Carter advisors differ on energy surety steps

By J.P. SMITH The Washington Post

Just before sending his energy reorganization plan to Congress last month, President Carter promised to take steps to "increase the surety we have" that the numbers supplied by the oil industry on the nation's reserves are accurate.

In making that pledge the President addressed a central issue in the debate over natural gas policy - the credibility of the estimates of how much gas we have on hand that can be produced at a profit.

Critics of the industry, in Congress and elsewhere, have voiced suspicions that the shortage is contrived by the oil companies to justify increased prices and deregulation. Industry spokesmen reject those allegations as unfounded and politically motivated.

And yet billions of dollars in profits could ride on the outcome of the Battle of the Numbers. The Federal Power Commission uses the proven reserve figures to regulate interstate gas prices. The reserve numbers also figure in the formulation of national energy policy, including such questions as deregulation.

The Carter administration can now take two approaches to the battle of the numbers: it can, as the government has since 1946, continue to rely on the estimates provided by the American Gas Association, an industry trade organization. Or it can exercise authority given it under two recently passed laws to develop its own base of independent reserve

The authority to determine the reserve data independently of the industry figures was provided under the 1975 Energy Police and Conservation Act as well as the Energy Supply and Environmental Coordination Act passed in 1974.

What course will Carter take? So far the administration has hesitated to spell out a policy on the natural gas numbers, despite Carter's public acknowledgment that "it is obvious to all of us that there are some instances where natural gas is withheld from the market."

James R. Schlesinger Jr., the new energy chief, is represented by associates as waiting to take a hard line on the numbers game in natural gas. "Schlesinger wants to know with confidence what the hell the facts are," said one official familiar with

Everyone seems to agree, as FPC Commissioner James G. Watt admits that "the question of who prepares proven reserve data would never have been raised if there had not been the shortages."

But energy officials differ on what steps the administration should take and how aggressively it should pursue the goal of governmental selfsufficiency in energy arithmetic.

John F. O'Leary, head of the Federal Energy Administration, says, "At the moment there is no alternative to relying totally on in-

Acting FEA Deputy Administrator Gorman C. Smith says the administration should develop a new system for estimating proven reserves. But he declined to say whether the FEA should exercise its new authority to get data from companies - including the exercise of subpoena powers.

Some career officials, such as Victor H. Zabel, chief of the FPC's Reserves Evaluation Branch, say they are bewildered by what they regard as the government's passive role toward building its own data

"We should have had reservoir-byreservoir data 15 years ago," Zabel says. "If we had it we wouldn't have been caught by surprise with a gas shortage. Worse yet, we need that data now in order to cope with the

Zaire invaders using Soviet-made rockets

By KENNETH J. FREED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forces that have invaded Zaire include white troops and are getting major logistic support from the Marxist Angolan government, including Soviet-made rockets, U.S. officials said Friday.

The invasion force totals about 2,000, mostly former Katangan soldiers who were exiled to Angola after their attempt to overthrow the Zaire government failed in the mid

The fighting was in the province of Shaba, formerly known as Katanga. It was not clear where the whites reported with the invaders came from, how many there were or what role they played. Zaire has claimed that Cuban troops based in Angola are leading the invasion. The whites might also be Portuguese or Belgian mercenaries. Earlier in the day, State Department spokesman Frederick Z. Brown said "that is a fair assumption" when asked whether Angola was giving logistic support to the Katangan troops. Other officials later said the Katangans had been crossing the border on Angolan-provided trucks.

Other troops also were moved up to the border by rail and some may have been flown to jumping-off positions near the frontier.

The U.S. officials confirmed that Katangans were using Russian rockets. The officials said most of the fighting since the invasion began more than a week ago has been on a small scale. In these operations, the Katangans, described as well-equipped and welltrained, have faced little organized opposition, most of it from Zairean

French aim to send aid to Zaireans

The Washington Post

KINSHASA, Zaire - The French government agreed Friday to send Zaire emergency military supplies, expected to be mainly small arms and ammunition, to help defeat the 11day-old invasion in the mineralrich, southern area formerly known as Katanga.

The announcement came in response to an appeal from the Zaire government and the shipment is expected to arrive within the next few days.

The French promise of aid follows agreement from the U.S. and Belgian governments to fly in military supplies. Belgium reportedly is sending 30 planeloads of equipment and small arms to the former Belgian Congo.

ultimate objective of the invading force. But three options were presented

First, the attack may have been made in retaliation for thrusts into Angola by rebels based in Zaire further to the north.

Second, it may be a new secessionist movement by the Katangans. Third, the attack may be aimed at overthrowing the central government of Zaire headed by President Mobutu Sese Seke.

The Zairean army numbers only 25,000, a handful of jet fighters and a hodge-podge of equipment supplied by the Soviet Union, China and Western European nations.

Zaire is considered capable of repelling the attack, but that would largely depend on the support given the Katangans.

Officials say U.S. aid to Zaire now is limited to two planeloads of medicine

Fresh Syrian troops sent into Lebanon

By STUART AUERBACH The Washington Post

BEIRUT - Syria poured fresh troops into Lebanon Friday to quell a rash of killings in the mountain villages southeast of here avenging the assassination Wednesday of Moslem leftist leader Kamal Jum-

At least 200 Christians have been killed over the past two days by members of Jumblatt's Druze sect, an 11th century offshoot of the Moslem religion. Syrian officials fear the killings could plunge Lebanon back into civil war.

That fear was echoed Friday by the Antonios Kreish, the Most Rev. patriarch of the Maronite Christian Church, who called the killings "massacres."

"I have warned and I am warning again," he said, "that violence will

Druze and Maronite Christians had lived peacefully side-by-side in the Chouf mountains during most of Lebanon's 19-month civil war, although there has been a long history of tension between the two groups. In the 19th century fighting between Druzes and Maronites culminated in a war that led to European intervention

According to Maronite officials here, at least 7,000 Christian villagers have fled from their villages near Jumblatt's home in the mountain town of Mukhtara.

Syrian officials have told diplomats. here they are not afraid of violence breaking out in Beirut, despite the killing of about a dozen people since Wednesday and scattered gunfire all during Thursday night and Friday.

But they are fearful of the situation in the mountainous Chouf area, with its long history of violence and the Druze tradition of exacting revenge.

Tough Syrian troops in battle dress, supported by tanks and artillery, moved into the Chouf Friday to secure these villages. According to reports here, at least 40 persons were arrested, including a parliamentary supporter of Jumblatt's, Zahir al-Khatib. He was considered the most radical member of Jumblatt's small parliamentary group.

Christian official's here, who warned their followers against escalating the violence, said enraged Druze fighters had begun their chain of killings before the Syrians arrived.

One family lost 23 members when the Druze dynamited the church in which they had taken refuge, security forces here reported.

Despite the violence against the Christians, there is no evidence that they had anything to do with the machine gun killings of Jumblatt. Indeed, security forces here have said nothing about who may have done the killing and Jumblatt is known to have had a myriad of personal, political and religious enemies.

Jumblatt's son Walid, 26, who was installed Thursday to replace his father as leader of the Druze, also appealed for an end to the revenge

MANILA, The Philippines (AP) -A strong earthquake centered in a remote mountain province rocked Manila and much of the Philippines' largest island of Luzon early Satur-

Initial reports indicated only slight damage, but officials said the only communications with Cagayan province, where the quake was centered, were by telegraph.

Three hours after the tremor, relief officials had heard nothing from the agricultural trading center of Tuguegarao, situated at the epicenter of the quake 220 miles northwest of Manila.

In Manila, the quake caused a sideways rather than up-and-down movement of the ground. Houses shook, but a spokeswoman for the National Disaster Control Center said there had been no reports of damage from the metropolitan area, where one-fifth of the 43 million Filipinos

Burleson raps 'encroachment'

By JUDY JOHNSTON

If the trend of federal government encroachment on state and local governments continues as it has in the past, U. S. Rep. Omar Burleson of Anson predicts the local governments eventually will be agents of the federal government.

Burleson, a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, spoke Friday to 300 delegates to the West Texas County Judges' and Commissioners' Association conference at the Midland Hilton Hotel.

There are two diametrically opposed philiosophies in Congress, he said, and basically they are more government control and less government control.

The opposing philosophies are evident in the unemployment bill now before Congress, which would involve $31 billion over the next two years.

"It's a fine thing if we had the money to pay for it," Burleson said. Among provisions of the bill are $3½ billion in public works jobs and payment of 65 weeks of unemployment, which Burleson said 'makes it attractive not to work.' Besides thinking this idea is economically unsound, Burleson said he thought it was "morally wrong." This bill would continue a situation which produces nothing and pays no taxes, he said.

The other philosophy, he said, is to create a climate in the business community which would enable more people to be put to work jobs which produce something and pay taxes.

If the federal government would leave the private enterprise market alone. Burleson said, it would seek its own level, like water. Under a free market, if a plan is bad, it will fail, he said, but under government planning, if a plan fails, more money is put into it to heal it. With the large deficit of the federal government, Burleson said, the government has to enter the money market and bid against private entrepreneurs. When the government wins out in the bidding, the situation pushes interest rates up, increases inflation and drains off capital from private enterprise.

Unless the trend is reversed, he said, the American people will lose enough confidence that they will think they cannot run their own govern-

He cited the proposed national health insurance as an example of proliferating federal control. Once it goes into effect, he said, the federal government will "seep into control of all aspects" of health care throughout the country.

Burleson said the biggest shortage in Washington is common sense. If "we would get this country back on the tracks," he said, the country can be strong.

"If we lose our economic freedom, we lose our personal freedom. . . . they are one and the same!," Burleson said.

Later in the program, State Sen. W. E. "Pete" Snelson said that the state legislature would have to begin "paring down" bills being considered in this session.

After an anticipated surplus in revenues, Snelson said he feared the legislature faces a deficit situation in which the priority spending will be greater than the present sources of

The body of an unidentified elderly black man was found about a quarter mile from FM 137 on the property of Charles Erwin in Midland County Friday morning.

Midland County Sheriff's Department said some horseback riders were out pleasure riding when they discovered the body. The riders reported the body to the Martin County Sheriff's Department, and then it was referred to Midland County authorities.

Sheriff's department spokesman said the man apparently died of a heart attack or from exposure. An autopsy will be performed to determine the exact cause of death.

Texas Secretary of State Mark W. White Jr. said that Snelson had introduced a bill which reduce county costs of voter registration. By legislation passed last session county voter registrars had to send for address correction updates, which now cost 25 cents each. By Snelson's bill, White said, if the mailed registration card is returned, the person would be struck from the voter rolls because the person would not be officially registered if he did not live at that address any longer.

White also said that the Justice Department had not found one deprivation of the right to vote in Texas under the Voting Rights Act.

Chauvinist image big selling point for Southwest

By CRAIG ENDICOTT The Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS - Business tycoon Diane von Furstenberg recently told a reporter after flying Southwest Airlines from Houston to Dallas that she was insulted at the ambience of Southwest.

In fact, the designer who has sharply affected the dress business in this country and is proprietor of a $150 million business, said she couldn't believe the hostesses are still wearing hot pants and were giving flight instructions in language akin to baby

She has not been alone in noting that Southwest preys on chauvinism.

But controversy, whether in the form of $13 fare battles against Braniff International, constant court battles with Dallas and Forth Worth over the airline's right to land at Love Field in Dallas, or the so-called "chauvinistic" attitudes, has been one of the reasons for the airline's success. It has kept the airline in the public eye and championed it as the David vs. the Goliaths of the business.

The airline, for example, has paid more than $2.5 million in legal fees since the court battles began in the late 1960s. "We can justify half of this expenditure as publicity," cracks M. Lamar Muse, president and chief ex-

"So why change a good thing," he says when questioned about the airline's new and potentially controversial advertising campaign launched this month to introduce customers to its new markets in Lubbock, El Paso, Corpus Christi, Midland-Odessa and Austin, Tex.

"You Can't Make Love Four Times A Day In A Car," reads one of the provocative newspaper ads running in Corpus, a double entendre that might be more obvious to Dallasites than Corpus Christians

For those not in the know, one assumes the ad means you can't drive to Dallas' Love Field from Corpus four times a day, but you can fly that many times.

It's likely to raise a few eyebrows like another Southwest Airlines' campaign - the "embody planement" billboards created by The Bloom Agency for its client in 1975.

The flying woman, a takeoff on the figurehead on the high bow of an English man of war, got so much criticism from women's lib circles that Muse decided to take full advantage of the publicity and extend the life of the billboards to two years. The airline originally intended to keep them up for only six months.

The new campaign, dubbed "We're Spreading Love All Over Texas" and costing $750,000, is in keeping with the original $750,000 advertising rollout that established a "personality" for the airline when it opened for business in June 1971.

That initial campaign introduced an entirely new language to the airline industry. The company discarded the time-consuming ticketing system used by its competitors for a "love machine," a simple cash register that rang up the ticket sale at the gate. Drinks were "love potions," and passengers got a "love stamp" if unhappy with the service. They could trade in the "love stamp" during another flight for a free drink-"trading in bad feelings for good ones,' noted the airline.

Muse says the company's advertising tactic was to settle on a personality that would establish the airline as a fun one to fly — "young, friendly, refreshing and exciting," he says. refreshing and exciting," he says. Such a personality would be perfect for the businessman commuter the airline wanted to attract.

The personality Southwest lit on was the very image Mary Wells gave Braniff in the mid 60s when she had the planes painted in bright colors and put the stewardesses in Pucci outfits.

But Braniff, which was Southwest's major competition in the Dallas-Houston market, had dropped its "swinging" image in favor of a more subdued and sophisticated look. This left a vacuum in the market for a 'young" upstart.

Southwest advertising, while not losing sight of the "personality profile," has responded to efforts by competitors to cut into its continually increasing market.

For example, when Southwest increased its rates from $20 to $25 in 1972, justifying the increase by taking out a row of seats to provide "firstclass leg room and free drinks,' Braniff dropped its rates the next day between Dallas and Houston from $28

Southwest responded: "The Other

Airlines May Have Met Our Price, But You Can't Buy Love" in a counter ad. Love at this point meant "carsays a Southwest official. Jess Coker, vice president of marketing, says this little-guy-vs.-the-big-guy posture helped the airline record two daily load records. Braniff matched the $25 Southwest fare several days

Early the next year, Braniff an-nounced a 60-day, half-price "Get Acquainted Sale" fare between Love Field and Houston's Hobby. The new fare program discounted coach fare to $13 and first class to $17.

Southwest countered with advertising captioned: "Nobody's Going to Shoot Southwest Airlines Out of the Sky for a Lousy $13." The airline kept its $25 Dallas-Houston rate, though and gave away ice buckets and fifths of whisky to passengers. Southwest turned the corner financially with the $13 war, Coker says.

Southwest met opposition once again from the interstate carriers when it applied with the Texas Aeronautics Commission last year for the new markets. The standard com-plaint was that Southwest would take away the business of the traditional carriers in those markets, thus forcing them to cut flights. The local citizenry would then be left without connecting flights to distant points.

Southwest, however, said its main competitor would be the automobile, reasoning ultimately accepted by the TAC and city officials in the new markets.

The advertising attacks this longstanding competitor - the automobile - with ads such as "$25 For Gas or $25 For Love" or "Dallas 7 3-4 hours, $64 (the cost of driving 409 miles from Corpus to Dallas at 15.89 cents per mile at an average speed of 52.5 mph); Dallas 95 minutes, $40" (via Southwest).

"So why drive to Dallas when you can fly? And on Southwest Airlines, you'll get love! And that's a lot more fun than gas.'

WASHINGTON - South African coal will be brought to the United States next month to fire two electrical plants on the west coast of Florida that are owned and operated by Gulf Power Co.

The Gulf Coast electric company will import 500,000 tons of South African coal for the year starting in April and 800,000 tons a year for the next nine years of a 10-year contract it signed with the Transvaal Coal Owners Association of Johnannesburg. By 1987, Gulf Power will have imported 7.7 million tons of South African coal to make electricity in two of its existing plants and one it plans to build in the next five years.

"This is low sulfur coal we're getting at a price more favorable than we can negotiate in the U.S.," said Clyde A. Lilly, Jr., president of the Southern Co., which owns Gulf Power. "This is strictly a price arrangement.

It is also the first and only commercial one of its kind, mostly because the one fuel the U.S. has an abundance of is coal. No other electric company has bought South African coal, even though it is cheap and low enough in sulfur to be burned in compliance with strict state and federal clean air regulations.

Florida's restrictions on sulfur dioxide emissions are among the most strict in the U.S. At the same time, Federal regulations on air quality mandate that new power plants either install huge and expensive smokestack scrubbers that remove sulfates from flue gases or burn oil or coal whose sulfur content meets Federal requirements.

Lilly said the Southern Co. contracted for South African coal after conducting a worldwide search for low sulfur coal. He said the coal will be taken by ship from South Africa to Mobile, Ala., where it will be sent on barges through the Intracoastal Waterway to plants in Panama City and Pensacola on Florida's Gulf

The executive declined to disclose the price Gulf Power will pay for South African coal except to say it will "be less than the $30 a ton we'd be paying for South African coal delivered from the American west." He said there are escalation clauses in the contract that provide for price increases in the next 10 years.

U.S. policy on trade with South Africa provides no buying restrictions, only selling ones. The State Dept. has banned the sale to South Africa of arms and military related items like aircraft and tank engines. Despite the ban, the U.S. enjoyed a $433 million trade surplus last year with South Africa, according to the

WASHINGTON (AP) - Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell on Friday defended the deal to release the leader of the Hanafi gunmen, saying it was only a minor concession to win the release of more than 100 hostages. "This was really a very minimal action. I thought, given the release of the hostages, that it was not a drastic thing to do," Bell said at a news conference.

The attorney general said he personally authorized the release of Hamaas Abdul Khaalis on his personal recognizance after the Hanafi leader and his 11 comrades surrendered to police and freed hostages they held in three Washington buildings.

He said he approved the action on condition that a judge agree to it, and Superior Court Judge Harold Greene went along.

No other promises were made to the Hanafi Moslems. Bell said. "There's no agreement except for one man, Khaalis, being released on his own He noted that Khaalis did not seek immunity from prosecution and "I would not have given him immunity." Except for restrictions on travel, Khaalis remains free pending a grand jury indictment. In terrorisi situations, Bell said police should be free to negotiate with gunmen in an effort to free hostages. "It probably would be a very foolish course to refuse to negotiate at all. After all, you're trying to save lives.' On other subjects, Bell: -Complained about leaks to the news media of information revealed before grand juries.

-Denied political motives in the selection of Pittsburgh Mayor Peter Flaherty, one of President Carter's earliest campaign supporters, for the job of deputy attorney general.

-Adamantly refused to discuss his policies on school desegregation.

The attorney general said he is warning department employes that they should not tell reporters

The secret came out when a lightning bolt struck the wooden flagpole recenlty, cutting it all the way through. The ball, about a foot in diameter, plummeted to the lawn below and broke in half. What looked to be a bunch of garbage fell out. It turned to be local political campaign literature from the 1950s.

Sumners to address churches

Midland's two Episcopal churches, Holy Trinity and St. Nicholas', Tuesday will join in a Lenten-season Quiet Day at Holy Trinity, 1412 W. Illinois St.

The Rev. Charles A. Sumners of Austin will be the featured speaker at the observance, which begins with Holy Communion at 10 a.m., followed by meditations at 10:30, 11:30 and

Mr. Sumners will speak on "The Presence of God." A native Texan, he holds a B.A. degree from The University of Texas and has studied at Virginia Theological Seminary in Alexandria, Va. He helped organize St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Houston and served as student chaplain at Houston's Rice University. He is a past president of the Austin Council of Churches and the Austin Ministerial Alliance and was a member of the founding board of St. Andrew's School at Austin

'This identifies Christians to other Christians," said Frank Ford, who is heading the Richmond, Va. 'Christian Yellow Pages."

'From the Christian perspective, the value is that we are one (Christian) family ... This will help unite the family of Christians ... If I had the choice of giving money to a stranger or to my brother, I would give it to my brother. Otherwise, it could mean I care for strangers more than my own family," Ford said.

But mainline Christian and Jewish leaders in several cities have condemned the directories as economically discriminatory and anti-Semitic and based on a distortion of Biblical teachings. They have also charged that it is anti-Christian because its effect is to divide the Christian community into those who say they are "born again" and those who do not use that expression.

"I would like Jews, Moslems, Universalists, agnostics and atheists to know that Mr. Ford does not speak for all Christians," the Rev. N. Robert Quirin, an ecumenical specialist in the Catholic Diocese of Richmond wrote in a letter to the editor of The Richmond Times-Dispatch.

"To say that the New Testament commands that we Christians must love one another means that we should do business with one another is more than just plain ridiculous interpretation of scripture," he wrote. "It is a perversion of scripture. The

Both the Modesto, Calif.-based Christian Yellow Pages and the San Diego, Calif.-based Christian Business Directory are franchise-like operations in which regional staffs sell advertising space to local businesses and give a portion of the profits to the national office.

These directories, ranging in size from 8 to 24 pages, are distributed free through churches and sponsoring businesses. They have appeared primarily in cities in the West, South and Midwest, such as Portland, Tucson, San Jose, Minneapolis-St. Paul and Miami.

The officials of these enterprises tend to be local businessmen whose livelihood is not dependent on the directories and who are active in right-wing political and religious activities.

In some cities, such as Atlanta, publication of one of these directories has produced little discussion.

In other cities, like Richmond and Dallas, Christian clergy informed of the content of the directories and the Jewish concern about them, took the lead in condemning them also as anti-Christian and destructive of a sense of community, in a "pluralistic

Arnold Foster, general counsel of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, a Jewish civil rights agency, explained part of the Jewish resistance. "And if religious discrimination is sanctioned in business relationships it will almost certainly tend to spread into other areas of public life, such as voting practices, housing and employment," Foster said.

But leaders of the directories argue that their projects are necessary during a "moral slide away from God," as Bill Bray marketing as Bill Bray, marketing manager for the Christian Business Director put it.

"The smaller Christian society becomes and the more pagan America becomes, we'll be forced to put these out to cling to each other,' contended Bray, an entrepreneur in Wheaton, Ill., and organizer of Campus Crusade for Christ's "Here's Life" evangelistic campaign in New

Both Bray and Pat Booth, a Dallas entrepreneur, a one-time Campus Crusade worker who is now regional director of the Christian Yellow Pages, vigorously denied charges of anti-Semitism. "We're friends of the Jewish people and friends of Israel." said Bray.

Besides, Booth said, the Christian directories are no different from the new "Jewish Yellow Pages" and yellow pages in the "Second Jewish Catalogue.

"Historically, Jewish people have done business together," he said. He cited a statement in the Jewish Yellow Pages, which said: "Patronize Jewish talent."

These Jewish yellow pages contain free listings of Jewish services and products and are sold in bookstores. pointed out Lucy Negus, an Episcopalian in Richmond who opposes the Christian Yellow Pages.

Criticism of the film by the Rev. Dr. Bob Jones III, president of the fundamentalist-oriented college in Greenville, S.C., which bears his grandfather's name, has caused General Motors to cancel plans to sponsor the telecast.

Jones, who has not seen the film, condemned it on the basis of a review in Modern Screen magazine and published interviews with the film producer, Franco Zeffirelli.

Jones faulted the film for its failure to portray the divinity of Jesus and for not showing the miracles of Christ walking on water and turning water

The Rev. Dr. Paul Stevens, Southern Baptist Convention television executive, wrote NBC a letter saying he hadn't seen the film

Counseling center now in Odessa

Midland's Pastoral Counseling Center, established here several years ago, has expanded to Odessa. Dr. Ray Bristol, formerly senior minister of First Christian Church here and executive director of the Midland counseling center since its inception in December 1973, is serving as director of the Odessa outreach as well, dividing his time between the two cities each week.

The Odessa counseling center is located in First Presbyterian Church at 14th and Sam Houston streets in the Ector city. Midland offices are now located in the Trinity Presbyterian Church on West Louisana Street near Andrews Highway.

Serving on the advisory committee for the Odessa center are a number of clergymen and lay leaders in that city, including Dr. John Rasco, the Rev. Donald Hungerford, Dr. Joe Brown, Mrs. basil Wilkerson, Dub Duff and Waldo Stewart.

The increasing number of requests from Odessa, Monahans, Pecos, Fort Stockton and elsewhere for counseling aid led to the establishment of the Ector counseling center, it was explained

Stevens was one of a score of Protestant and Catholic leaders who saw the full film at a 6 1-2 hour special screening in New York yesterday. He could not be reached afterward for comment.

NBC Vice President Robert Kasmire said NBC has received 'several hundred' letters of complaint about the film from persons who have not seen it.

In his denunciation of the unseen film, Jones urged a boycott of General Motors products, saying: "Those who know the Lord Jesus Christ as their personal lord and saviour will, I am sure, make their protest known both verbally and by spending their automobile dollars.

Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum, terreligious affairs director for the American Jewish Committee, and a consultant for the film, said he questioned "the ethical responsibility" of a clergyman who would judge a film without seeing it.

Church gets new pastor

The Rev. Glenn W. Shoemake of Fort Worth recently accepted a call from Midland's Calvary Baptist Church and will begin his pastorate there Sunday.

Mr. Shoemake, whose parents are Baptist missionaries to the Dominican Republic, is a graduate of Houston Baptist University and the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary at Fort Worth. He has taught at Tarrant County Junior College in Fort Worth.

Mr. Shoemake and wife Marsha are the parents of a young son, Daniel. Calvary Baptist Church at 1001 S. Main St., is one of the oldest Southern Baptist units in the city, having been established more than 35 years ago.

New Zealand's leader calls Amin 'a maniac'

CANBERRA "President Idi Amin of Uganda is a homicidal maniac beyond all New Zealand Prime Minister Robert Muldoon told the National Press Club Friday.

He repeated his statement with some emphasis because it was suggested by some journalists that there might be a move at the Commonwealth Prime Ministers Conference in June in London to remove Uganda from the commonwealth.

Muldoon said this was not possible and he would be opposed to such a move. There must be a separation between the head of state and the people of Uganda, he said.

Sovereignty issue

President Carter believes his decision to lift the ban on travel by U.S. citizens to Cuba, North Korea, Vietnam and Cambodia will put the United States in a better position to campaign for compliance with the Helsinki agreements in Europe.

The President may be expecting more from this new gesture on behalf of human rights than it is likely to produce. It has only drawn attention to the way that all governments - including our own - exercise sovereignty to control traffic across their bor-

For one thing, the travel ban has been honored more in the breach than the observance. The government itself has authorized visits by more than 5,000 Americans to Cuba and by several hundred to Indochina. Unknown numbers have visited the proscribed countries without official permission.

A federal court ruled in 1967 that the government cannot actually restrain U.S. citizens from going where they please. It can only withhold their passports. Whether they go to Cuba or not depends ultimately on whether the Cubans will let them in.

Mr. Carter hopes that lifting the restriction on U.S. passports will give more credibility to our stand on human rights when a conference is held in Belgrade this summer to assess compliance with the Helsinki agreement. Among its provisions, this agreement promised more freedom of travel for people under Communist rule in Europe.

He still faces the fact, however, that U.S. law permits our government to bar travel to the United States by foreigners in many categories. The McCarran-Walter Immigration Act of 1972 lists the obvious undesirables as "excludable aliens" - people with criminal records, communicable diseases, drug addiction or no means of support. But it also bars anarchists and Communists.

PURITSHER

This law also has been applied selectively. The State Department, and rightly so, has turned away would-be visitors with records of extremist political activity. A country has a right to protect itself in this manner. It is an issue of sovereignty.

But sovereignty is exactly the issue that foreign governments are raising in the face of Mr. Carter's new effort to inject "morality" into our foreign policy. His stand on behalf of human rights behind the Iron Curtain, and in other countries where civil liberties are in eclipse, is being resisted on grounds it attempts to interfere with the way sovereign governments manage their domestic

Our list of "excludable aliens" is based on a perception of what is best for the health, peace and safety within our borders. Governments which embrace political philosophies we reject are going to point to it as a compromise with "human rights" under the aegis of the same principle of sovereignty they defend. Mr. Carter's moral strategists will have to take that into account.

'iva Canada

Americans don't vote in Quebec, but someone might think so from all the attention Canadian officials have lavished on the United States in recent weeks.

On Jan. 25, Quebec's Premier Rene Levesque took an eight-man delegation to New York City for 36 hours of consultation and speeches. His major political theme: The separation of Quebec from Canada is inevitable. Then on Feb. 21, Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau arrived in the United States for a state visit. The next day he told Congress that Quebec would remain in the Canadian federation. It was the same point that he had made in Ottawa on January 26. According to wire service reports, Congress "exploded" into applause at the mention of Quebec.

On first thought, it all seems out of place. On second thought the pieces fit together. The influence of the United States on Canadian affairs is so profound that how financiers and congressmen react to the issue of Quebec could affect the outcome of that province's vote on independence, if things come to that.

For the sake of hemispheric stability, it is hoped that Americans with influence opt for a single Canada.

Americans in Bolivian prisons

By JACK ANDERSON and LES

WASHINGTON - Three months ago we described the plight of 35 Americans who are languishing in grim, rat-infested Bolivian prisons. uncertain when they will get out. Some have been held for years, without trial, on suspicion of possessing marijuana or cocaine.

They can thank their own government for their misfortune. They were dumped in jail as a direct result of U.S. pressure upon Bolivia to crack down on drug violators. The Justice Dept. even sent an attorney to help the Bolivians draft a tough drug law.

The U.S. government is also subsidizing the police who arrested the Americans. No less than $4 million to the American taxpayers' money has been pledged to the Bolivian drug enforcement program.

This $4 million bequest hasn't noticeably softened the hearts of the Bolivian police toward their American prisoners. At least five young Americans have written home about police brutality. One complained that the police beat him with a rubber hose. Another wrote that he had been beaten and then threatened with execution before a firing squad at sunrise. A long-haired youth was dragged across the prison courtyard by his ponytail.

Most of the prisoners have complained bitterly about sanitary conditions. The prisons are infested with rats and cockroaches. The food and water have caused dysentery, intestinal infection and hepatitis.

One prisoner almost died, according to his parents, of hepatitis. Another lost 70 pounds in prison as a result of an intestinal infection. Yet the prison authorities refused him treatment for nearly a year. Another man would have received no medical treatment for flu and malaria except for the kindly intervention of a priest.

But it is the uncertainty that has caused the most anguish. Most of the Americans were arrested for possessing no more than a pinch or two of marijuana or cocaine. Some pleaded innocence, claiming they had just happened to attend a party where pot was smoked

Yet they have been stuck in the slammer for months, some as long as three years, without a trial. Their parents have hired Bolivian lawyers who have collected fat fees but accomplished nothing.

The parents have also complained to us that the U.S. embassy in La Paz seemed more concerned about the sensibilities of the Bolivian authorities than the suffering of the imprisoned Americans

After we wrote about their sad situation, the State Dept. dispatched a special team to Bolivia to investigete. The investigators visited the Americans in prison, with the full cooperation of the Bolivian government. Their report is still in the drafting stage, but we can disclose the main findings

- The State Dept. confirmed that most of the American prisoners have been denied due legal process. This is regarded as a "flagrant violation" of their human rights. The Bolivian judges have deliberately held up the trials, however, to spare the Americans harsh sentences under the existing law. The judges are waiting hopefully for the law to be modified.

-The investigative team also confirmed that Americans have been mistreated in Bolivian prisons. Not all the complaints about beatings and brutality could be verified, although the report about one youth being dragged by the hair was affirmed. But the investigators concluded that the Americans were treated no worse than Bolivian prisoners in the same circumstances.

- There is also no question that sanitary conditions are substandard in the Bolivian prisons. The investigators actually saw the rats and cockroaches with their own eyes. As a result, many prisoners have had health problems.

- The State Dept. agrees that most of the Americans were arrested for simple possession. But a few of the prisoners apparently were drug traffickers. One was caught with 50 pounds of cocaine in his suitcase.

Belatedly, the State Dept. has now moved to protect the basic rights of the jailed Americans.

WASHINGTON WHIRL- Among the last of the Republican appointees. Frank Barnako was tapped to rejuvenate morale at the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission. An indication of the lack of popular support was given by the poor response to the three-month-long fund collection drive to finance the Congress. At $558,000, it was by far the lowest yield in the many collections that the party has taken since it

As political observers had forecast, Frelimo seized the unique opportunity of a large gathering of international guests to announce a fresh 'aggression at the Rhodesian racist troops."

A communique released by the official news agency AIM claimed that two civilians were killed and another four injured during an attack on a train traveling between Mapai and Chicualacuala, in the southern province of Gaza.

The agency failed to report the exact date when the alleged attack took place but claimed that "the invading forces on (Prime Minister) Ian Smith's pay had used heavy weapons, helicopters and bombers.'

If the demagogy that swept through the Congress is to be tried in practice, as Machel vowed it would, the consequences to Mozambique may well prove fatal

With international experts, such as Dr. Kurt Waldheim, agreeing that "Mozambique is in a mess," both economically and financially, Machel has set his heart on turning the country overnight into a "new Ruhr."

His plans do not seem to be dampened by the fact that agriculture and industry have shown a staggering drop of 70 per cent since the Frelimo takeover and that the country barely survives on foreign handouts.

Heavy industry has become an obsession with the Frelimo leader and his top aides. Machel keeps hammering the point that Mozambique will never be free until it breaks its dependence on Britain, West Germany and South Africa for the supply of heavy equipment and spares

And while he dreams of turning Mozambique into an industrial giant in Africa, city dwellers keep queuing all day for bread and meat while the peasants barely subsist on their meager crops.

INSIDE REPORT:

Resentment toward the U.S. by Brazil, others noted

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON - Brazil, the Latin American giant that was promised very special attention by Henry Kissinger, is shifting its benign view of U.S. foreign policy closer to outright hostility, and may possibly bid for Soviet arms in the future. This feared response by Brazil to President Carter's human rights crusade was a total surprise to the administration. Moreover, U.S. career officials are deeply worried by resentment toward the U.S. from such anti-Communist governments as Brazil's, while those governments simultaneously open doors to the Soviet Union locked for decades. In Brazil, such a sudden transformation would have seemed impossible even during the Vietnam war when the authoritarian regime was hard put to contend with anti-Americanism by the press and public. No longer. The "human rights" bloc on Capitol Hill, backed by the new administration's full moral force, has alienated Brazil and other staunch U.S. allies south of the border to a degree not matched even by the 1961 invasion of the Bay of Pigs.

The hot anger in Rio when Brazil was labelled a violator of human rights under the new congressional stricture on aid for the less than-pure has been followed by cool reappraisal of U.S.-Brazilian relations. Believing the new U.S. policy treats countries that have long supported Washington more cavalierly than the Cuba-led totalitarian left, the Brazilians could end up leading an anti-American right-of-center bloc in the Western semisphere. That development would sustain the privately voiced premonition of career officials here that Mr. Carter's human rights policy is an invitation to disaster. While fully aware that it will not democratize the Communist world, they fear it may further deplete the dwindling roster of U.S.

Brazil's immediate reaction of renouncing all future U.S. aid could lead Rio's anti-Communist regime to the Kremlin for arms. Although it supplies most of its own arms hardware, Brazil has had to buy some relatively sophisticated equipment from the U.S., including about 40 F-5 aircraft, for which spare parts soon will be needed. Having renounced all U.S. military aid. Brazil may now opt for Soviet-made SU-20 aircraft particularly given Moscow's eagerness for a deal, its easy terms and the increasingly frequent example of neighboring Peru's arms deals with the Soviets.

This U.S. humiliation of Brazil follows Brazil's support-with one exception of U.S. positions in superpower confrontations. The exception was Brazil's early recognition last year of the Marxist government of Angola, justified by Brazil's traditional special interest in Africa (particularly Portuguese Africa).

So, even before the human rights intervention, the Brazilians felt betrayed when the U.S. pressured West Germany to renege on its agreement to sell Brazil a nuclear reprocessing plant. No matter how valid Mr. Carter's campaign against nuclear proliferation, the strong-arm applied to the Germans is perceived in Rio as a hostile act, particularly since the Nixon-Ford administration accepted without reproach Brazil's negotiation with West Germany Indeed, that negotiation started only after the U.S. informed Brazil that it could expect no more oil from here.

But Mr. Carter's campaign against nuclear proliferation at least has the merit of an understandable policy designed to keep the world from blowing itself up. The human rights campaign, to the contrary, is regarded by U.S. allies as lacking any Generally unreported in the U.S. press, for example, was Uruguay's outrage when Secretary of State Cyrus Vance mentioned its alleged violations of civil rights when interrogated at a Senate hearing. Uruguay formally charged the U.S. with using its foreign aid as a "vehicle to intervene" in its internal affairs.

The reaction throughout Latin America, so long the backwater of U.S. policy, closely resembles that in Brazil and Uruguay. Also alienated are Argentina and Chile, where officials say privately the only reason Mexico has avoided being targeted in the human rights campaign is that it is controlled by an authoritarian leftist regime rather than an authoritarian rightist regime.

The long-term effect of the human rights campaign extends worldwide to such rightist regimes as South Korea and the Philippines which, despite obvious human rights infractions, maintain a common interest with the U.S. What these nations, including Brazil, find incomprehensible is why Washington does not discriminate between friends and foes in its new role of world human rights arbiter. Brazil for one will not play, and ther dropouts may soon follow.

WOW! I THINK I CAN SEE CLEAR INTO TOMORROW!

1977 shows signs of becoming 'Year of Copycat'

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Movie attendance in early 1977 has hit a near-record, with "King Kong," "A Star Is Born," "The Enforcer" and "The Pink Panther Strikes Again" leading the way. All four films have something in common: they are sequels or remakes.

"King Kong" first broke loose in 1933 and has been seen over the years in American and Japanese rehashes. "A Star Is Born" has been thrice made - four times if you count the 1932 precursor "What Price Hollywood?"

"Dirty Harry" and "Magnum Force" preceded Clint Eastwood's "The Enforcer." Peter Sellers has stumbled through four "Pink Panther" comedies, and Alan Arkin played Inspector Clouseau once.

Enough re-dos are in the works to make 1977 the Year of the Copycat.

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. - A tale of mystery, intrigue and fabulous wealth - all the makings of a James Bond spy thriller - is unfolding in the southern New Mexico desert this weekend.

The object of this adventure is gold. Enough gold, they say, to boggle the minds of the greediest of villains in treasure hunt fiction.

The gold is out there, the legend goes, carefully "stacked like cordwood," in a lost mountain cavern on the Army's super-secret missile testing range.
After years of being badgered by lawyers and gold seekers, the army finally has agreed to allow a limited expedition to explore for the Lost Treasure of Victorio Peak.

"Goldfinger" is not believed to be a coincidence. claiming they were in a cavern large enough to hold "We had to call it something," said Maj. Kenneth a freight train. Noss, later shot to death by a would-Abel, the White Sands information officer, barely be partner, said he found 27 human skeletons chained

The search, barring any last minute legal complications, is being led by professional treasure hunter Norman Scott of Pompano Beach, Fla. His authority to search, given by the Secretary of the Army himself, is good for 10 days beginning at dawn

In characteristic military fashion, but perhaps also with tongue in cheek, the army has given the event a formal code name: Operation Gold Finder. any resemblance to the James Bond story called on what story you believe, if any. There even have been claims that the Army sealed stories tell of mysterious gold shipments to Swit-The story goes that a chiropodist known as Doc zerland and the Far East. And there are those who Noss discovered the hidden gold bars in 1937, scoff at the whole thing as a giant con job. "My personal view is that it is all a hoax." said one New Mexico resident who has tried for more than 15 years to unravel the conflicting claims to the gold. Hoax or no hoax, Scott and his backers are spending $75,000 on the 10-day search which may turn out to be, if nothing else, the most highly publicized treasure hunt in history.

About 90 reporters and cameramen representing newspapers, magazines, television and radio stations from coast to coast are here for the event. They attended a press briefing by Abel, Scott and others Friday at the White Sands base.

It is a beautiful legend, but it is driving me up the wall," said Abel, who will act as chief tour guide and watchdog for reporters as they scramble over the desert in the wake of Scott and his electronic search

'It's like the Klondike all over again," Abel said. The major told the press briefing the Army never has searched for the gold, is not searching for it now and will be as surprised as anyone if any gold is found. Above all, the Army would like to get the legend out of its hair and get back to the fulltime business of testing missiles, Abel said.

Scott listened intently and without expression while Abel briefly outlined the legend of Victorio Peak and set down strict guidelines for reporters to follow. They included a stern admonition to watch out for live ammunition left over from Air Force gunnery practice.

At 47, Scott does not look like the adventuresome or swashbuckler type. His hairline has retreated well up his forehead and his waistline is far from the trim 32 or 34 of a James bond.

But he and his salvage firm, Expeditions Unlimited, have credentials for the job. One of Scott's feats was to recover more than $1 million of long lost Indian treasure in Mexico.

Scott represents four separate groups that have laid claim to the legendary Lost Treasure of the Victorio Peak, in a remote area 40 miles north of the base and 60 miles from Las Cruces, they include a contingent led by lawyer F. Lee Bailey and the second wife of Doc Noss, Mrs. violet Noss Yance of Ft. Worth. Tex. Scott does not represent, however, the first Mrs.

Doc Noss who claims she found the gold with her husband back in 1937 only to have the treasure buried two years later by a dynamite charge. Noss was trying to widen the shaft to the mountain chamber but caused a massive cave-in instead. Mrs. Ova Noss was represented here by Los Angeles attorney David Daar who insisted the "true treasure trove" remains sealed away in the "bowels | 19 BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES of Victorio Peak. Daar said he is not optimistic that Scott will be able to find it because of the limited time allowed by the Army, but, "we hope Scott turns something up." If he does, Mrs. Noss will claim it as hers, he said. Scott talked matter-of-factly about the venture, as though it was just another job.

"I'm not here to plead the case of anyone," he said. "I'm just here as a contractor."

Scott said he personally just counts up to 90 per cent of the legends and rumors swirling around Victorio Peak. But that one chance in 10, plus hints of ASMUSICAL INSTRUMENTS having secret information, is enough to spur him on. Daar said Mrs. Noss has given Scott limited consent to search for "her claim," but will consider anything found to be her gold and will not offer Scott | MOFFICE SUPPLIES any secret information they have.

Mrs. Noss sat in the audience, amid the media, and listened attentively, smiling knowingly from time to time. She is a large white haired woman who wore a silver-and-turquoise Indian necklace, bracelet and

Oh, bury me not without my Ferrari'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The burial of a wealthy California widow is being delayed while lawyers and morticians study her unusual will, which directs she be interred dressed in a lace nightgown and seated in 87 INVESTMENT PROPERTY her expensive Italian sports car.

The five-year-old, handwritten will of Sandra Ilene West. 37, of Beverly Hills, was filed for probate Thursday in Los Angeles superior court.

Mrs. West died last week. A spokesman for Porter Loring Funeral Home in San Antonio said her body was embalmed and a memorial service held Wednesday

"But interment will be upheld pending court action on the will," said the spokesman, who asked not to be identified

He said Mrs. West's body is at the funeral home and, since it has already been embalmed, "could be kept for several weeks. 'We've never buried anyone in a sports car," said the funeral home spokesman. "We have nothing to compare this with. You hear rumors about rich Texans being buried in their Cadillacs, but they're just rumors as far as I've ever found out.

He said the funeral home is awaiting instructions on what to do next with Mrs. West's body

The lawyer who filed the will for Mrs. West said she was the widow of the late Ike West Jr. and estimated the value of her estate at more than $2.5 million.

The will, with spelling and grammar errors, named as executor Sol West III of Comfort, Tex., brother of her late husband.

According to the will, Sol West is to inherit the bulk of the estate, providing he carries out the deceased woman's request that she be buried "next to my husband in my lace nightgown and in my Ferrari with the seat slanted comfortably.

"If a coffin is used other than for shipping," the will states, "he (Sol West) is to be disinherited except for $10,000." The funeral home spokesman said the Ferrari is not at the home here. Ike West is buried in a San Antonio cemetery," he said. Sol West, reached by phone at his home in Comfort, which is about 50 miles northwest of San Antonio.

declined comment.

A court hearing on the probate request has been set for April 11 in Los Angeles. If the proceedings are lengthy, the funeral home spokesman said Mrs. West's body would probably be temporarily interred Meanwhile, the public administrator's office in Los Angeles has filed a petition to search a safe deposit box for a possible second will.

'Roots' inspiring children's names

By MARTIN MERZER

Inspired by feelings of pride associated with the novel and television series "Roots," scores of black parents are naming newborn children after the work's leading

An Associated Press survey of major American cities found many that reported children being named Kunta Kinte and Kizzy. Kinte, author Alex Haley's ancestor, was kidnaped from his African home and brought to America on a slave ship. Kizzy was Kinte's daughter.

"I identified with Kunta Kinte, and I thought the name Kizzy was a way I could express that," said Willie Parker of Carol City, a Miami suburb.

His wife, Carrie, initially wanted to name their new daughter Nicole. But Parker said he was especially moved by the scene from the television series in which Kinte names his child and then raises her to the stars and tells her to behold the only thing greater than herself. So, he persuaded his wife to name their child Kizzy.

"I just thought it was the thing to do," he said. "If we had had a boy, I would have named him Kunta.

At Kings County Hospital in Brooklyn, N.Y., maternity nursing supervisor Nancy O'Donohue said that at least two girls had been named Kizzy and one boy named Kunta. "We really didn't expect a lot of them because people have their names picked out in advance," she said. "But they are nice-sounding names and as time goes on, more will probably show up. Use of African names has become common among black parents in recent years. Among the unusual names being used within the past month at Kings County were, Tamara, Dashia, Manouchka, Tamika, Jamila, Tafari, Talisa and In Hartford, Conn., Matte Halstead, whose great-grandmother was taken from Africa as a slave, said she was instrumental in her great-grandson being named Kunta Kinte. She said that she hoped giving an

NCAA not same without Bruins

By The Associated Press

Somehow it just won't be the same. UCLA won't be there.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association used to be nicknamed the UCLA Invitational, a tribute to the Bruins long-term lock on college basketball's national championship.

Oh, there were a few times they didn't quite make it all the way. Last year, the first one under Coach Gene Bartow, they finished third in the tourney, losing to eventual champion Indiana in the national semifinal. Three years ago, John Wooden's next-to-last as coach of the Bruin dynasty, they were third again, dropping a double-overtime national semifinal to North Carolina State.

Other than those two slips and a non-playoff season in 1966, the Bruins had been to the final four every year since 1964. And of course they were given a strong shot at being back in that select circle again this year.

AFTER ALL, UCLA was 24-4 and second-ranked in the nation and, although the Bruins were facing an Idaho State team with the same record, the Big Sky champs were relative nobodies, not even in the national rankings. The big question was whether UCLA could slow down highpowered, fourth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas in the NCAA's West Regional final on Saturday night.

What nobody figured was the Big Sky falling in on the Pacific-8. "No one knows much about the Big Sky because we don't get the television exposure," Idaho State Coach Jim Killingsworth said after the Bengals shocked the Bruins 76- 75 Thursday night, ending UCLA's 10-year reign as the NCAA West's champions. "But we proved we're a fine conference."

Now they have to prove it all over again-to Nevada-Las Vegas, which fended off 14th-ranked Utah 88-83 in the other NCAA West semifinal.

In Saturday's other regional finals, top-ranked Michigan goes against No. 17 North Carolina-Charlotte in the Mideast at Lexington, Ky., thirdranked Kentucky faces fifth-rated North Carolina in the East title game at College Park, Md., and No. 7 Marquette takes on No. 9 Wake Forest in the Midwest championship at

"I THING we played a very fine team." said Bartow, who for the second straight year failed to begin an odyssey like Wooden's. "They were obviously very well prepared for us ... We did not underestimate Idaho State. They just came out and played a great game.

Just as Idaho State beat the Bruins by employing one of UCLA's most effective weapons, a murderous defense, the Rebels from Las Vegas gambled and won by co-opting a Utah

"We went to our delay game in the final minute to get the easy layup. We were able to get a couple of cheap ones that way," Coach Jerry Tarka-nian said. "I knew if Utah got the lead, they would go into a stall. We beat them at their own game. If Utah had gone into a stall, we definitely would have been in trouble." Coach Lee Rose of UNC-Charlotte. seems to be downplaying the 49ers' upcoming date with the top-ranked Wolverines. "We are not super psyched for it," he said. "It's just a great honor to be playing No. 1. No matter what happens, we finish a lot better than we expected."

AND MICHIGAN Coach Johnny Orr doesn't seem to know-or care-what UNC-Charlotte will throw at his Wolverines. What the Big Ten champions throw back is what's on his mind. "Our main concern is to execute what we do and play defense. If it isn't good enough, it just isn't good enough. So far it has been good enough 26 times."

Michigan, 26-3, is naturally favored to beat the Sun Belt Conference champs, 27-3. Michigan got to this point by nosing out Detroit 86-81 while UNCC rolled over sixth-ranked

All-American guard Phil Ford of throws with two seconds left beat Notre Dame 79-77 in the East semifinals, said a painful elbow injury wouldn't hamper him against Kentucky. "It hurts now," he said, "but it'll be ready for Saturday."

The Tar Heels had better be ready for Truman Claytor, too. The Wildcat bench-warmer, averaging less than six points a game, poured in 29 to power Kentucky's 93-78 thumping of 20th-ranked VMI.

"I've never done shooting like that," he exclaimed, "not in college, high school, junior high or even prac-

On Saturday night, he'll be where he started Thursday night's game-on the bench. "He's playing perfect right now and I don't want to change that," Coach Joe Hall said.

Duro was third with 72 and Odessa Permian fourth with 64. One big surprise for Midland came Midland High finished fifth with 62 points, but it was the first time this year that the 'Dogs finished ahead of Lee High, who was last with 58

THE CLOSEST division race of the night, however, came in the junior varsity where Permian nudged out San Angelo and Lee by winning the mile relay. Permian ended up with 107 points to San Angelo's 104 and Lee's 98. Midland was sixth with 37

Odessa Ector, as expected, captured the girls division with 135 points, but Big Spring's 129 for second place was closer than most expected. Midland was fifth with 42 points and Lee sixth with 34.

San Angelo's Harold Ledet and Neville Leverette led the Bobcat charge in the boys varsity division. Ledet set two meet records with a 61-8 feet in the shot put and a 167-234 in the discus. Leverette set a new standard in the high jump with a West Texas best of 6-7 feet.

THE ONLY other record of the day came in the pole vault where Amarillo's Perry Williams vaulted 14-6 to erase former Lee star Bill Curnow's record of 14-5 set in 1970

Two first place finishes by Midland High propelled the Bulldogs over Lee for the first time this year. Robert Wilson, as expected, won the mile run uncontested with a 4:25.5, not his best, and Jeff Adkins, at home in a cross country race, won the special twomile run with a 9:53.3. That was a big race for Midland as Pat Darden finished third and Harold Steward fourth.

Lee failed to win a race for the second week in a row, but some good times were turned in, especially in the put with his best of the year, a 53-9, and Jody Sessom was second in the pole vault with a 11-6. Lee was also second in the 440 relay, but Jamie Berry had his best time in the 440 dash with a 52.0 only to finish fifth in a strong field.

in the shot put where Brian Booker was third with a 52-1, the first time for him to clear 50-feet in his career.

MIDLAND BROUGHT home three firsts in the girls division, making it the best effort of the year for the Pack fems. Gloria Caldwell remained undefeated in the 880 with a 2:34.9, which was not challenged, and Loryanne Coon won her first mile race with a 6:25,1. Celeste Washington won the 440 with a 1:00.4.

Lee's only first came in the high jump where Debra Ledbetter won with her best jump of 4-10. There was some disappointment among the fans when highly regarded Julie Ochsner could manage only thirds in the 100 and 220 with times worse than her previous bests. Terry Reyes ran a strong 880 for third with a 2:37.7 and Hall was third in the 440 with a 1:00.9.

Lee captured three firsts in the junior varsity competition as Wes Watley won the high hurdles with a 15.4 and Steve Hooper took the mile with a 4:35.6. Lee Hagelstein won the 440 with a 52.6. Watley and Hooper have scored points for the Lee varsity this year. Their absence cost the Rebs in the varsity division. MIDLAND HIGH'S best effort in the JV run came in the mile where Paul Darden won second with a 4:57.0 behind Hooper. It was Hooper's second win of the year. He owns one victory over Midland's Wilson in the mile, an upset in the first week at Brownfield.

Danny King of Permian just missed a new record in the long jump with a 22-2. Jerry Moore of Lee managed a third with a 21-1%

Steve Buck led Palo Duro with wins in both hurdles.

Illusion of insecurity in pro sports needed

BY TED BATTLES

The New York Knicks had it wrapped up 108-100 even after Portland's Johnny Davis hit a jump shot with seven seconds left and the Madison Square Garden crowd was happy.

Then Lionel Hollins stole an inbounds pass and scored again for the Trail Blazers. On the next inbounds pass, the Knicks' Earl Monroe took the pass and calmly arched a shot into the Portland basket from the corner at the final buzzer and the Knicks' lead had dwindled to

Since the Knicks still won, to most, maybe, it didn't make that much difference, but to many in the crowd, those at least who had taken the Knicks and six, it smelled like something out of the college basketball fixes of the 1950s and 1960s and they brought down the house with their vocal disapproval.

THE ODOR of the incident drifted to the National Basketball Association offices and an investigation was called

It may be, as Earl claimed, "I just forgot where I was," That's for someone else to determine and the guy is innocent until caught with his hand in the till.

Still, you've got to wonder. With longterm, no cut security contracts and all and the generous playoff payoffs, you'd think the danger of such shennanigans as point-doctoring would be a thing of the past.

Then, again, you figure after taxes and agent's percentage, a guy may be left with only $75,000 or $100,000 take home, so is he immune to succumbing to the temptation of a little tax-free

It's a situation that makes some observations by Sporting News writer Leonard Koppett worthy of digestion, particularly since he discussed it before the Monroe incident ever arose.

WRITES KOPPETT, "So the whole idea of a long season with a league standing and prize money at the end for all playoff teams is based on money motivation. If only honor were involved, there would be little reason to doubt that members of a last-place team late in a season were trying hard, it just being the thing to do.

"But because we accept the idea that these professional athletes, as individuals, have career reputations to maintain for the sake of future earnings, we are more willing to believe in an all-out effort 'down to the Koppett goes on, "But now, for the first time, this is becoming untrue-in the preception of the fan, whatever the actual motivation of the athletes may

"A RECENT letter to the Sporting News went right to the heart of the matter." The letter writer observed, "To me security is not part of athletic philosophy. INSECURITY is the motivating force of any athletic team. The fact that someone might take your place if you don't give 100 percent is a part of any success a team might en-

Koppett ponders, "Insecurity Contemplate the word and the concept behind it. No matter how sincerely an athlete may insist that his 'will to win' is unaffected by financial security- no matter how true this may be in his particular case— it is a simple fact of life that the public, in general, will not believe it. The fan knows in his heart, what a large guaranteed income would do to his enthusiasm for his own job. He won't assume that all pro athletes are so exceptionally security is essential," Koppett continues. "All our habitual responses to professional sprots have been built on it. If we can't feel that the players risk something by losing and gain something -- something material-by winning, it become indifferent, or to begin to suspect that the players might choose other priorities and 'arrange' an outcome; collect a bet, set up a rematch, to accommodate a friend, to build up the next gate, to create an 'exciting show', or whatever motive one could imagine.

We'll have to admit, any time a $200,000 a year athlete makes a blunder that might not even be excused on the high school level, the suspicion has crossed the mind that maybe, just maybe. something has been 'arranged.'

Whipping winds balloon scores in TPC tourney

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) -Mike McCullough, one of the longest of the longshots in a field of stars, confidently conquered the whipping winds that destroyed the tempo and tempers of his fellows, shot a 74 and retained a two-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the $300,000 Tournament Players Golf Championship.

"Just do the best you can," shrugged McCullough, a 31- year-old former school teacher who hasn't come close to winning in five years of tour activity and, until his opening 66, hadn't even led a tour event.

THIS TIME his 140 total, four under par, was one of only two sub-par scores for 36 holes over incredibly tough Sawgrass, 7,174 yards of reclaimed marsh and swamp swept by winds gusting well above 40 miles per hour. These conditions turned the best efforts of the game's greatest players into pathetic, sometimes almost laughable, performances.

Tom Watson, a two-time winner already this year, matched Mc-Cullough's 74 with a 41-33 and was alone in second at 142.

The course, long, tight, with tiny humpbacked greens, is being played by the tourists for the first time. It had the reputation of being one of the toughest in the country, and the unusual wind from the west turned it into something approaching a nightmare.

IT WAS a horror show on the course. But, after the players' tempers cooled, they joked about it in the locker room. 'If this was an airport, it would be closed," said John Schlee. 'What's the average score gonna be?" someone asked. "Withdrew," replied Allen Miller. 'Never enjoyed a golf tournament

so much in my life," said Jerry McGee, who injured his toe, banging it with a putter, and withdrew before the first round started. "He's the smartest player in the field," said Bruce Lietzke. "I took 20 swings at my toe out there today and missed it every time.

"First time I ever withdrew with a ball in the air," said Cesar Sanudo. "I'd hit two in the water on the ninth, teed it up again, hit this big, high hook and saw it was heading for the lake and walked in with the ball still in the air."

THE EARLY finishers began gleefully toting up a "worst ball' score. Lietzke was the scorekeeper. A loud cheer went up when someone scored an eight. "That puts it up to 126," Lietzke announced.

That didn't include any of the scores on Homero Blancas' card. He shot 91, didn't sign his card and was disqualified. The players solemnly ruled his scores couldn't be counted.

About a dozen players either withdrew or shot such embarassing scores they declined to sign their cards and were disqualified.

Jack Nicklaus put two 7s on his card, shot 74 for 147 and, obviously angered, declined a request to discuss his round with the press.

Finley to fight Kuhn to the highest court

CHICAGO (AP) - Oakland A's owner Charles Finley said Friday if a decision against him is upheld in the higher courts, baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn will wield more power than the President of the United Finley, still rattling from the loss of his $3.5 million suit against Kuhn, said he will carry his fight to overturn the decision by Judge Frank McGarr all the way to the Supreme Court, if necessary.

"It would be a shame to have a commissioner of baseball with unlimited power, especially someone who might be off his rocker," Finley said.

THE A's owner is angry that McGarr failed to rule on the validity of an amendment to the Major League Agreement by which the major league owners waived their right to sue the commissioner in the courts. In his decision released on Thursday, McGarr pinned his opinion on that agreement. On Friday, McGarr said through his secretary that he will not speak to reporters about the case but his decision is sprinkled with surprise that the owners gave virtually unlimited authority to their commissioner.

"The questionable widsom of this broad delegation of power is not before the court," McGarr wrote. "What the parties (the owners) intended is.'

He noted that the owners granted such "broad and unfettered" discretion to the baseball commissioner "that they provided no right of appeal and even took the extreme step of foreclosing their own access to the courts.'

McGarr specifically stated in his ruling that the constitutionality of the owners' court-waiver was not addressed in his opinion.

BUT, McGARR said, at one point in the trial, "the court doubted...whether it might not be contrary to public policy to contract away resort to the courts..." He said the issue was not considered because it had not been developed or explored during the case. Under McGarr's decision, Kuhn would have the authority to render an owner unfit to run his ball club and assume operation himself without the owner having any legal recourse, Finley said.

'That's what he (McGarr) is saying and I'll take this thing all the way to the United States Supreme Court, if

NEW YORK (AP) - Otis Birdsong is leading all scorers in the National Invitation Tournament with 78 points. more than anyone else has scored so far. But, if you ask Houston Coach Guy Lewis the NIT hasn't seen Birdsong's best vet.

BIRDSONG has the blahs, said Lewis. And Sunday would be a perfect time for him to shake them in the NIT title game against St. Bonaventure.

"Otis Birdsong is an All-American if I ever saw one," Lewis said Friday. "But he'd be the first one to tell you that he hasn't had a good tourna-

Lewis said he was particulary the basket and then slipped back." said Lewis. "I asked him if he had borrowed somebody else's shoes. I don't think he knows what's wrong himself. But he's certainly hasn't played up to his potential. Birdsong is almost certain to be a first-round choice in the National Basketball Association draft and Lewis predicts the 6- foot-4 guard will be a great pro player. He'd like to be great once more for Houston though. St. Bonaventure, which reached the championship game with an 86-82

decision over Villanova, hopes Birdsong's blues last one more game. "If Otis is having a bad tournament

Hellzapoppin' revs up for revival in Big Apple

By SHIRLEY POVICH The Washington Post

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. - No American League pennant was ever won by a powder keg in pin stripes. It could happen and probably will this year. The New York Yankees are at once the best team in the league and the most combustible. They are a mine field of individual egos, including that of club owner George Steinbrenner, which will be exposed to the many bruises of the game for the next six months.

That there will be intramural blowups is predictable. Also, individual sulks and other forms of blown gaskets. The Yankee could be shaken, but hardly destroyed. They are so constant, and they have so little to beat in the league.

They are better than the Yankee team that romped away from the Red Sox by 10 1-2 games last season. They have added Don Gullett, the expensive pitcher from the Reds, and Reggie Jackson, an even more expensive

If such came to pass, Jackson wouldn't like it. He has been the big man at Oakland and at Baltimore last season. He has never been a managerial problem, but he never had to justify a $2.9 million contract before.

Jackson was a little testy the other day in Florida when he told a reporter, "The press has created all this talk about discord on the

'Why don't you guys write about the greatness of this team and the things I can do. Hell, I've averaged 31 home runs for nine seasons, best in the majors, and averaged 91 runs batted in ... but all I read is negative. negative, negative and it's beginning to bug me.

IT WAS Jackson's big contract with the Yankees that bugged Munson, their No. 1 catcher. The Yankees' team leader stomped agrily, demanded his own three-year contract be torn up in favor of a new one and pointed to his .302 and .318 batting averages the last two seasons. He could also have pointed to the fact that millionaire Jackson, for all his self-proclaimed greatness, has never hit .300 in his life, and in fact has batted .280 only twice in his nine-season career.

Munson got a bigger contract, but so much for the lasting love match with his employers.

There has already been an explosion between Martin and his fleet center fielder, Mickey Rivers, in spring training. Rivers, the invaluable lead-off man who hit .312 and stole 43 bases in 50 tries, has refused to change his bunting style. Martin wants him to drag bunt more. "I bunt my way," said Rivers. He is the same player who had a confrontation with Martin last season about wives traveling with the team.

BY ACTUAL count, there are at least seven unhappy Yankees. These are the seven who have refused to sign contracts for this season and are taking a 20 per cent salary cut to play out their option that would separate them from the team as free agents at season's end. This in a year when Steinbrenner is paying out all those

But the fact that the Yankees may not be a happy family does not doom them. The Oakland A's won four straight pennants while continually squabbling in the locker room and holding on-field fights. Perhaps it was their greater and common hostility toward owner Charlie Finley that served to unite them. For this year's Yankees, the old A's have posted the precedent that, in baseball, love is not

Young player is something special

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

I know now how the late sportswriter Grantland Rice must have felt at the 1932 Olympic trials, when he first laid eyes on the immortal Babe Didrickson.

Watching the teenage wonder from Beaumont out there on the cinder track of the L.A. Coliseum, Rice realized within moments that this lass was something special. Something he would not soon see

It obviously took a lot to awe Rice. He had seen and known well some of the greatest athletes who ever lived: Ruth, Gehrig, Thorpe, Grange, Big Bill Tilner, Bobby Jones, Cobb, and so many, many more. But Didrickson did awe him. She towered above the rest out there - not in physical stature, but in ability. In essence, she was a beautiful rose growing among lilacs and daffodils. A young woman destined for a meeting with greatness.

I cannot attest to having seen men like Ruth or Gehrig. At 22, there is stil 95 per cent of the athletic spectrum I haven't seen, and I might add, probably never will. But I know something special when I see or at least the promise of it, and last Saturday past, I believe I saw it in Vicki Vasicek.

At the tender age of 15, this young lady is developing into one helluva tennis player, and as I sat there in the stands and watched her whip Kerri Ashford, 6-1, 6-3, and capture the girls' singles title of the Tall City Tennis Classic, I couldn't help but feel that I was watching the beginning of something big. Perhaps the first signs of growth in still another

FOR ALL of the imperfections that still remain in her game, Vicki has something so very crucial to athletic success - natural ability. Moving left to right, and back and forth on the rectangular surface with the quickness of a deer, attacking the net when the situation presents itself and battling her opponent with a fine arsenal of ground strokes, this teenager is a natural all right. There's no mistaking

And just as important as her natural ability, is Vicki's intense drive and desire to win. I saw it in her face during her semifinal battle with Robin Winstead of El Paso Irvin. Struggling through a poor first set which she would ultimately lose 7-5, before battling back to devastate Winstead in the final two, 6-1, 6-1, saw the strain that even the thought of defeat was creating inside her.

IT WORRIED me at first. Something deep down inside told me a girl this young should not be exposed to this kind of pressure. It could be self-destructive for someone not quite ready to handle it.

But I've learned since that Vicki Vasicek is a perfectionist, and I guess you've got to be in tennis game of perfection. In the end, it's the difference between being good, and being great.

Perfectionist or not Vicki, keep in mind that no one can win constantly, and anyone who believes they can is only kidding themselves. The true mark of a champion is the ability to learn from defeat

If I thought these words written here would go to her head. I'd never have written them. But I don't think they will. Vicki Vasicek strikes me as an athlete who is well aware of how far she's come and how far she has yet to go.

The championship she won Saturday will lose any real significance to her and to everybody else in a matter of time. It's only natural. Four years from now, the small trophy she won for her effort against Ashford will be overshadowed by dozens of much bigger and much more important ones.

But remember the date if you will - March 12, 1977. It was the day Vicki Vasicek took her first giant step

Cubs' Buckner limps on

The Los Angeles Times

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. -The hurt and bitterness Bill Buckner expressed when traded by the Dodgers last winter has eased some.

He is still disappointed at the thought of not playing for new Los Angeles manager Tom Lasorda who has been like a father to Buckner, and he is still attempting to generate his former desire now that he is with the Chicago Cubs.

But the frustration that stemmed from the trade in which Rick Monday went to Los Angeles is now manifested in a different way and for different reasons.

The aggressive and competitive Buckner is having trouble running. He is having trouble walking. He says he would be in the lineup if the season opened tomorrow but "it would be very uncomfortable and I wouldn't look much like a player."

THE SEASON is still four weeks away but even that is not reassuring to the 27-year-old Buckner.

"It will be two or three months before I'm running decently," Buckner said as he relaxed on a bench by the batting cages at the Cubs' training base here. 'I'd like to be able to walk without pain," said, "let alone play baseball. I haven't been able to take a step for five months without thinking of the hurt."

October has not been the simple thing which Buckner believed it was going to be.

"I'm not very happy about it." Buckner said, scuffing the dirt with the cleats of his right shoe. He first injured his left ankle early in the 1975 season. Thought was spur given to an immediate operation in which a tendon would be restructured. The Dodgers, however, believed that with rest and care the operation could be delayed.

Buckner went on the disabled list, came off, went back on, came off and limped before discussing his new enundergoing surgery in September. The operation was a success but Dr. Frank Jobe discovered a bone spur that he could not remove without complicating the surgery.

So, Buckner limped again in 1976 though the pain was not as intense. He batted .301 and went back to Dr. Jobe to have the bone spur removed in an operation which Buckner believed was merely a "cleaning up" of the first one

"The irritating thing Buckner said. could have played this year without the operation and hit .300 just as I did last year. That's what An ankle operation last bothers me. It's not to say that anyone held a gun to my head and forced me to have the operation. It was just that I was under the impression there would be nothing to it." 'They'll have to drag me back to the hospital, said Buckner, who will undergo injections for the Buckner has been spending several hours in the batting cage each day and several more attempting to run painful laps. 'If we let him." Cubs trainer Tony Garofalo said, "he'd be out here all night. Buckner chooses his words carefully when

"When you're traded from a contender to a team that's never been a contender," he said, "I think it's natural to have some of the fun and desire go out of it. I've really had to push myself. It's strange. Everyone here is from a different organization. You look around the clubhouse and there's red shoes and green shoes and blue shoes. There's not the close-knit feeling I knew in the Dodger organiza-

He sighed.

"But I suppose," he said, "that when the games start it will be just the same, that I'll play the way I always have. "Even with this ankle.

I've always been a funny runner anyway. I've always run as if I had a broken leg.
