may be a smart move. But there is some doubt about the President's strategy.

Carter is making his pitch for public support on the basis of a folksy style more than by offering specific answers to the complex problems on the national scene.

On the telephone he did not have to defend his economic program against charges that it prescribes the wrong remedies at the wrong time and may be inflationary. He yet is noncommittal about his energy programs due next month. And how about the financial crisis overtaking Social Security. He has skirted specifics in talking about welfare reform and national health insurance.

These issues and more have to be threshed out between the new President and the 95th Congress. The outcome of any of Mr. Carter's programs should be based on their own merits, not on the "style" of the White House in which they were generated.

His presidency yet awaits judgment on what he proposes to do, and how he wants to do it.

Howdy, Congressman

A distinguished member of the United States House of Representatives — the Hon. Omar Burleson of Anson — is in Midland today on a speaking assignment.

Congressman Burleson, a member of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee, this morning addressed the annual convention of the West Texas County Judges and Commissioners Association in the Midland Hilton.

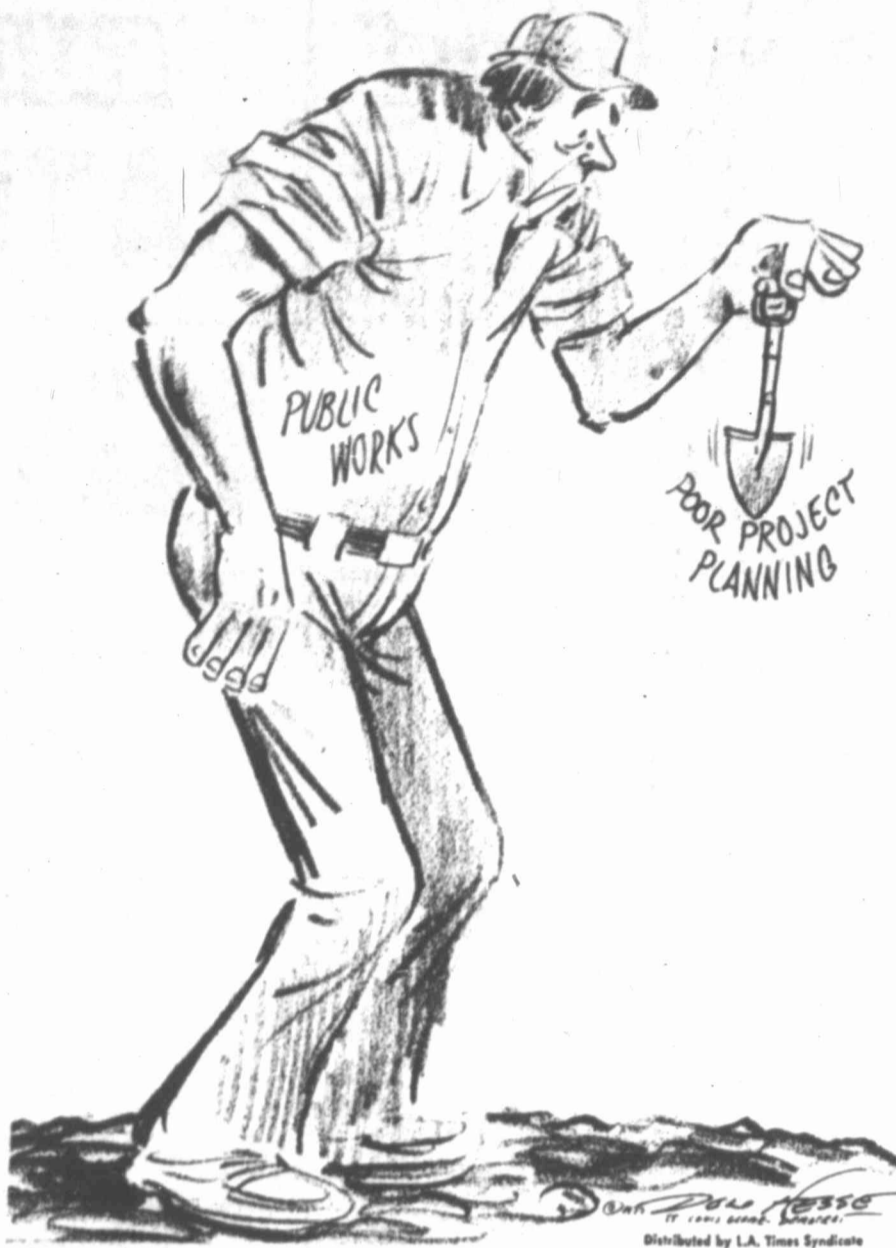

It is great to have the veteran congressman back in Midland on his first visit in a number of years. Back in the late 1930s and early 1940s, he was a more frequent visitor to Midland, while active in West Texas Lionism, serving as a district governor of Lions International, before going to Congress more than 30 years ago.

He is a popular and highly respected member of Congress, right in line with the high caliber of the Texas delegation.

A former county judge (Jones County) himself, Burleson undoubtedly feels right at home at the convention in session here. It is hoped that he also feels right at home in the Tall City.

Midlanders join with convention delegates in welcoming the esteemed member of Congress and in wishing him well always.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

U.S. halts Israeli arms sale

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — In the diplomatic backrooms along Embassy Row, the State Department has long been accused of "tilting" toward the Arab countries.

Now, the Pentagon has joined the chorus, charging that "anti-Israel bias" in the State Department has torpedoed an important sale of Israeli fighter planes to Latin America.

A bitter, confidential Pentagon briefing paper bluntly warns that the international repercussions will cause the United States to lose influence to the Soviet Union.

We have pieced together the details of the highly sensitive negotiations. The Israelis, trying to repair their wounded economy, arranged to sell 24 of their sophisticated Kfir fighter-bombers to Ecuador.

Because the Israeli planes contain American-made motors built by General Electric, however, the Jewish state needed U.S. approval to make the sale. But the Israelis repeatedly were assured that this would not be a problem. Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger twice discussed the sale with Israeli Defense Minister Shimon Peres and reportedly offered his encouragement, our sources said.

Yet after the Carter administration took office, the State Department, with President Carter's personal approval, promptly vetoed the sale. A spokesman said the deal "would run counter to our policy against the sale of advanced and sophisticated aircraft to Latin America."

The Pentagon briefing paper, which apparently included contributions from industry and Israeli sources, calls this decision "irrational." Such biting accusations rarely surface from the private battleground of executive in-fighting.

"The Soviet Union and France are certain to be the only beneficiaries" of the ban, the paper warns. Ecuador has already announced it will seek weapons from those countries. "If the Soviet Union concludes a sale to Ecuador, then it is likely that Soviet advisors and technicians will accompany Soviet aircraft. The Soviet Union is certain to turn any sale to Ecuador into a 'political victory'."

Ecuador has told the United States in not-so-diplomatic language that it considers the ban an "unfriendly gesture," and threatened to buy no more American equipment. Ecuadorian Ambassador Gustavo Ycaza has voiced his "strong concern" in private meetings with President Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

The Israelis are equally unhappy. The dispute has damaged Israel's credibility, tarnished its leaders and deprived it of $200 million in sales, the Pentagon brief says.

KNOW YOUR HEMISPHERE:

Some Latin Americans are jealous of Cuba

By WILLIAM GIANDONI Copley News Service

To some Latin Americans, it seems that the only nation in the hemisphere with which the United States wants better relations is Communist Cuba.

Most of the other countries are getting the impression that the United States feels it can offend them in word and deed with impunity.

Only Cuba seems to merit consideration. Cuba, the Communist dictatorship that confiscated an officially estimated $1.8 billion in U.S.-owned properties, Cuba, the Caribbean island on which the Soviet Union tried to install long-range missiles, Cuba, the police state that holds the Latin American record for human rights violations.

President Carter, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young and other presidential advisers speak out optimistically on resumption of relations with the regime of commander in chief Fidel Castro.

Yet, at the same time, U.S. spokesmen make a great show of cutting U.S. military credits to Argentina and slashing direct economic assistance to Uruguay because of their alleged human rights violations.

At the same time, the United States is trying to pressure Brazil into canceling its $4.8 billion order for West German reactors and technology for its nuclear electric power plants.

At the same time, the U.S. government is considering restrictions on more and more imports from Latin America.

Meanwhile, the United States still has not lifted the restrictions on trade with Venezuela and Ecuador that were imposed on the members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, even though the Latin nations did not take part in the Arab oil boycott.

In brief, from the Latin American point of view, about the only positive things said or done by the United States under the Carter administration have been those that favored the Castro dictatorship, the most outspokenly anti-Yanqui government in the hemisphere.

Mexico, Venezuela, the Dominican Republic, Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay, Bolivia and other countries that do not normally make much of an attempt to antagonize the United States find themselves menaced in one way or another by the United States.

What makes it all harder for Latin Americans to understand is that none of the actions the United States has taken or is talking about taking against their countries can be said really to benefit U.S. interests.

Limitations on import of leather shoes that Mexico, Brazil and other countries ship the United States will mean higher shoe prices for millions of U.S. consumers.

Restrictions on sugar and canned beef will be reflected in increased U.S. food costs.

What is more, the drop in Latin America's dollar earnings will mean the other American republics will have less to spend on U.S. goods. As the U.S. Department of Commerce pointed out recently, the deficit in Latin America trade with the United States was reduced considerably in 1974 because their purchasing power, that is their dollar earnings, declined.

Even the Carter administration's efforts to get Brazil to abandon plans to develop its own nuclear power industry with West German help seems to ignore U.S. interests. Brazil learned almost three years ago, in mid-1974, that the United States has run out of uranium enrichment capacity. Once Brazil decided that the U.S. government would not be a reliable supplier of enrichment services, it turned to West Germany, not only for the reactors it had intended to buy from the United States, but also for enrichment technology.

Brazil, like most other Latin countries, obviously wants to become as independent as possible of foreign sources of the fuels and other materials vital to its economy. Particularly when that supplier, the United States, shows friendly nations less consideration than its ideological enemies.

By LAVINA ROSS FOWLER

1. The modern inventions, which we enjoy so much and have come to think of as necessities, may have been discovered by man, but they are the handiwork of the Almighty. Cars, planes, vacuum cleaners, television, radio, are but a few things that make up the "abundant life." What was it that Jesus said about this? John 10:10
  2. Name the inventor of engines which were used in warfare. 2 Chron. 26:15
  3. Who is credited with inventing the harp? Genesis 4:21
  4. Who was the instructor "of every artificer in brass and iron"? Gen. 4:22
  5. To what learned man did Jesus say, "If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things?" John 3:9.

INSIDE REPORT:

The Central Intelligence Agency's first defector?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Evidence that ex-CIA agent Philip Agee has cooperated with the DGI, Cuba's Soviet-bossed intelligence service, was the unannounced cause for the highly unusual deportation order served on him last November by British Home Secretary Merlyn Rees.

That means Agee, far from being just another kiss-and-tell alumnus of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), is probably its first bona fide defector. Although there is no indication that cooperation started until after his resignation in 1969, Agee appears to be the first CIA official known to have cooperated with an adversary government.

For what it's worth, then, any untold secrets of CIA operations known by Agee are assumed to be known to Soviet intelligence via the Cuban connection.

Agee, author of the anti-CIA "Inside the Company," resigned after 12 years of service, much of it in Mexico City. Well-informed sources in the intelligence world believe Agee began to collaborate with Cuba's Directorate of General Intelligence (DGI) soon after his resignation.

The relationship between DGI and the KGB is intimate. The top Cuban KGB officer had an office right next to the head of the DGI in Havana's Miramar Section. The links between the two services are such that DGI has been known as a "subsidiary" intelligence service of the KGB.

During the three years ending in August 1974, Agee made five separate trips to Cuba. MI-5, the British domestic intelligence service, developed its incontrovertible evidence that Agee was trafficking with Cuban intelligence sometime last year. This followed verifiable Agee contacts with agents of Cuba in Algiers and throughout Europe, particularly in Spain and Italy. Although not announced, that was the entire basis for Rees's action against Agee.

A footnote: Instead of complying with the expulsion decree, Agee went to Scotland, where he is bringing suit under an obscure Scottish law in an effort to escape deportation. That is not expected to work, according to legal and intelligence experts here.

WARNKE'S LOBBYIST
One major reason the embarrassing 40-vote total against Senate confirmation of Paul Warnke as chief disarmament negotiator was not even higher was President Carter's lobbying success with Southern conservative Democrats such as Sen. James O. Eastland of Mississippi.

When pressed to oppose Warnke on ideological grounds, Eastland snapped back angrily that he had given his word to Mr. Carter. Besides, said Eastland, the President had assured him that Jimmy Carter, not Paul Warnke, would be running arms negotiations with the Soviet Union.

Other Southern Senators inclined against Warnke's views on disarmament but reluctant to oppose the new President included Robert Morgan of North Carolina, Russell Long and Bennett Johnston of Louisiana, John McClellan of Arkansas and Lloyd Bensten of Texas.

Nevertheless, 40 votes against Warnke amounted to a dismal administration performance, considering that only two weeks ago there were probably less than 10 negative votes. Mississippi's other Senator, chairman John Stennis of the Armed Services Committee, originally argued against his committee (which lacked jurisdiction) even holding hearings on Warnke; he ended up voting no.

A footnote: Two Southerners who decided their concern about Warnke outweighed loyalty to the President were from Mr. Carter's own state of Georgia, Herman Talmadge and Sam Nunn. Nunn's opposition generated talk among Carterites about trying to purge him in next year's Georgia Democratic primary, but neither the President nor his top political advisers want to go down that dreary road.

MCGOVERN ON RIGHTS
Sen. George S. McGovern, who seldom lowered his voice when denouncing violation of civil liberties in wartime South Vietnam, last week privately indicated concern over President Carter's public call for human rights in Communist Cuba.

At a Washington social gathering attended by several liberal politicians, McGovern expressed this view in conversation with a Cuban diplomat assigned to the United Nations. McGovern said he felt quiet diplomacy always accomplished more in moving foreign governments toward a liberal rights policy than noisy denunciations. Furthermore, he added, attacking a government with which the U.S. does not even maintain diplomatic relations seemed particularly inappropriate.

Considering his public denunciation of rightist regimes, this may seem a double standard. But it reflects the attitude of many liberal advocates of "human rights" who have always had far more criticism of right-wing regimes than of Communist states and who did not expect Mr. Carter's equal treatment of both forms of tyranny.

Even fairy tales too violent for some parents

By SYLVIA CARTER
Newsday

This is an age when many a parent won't let the children watch "S.W.A.T." on television but sees nothing wrong in the good old tried and true fairy tale. Not Boyle Gentry of Duke University, though. When he reads to his 5-year-old and his 2-year-old, he "sanitizes" as he goes along. And he thinks a lot of other parents would be wise to do the same.

He changes the tales because he believes that such words as "kill," "blood" or "hate," and the pictures that often accompany the stories, may be harmful to children.

One reason that "we may be so aggressive in this country," he said, "is because we grow up being exposed to a rich diet of aggression in fairy tales, television and our folk heroes—Jesse James, Bonnie and Clyde, John Wayne, Billy the Kid." Nurtured practically from the crib on this diet, he adds, it may not be any surprise that this is among the most aggressive nations in the world.

His study of traditional folktales was conducted several years ago, mostly because of his personal interest in the field. Normally, Gentry does research on psychological aspects of health matters.

The violence in the Grimm tales is portrayed in a romantic way, and it could have the same effect that cartoon violence is believed to have, Gentry says. He mentions, for instance, the wicked queen salting, cooking and eating an animal heart that she believed had been cut from Snow White. Among the other widely accepted tales that trouble the Duke psychologist are "Rumpelstiltskin," "Cinderella" and the "Frog Prince."

Of course it may not be quite so easy for the average parent to sanitize a story. Suppose

"Rumpelstiltskin" were cleaned up, for instance. The greedy king locks the girl in the tower and says: "Now spin. If you do not spin all this straw into gold by morning you will be laid off."

Gentry advises getting around this by dropping offensive lines, softening the language or, if necessary, merely avoiding those tales that teach the wrong values. In his study at Duke, Gentry defined aggression as "an act which is transitive in nature, one person doing something to another, which involves the delivery of insult, threat, pain, injury, death or destruction."

What he found was this: First, he started by picking a handful of Japanese, Indian and Grimm brothers fairy tales (while the Grimms were German, their stores are the most often read in the United States, Gentry notes). Six tales from each country were studied, and he found that there was at least one act of aggression in each of the Grimm and Indian tales studied and one in half of the Japanese ones.

But when he averaged out his findings, the totals were intriguing. In the typical Grimm tales that American children favor, there were roughly four aggressive acts per story; there were two in each Indian tale and an average of only one in the Japanese tales.

That numerical breakdown is by no means conclusive, he points out, but since Grimm's tales "do account for our country's exposure to fairy tales," Gentry says, more studies are needed to actually show whether or not they are harmful.

On the other side of the argument is the eminent therapist, Bruno Bettelheim, who puts it best in his recent book, "The Uses of Enchantment." He argues that fairy tales reflect "some aspect of our inner world" and can be useful in helping children grow through conflicts that are set a bit apart from themselves, in a never-never land.

"The Frog King," Bettelheim says, may be more helpful than modern sex education in its "understanding that the child may find sex disgusting and that this viewpoint has an important protective function for the child."

This, Gentry says, is the "traditional psychoanalytic viewpoint." Social psychologists like Gentry argue, on the other hand, that the child may actually pick up behavior patterns from such sources.

As his survey continued, Gentry says, he realized that it wasn't only the bad guys who were doing bad. Just as many aggressive acts were performed by the good guys. "We may be teaching that one way of resolving conflict is to strike out" at others, he says, because the stories suggest that "the odds are great that nothing will happen to you or that something good will ... I believe you can teach moral development without teaching violence as a conflict resolution."

Meanwhile, as a practicing psychologist, he's not buying any more for his own two children.

Ohio town to note Buzzard Sunday

The Washington Post

HINCKLEY, Ohio — At 43 seconds past nine minutes past 7 a.m. Tuesday, the Buzzards of Hinckley Ridge returned to this rural northern Ohio township sustaining a legend — and a public relations spectacular — that is expected to lure upward of 35,000 people to a pancakes and sausages bash on Sunday.

Buzzard Sunday, of course.

The first siting of three Wrinkly "pilot birds" up from their southern roosts was reported by Metropark Ranger Roger Lutz and promptly disseminated to the press as a 7:09 a.m. arrival.

To which ranger Gregory Orlosky added for historical accuracy: "... and 43 seconds."

The township of 4,500 rural folks 30 miles southwest of Akron has grown almost smug about the day of the ugly birds' annual return — March 15, without fail, as long as there has been buzzard watchers, which goes back more than a generation here. The only remaining suspense in these parts is over the hour, minute and second the big carrioneaters will arrive, after a winter of garbage-seavenging along the New Orleans docks, or so the story goes.

The story also goes that the birds settled on Hinckley township as their summer retreat during something called the "great varmint hunt" of Dec. 24, 1818, when the folks slaughtered hundreds of predatory animals.

away as Hawaii and Canada, about whether there will be a Buzzard Sunday," says Ruth Moell, who is the phone-answering service for the Hinckley Chamber of Commerce. ("We're too small to have an office," she apologizes.)

If the weather's right, says Mrs. Moell, maybe 35,000 will show up this year at the 1,800-acre Metropark where the buzzards will spend the summer. (Last year, the figure was estimated at 25,000 on a cold day.)

McFall named

ODESSA — Recently named chairman of the communication and theater department at Odessa College is Darylne McFall, speech instructor. Mrs. McFall, who has taught at the college since 1975, instructor. replaces Wally Jackson, who resigned from the position in the fall.

Supposedly, dozens of buzzards have been returning each year ever since.

The festivities are of more recent vintage and bestir thousands of people to jam up the country roads on Buzzard Sunday.

"We get so many inquiries, some from as far

How many buzzards will be there? The consensus is about 50 to 75. "Nobody," says Moell, "has ever seriously counted them."

Tokyo store provides French cuisine to funerals

The Los Angeles Times

TOKYO — Mitsukoshi, a department store that traces its origins back 300 years, traditionally has offered customers a lot more than just merchandise.

Its main store in the Nihonbashi section of Tokyo boasts 35 restaurants — specializing in everything from green tea to French cuisine — a legitimate theater, a movie house, a rooftop amusement center and major art exhibits.

Now Mitsukoshi has added a new feature — funerals.

"Since we provide baby clothes when a child is born and furnish a wedding hall and appropriate apparel for those who want to get married, we felt we should carry through to the very end by assuming responsibility for providing a proper funeral," said Jyu Tanabe, assistant manager.

The new service is located in what Mitsukoshi calls its "consultation section," behind kitchen equipment and kimonos on the fourth floor.

Mitsukoshi was preceded in the funeral business by the smaller Matsuya department store and its executives confess they finally made the decision with reservations.

"Some officials thought that connecting the store with death would bring only bad luck and bad public relations, but the idea of caring for the customer and the example of Matsuya prevailed," said Hideo Shioda of Mitsukoshi's public relations department.

The entry in the funeral business by Mitsukoshi, the largest ($1.4 billion in sales for 14 outlets), oldest and most respected department store, was viewed as evidence of a new social phenomenon in Tokyo — a growing social rootlessness.

Families that have lived in Tokyo for generations tend to use undertakers who have served the family for generations, Shioda said. But for the masses of postwar newcomers, the growing impersonal atmosphere of high-rise apartments and urban living has made the neighborhood mortician a phenomenon of the past.

"Instead of thumbing through a telephone directory looking at lists of numbers of unknown morticians, wondering whether they are reliable and how much they will charge, it is easier for these people to dial the number of Mitsukoshi, a name they all know," Shioda said.

With the Mitsukoshi name standing in back of the service, they know they can count on quality, he said.

Fees range from a budget $500 to a grandiose $21,000 service, but Mitsukoshi itself gets nothing — at least not directly. The fee goes to Teito Tenrei, a large mortuary firm that provides the service for Mitsukoshi.

The department store, Shioda said, gets only goodwill.

"We want our customers to feel themselves a part of the Mitsukoshi family," he said.

Teito is on call around the clock. One of its representatives will help a family lay out a body in the most preferred manner, on dry ice in a casket, for the funeral. Another Teito man goes to a ward office to register the death and receive a permit to cremate the body after the service.

designated Shinto, Buddhist or Christian sect to get a priest or minister to conduct the service. Although 75 percent of Japanese families profess to believe in no religion, most have Buddhist services by tradition.

Teito also arranges for cremation and will help a family find a cemetery lot into which the ashes and bones of the deceased eventually will be placed in a marble container.

Burial, even with cremation, is a problem for many newcomers, Teito consultants said. Within Tokyo, an average of five families apply for every family cemetery lot sold. Problems assume larger proportions for families wishing to have a body buried without cremation. Most cemeteries do not have the space to bury a coffin and only one hospital in Tokyo is licensed to embalm.

Funerals are usually held at home but mortuary halls are used for ceremonies attended by hundreds of variance in prices is related to the number of mourners and the number of priests — sometimes as many as six at a cost of about $600 — who are called upon to officiate at the funeral.

Midland educators selected

Two Midland educators have been selected to participate in a school administrator training program to increase the number of certified minority ethnic group administrators.

Hector Valdes Jr., a teacher at West Elementary School, and Ricardo Torres, a counselor at Midland High School were chosen by a statewide selection committee to participate in the program, conducted by the Texas Center for the Development of Human Resources at Stephen F. Austin State University.

They will receive a $1,000 stipend and will enroll in a graduate program at the university from June 1977 to August 1978. They will receive temporary administrator certification.

Idaho State stuns UCLA in 76-75 upset

By The Associated Press

"This has got to be the greatest win ever," said Idaho State Coach Jim Killingsworth. "We never even played a No. 2 team before."

The Bengals got their chance Thursday night and made the most of it, beating second-ranked UCLA 76-75 in a stunning upset and advancing to the regional finals of the NCAA college basketball tournament.

Seven-foot center Steve Hayes scored 27 points and Ernie Wheeler hit four free throws—his only points of the game—in the final 37 seconds, giving Big Sky champion Idaho State perhaps its greatest basketball victory ever. The Bengals sank 18 of 21 free throw attempts in the second half.

"We hit our shots from the line when we needed to," said Killingsworth. "That's what you have to do to win a game like this."

IN OTHER ACTION as the field dwindled to eight, top-ranked Michigan beat No. 12 Detroit 86-81. No. 3 Kentucky dropped No. 20 VMI 93-78. No. 4 Nevada-Las Vegas downed No. 14 Utah 88-83. No. 5 North Carolina shaded No. 10 Notre Dame 79-77. No. 17 North Carolina-Charlotte shocked No. 6 Syracuse 81-59. No. 7 Marquette edged No. 16 Kansas State 67-66, and No. 9 Wake Forest eliminated Southern Illinois 86-81.

That left six of the nation's top 10 teams still alive, three North Carolina schools among the final eight and both UNC-Charlotte and Idaho State as this year's Cinderella teams.

The pairings for Saturday's regional finals:

—EAST—Kentucky, 26-3, vs North Carolina, 26-4, at College Park, Md.

—WEST—Nevada-Las Vegas, 27-2, vs. Idaho State, 25-4, at Provo, Utah.

—MIDEAST—Michigan, 26-3, vs. North Carolina-Charlotte, 27-3, at Lexington, Ky.

—MIDWEST—Marquette, 22-7, vs. Wake Forest, 22-7, at Oklahoma City.

The four winners advance to the national semifinals March 26 at Atlanta. The final will be March 28.

IDAHO STATE built a 71-63 lead with 2:08 remaining before UCLA, 22-7, stormed back. Wheeler's first two free throws put the Bengals ahead by five points with 37 seconds left, but the Bruins quickly closed within one point with nine seconds left. Then Wheeler hit two more foul shots, assuring Idaho State of the victory.

"He's just a freshman and doesn't worry too much," said Killingsworth of Wheeler. "Maybe when he's a senior he'll miss some of those."

"It's history, we lost," said UCLA

Coach Gene Bartow. "One good team just beat another good team tonight. There's no room for error when you get down to the final 16."

Marques Johnson scored 21 points and David Greenwood 20 for the Bruins.

Robert Smith scored 21 points and converted four free throws in the final minutes, leading Nevada-Las Vegas past Utah, 22-7. Smith, who scored 13 points in the second half, was one of five Rebels in double figures. Jeff Judkins paced Utah with 23 points.

IN THE EAST, All-American guard Phil Ford sank two free throws with just two seconds left, lifting the Tar Heels past No. 10 Notre Dame. The Irish led by 14 points early in the second half, but a rash of turnovers enabled North Carolina to rally. Ford injured his elbow with 1:16 to play but stayed in the game.

"He didn't think he could extend the elbow on foul shots," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, "but we decided to leave him in and he made four foul shots after that."

Ford got eight of his team's last 10 points, including the decisive free throws, and finished with 29 points. Toby Knight scored 22 points for Notre Dame, 22-7.

Houston gains finals in NIT

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Satalin had "Gardenitis"—that nervous affliction that has fogged the minds of many basketball coaches at Madison Square Garden.

"I almost blew it because I wasn't smart," said the St. Bonaventure coach.

Luckily, he had some clever players to make up for his coaching mistakes Thursday night, and the Bonnies moved into Sunday's final of the National Invitation Tournament with an 86-82 victory over Villanova. They will meet Houston, an 82-76 winner over Alabama in Thursday's night's other semifinal game.

Satalin particularly faulted himself for the foul trouble of his two leading scorers, Essie Hollis and Greg Sanders. They each collected a third foul before the first half and had to sit out some crucial moments before and after intermission.

Glenn Hagan came to Satalin's rescue. Usually the Bonnies' playmaker, he turned into their top scorer with 26 points, including 22 in the second half.

When Hollis and Sanders did get back into the game, the Bonnies went into a zone defense "to protect them," Satalin said. They managed to get plenty of mileage from their brilliant forwards with this play, Sanders finishing with 20 points and seven rebounds and Hollis with 16 points and 10 rebounds.

The Bonnies played smart, tough basketball.

"We were able to keep them off the boards," said Satalin, "and we also forced them to take a lot of outside shots. That was the key to the game."

"The Bonnies are a very deceiving ball club," said Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino. "They have a lot of talent, and they're well coached. Anybody who thinks they're not good is crazy."

Houston became the first team from the Southwest conference to gain the final in the 40th year of the NIT. The Cougars did it with the help of Otis Birdsong, who scored 18 points and hit the go-ahead basket with 1:45 left.

"I didn't think we ran a good offense in the first half," said Houston Coach Guy Lewis. "We took bad shots. We had no penetration, we couldn't get inside. But we straightened things out after intermission."

Houston trailed 40-39 at halftime before putting things together behind Birdsong and Charles Thompson.

Play ready in bowling tourney

The second weekend of action in the 45th annual Texas State Bowling Association Tournament will kick off Saturday at 2 p.m. at Super Bowl in Midland and Busby's Lanes in Odessa.

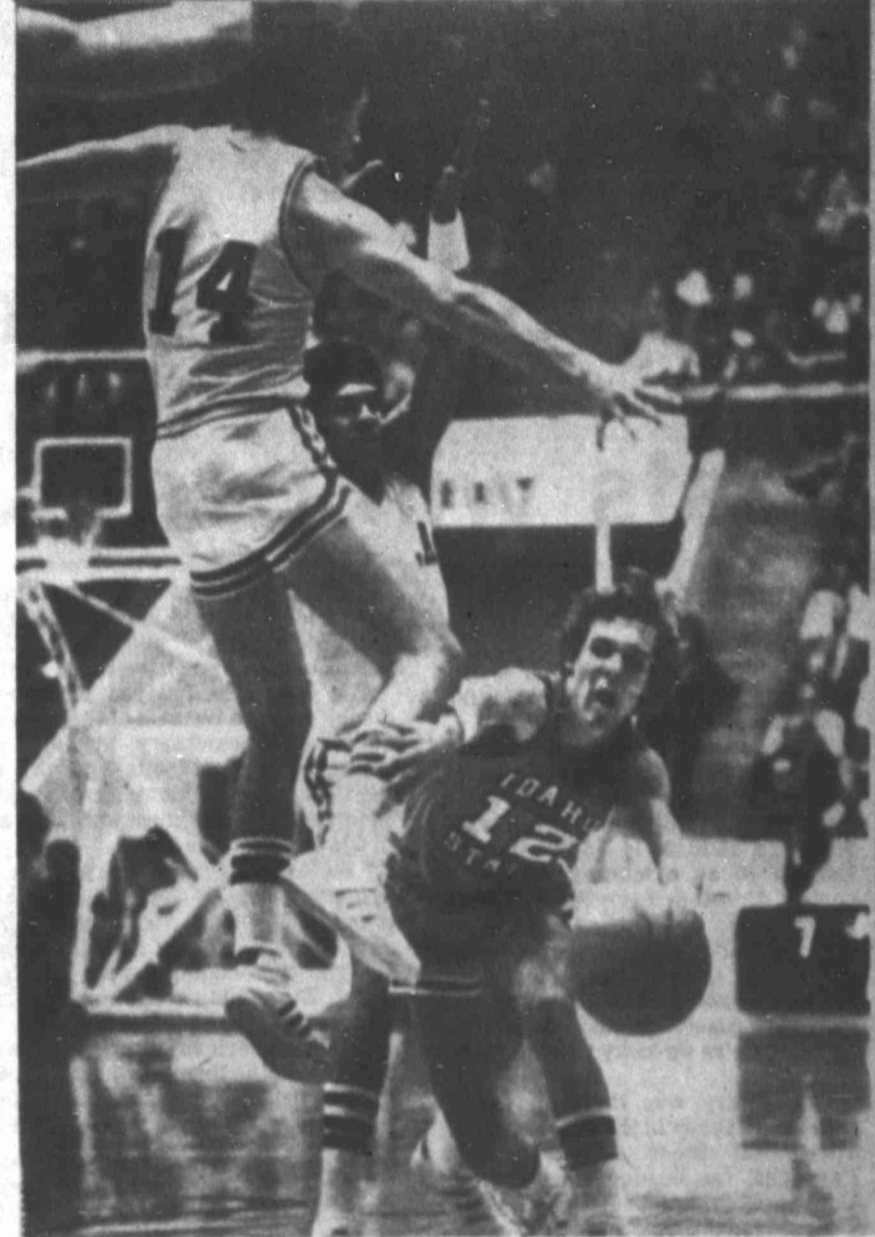

The Super Bowl is hosting the team competition during the 13-weekend event which concludes June 5, while Busby's is the site of all singles and doubles action.

There will be three shifts of bowlers in action Saturday. The first competitors will begin at 2, with more to follow at 5 and 8 p.m.

There will be more bowling Sunday, with competition commencing at 9 a.m.

Sixty teams will be bowling at Super Bowl on Saturday, while 22 more will round out the weekend affair Sunday.

After one weekend of play, The Winner of Midland are leading the Class A team competition with a 2697 total.

Ernie Wheeler (12) of Idaho State, dribbles past UCLA's Brad Holland (14) as the Bruins put on the press during Western NCAA Regional semifinals in Provo, Utah Thursday night.

Cincy rookie is impressive in 10-1 romp

By The Associated Press

For those of you waiting for the Cincinnati Reds to fall apart after losing Don Gullett, Tony Perez and Will McEaney from last year's world championship team, Manager Sparky Anderson has some bad news.

"I've got news for you, men," Anderson said to a group of reporters Thursday after the Reds bombed the Houston Astros 10-1 in an exhibition game. "That guy in centerfield is going to be some player."

The guy in centerfield is Steve Henderson, and he had just continued his hot spring hitting with two home runs. He had appreciable help from a couple of other new players—first baseman Dave Revering, who belted a grand slam homer, and pitcher Paul Moskau, who allowed three hits and one run in four strong innings. Just to keep things in perspective, two-time National League Most Valuable Player Joe Morgan also homered.

The 24-year-old Henderson, who hit .312 in the Eastern League last year, leads the Reds with three home runs in six games, but he concedes there is little chance he will make the club this year.

Even if he did, he says he would "probably ask them to send me down. I want to play every day, not sit on the bench. I've got a while to wait. When they bring me up, I want to be ready."

Moskau, a teammate of Henderson's in the minors, is one of his biggest boosters.

"I've never seen anyone in minor league ball who works as hard as Steve. He can carry a ball club," Moskau said.

Revering probably will be a pinch hitter and backup to first baseman Dan Driessen after a 27-homer season in the American Association. That is all right with him.

"Anyone who says he'd rather play regularly in the minors than pinch hit in the major leagues is not telling the truth," he said.

Meanwhile, Dave Kingman hit his third spring homer as the New York Mets beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-2. The Los Angeles Dodgers used a tiebreaking two-run single by Manny Mota in beating the New York Yankees 5-2.

Dane Iorg's pinch grand slam homer powered the Philadelphia Phillies over the Toronto Blue Jays 12-6. Baltimore's Ross Grimsley and Kansas City's Jim Colborn duelled through five scoreless innings before

Canada's Patty Olson attempts a spike against the United States' Diane McCormick (4) and Flo Hymen (7) in Thursday night's volleyball action at

U.S. volleyball team posts win over Canada

By PAUL DOMOWITZ

They say the mark of a good team is being able to win when you're not playing well. Arie Selinger would like to think that's true.

Thursday night, Selinger's United States women's volleyball team played something less than spectacularly, and still managed to earn a 3-15, 9-15, 15-10, 16-14, 15-12 win over Canada in an exhibition volleyball contest at the Lee High School gymnasium.

"This was the worst game we've played in this entire series with Canada," explained Selinger, the 39-year-old coach of the American squad. "We're we lucky we won. Very lucky."

The victory was the American's fifth over Canada in the past ten days. They beat them twice in both Pasadena, the headquarters for the U.S. women, and Dallas, before Thursday night's success.

If the United States volleyballers played poorly, you certainly couldn't prove it by the 2,700 fans who turned out in force for the contest. Watching the finest brand of volleyball they have ever witnessed in the Tall City, they continually applauded the performance down on the Rebel floor.

The Americans played in spurts during the first two sets of the match, and their momentary displays of brilliance weren't quite enough, as the Canadians shut down America's 6-5 superstar, Flo Hymen, and went on to win those sets, 15-9, 15-9.

"We started out very nice," Selinger said as he dissected his team's showing. "We moved very well in the beginning, but suddenly, we got a breakdown and just fell apart. Everything became individual and disorganized."

But the Americans managed to pull together in the third set, jumping out to a quick 5-0 lead, and coasting through for a 15-10 win to keep them in the match.

They started out strong in the next set as well, moving ahead again, 5-0, but the Canadians battled back and finally took a 10-9 lead. The Canadians actually had the U.S. on the ropes in that set, as they led 14-13 and were serving for the match, but the Americans rallied, and squeaked out a 16-14 win to force a fifth set.

The crowd had been screaming for Hymen to do her thing all evening long, and finally, in the fifth set, she gave them their money's worth.

Canada had managed rather successfully to bottle up the 6-5 Californian through most of the match, blocking 90 per cent of the spikes that came winging off her hands at 100 plus miles per hour. But not in that last set. Her spikes began to find the floor, and the U.S. rode them to a gameclinch 15-12 win.

After the contest, Selinger indicated what direction the American volleyball program is heading now, with the full-time training program in Pasadena.

"A year ago, Canada beat us badly, 3-0. We couldn't stay in the game with them. Now, a year later, we play poorly like tonight, and still manage to win."

The teams will climax their two-night Tall City stand today, when they meet again in the Lee gym at 7:30 p.m.

UCLA loss big upset in NCAA

THE KENTUCKY-VMI game was far less complicated. The Wildcats broke it open midway through the second half with a 14-3 streak and VMI, despite 28 points by Ron Carter, never got even. Sophomore Truman Clayton, averaging 5.8 points per game, came off the bench and poured in 29—hitting 13 of 15 shots from the floor—and Jack Givens added 26 for the Wildcats.

"I never remember having a game like this," said Clayton. "Not in college, not in high school, junior high school or even practice."

In the Midwest, Michigan pulled away from stubborn Detroit with seven straight points and went ahead 75-68 with about eight minutes left. The Titans got within three with 3:35 left, but John Robinson hit two layups and the Wolverines were in. Robinson finished with 25 points and Phil Hubbard had 22 for the winners, while John Long netted 25 for Detroit, 25-3.

"They are a basketball team that knows how to win," said Detroit Coach Dick Vitale, predicting that Michigan would win the tournament.

UNC-Charlotte wasted little time in taking command against Syracuse, 26-4. The 49ers raced to a 32-14 lead with about five minutes to play in the first half and the Orangemen, last of the seven Eastern schools in the tourney, never recovered. Cedric Maxwell led UNC-Charlotte with 19 points.

"The total game was just a picture-perfect game from our standpoint," said 49ers Coach Lee Rose. "Perhaps Syracuse was looking ahead to Michigan."

IN THE MIDWEST, Marquette trailed most of the way before Butch Lee sank a jump shot, putting the Warriors ahead for good 60-58. Lee hit a layup in the final minute that stood up as the winning basket. Lee finished with 26 points for Marquette while Larry Dassie led Kansas State, 23-8, with 18.

Still, Warriors' Coach Al McGuire, who retires after the season, was unhappy. McGuire was hit with a technical foul while he was shouting instructions to his team.

"This is why I'm getting out of the NCAA," said McGuire. "Every time I come to the NCAA it's the same thing." He added that he thinks the officials had been "brainwashed in some smoke-filled room somewhere."

Skip Brown scored 25 points and Rod Griffin and Jerry Schellenberg had 22 each in Wake Forest's victory over Southern Illinois, 22-6. The Deacons had a one-point lead with 3:15 left and went into a stall. The Salukis were forced to start fouling and Brown sank seven free throws down the stretch, clinching it for Wake Forest.

Bulldogs, Rebs play twin bills

Midland High's Bulldogs and the Robert E. Lee Rebels play at home Saturday, taking on a pair of Class AAA outfits in baseball doubleheaders.

The Bulldogs, with a 2-8 record, face the Lamesa Golden Tornadoes at 1 p.m. at the Memorial Stadium diamond while at the same time, the Rebels try the Andrews Mustangs at the Lee diamond in twin bills.

Lee sports an 8-4 record and has blown hot and cold in pre-district play, but Saturday's action will be the final games before District 5-4A warfare opens on Tuesday.

The Rebels open 5-4A play Tuesday at home against the Odessa Bronchos while Midland travels to Odessa for a game with the Permian Panthers.

Midland Coach Larry Peel will throw Kevin Widner in the opener against the 'Tors and will call upon either Larry Murphy or Kevin Minton in the second game.

ERNE JOHNSON, Lee coach, is undecided who his two starters on the mound will be against Andrews Saturday. His Rebels have hit the ball well at times, but the pitching staff is still questionable. It gave up 36 runs in four games over the weekend in the Tournament of Champions at Cubs Stadium. Leading the hit parade for Lee are Craig Van Horn, Todd Clements and Mike Richard. Van Horn is hitting the ball at a .500 clip while Clements owns a .468 average and Richard is hitting .406. All three are juniors, making the future look promising.

Kevin Widner and Murphy are the top hitters for the Purple Pack. Widner is hitting .333 and Murphy is hitting .313.

Midland is currently on a seven-game losing streak and would like nothing better than to win two from Lamesa on Saturday in order to get some momentum going into loop play.

In games Thursday in the Monahans Tournament, Odessa Permian blanked Seminole, 10-0, to bring its season record to 5-3 while Odessa High lost to Lubbock, 6-2. The Bronchos are now 7-4 on the year with the loss.

ABILENE'S EAGLES are 7-0 on the year and face Temple in a three-game series this weekend starting with a single game today and a doubleheader on Saturday.

Abilene Cooper (6-3), has a game with Lubbock Monterey today while Big Spring (6-1), faces Monterey in a twin bill in Lubbock Saturday.

San Angelo Central, defending district champion, opens defense of the Del Rio Tourney today, facing the Del Rio junior varsity in the opening round.

Rockets gain NBA playoffs with win

By The Associated Press

Nuggets 115-107, and the topped the Golden State Portland Trail Blazers Warriors 115-106.

The Houston Rockets have won nine games in a row, something no other National Basketball Association team has done this season. They have collected a team record 42 victories, lost just four of their last 19 games, and do not seem interested in having their fortunes change.

They are headed for the NBA playoffs, since Thursday night's 88-87 triumph over the Cleveland Cavaliers gave Houston a three-game lead over the San Antonio Spurs in the Central Division.

Moses Malone collected 15 points and 24 rebounds for Houston, Kevin Kunnert had 18 points, and Rudy Tomjanovich led the Rockets with 23 points.

In other NBA games Thursday night, the Kansas City Kings downed the Buffalo Braves 125-104, the Milwaukee Bucks beat the Boston Celtics 100-91, the New York Knicks downed the Denver

McCullough leading TPC Golf

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)—The significance of his effort was not lost on Mike McCullough.

One of the longest of the long shots in perhaps the finest field of the year, McCullough had just fired a six-under-par 66 for the first-round lead—the first lead of his life—in the $300,000 Tournament Players Golf Championship.

"This is a very important day in my life," said McCullough, a one-time school teacher. He paused, obviously searching for a comparison.

"The day I married my wife was a very important day in my life, too."

McCullough, a Bowling Green University graduate, had to make three tries before he got through the PGA qualifying school and gained his playing rights on the tour in 1972. His career hasn't produced a victory, even a lead.

"Maybe I'm a late-bloomer," he grinned. Whatever the reason, he played a very solid round in the winds that swept over tough Sawgrass, 7,174 yards of reclaimed swamp and marsh that turned the best of the game's professionals into dedicated scramblers.

McCullough missed only four greens and saved par on three of them. And he played late Thursday afternoon when the winds off the Atlantic were at their strongest. Masters champ Ray Floyd, on the other hand, said he played extremely well, but had to one-putt 13 times for a 68 and a share of second in this event that ranks as the annual championship of the touring players.

"I hit some fantastic golf shots," Floyd said. "But on this golf course, a fantastic shot can bring you a bogey."

"You cannot play textbook golf—down the fairway, on the green, two putts. You have to expect to miss a lot of greens. To score, you're going to have to scramble."

Tom Watson, who, along with Don Bies, shared the No. 2 spot, agreed.

"I figured I was lucky to get in without getting in the really bad stuff, down there with the snakes and alligators," said Watson, a two-time winner already this season. (Despite his disclaimer, he did find one snake in the middle of a fairway.) "It's a course you have to scramble on."

One shot back of them at 69 were newcomers Bill Kratzert and Ed Sabo, Australian veteran Bruce Devlin, who had an eagle three on the final hole, and J.C. Snead, twice a runner-up to Jack Nicklaus in this tournament.

Nicklaus shot a 73, but most of the game's top attractions were even further back. Bruce Lietzke, a two-time winner this year, and Tom Weiskopf were at 75, one shot higher than Gary Player.

Johnny Miller had to rally to salvage a 77, and that was one stroke better than Arnold Palmer and PGA champ Dave Stockton. Ben Crenshaw shot an embarrassing 79.

Hubert Green got in with a 71, and Hale Irwin matched par 72.

McCullough, one of the last men on the course, surged into the lead with birdie putts of 20 and 8 feet on his last two holes.

"Just a fun day," he said. "We didn't have much gallery out there. Everybody was off watching somebody else and nobody knew what was going on. It was just like playing a round with your friends."

Midland College's Brad Swendig

Swendig to swim in Moscow

Brad Swendig, a member of the Midland College and City of Midland swim teams will travel to Russia next week to participate in an invitational meet in Moscow.

Swendig earned the right to participate in the European competition last year at the long course nationals, when he placed ninth in his backstroke event.

He will be one of the 11-member contingent of swimmers that the Russians have invited, and the group will stay in the country eight days. Swendig will depart from Dallas on Monday morning, March 21, and will arrive in Moscow a day later via New York City, and Frankfurt.

Swendig will leave Midland today with his Midland College teammates and travel to Austin to participate in a national qualifying meet in Austin.

He will return to the Tall City on March 30.

Central Michigan drops two games

WACO, Tex. (AP) — Baylor ripped 24 hits and got a two-hit pitching performance from Shane Nolen in the second game as the Bears swept a college baseball doubleheader from Central Michigan, 7-3 and 16-3.

In the first game, Baylor got solo homers from Fritz Connally and Luke Prestridge and Leonard Woods capped the scoring with a two-run homer.

Top team is upset in tourney

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (AP) — What a way for the nation's No. 1 junior college basketball team to see its 49-game winning streak snapped — beaten by the opposition's bench.

It happened Thursday night to Southern Idaho. The Golden Eagles, the top juco cage team in the United States the past two years and the defending champion of the National Junior College Tournament, were ambushed by Independence, Kan., 74-66.

Independence, given little chance in the pre-tourney predictions, was led by its reserves, who outscored the starters, 39-35. In other quarterfinal contests, San Jacinto vaulted past Farmingdale, N.Y., 85-68, and Lawson State of Alabama whipped Pensacola, Fla., 113-104.

Thursday's consolation games saw Mercer County of New Jersey, whip Shelby State of Tennessee, 73-61, Lincoln Trail III, beat Mineral Area of Missouri, 75-70, and Westark of Arkansas whip Normandale of Minnesota, 76-69.

In semifinal action tonight, Ellsworth of Iowa meets San Jacinto and Independence goes against Lawson State.

In consolation bracket action, Lincoln Trail meets Westark, Sheridan, Wyo., goes against Farmingdale and Southern Idaho tries to regroup against Pensacola.

Ollie Mack put in 24 points for San Jacinto, while Farmingdale's Reggie Parker hit 23.

Young in upset boxing victory over Foreman

SAN JUAN, P.R. (AP) — George Foreman, whose brute power has carried him to 42 knockouts, was in a hospital today, a victim of exhaustion, frustration and Jimmy Young.

In a major upset, Young, who lives in the ring by finesse rather than the big punch, escaped trouble in the seventh round, knocked Foreman down in the 12th and won a unanimous decision Thursday night.

"It was do or die," said a jubilant Young, in a talkative mood over the victory that put him in a solid position in the heavyweight division, where most of boxing's gold and glory can be found.

"No comment Howard," Foreman told ABC sportscaster Howard Cosell from the ring after the stunning loss that severely hurt his hopes for a rematch with champion Muhammad Ali, who also used finesse and frustration to wrest the title from big George with an eighth-round knockout in 1974.

About 45 minutes later, Foreman's brother appeared at the post-fight interview area and told reporters that George would not be there. A short time later, Foreman was carried from his dressing room on a stretcher and taken by ambulance to a hospital.

Gil Clancy, one of Foreman's trainers, said that the former champion was suffering from heat and exhaustion and that he was okay. Promoter Don King said he felt that it was more frustration than anything.

But a spokesman for Presbyterian Hospital said Foreman was admitted to the intensive care unit. He would make no further comment.

The victory puts Young in line for a rematch with Ali, to whom he lost a disputed 15-round decision last year.

But while Ray Kelly, a young co-manager shouted, "we want Ali," Don King, who promoted the upset, was talking about matching Young against the winner of the Ken Norton-Duane Bobick bout in this Caribbean capital. Norton and Bobick will fight in New York's Madison Square Garden May 11. As for Foreman, King was talking about getting him back in action as soon as possible, but it won't be against Ali, at least not in the near future.

"I'm not going to say anything negative about George Foreman," Young said. "He's a good fighter and he can hit. Make no mistake about it."

But power wasn't enough. "He didn't throw enough punches," said Sid Martin. "That was the difference."

In the early rounds, Foreman seemed content just to move forward while concentrating more on rough tactics than on punching. He would rest his forearm on Young's neck, hold the Philadelphian behind the neck and push him. Foreman was so rough in the third round, that referee Waldemar Schmidt of Puerto Rico penalized him a point for unnecessary roughness.

In the fourth and fifth rounds, Foreman increased the pressure and it seemed as if he might be ready to take charge.

Before the fight, Young had said that people would know after five rounds who was going to win the fight. They didn't but an indication came two rounds later.

"I got hurt real bad in the fifth round, I think," Young said. "I didn't think I'd make it all the way."

When it was pointed out that it was the seventh round in which he was deep in trouble, Young said, "I can't remember."

With the seventh round only about 15 seconds old, Foreman hurt Young with a thudding left hook to the jaw. Young reeled across the ring and for almost two minutes Foreman pounded after him. But he couldn't land a knockdown punch.

Young finally got his head cleared and in the final minutes dominated action with one-two to the head as a crowd of 10,000 in the Roberto Clemente Coliseum roared: "Jim-ee Young, Jim-ee Young."

Powerful Trinity netters post wins

HOUSTON (AP) — 1 seed.

Trinity University tennis coach Bob McKinley has a delightful dilemma—three No. 1 players on his team and he has to decide almost daily who's going to play the No. 1 position.

His current No. 1 is freshman Tony Giammalva, formerly of Houston, who advanced through the first two rounds Thursday of the 19th annual Rice Invitational Tennis Tournament to protect his No.

"I guess you'd say we have a rotating lineup," said McKinley. "Tony has played No. 1 in a lot of the big matches. He is an aggressive player and I have a theory that you have to be aggressive in the big matches. He does very well and isn't tentative."

Gottfried, the No. 1 ranked junior in the nation, and freshman Ben McKown, a former No. 6 ranked junior. Erick Iskersky is Trinity's No. 4 player.

McKown, seeded second in the Rice tournament, Gottfried, seeded fourth, and Iskersky, placed 14th, all advanced through Thursday's first two rounds of play.

Third seeded Jai DiLouie of Southern Methodist, and the fifth through eighth seeds Gary Plock, Texas, Rob Hubbard, Pan American, Danny Valenticic, Houston and Fernando Maynetto, Clemson also advanced through the first two rounds.

Two more rounds of singles are scheduled today with semifinals set for Saturday and the championship singles and doubles matches on Sunday.

Trinity, which finished fourth in the NCAA national tournament last year, is the defending champion in the Rice tournament and heavy favorite to repeat.

Giammalva, son of former Rice tennis coach Sammy Giammalva, was not in top form Thursday when he finally disposed of Rice's Brice Alexander 6-3, 6-4 in his first round match. Giammalva beat Lamar's David Eckley 6-2, 6-0 in the second round.

Federal judge strikes out Oakland's Finley

CHICAGO (AP) — A strikeout pitch from a federal judge hasn't taken the starch out of Charlie Finley. The feisty Oakland A's owner is making fighting noises again as he warms up for the next inning.

"We've lost the battle, but we haven't lost the war," Finley said Thursday night in declaring he would appeal within two weeks the loss of his lawsuit against Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

"I'll never forget this St. Patrick's Day. It's been the most miserable of my life. But, as the old saying goes, there'll be another day," he said.

"It makes me think of the old adage: 'If you want to see the sun shine, you have to weather the storm.' And it's been stormy for me lately. But you have to hang in there."

The latest cloudburst soaked Finley Thursday when U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. McGarr ruled Kuhn had great powers, including the authority to void Finley's sales last June 15 of three stars.

THE COLORFUL boss of the newlook A's said he was disappointed by the decision of McGarr, who professed no love for baseball. But Finley flashed signs of optimism.

"In the front of every pawnshop throughout the country there's three brass balls hanging over the sidewalk in front of the store. You know what those balls stand for? They mean we buy, we sell and we trade. And that's the way that this ballclub won three world championships and five consecutive division titles and we're going to do it again."

Finley said McGarr's ruling will not affect the way he runs the A's and if Kuhn tries to block another of his transactions he'll take the commissioner back to court.

But next time, Kuhn could be armed with a copy of McGarr's decision.

The judge said Finley's $3.5 million suit came down to a single issue: Did Kuhn have the power to void deals which he felt were not in baseball's best interests. McGarr's answer was "yes."

Whether Kuhn was right in deciding that the sales were not in the best interests of baseball had no bearing on

Boxing meet is scheduled

ANDREWS — Teams from Midland, Pecos, Odessa, Roby, Coleman, Rankin, Ozona, Crane and Jal, N.M., will compete in the Andrews Boys Club boxing tournament March 25 and 26.

Trophies will be given for first and second place, best fighter and sportsmanship, according to Leroy Felder, tournament director.

All entries must be in by 8 p.m. March 23. Boxers to age 14 will compete in 60-65, 66-70, 71-75, 76-80, 81-85, 89-90, 91-95, 96-100 and 101-105 weight divisions. Boxers to age 17 will compete in 106-110; 111-115, 116-120; 121-125; 126-130; 131-135; 136-140, 141-145, 146-150; 151-155, 156-160, 161-165 weight divisions.

the case, said McGarr.

It was a legal confrontation, not a hot-stove debate over what the attempted sales of Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers to Boston for a million dollars each and Vida Blue to the New York Yankees for $1.5 million would mean for the national pastime.

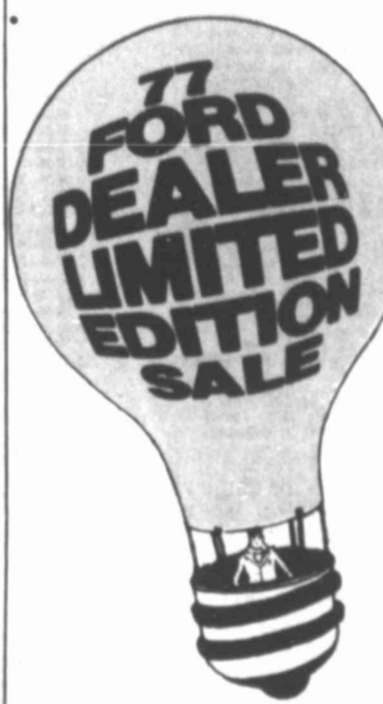

McGARR said baseball's owners themselves gave Kuhn the power to block actions which he considers to be not in the best interests of the game. He noted that the "questionable wisdom of this broad delegation of power is not before the courts."

But it was a prime topic for Finley, who said, "A man can't have this kind of power, no way. The man thinks he's God."

Kuhn was "obviously pleased" by the ruling which found no ill will or capriciousness on his part.

"I've said right along that there really was more at stake here than a hassle between Charlie Finley and Bowie Kuhn," the commissioner said. "What is more important is the fact that the court upheld the commissioner's authority to do what he thinks is right for baseball."

Rudi and Fingers played out their options last season and then signed with California and San Diego, respectively. Blue is with the A's on a contract that runs through 1979. Finley said he doesn't plan to sell Blue, but added that he would for the right offer and would use the money to improve the A's. Montreal reportedly offered a large amount of money for the ace left-handed pitcher.

'Shield Head' opens at MCT

Midland Community Theatre raises the curtain on the second production of its new season at 8 p.m. today.

The production is "Shield Head," a new play from Iceland which is being given its American premiere here. The comedy had English-language performances in Dublin and Dundalk, Ireland, last year.

Jonas Arnason, author of "Shield

Head," arrived in the city Wednesday afternoon from his home in Reykjavik, Iceland, to attend tonight's opening performance at Theatre Centre. He and his wife will be honor guests at a post-theater supper and reception in the Midland Petroleum Club afterward.

"Shield Head," staged and directed by MCT's Art Cole, has a cast made up of Jim Sainers, Charles Dixon, Coila Morrow, Randy Hicks, Jesse Grimes and Rhonda Hicks. Allen Hitchcock is stage-managing the production.

Following its opening tonight the comedy will have performances at 8:30 p.m. Saturday and 2:30 p.m. Sunday, and additional presentations on March 24, 25, 26 and 27, and April 1 and 2. Seat reservations may be made through the box office, 682-2544.

More long comedies in works

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Novels as mini-series were the rage in TV this season. Next season, it may be situation comedy in 60-minute form, augmenting the usual half-hour economy size, with ABC leading the charge.

ABC currently has four one-hour comedy pilots in the works. It would've had five, but "Malibu Beach," a tube version of those beach flicks of the early 1960s, went down as the surf came up.

We got all this from Stephen Gentry, a tall, lanky ex-Navy flier who now drives a desk for ABC as its vice president, programs, West Coast. He says the four possible one-hour comedy series are:

—"San Pedro Bums," about a group of guys who grew up together,

Gentry, a former radar officer on a Phantom jet, says no decision has been made on when ABC's comedies will appear as one-hour blips on our TV screens. But it might happen next fall or next midseason.

He was asked if the concept of the hourly comedy series is part of an effort by ABC to mollify those who gripe about TV violence.

"Our desire to have more comedy and diversity in the schedule is partially an outgrowth of that," he conceded. He also was asked if this could lead to cop and private eye shows getting the bum's rush.

'THE IMAGE MAKERS,' a trio of Midlanders, will stage a show and sale of recent art works this weekend in Museum of the Southwest's Lancaster House, 1705 W. Indiana Ave. Hours will be 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday, and 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday, and the public is invited. The participating artists, all active members of Midland Arts Association, are, from left, Norma Helm, Sara Gilstrap and Reth Buster.

—"Love Boat," romance and heaving ho-hos on the high seas.

—"Operation Petticoat," based on Cary Grant's 1959 movie comedy about World War Two's early days, the Navy submarine he ran and the group of pretty nurses he rescued with it.

—"MacNamara's Band," another World War II comedy, this one set inland, with hijinks and heroics to occur behind enemy lines.

CBS says it has one 60-minute comedy plot afoot, "Husbands and Wives." NBC says as of March 30, it's giving a five-episode tryout to "3 Girls 3," an hourly drama-comedy-variety show about show biz.

festival. This year's honored director will be King Vidor, who has selected six of his outstanding films to be shown during the event.

Vidor's film choices are "The Crowd" (1928); "Show People" (1928); "The Champ" (1931); "Northwest Passage" (1940); "Duel in the Sun" (1946), and "Ruby Gentry" (1952).

Two of Vidor's film choices will be shown each night during the current weekend. Vidor and Charles Champlin, film critic of The Los Angeles Times, will be on stage between showings for discussion and to answer questions from the audience.

The retrospective screenings will be in the Bob Hope Theater on the SMU campus, beginning at 7 p.m. today, Saturday and Sunday.

In addition to the Vidor retrospective, the 1977 festival will offer 12 new feature films during the March 21-27 remainder of the festival. Among new films to be shown here are "Fraternity Row," "Sweet Revenge," "Between the Lines," "Harlan County USA," "Confessions of Amans" and "Audrey Rose."

Tickets for the retrospective event this weekend are available through USA Film Festival, P. O. Box 3105, Dallas 75275. Additional information on the retrospective and the film festival may be obtained by telephoning 214-692-2979.

'Happy Days' tops ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — "Happy Days" was the top-rated television show for the week ending March 13 and the film "Mean Streets" ranked as the week's least-watched program, according to the latest A.C. Nielsen figures.

"Mean Streets," shown on NBC's "Saturday Night Movie," finished last of 70 rated programs with an 8.6 rating, which represents 6.1 million households.

With ABC again leading the networks, their standings for the season were unchanged in the ratings made available Tuesday. ABC took first with a 20.3 rating for the week, representing 14.4 million homes. CBS followed with an 18.1, or 12.9 million, and NBC had a 17.8, or 12.7 million.

In order, the week's top 10 shows were "Happy Days," ABC, with a 32.6 rating, or 23.2 million households;

"Laverne & Shirley," ABC, 31.6, or 22.5 million; "M.A.S.H.," CBS, 25.8, or 18.4 million; "Barney Miller," ABC, 25.4, 18 million; "Charlie's Angels," ABC, 24.7, 17.6 million; "What's Happening!," ABC, and "One Day at a Time," CBS, tied at 24.6, or 17.5 million; "Walt Disney," NBC, 24.3, or 17.3 million; "Starsky and Hutch," ABC, 24.1, 17.1 million, and "Welcome Back, Kotter," ABC, 23.6, 16.8 million.

Zinc in diet needed for growth

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have been reading a great deal about zinc in the diet recently. The papers seem to be full of it. But I'd really like to get straight just what it does, why it is so important and the kind of foods you should eat to be sure you are getting enough of it. Could you spell things out for me?—Abigail F.

Dear Abigail: In recent years, we have become much more aware of how essential zinc is in nutrition. It is needed for physical growth and sexual development. It is a factor in healing wounds and burns. It helps you get rid of carbon dioxide. And it also helps you burn up starches and sugars. It is a vital part of many different enzymes—those little chemical boosters that keep your body's complex processes going along at a good clip. It is even needed for sense of taste.

A very serious zinc deficiency, which sometimes occurs in the Middle East, caused dwarfism, and zinc supplements can stimulate growth and sexual maturation in adult dwarfs. Dr. Amanda S. Presad, who pioneered in this work, has tried a zinc-deficient diet on volunteers at Wayne State University in Detroit. The results were loss of appetite, weight and sexual drive, roughness of skin and lethargy. According to other studies, mental effects include depression, poor memory and disorientation.

The relation of zinc to the sense of taste is particularly interesting. Researchers at Georgetown University's Center for Molecular Nutrition and Sensory Disorders believe they have hit on the underlying mechanism. They have discovered a new protein in the saliva—which they have named gustin—that depends on zinc and that, in turn, affects the taste buds. If you are short on zinc, you lose some taste buds, and the remaining ones do not work so well.

Dr. Robert I. Henkin, director of the center, says its new method of saliva analysis is much faster and more accurate than blood tests for spotting zinc deficiencies—and he thinks they will turn out to be much more widespread than previously believed. One of the new tests becomes widely used. For instance, a recent survey of Head Start children showed that half the children were not getting enough zinc.

A number of diseases can cause the deficiency. One is cancer, which draws heavily upon the body's supply of zinc for its rapid growth. Of the nearly 4,000 patients with taste and smell disorders seen by Dr. Henkin, 10 percent had cancer that had not been diagnosed.

But the usual cause of zinc deficiency is under nutrition. You should get the zinc you need from a varied and balanced diet with adequate animal protein. Meat, liver, eggs and seafood—especially oysters—are good sources of zinc. Others are milk and whole-grain breads or cereals. The Food and Nutrition Board estimates that the average adult American gets 10 to 15 milligrams of zinc a day and recommends 15 as the desirable amount. An additional daily 5 milligrams during pregnancy and 10 milligrams during lactation are also recommended.

Billfold located at last

PARK CITY, Utah (AP) — Louis Kimball has gotten back a wallet he lost almost 85 years ago and 1,000 miles away.

He lost the billfold when he was visiting Stockton, Calif., to watch his brother's graduation from a flight training school in 1942.

Kimball recently got a letter from the Stockton Police Department, inquiring if he was the Louis Kimball who had lost the wallet there in the 1940s. Apparently Officer Jim Watson made a personal project of tracking down the owner of the billfold which had been found in a wall of a demolished Stockton hotel.

Craddick sponsoring legislation

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—Proposed constitutional amendments allowing the legislature to authorize political subdivisions to issue industrial revenue bonds were referred to subcommittee Wednesday by the House Constitutional Amendments Committee.

Midland Rep. Tom Craddick, who is sponsoring the legislation, told the committee the amendments would develop employment opportunities by encouraging new industry.

Forty-six states allow political subdivisions to issue the bonds, which Pat Williams of the Texas Industrial Commission defined as long-term inexpensive financing for industry.

Williams said the bonds would allow Texas, the only Sun Belt state without them, to maintain a "competitive foothold."

Bill Davis of the Texas Industrial Development

Council told the committee that lack of authority to issue bonds to aid industry development makes Texas political subdivisions "sellers in a buyers' market."

There was no testimony opposing the legislation.

Old-fashioned windmill may be new power source

Newday

Once there were millions of them, spinning gracefully in the breeze, catching the wind to pump water, grind grain, and generate electricity across the farmlands of America. Now most of them have disappeared. There are only about 150,000 left, and they are viewed as oddities, as giant and anachronistic as the horse and buggy.

But the day of the windmill may not be over. The federal government, seeking alternative sources of energy for the future, is looking at wind power as one possible solution. Thus far, it has been moderately impressed — enough to increase the federal budget for exploring that ancient technology from $1 million in fiscal 1974 to about $20 million in fiscal 1977.

Many of the nation's public utilities remain skeptical. "No significant contribution to national electric power production is seen from this source, although it might have scattered rural uses," says the Edison Electric Institute, whose member utilities serve nearly 80 per cent of the nation's electricity users.

The U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration thinks otherwise. "The view of wind power has changed," says Louis V. Divone, chief of the agency's wind-system branch, "from a subject of curiosity to a serious examination of an unusual, but potentially real, source of significant quantities of energy."

Wind power is free, clean and inexhaustible. The key issue revolves around the question of reliability.

WIND IS VARIABLE. It can come howling in at 40 mph or more. Then a few hours later it can die down. Not a breath of air might be felt for days. What happens to the power supply when the wind stops and the windmills no longer turn?

Wind-power proponents answer this way:

Wind energy would not be a total system — at least as viewed by present technology. Instead, it would act as a supplement to fossil fuel and nuclear power plants. When the wind is blowing, windmills would serve as a fuel-saver to conserve those depletable energy sources. It would be especially useful in peak-load periods, like hot summer days, when extra power is needed.

If windmills happened to be idle when extra power was needed, the conventional fuel plants could still tap into the national power network, just as they do now.

But that, wind proponents say, shouldn't happen often. Windmills would be built at high-wind sites, places where tests over a 10-year period have shown that the winds blow at above average speeds.

"It's all technically feasible," Divone says. "The real questions are: how much power do you get, in what wind and for how many dollars?"

Man's preoccupation with wind power dates back centuries. Even before windmills dotted the European landscape, great ships plied the oceans pushed by wind-billowed sails. In this country, aside from the great days of the tall ships, wind power had its most practical application in rural areas, where farmers used multibladed wind machines to harness the breeze.

But in the 1930's cheap electricity and natural gas found their way to the hinterlands and replaced wind as the prime source of rural energy. Windmills gradually faded from the scene. They became an all but defunct technology.

Then came the energy crunch of the 1970's. With rising fuel costs, a modest resurgence of interest in wind energy began. Government experts in the Energy Research and Development Administration started programs to re-examine wind power as an energy resource, not only for farms, rural homes and remote regions, but for use by power utilities.

The agency's goal is to develop windmill systems capable of producing a sizable amount of U.S. energy needs by the year 2000.

THE GOVERNMENT has developed two programs: one for consumer use and one for public utilities. In the utility program, called the Large Wind Energy Conversion System, scientists are designing machines that can deliver 100 kilowatts or more. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration built the first such large-scale model for the agency, an experimental 100-kilowatt wind turbine machine, near Sandusky, Ohio, in 1975.

The wind machine, which cost $1 million, looks nothing like the old-fashioned Dutch windmill with its four long arms carrying sail cloth. Instead, it has two slender rotor blades resembling airplane wings. Mounted on a 100-foot-high open tower, it catches the full force of the wind and can generate enough electricity for about 30 average-size homes, according to the energy officials.

Federal official say that the wind machine, whose blades feather in wind speeds greater than 60 mph to avoid breakdowns, has already demonstrated its feasibility. In fact, the agency is now planning to install four more large wind turbines in different areas of the country.

One of those four experimental units will be the largest wind turbine built in the U.S. — a 1.5-megawatt machine with a 100-foot tower. The blades would start spinning in winds of 11 mph and reach full power in winds of 22 mph.

OTHER FUTURISTIC systems are being planned to increase the velocity of wind received by a windmill through the use of ducts, wind concentrators and vortex generators (structures that deflect and spin the wind before it hits the blades).

Stepped up wind speed would increase rotational speed, and thus power, while at the same time allowing designers to decrease the size of wind turbine blades.

While the agency is developing large systems, it has also set up a small wind-turbine test program at Rocky Flats, Colo. Last month it unveiled six machines, which are being evaluated for use in rural and isolated farm areas where the cost of fossil fuel runs high.

Days after they went on public display, 90 mph winds toppled one of the turbines. But the agency officials, undaunted, plan to repair it and turn over performance data on each device to private firms, hoping that they will find a market and eventually mass-produce them.

However, there are major problems to overcome, not the least of which is economic. "Wind machines currently cost between four and five times the cost per kilowatt of other forms of energy," says Donald A. Wiedrecht of Rockwell International, which is running the Rocky Flats test program on contract from the government.

Of course, the economic stakes are higher for large-scale wind power, and that is one reason many major utilities have not waxed enthusiastic about wind-power potential. "The largest single problem today is that almost no one takes the possibility seriously," says Marshal F. Merriam, a wind-energy expert from the University of California at Berkeley.

What makes potential users cautious is, again, the crucial question of reliability. Man's knowledge about wind as an energy source is sparse. Scientists know that strong winds usually blow in temperate and polar regions and weak winds in the tropics; that winds are stronger in oceanic and coastal areas, and that winds blow harder in highlands than on plains.

But winds constantly change direction and speed. At sites as close as a few hundred yards, there can be a variation of 20 per cent in windspeed, a difference of 70 per cent in wind energy. Finding the best wind site, one scientist says, is like "prospecting for minerals."

There are also environmental problems and the problem of public acceptance. It would take 1,000 onemegawatt windmills to equal the power generated by a single 1,000-megawatt coal or nuclear power plant. The giant windmill structures would perch on towers 200 feet high — about 20 stories — and dominate the landscape for miles. Some people, federal officials say, would object to them on esthetic grounds.

There is the question of television interference. A large windmill could cause interference with television sets as far as a mile or two away, scientists say.

Some scientists have suggested putting windmill clusters in the ocean.

Desperate double in tournament play

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

The experts who begin play today in the 10-day North American Championships at the Pasadena Convention Center are struggling for prestige, silver cups and, above all, master points. Today's hand shows a desperate double and defense in a 1947 tournament by the late Bert Lebar, the inventor of bridge master points.

If you think that Lebar didn't have a sound double of three clubs, you're quite right. He feared he had been talked out of a part score in hearts and was trying to recover. And he was quite right too. Desperate doubles of this kind are a short cut to the porrhous in rubber bridge but are often a paying proposition in tournaments.

Lebar took the first two tricks with top hearts and then looked for the setting trick. What could he get beside his two remaining aces?

The only chance was to promote a trump trick for West. This could be done if West were short in diamonds.

LEADS DIAMONDS
Lebar cashed the ace of diamonds and led another diamond. Declarer promptly returned the king of clubs, and Lebar won.

Now Lebar led a third diamond, and declarer couldn't shut out West's nine of clubs. If South ruffed low, West would overruff; and if South ruffed high, West's nine of clubs would become a sure winner later.

DAILY QUESTION
Partner opens with one heart, and the next player passes. You hold: SJ1065 HQ1072 DQ3 C952. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two hearts. You could hardly have a weaker hand, but there's no law against making a bid with minimum values.

Wildcat field stepouts, reentry among Basin oil, gas activity

Runnels County drew sites for a wildcat, a discovery offset and a pool stepout. A reentry project is planned for Irion, and an Upton field gained an extension.

Frank J. King, Abilene, will drill No. 1 Charles Wayne Glass as a 3,850-foot venture in Runnels, six miles southwest of Crews.

It is 3,336 feet from south and 2,265 feet from east lines of Austin & Williams survey 263, approximately one mile northeast and southeast of Dog Bend production in the Ashton field.

Hamco Exploration & Development Co., Dallas, staked site for No. 9 Galatian, a 3/4-mile south offset to the one-well Clarke (Gardner sand) oil field of Runnels.

Drill site is 1,610 feet from south and 1,525 feet from east lines of section 319, block 64, H&TC survey, four miles northeast of Winters. Contract depth is 4,450 feet.

The discovery, the firm's No. 1 Galatian, finished in February for 184 barrels of 40-gravity oil daily, along with five barrels of water, through a 14-64-inch choke and perforations at 4,396-4,400 feet.

W. W. Boldt of Coleman has scheduled No. 1 Bragg, a 1/4-mile southeast stepout to the two-well Bernard (lower Gardner) oil pool of Runnels.

The test has a projected depth of 4,100 feet, and spots 2,645 feet from north and 467 feet from west lines of B. F. Adams survey 321.

IRION WORKOVER
Amoco Production Co. plans to reenter and plug back to 5,100 feet for tests at No. 1-D A. A. Sugg, discovery and lone well in the Sugg-Irion (Wolfcamp) oil pool of Irion, three miles northwest of Mertzon.

It was completed in April 1974 for 193 barrels of 37.2-gravity oil and two barrels of water daily, through a 16-64-inch choke and perforations at 5,605-5,723 feet. Top of the underground was picked at 4,963 feet, under ground elevation of 2,327 feet.

UPTON EXTENSION
The King Mountain, North field of Upton gained a fourth Bend well with completion of Gulf Oil Corp. No. 13-M McElroy Ranch Co., 14 1/4 miles northeast of McCamey.

It pumped on 24-hour potential test, 389 barrels of 43.6-gravity oil and 16 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 1,566-1.

Production was through over-all perforations at 9,807-9,856 feet, which had been washed with 1,600 gallons of mud acid and acidized with 7,500 gallons.

It spots 1,980 feet from north and 660 feet from east lines of section 142, block E, CCSD&GNG survey.

Gulf also has slated No. 15-M McElroy Ranch Co. as a location south stepout to Bend production and 3/4-mile southeast stepout to the Strawn opener in the King Mountain, North field.

Andrews, Pecos gain wildcat explorations

Exploration is scheduled for Andrews and Pecos areas, and field activity has been planned in Midland and Sterling sections.

Exxon Corp. No. 4 State University Hutx Consolidated is scheduled to plug back to test in a wildcat zone at around 10,100 feet, and for completion try as a 3/4-mile southwest extension to Dean production in the Hutx field of Northeast Andrews.

It currently is a shut-in well in the Hutx (Bend) field. It is planned to test the Dean formation at about 9,850 feet.

Location is 3,350 feet from north and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 11, block 8, ULS, 18 miles northeast of Andrews townsite.

PECOS EXPLORATION
Four C Oil & Gas Corp., Fort Worth, has amended to wildcat its No. 1-A-A Sibley, previously scheduled offset to Clear Fork oil production in the Four C field of Pecos County.

It is slated to 4,200 feet, and spots 980 feet from north and 1,200 feet from east lines of section 14, block 2, H&TC survey, nine miles east of Imperial.

Pennzoil Co., operating from Midland, has scheduled No. 1 Splawn as a 1 1/4-mile southeast outpost to Wolfcamp gas production in the Gomez field of Pecos. It has a projected bottom depth of 12,000 feet, and spots 660 feet from north and 335 feet from west lines of section 113, block OW, GC&SF survey, 11 miles southeast of Fort Stockton.

MIDLAND WORKOVERS
Atlantic Richfield Co. will reenter and plug back to around 10,850 feet at No. 12-A June Sanders, producer in the Sweetie Peck (Pennsylvanian) field, for recompletion try as a current second lower Wolfcamp oil well in the Sweetie Peck field of Midland County.

It is 660 feet from south and east lines of section 8, block 41, T-4-S, T&P survey, 18 miles south of Warfield.

Also, Gulf Oil Corp. intends to reenter and plug back at No. 1 Roy Parks Jr., Estate, Ellenburger pay opener in the Headlee field of Midland, for recompletion try as a current third Strawn oil producer for the area.

The old total depth is 13,350 feet at the project which spots 660 feet from north and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 28, block 41, T-2-S, T&P survey, 13 miles southwest of Midland townsite.

STERLING OUTPOST
Texaco Inc. No. 1-K Sterling Fee is planned as a one-mile south and slightly west outpost to Canyon oil, production in the Big Salute field of Southwest Sterling.

Location is 660 feet from north and east lines of section 29, block 31, T-5-S, T&P survey, 14 miles southwest of Sterling City. Scheduled depth is 7,710 feet.

Eddy probe tests oil

Hondo Drilling Co., Midland, was drilling ahead below 9,880 feet and sand and shale on an 11,500-foot Morrow contract, after recovering free oil on a drillstem test in an unidentified formation at No. 1-C Exxon-State Communized, 3/4-mile north off offset to the one-well Turkey Track (Morrow) gas field of Eddy County, N.M.

Tool was open two hours on the test taken from 9,750-9,850 feet. Gas surfaced in 8 1/2 minutes on a 3/4-inch choke, no gauge reported. Recovery was 445 feet of free oil, 390 feet of drilling fluid and 1.8 cubic feet of gas from the sample chamber.

Location is 660 feet from north and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 17-19s-29e, 19 miles northeast of Carlsbad.

The discovery, Hondo No. 1-TX Union-State Communized, finished in October 1974 for 2.786 million cubic feet of gas daily, through perforations at 11,144-11,202 feet.

H&W Enterprises, Midland, has announced the completion of a pumping well in the Farmer (San Andres) field of Crockett County, 12 miles southeast of Big Lake.

No. 1-19 University finished for a daily potential of five barrels of 36-gravity oil, through perforations at 2,072-2,082 feet, after 1,500 gallons of acid, and fracturing with 15,000 gallons and 15,000 pounds of sand.

Drilled to 2,300 feet, 4 1/2-inch casing is set at 2,295 feet, the plugged-back depth.

Location is 330 feet from north and 2,447 feet from east lines of section 19, block 47, ULS.

It is slated for a bottom depth of 10,300 feet, and spots 660 feet from south and 990 feet from east lines of section 142, block E, CCSD&RNG survey.

The Strawn discovery, Gulf No. 11-M McElroy Ranch Co., finished in February for 80.8 barrels of 41.9-gravity oil and 4.7 barrels of water daily, through a 17-64-inch choke and perforations at 9,597-9,683 feet.

Reeves test flowing gas

Coquina Oil Corp. No. 1 Lewelling-State, Reeves County venture, 2 1/2 miles northeast of dual Atoka and Fusselman gas production in the Chapman Deep field, flowed gas through the separator at the daily rate of 3.8 million cubic feet.

The flow was through a 16-64-inch choke and unidentified perforations at 13,295-13,324 feet, following a 20,000-gallon acid treatment. Testing continued.

The project, bottomed at 15,881 feet, spots 1,320 feet from south and east lines of section 14, block 57, T-2, T&P survey, one mile northwest of Orla.

Explorers set in WT
Wildcat sites have been scheduled in King and Edwards counties.

Gunn Oil Co., Wichita Falls, has announced plans to drill a 6,000-foot venture in King, 10 miles southeast of Guthrie. It is No. 1 Alexander Trust Estate.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and 660 feet from west lines of section 70, block F, H&TC survey, one mile northwest of the Croton (Tannehill) field.

The Edwards test is slated by Chamlin Petroleum Co. It is No. 1 Allied-Whitworth, a 5,500-foot wildcat, three miles east of Rocksprings.

Drill site is 2,227 feet from north and 2,269 feet from west lines of section 5, block 11, GC&SF survey, abstract 553, five miles northwest of the Nueces field.

Langdon calls for all states to get into act

By JACK KEEVER

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Jim Langdon of the Texas Railroad Commission thinks the United States could solve some of its energy problems if every state would "get involved in proceeding energy."

Langdon, a former appeals judge, called President Carter's "home state of Georgia an energy basket case," with no oil, gas or coal production.

"It seems that they could produce a little peanut oil, but they're not even doing that," Langdon said Thursday at a meeting of executives from major oil, gas and pipeline companies.

The executives predicted that the demand for petroleum products would rise in 1977 by about 4.5 per cent to nearly seven per cent.

Most said production would decline, but vice president Byron Milner of Atlantic Richfield Co. said new crude from Alaska's North Slope would hold that decline to approximately one per cent.

He noted that oil was discovered on the North Slope nine years ago, but none has been transported out of Prudhoe Bay.

Executive vice president L. G. Rawl of Exxon Co. said Exxon had spent $400 million to develop oil reserves in the Santa Barbara Channel, "but we have yet to get a drop of oil ashore."

"There is an enormous amount of energy which can be saved, and we must get on with the job," said president Allen Murray of Mobil Oil Corp.'s Marketing and Refining Division. "But one detects an undercurrent of belief in Washington that conservation alone can solve our energy problems — that additional energy supplies are unnecessary. I think there is danger in such thinking."

"Obviously," he said, "we need substantial new reserve merely to stand still. Can the United States afford the risk of placing all of our eggs in the basket of conservation? The answer is no."

"The simple truth is that we cannot conserve our way out of this energy crisis," said vice president J. H. Herring of Marathon Oil Co. Senior vice president Willis Price of Chevron U.S.A. Inc. said, "We're waiting — like everybody else — for Carter's energy proposals April 20."

Several executives denied that their companies had withheld oil and gas from the market, and Langdon added that Texas "has had an angry finger" pointed at the state as a result of declining production.

Wallace said crude oil imports into the United States were 6,633,000 barrels a day for the four-week average of March 4, an increase of nearly 2 million from a year ago.

As usual, in setting the statewide allowable, the commission restricted production in the huge East Texas Field to 86 per cent to avoid possible waste. The rest of the state got a 100 per cent allowable.

Here are their nominations for April, in barrels per day, with any

FEA plans proposed to increase oil yield

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — At the urging of California oil producers, the Federal Energy Administration Thursday proposed a new regulation that would stimulate California oil production but probably raise West coast oil product prices by an average one-quarter of a cent a gallon.

The proposal, which will be the subject of public hearings next month, would give refiners a financial incentive for using heavy California crude oil rather than lighter, more expensive imported oil.

But West Coast consumers could be paying $100 million to $200 million more a year for oil products if the new rule is passed, the FEA said. Public hearings will be held April 14 and 15 in San Francisco and Washington, D.C.

The incentive is needed because there is a glut of low gravity, high sulfur oil on the West Coast, Rep. Mark Hannaford (D-Calif.) said.

Hannaford said he approved of the FEA proposal because "it makes it 54 cents more attractive to purchase domestic oil and 54 cents less attractive to purchase foreign oil."

Under FEA's new proposal, refiners in California, Arizona, Nevada, Oregon and Washington would receive a 54-cent-per-barrel bonus — technically called an FEA entitlement — for using California crude oil.

Noting that this price adjustment would be only a short-term solution to the problem of marketing heavy California crude oil, the FEA proposed two other regulations, changes Thursday.

Petroleum price regulations might be changed so refiners could more easily pass on the capital costs of modifying their refineries to handle the heavy crude, the FEA suggested.

Under another proposal, California oil producers might be allowed to export their heavy crude oil without paying the present FEA price penalty. Or they might be able to exchange their heavy oil for lighter imported crude oil.

California crude oil, hard to market because it is used in fewer products and is more difficult to refine than lighter crude from Texas or other areas, has long carried a price penalty in the FEA's entitlement system.

Hannaford, whose Long Beach, Calif., district contains several large producing oil fields, has argued that new refining technologies have narrowed the difference in value between the heavy crude and the lighter crude.

Congress passed a law in August that helped raise the price ceiling on California crude, but marketing pressures have kept the price below that ceiling, the FEA said Thursday when it made the three proposals.

The 54-cent-a-barrel entitlement "is an attempt by FEA to allow the prices to reach their allowable ceilings, so as to provide an incentive for increased domestic crude oil production," the FEA's announcement said.

West Coast crude oil now accounts for only about a third of the crude processed by West Coast refineries, according to an FEA spokesman. Consumer prices are expected to go up under the new proposal because refineries still will purchase large quantities of imported oil.

Market reacts little

NEW YORK (AP) — The expected news of a jump in the consumer price index drew little reaction from the stock market today.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down 1.99 at 962.85, but losers and gainers were evenly balanced in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The government reported at the opening that the consumer price index jumped 1 per cent in February, equal to a 12 per cent annual rate.

But such adverse news had been anticipated for weeks on Wall Street because of the widely advertised impact of eastern cold and western drought early in the year.

Some glamor stocks were weak, with investing institutions apparently lightening their holdings in the depressed group before quarterly reporting time at the end of the month.

Eastman Kodak, the most active NYSE stock, dropped 1 1/4 to 7 1/4, and Xerox was down 2 1/4 to 48 1/4.

The Big Board's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks slipped 0.2 to 55.43. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gave up 0.2 to 112.52.

UV Industries rose 1/4 to 38 1/4. The diversified company disclosed plans for a 2-for-1 stock split and a dividend increase.

Wachovia 34 9/8 to 17 1/4 to 17 1/4. Warner 1 1/4 to 1 1/4 to 1 1/4. Weyerhaeuser 1 1/4 to 1 1/4 to 1 1/4.

FARMER DAVID MEWBORN of Frankston, Tex., found business slow at New Iberia, La., recently where he was attempting to sell a load of hay. No harm in getting comfortable in your work though.

Milk support increase seen

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland is expected to urge President Carter to raise the government's milk support level by 74 cents, a move that could raise retail prices by a few cents.
Bergland has settled on three options for raising the support price, sources said, and any notion of maintaining or lowering it has been rejected. At the same time, a much larger increase, as sought by some members of Congress, has also been discarded.
The current support level for milk is $8.26 for each 100 pounds. Of three possible increases, Bergland is said to favor one setting a new support level of $9 for each 100 pounds. Since farmers are currently selling at the support level, any increase could raise retail prices unless dairies and stores absorbed it. An Agriculture Department source said such a rise "definitely would" boost prices while a congressional source said "it is now a given."

The $9 level is within the range supported by Carter during his presidential campaign, but it is more than that sought by one dairy group, the National Milk Producers Federation. The recommendation also goes against that of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, which urged a reduction.
An unexpected rise in milk production last year has depressed prices being paid to farmers. As a result, the government is purchasing an estimated $330 million worth of butter, cheese and non-fat dry milk this year to prop up dairy prices according to the Agriculture Department. The products are used in domestic and foreign food-aid programs.

The Congressional Budget Office estimates that those purchases would rise to a maximum $552.5 million in the coming 12 months if supplies are so abundant that the government must take purchases.
One source said of the possible rise in consumer prices that if farmers don't get help now, milk production will be decreased, leading to a possible tight market later, as in 1973 and 1974. Then, prices shot up.
Bergland has characterized such agricultural swings between boom and bust as economic disasters for producers and consumers.
"All we are trying to do is stabilize the market," said a congressional source involved in the process. "This way ($9), no one gets cheated. The dairy farmer stays in business, and the consumer does not get ripped off."

The law requires that milk prices be supported to assure an adequate supply now and in the future. That minimum support is achieved through government purchases, if necessary, designed to create a market price.
The support level, by law, must be between 75 and 90 per cent of parity. Parity is an index of farmers' purchasing power in the years 1910-14. Thus, a parity level of 90 per cent assures a dairy farmer of 90 per cent of that 1910-14 purchasing power, with some adjustments since then.
The three alternatives Bergland is said to be sending to the White House are 80 per cent, 85 per cent and the one he favors — a 82.5 per cent. With a current parity index of $10.84, price support levels would be $8.67, $9 and $9.21 for the three suggestions. The current support level of $8.26 is 76 per cent of parity.
During his campaign, Carter said he would have signed a bill vetoed by President Ford mandating an 85 per cent parity level.
