Midlanders back oil film

A Midland-based committee has been formed to produce a television film "telling the true story of the risks involved in drilling for oil and gas and the advantages of a free enterprise system.

The committee, the American Oil and Gas Story Committee, is made up of several Midlanders, persons from other areas of Texas and New Mexico.

The spokesmen for the new group at a press conference in Midland this morning were Joseph I. O'Neill III, a and Ed Thompson, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

Although the project is not an of-ficial activity of the PBPA, several members have contributed funds and are participating in the work of the Members of the committee, in addition to O'Neill and Thompson, include Jay Alvey, Odessa; Mrs. Ernest Angelo Jr., Midland; Pearce Beneke, Dallas; Jim Cahill, Sonora; Mrs. Tom Craddick, Midland; A. W. Dillard, Midland; J. W. Hall, Odessa; T. J. Sivley, Artesia, N.M.; Clark Straughn, Midland, and Jim Wooten,

The primary goal of the AOGS is to better inform the public of all aspects of the oil and gas story - past, especially in those areas relating to the independent operators and their impact on the consumer, the overall economy and the future of America, O'Neill

"Following almost six months of investigation by numerous sources, the AOGS committee decide the best vehicle to relate the oil and gas story would be a network quality film release, or a series of films,' Thompson said.

Beneke, an independent producer with offices in Dallas and Los Angeles, signed a contract with the committee to produce the film.

Beneke's staff will start research on the project next week, from headquarters in the Midland Hilton. He said the film should be ready by viewing next fall.

Basin and across the nation are being invited to become involved in AOGS both personally and financially.

"We are going to explain our story, not gloss it over, about the risks involved in the search for petroleum. To educate the public on the costs of energy and the terrible drain on our economy through purchasing oil from foreign countries," O'Neill said.

He added that "no single act of legislation or any fireside chat will solve our energy problems, so this film will have an impact on an eventual realistic energy policy for

Beneke said as much local talent as possible would be used in producing

Thompson said donations for the project already have been partially ranchers, women's groups, independent operators, oil field equipment manufacturers and suppliers, dirt contractors, oil field haulers, well serving companies and drilling contractors.

Carter defers U.S. nuclear breeder use

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter announced today that he is deferring U.S. development of nuclear breeder reactors, the power plants that produce additional fuel but could help increase the spread of atomic weaponry in the world.

Carter said the risk of spreading nuclear weapons "would be vastly increased by the further spread of sensitive technologies which entail direct access to plutonium, highly enriched uranium or other weaponsusable material." The breeder is powered by plutonium and is so named because it produces more fuel than it consumes.

The statement issued by Carter said the United States will study "alternative designs of the breeder" but postpone their adoption for commercial use. Without mentioning the project by name, the statment appeared to spell the end of the proposed Clinch River breeder reactor, a $2 billion, demonstration plant planned near Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Carter said he would also defer indefinitely the commercial reprocessing and recycling of plutonium produced by U.S. nuclear power programs.

A reprocessing plant planned by industry at Barnwell, S.C., but now seeking federal support, "will receive neither federal encouragement nor funding for its completion as a reprocessing facility."

Carter said the United States will toward alternative systems of nuclear power that do not make available materials usable for nuclear weapons.

While cutting back the breeder program, which would have multiplied nuclear fuels, Carter pledged to increase U.S. production capacity for enriched uranium, the fuel used in conventional nuclear power plants.

This promise was a reassurance to both the domestic nuclear industry and foreign nations that fuel would continue to be available for conventional plants and they need not necessarily build breeder reactors.

Carter added he would propose legislation "to permit the U.S. to offer nuclear fuel supply contracts and guarantee delivery of such nuclear fuel to other countries.

He said he would continue to bar exports of uranium enrichment and nuclear fuel reprocessing equipment and technology.

And Carter said he would seek establishment of an international program to develop alternative nuclear fuel cycles and measures to assure access to nuclear fuel supplies and spent fuel storage "for nations sharing common nonproliferation

Sources indicated that Carter did much of the work on the policy statement himself and that it is a strong reflection of the President's personal view on the need to limit nuclear proliferation.

In his campaign for the White House, Carter promised to develop a policy that would halt the spread of nuclear technology and particularly the spread of plutonium, which can be used in the manufacture of nuclear Carter's new policy will halt development of any commercial capacity in this country to reprocess plutonium from spent nuclear reactor fuel. This would be a basis for Carter to ask other countries to do the same.

Price index shows 1.1 per cent rise

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government said today that wholesale prices increased 1.1 per cent in March, the second big monthly increase in a row and much worse than expected.

The increase was sure to fuel demands that the Carter administration take steps to counter a growing threat of a new inflationary surge in the economy. The March increase followed a wholesale price rise of nine-tenths of a per cent in February and was the largest monthly rise since October of Although prices of farm products led the price surge with a 2.5 per cent increase, the most alarming danger signal in the price report was an eight-tenths of a per cent increase in prices of industrial commodities, up from a six-tenths of a per cent increase in February. Economists look to prices of industrial goods as giving the best picture of underlying inflationary trends. There were sharply higher prices during the month for metals and metal product, textiles, apparel and transportation equipment

The Labor Department said prices also turned up for lumber and wood products, rubber and plastic products following declines in February.

Price trends at the wholesale level are eventually passed along to the consumer at least in part, since they represent higher costs to businesses that produce the goods consumers

If continued for a 12-month period, the March increase in wholesale prices would result in an overall increase of 13 per cent for the year.

hospital measure

AUSTIN - The Senate Wednesday passed Senate Bill 1210, which would enable Midland County to create a hospital district, according to Sen W. E. "Pete" Snelson who sponsored the legislation.

The bill now goes to the House of Representatives where it will be substituted by Rep. Tom Craddick for a bill that he introduced.

"I am delighted that we have completed another stage of the legislative procession which will permit the people of Midland County to make a decision in regard to future hospital plans," Snelson said.

Senate OKs 79 oil, gas leases bring $3 million in early bidding

More than $3 million was spent during the first 90 minutes of the University of Lands public auction of oil and gas leases under way in the Midland Hilton.

More than 400 persons jammed the hotel's ballroom to witness opening ceremonies which included a greeting to the sales participants by Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr.

The actual sale, conducted by the verbal barrage of veteran Paris, Tex., auctioneer Blake Moore, got under way at 10 a.m. By 11:30 a. m., 79 of 81 tracts offered, were sold. The highest bid was $480,000 on a half section in Ward County, Tract

The bonus total, which goes to the University of Texas System permanent fund, hit 3,102,500 when south half of section 15, block 46 in Culberson County went into the "sold" col-

In all, approximately 147,000 acres of the University lands leases in several West Texas counties will be offered before the sale concludes this afternoon. Although the sale total went over the $3 million mark during the first hour and a half, James B Zimmerman, geologist in charge of the University Lands office in Midland, said it was too early to predict a record sale. At 11:30 370 tracts remained to be sold. The record income from a University sale was set in 1956 when $16,374,500 in bonuses were paid for the leases. The Ward brought the $480,000 as the highest tract bid, also figures out as the highest per-acre price paid until that point -$1,498.

The second highest price was for a half section in Ward County, Tract No. 75. Located in the same block with the $480,000 parcel, it went for

It took only 30 minutes for the sale total to surpass the $1 million mark. That plateau was reached when Tract No. 61, which is the north half of section two, block 17 in Ward County was sold for 78,000. That put the total at $1,014,000.

The third highest tract this morining was No. 74 near the No. 1 and No. 2 sellers. It went for $185,000.

And she forthwith adopts them. Of course, it's all in the heart and spirit. Last summer, Mrs. Wagner packed her wardrobe and fled Marfa, a town that's very dear to her, for the Copper Canyon area high in the Sierra Madre Occidental mountains in the Mexican state of Chihuahua,

There, she spent three months with her No. 1 adopted granddaughter, 19year-old Blanca Loya.

It will be a blessed event for both.

Another "blessed event" in Maureen Wagner's life was her 40year marriage to a handsome government engineer" by the name of Frederic Wagner.

'Oh, Fred was a doll," she said with pride, with affection, and with a longing for her gentle man.

Even into his old age, charming Fred Wagner was never without his "harem" of feminine admirers and fanciers. Marfa, and Maureen Wagner, mourned when he died at age 80 almost five years ago.

Fred and Maureen Wagner settled down in Marfa in the late 1960s years after he had retired as a engineer-builder of federal buildings in the Southwest.

And the kind-hearted missus was about as far from retirement as she is today. (Given the chance, she'll teach a speck or a whole world of Spanish to most any earnest and interested

The townspeople of Marfa and the Wagners developed a mutual endearment after they landed in this quaint town of 2,500 or so souls in 1968. 'And (we) never regreted it for a

The Wagners, if not at the center of attention, did live in the "center" of town - in the old historic Paisano Hotel. (It has since been closed to Affable Maureen Wagner, who is far from being stodgy, would make a prize of a traveling companion. She does today, and she did with her charmer of a husband.

She has a lot of that Scotch-Irish heritage in her being.

Gas leak gets blame for building blast

A natural gas leak in the Building of where he was treated and released. the Southwest, 310 W. Texas Ave., was the probable cause of an explosion shortly after 5 p.m. Wednesday.

That explosion occurred when Robert Davis, a building maintenence man, attempted to light a pilot light of a basement boiler.

Davis, 58, received first degree burns on the arms and face as a result of the blast, firemen said. He was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital

There was no structural damage to the building from the explosion that echoed through parts of downtown Midland. The boiler, however, was heavily damaged by the blast, firemen said.

Fire investigators speculated that natural gas bypassing the valve probably had accumulated in the boiler before Davis tried to light the

Authority's commissioners set policies for Hillcrest Manor

Midland Housing Authority's board of commissioners Wednesday gave its approval to maximum income limits for elderly and handicapped persons who will live in Hillcrest Manor, the city's public housing project under construction at Scharbauer Drive and and Pecos Street.

The commissioners also formally approved a statement of policies for admission to Hillcrest Manor.

The policy sets a $7,200 adjusted gross annual income limit for a single occupant, $8,200 for two occupants, $9,250 for three occupants and $10,250 for a family of four

Chairman Harry Clark said the limits may have to be changed, however, pending new income limits that are forthcoming from the Department of Housing and Urban Development, which is funding the housing project.

Individuals will not be subsidized directly for rent payment, Clark said. There are federal government funds available, however, to pay the difference in the amount of money needed to repay the cost of the construction and the amount of rent paid by the tenants.

Rent charges at Hillcrest Manor will not exceed about 25 per cent of the individual's income, Clark said. Because of this and the fact that the government has set income levels of individuals who may be admitted to the project, funds available from rent will not be sufficient to repay the government for the cost of construction. A government fund is available to pay this difference, Clark

Some of the approved policies for admission to Hillcrest Manor include giving priority to elderly or handicapped persons who have been displaced by government action or have served in the military. They also set a $20,000 limit on net assets per applicant.

Commission action on these and other matters almost did not take place because of a lack of a quorum. Commissioner Smith Ray arrived several minutes late and the board had its required minimum of three members.

Fred Kester, secretary of the authority, read a report on progress of the $160,000 housing rehabilitation project that recently started. He said 48 contractors have bid a total of $37,398 to repair 14 houses at an average cost of $2,671 per house - far below the limit set by the Midland City Council of $5,000 or 65 per cent of the market value of a house for rehabilitation. Kester said a total of 37 houses have been reviewed for eligibility in the program and 20 have been found eligible, 15 were rejected and two are pending approval.

He said only two of the houses turned down were denied participation in the program because of the homeowners' inability to meet income limits. He said most were turned down because "these houses are in such poor condition that there is no way you could bring them up to the city code with these limits" on what can be spent per house.

In other action, the board approved acquiring insurance for ranges and refrigerators to be used at Hillcrest Manor and heard a report on the progress of constructing the housing

The project is on schedule, Clark said, but concern about possible defects in the concrete of one of the floors prompted the board to order a

Sadat rejects Carter idea about defense border

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, after lengthy talks with President Carter, Wednesday rejected Carter's suggestion that Israel be permitted to maintain defense lines beyond its sovereign borders in a Middle East peace agreement.

"We have discussed this," Sadat told a news conference on the final day of his Washington visit. "(But) sovereignty is indivisible, and we can't have two borders. There is always one border for any country."

While acknowledging differences with Carter on this and other issues, Sadat displayed optimism that a new Geneva conference on Arab-Israeli peace will be convened within 1977.

Saying he and Carter have agreed 'not to waste time," the Egyptian leader called for the United States to begin preparations for the substantive negotiations at Geneva.

Washington sources said Sadat has become concerned that an illprepared Geneva conference might break down quickly after being convened, deflating the hopes of moderate Arab leaders and their constituencies and thus encouraging new wars and internal upheavals. He said a U.S. task force headed by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance would be the best means to make preparations for Geneva and hinted that such a group is already planned.

The first of a succession of Arab leaders scheduled to visit Carter, Sadat is considered to be among the most flexible. He is also the one most personally committed to a settlement. with his prestige and perhaps his continued rule riding on early progress toward peace.

Sadat's reactions to the new U.S. President and his ideas have been keenly awaited here and in the Middle East. Publicly he praised Carter Wednesday as "a very dear friend" in whom he has "full confidence." Privately Sadat told Arab diplomats late Tuesday that while he worried about Carter before coming here, he emerged from the White House meetings very satisfied with personal rapport and confident that he did not bet wrong in his strategic shift from a Russian to an American connection.

As in private meetings with Carter and members of Congress, Sadat expressed concern to reporters about Soviet activities in Africa. He portrayed Egypt, which was formerly a Russian ally, as an anti-Communist bulwark on the fringe of Africa and declared that "the United States as a friend has a moral obligation to help me, not by sending American soldiers but by other means.

Sadat did not specify the "other means," but appeared to be speaking of the "defensive" military hardware, including F5E warplanes and armored personnel carriers, that he discussed with U.S. officials here. The weapons issue "is still open" at the conclusion of his visit, he said.

American officials conceded that no gaps had been closed between Egypt and Israel on the substance of a Middle East settlement during the Sadat-Carter conversations. But they expressed satisfaction with the tone and what they described as the detailed nature of the talks, and said Sadat would leave Washington with concepts and suggestions to ponder. The Egyptian leader, in his press conference, urged again that the United States undertake a dialogue with Palestinian leader saying that 'without the Palestinians we can't establish peace." While denying a report in the Middle East that he brought a written message to Carter from the Palestine Liberation

Organization, Sadat pointed out that he met several times with PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat before coming to Washington

The Carter administration has refused to recognize or negotiate with the PLO until that organization recognizes Israel's right to exist, in keeping with a written commitment given to Israel by then-Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger in September 1975.

The Cairo newspaper Al Ahram reported Wednesday that Sadat has convinced Carter of the need for PLO participation in the Geneva negotiations and of the need for establishment of "a Palestinian state," UPI

U.S. intends to stay out of elections

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says it intends to maintain a hands-off policy toward West European elections even if it appears that Communist candidates will make gains.

But in a policy pronouncement Wednesday, the department left unanswered whether it would look with favor upon the sharing of power by Communists in a coalition government.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter limited himself to saying that U.S. ability to work with West European countries "could be Asked whether a distinction could be drawn between Communist domination and Communist participation in the government of a NATO ally, the department said late Wednesday, "It is impossible to answer this question in the abstract. Our view depends on future developments which cannot be read or acurately predicted."

The spokesman said the United States believes "the position of the Communist party in a particular country is a matter to be decided by the people and the government of the country concerned.

"We do not propose to involve ourselves in the processes by which they reach their decisions on it. This does not mean our attitude is one of indifference."

There has been intense interest in Europe about the Carter administration's policy, particularly since the Communist-Socialist alliance in France scored major gains in recent municipal elections. France will hold legislative elections in less

Cancer patients get help with white blood cells

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) - A safe, simple, inexpensive method of harvesting white blood cells needed to save the lives of thousands of cancer patients has been developed by a Pennsylvania doctor. The technique can get billions more of a donor's white blood cells than the previous method and can be used safely in any hospital or blood bank, said its originator, Dr. Isaac Gjerassi, a blood specialist with Mercy Catholic Hospital in Darby, Pa.

It is a development of "the first order of significance" said Dr. Frank J. Rauscher Jr., senior vice president for research of the American Cancer

Some persons undergoing treatment for cancer need white blood cell transfusions because anti-cancer drugs often disable a body's machinery for making the cells, which fight infections.

Current harvesting of the requires machines costing $17,500 to $40,000. A donor is hooked to the system, which can separate white cells and return the red blood cells to

Perhaps 100,000 cancer patients a year need this white cell protection, but only a small percentage get it, Gjerassi said. Easy availability of the cells also could permit wider use of effective anti-cancer drugs, he added.

In addition, the process could be important for persons whose white cells were depleted by other diseases or for persons receiving transplanted organs and taking drugs that affect natural defenses against infections. Gjerassi explained the system this trifuge that pulls out plasma and the platelets that help make blood clot. Then the remaining red and white cells are suspended in a saline solution along with a starch that acts as a plasma expander. This mixture is let alone for 10 to 15 minutes. Red cells gravitate to the bottom of the container, while white cells float to the top

Sleepwear chemical under fire

WASHINGTON (AP) A year and a half after warnings began about a possible cancer hazard in millions of children's sleepwear garments, a federal agency is deciding whether to ban the chemical involved.

The Consumer Product Saftety Commission scheduled a vote today on whether to ban production of Tris, a flame retardant used in children's polyester sleepwear.

The commission was first warned about Tris in October 1975 when test results indicated a possible hazard.

The tests, employing a method frequently used by scientists to predict whether a chemical will cause cancer in humans, showed a high likelihood of cancer-causing potential in Tris.

Advisory committees part of federal bureaucracy

By JAMES CARY

opley News Service WASHINGTON — It's not often that stray animals make news at the White

But there it was, prominently displayed, in a report released by President Carter — the National Advisory Board for Wild Free-Roaming Horses and Burros.

No, it has nothing to do with those guys up on Capitol Hill. They don't like national boards or anyone else giving them advice.

Rather it is one of 1,159 federal advisory committees that were in existence on Dec. 31 last year, the President informed Congress in his fifth annual report on activities and functions of such groups This annual listing of the government's most prolific form of bureaucracy gave equal billing to such quintessential organizations as the Raisin Advisory Board and National Peanut Advisory Committee, both now terminated.

Then there was the Board of Tea Experts, too, the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, the National Large Bowel Cancer Project Working Cadre and enough grazing boards and ad hoc this and thats to fill a whole volume.

That's just what they did — a 184-page volume, entitled "Federal Advisory Committees," that still held out one ray of hope.

Completely deadpan, the report pridefully let it be known that the committees in existence at the end of last year were 108 fewer than the 1,267 the year before.

They had 27,000 members and cost the taxpayers support, consultants' fees, printing and supplies.

Furthermore, Mr. Carter advised in his letter of transmittal, a governmentwide review of all such advisory committees is now under way. It would sharply reduce the number by this time next year.

It's all part of an effort by Mr. Carter and the preceding Ford administration to cut back on mushrooming government agencies and paperwork to be easy. While the executive department was merging, abolishing or letting 287 committees expire last year, another 180 were created.

This does not include a number Mr. Carter has established this year despite his calls for reductions - to advise him on such diverse tasks as ambassadorial appointments and gaining equal rights for women.

The bureaucratic forests are full of likely cutback targets.

The Advisory Committee report this year lists likely candidates as: The National Commission on Supplies and Shortages: the Ad Hoc Advisory Panel for the Very Large Array; the Advisory Committee for International Legal Metrology; the Advisory Committee on the Design and Construction of Shelters and advisory committees on Sheltered Workshops, Utilization of Gravimetric Data and Genetic Biology.

Then there is the Advisory Committee on Foreign Animal Diseases, not to be confused with the Advisory Committee on Foreign Animal and Poultry Diseases which it replaced.

Or try some of these: Committee on Cytology Automation, Condor Advisory Committee, Environmental Pollutant Movement and Transformation Advisory Committee, Mammalian Cell Lines Committee, Lipid Metabolism Advisory Committee, Merit Review Board for Oncology Programs, and a jaw-breaker called the Panel on Review of Topical Analgesic including Antirheumatic, Otic, Burn and Sunburn Treatment and Prevention Drugs.

And if you're wondering what that wild horses and burros group does, it advises the secretaries of Agriculture and Interior on ways to protect such

The now-defunct Raisin Advisory Board likewise advised the secretary of Agriculture on how to market raisins effectively, and that Peanut Advisory Committee - a natural for former peanut farmer Carter to cut gave advice on domestic and export requirements for selling peanuts.

Headache relief may be in hands

By LEW SCARR Copley News Service

Dr. Howard D. Kurland has developed a technique called autoacupressure that enables a headache sufferer to discontinue the use of aspirin and other potentially harmful drugs and rely on his own fingers for Kurland is a professor in the Department of Psychiatry at the Northwestern University Medical School, past president of the Association for General Hospital Psychiatry and senior attending psychiatrist and neurologist at Evanston Hospital, Evanston, Ill.

It is best to establish credentials at the outset because those are always asked for when acupuncture is alluded to, and acupressure is a modification of acupuncture without the needles. But auto-acupressure (performing the procedure on ourselves) was developed by Kurland, who has treated several hundred headache sufferers with acupressure, showing how they can take care of their own head pains.

It apparently doesn't make any difference if the headache is a migraine or from tension or too much

Kurland estimates that more than 90 per cent of American adults and teen-agers occasionally get headaches which are severe and longlasting enough to interfere with pleasure and lower efficiency in work and play.

And he believes that acupressure is the only headache treatment which fulfills the four criteria of effectiveness, safety, practicality and low cost.

Many of Kurland's medical colleagues have been skeptical, he said in an interview, until the technique has been demonstrated.

He said internists in the hospital where he practices are grateful for the technique because it has enabled them to shut off a lot of the flow of pain-killing drugs.

Still, he likes to stress the importance of consulting physicians about headaches.

"Significant pain," he says in his new book, "Quick Headache Relief Without Drugs," "is a signal something is wrong. "When your body gives you such a signal, you should go to a medical doctor and let him find out what that something wrong is.'

And Kurland does not offer autoacupressure as a magic remedy for many diverse illnesses. He said that it is not something to be learned casually overnight. It requires knowledge and practice.

But, he said, once learned, it can be done almost anywhere, anytime, undetected and without fuss and without danger of overdosing.

There are eight pressure points on the body for relieving the vascular and muscle-contraction headaches of the most common type. They are arranged in four pairs near the eyes, on the neck, near the thumbs and at the wrists.

Finding these spots, which apparently are points at which nerves are accessible, is the trick. (They are mapped out in Kurland's book.)

When found, it is simply a matter of applying enough pressure to alleviate the headache.

Some patients, with lifelong head pain, are more difficult to treat than others. But it is the rare patient who can't be helped at least a little within a few minutes.

Uganda remains Amin's through bribes to soldiers

NAIROBI, Kenya - Uganda's President Idi Amin retains control of his country with the bought loyalty of a small percentage of his army, mostly foreign mercenaries, while economic chaos and fear have demoralized the overwhelming majority of Uganda's 10 million people, according to foreign diplomats and Ugandan refugees.

When he came to power in 1971, Amin began murdering soldiers from the Lango and Acholi tribes and replacing them, in many cases, by members of his own Kakwa and related West Nile tribes. He subsequently began killing prominent members of the police and civil service and replacing them with men whose loyalty he trusted regardless of their

Uganda's present police commissioner, named Obura, was a chauffeur before Amin came to power. The director of training and operations of Uganda's police force, Ali Toweli, swept the police barracks

According to a high-ranking Ugandan army officer who fled to Kenya earlier this month, "These men make a point of suppressing their former superiors because they have inferiority complexes.'

They now are reported to live like millionaires and are unswervingly loyal to Amin, who gives them presents of American dollars, which he is said to keep in his desk drawer by the millions. They know that if he falls, they will fall with him.

The most noticeable beneficiaries, however, are said to be Amin's Nubian mercenaries from Sudan, who are largely responsible for the country's widely publicized atrocities.

After purging the army of most of its trained Acholi and Lango soldiers, Amin was eager to rebuild his forces, which he eventually doubled. Not trusting the loyalty of Ugandans outside his own small Kakwa tribe, Amin brought in thousands of Nubians with whom he has an ethnic affinity. Many Kakwas are in fact Nubians from southern Sudan, whose tribe extends into Zaire as well. In 1972 the giant Israeli construction firm, Solel

Bonch, built a huge complex in Kampala called Bugolobi to house Amin's Nubian mercenaries, whom he calls "marines." Many speak neither a Ugandan language nor English. Bugolobi remains an exclusive Nubian community where mercenaries and their families live in tastefully designed four-story apartment buildings that must be among the most pleasant military barracks in the world.

Other soldiers are permanently housed in luxury hotels built for the foreign tourists and businessmen who no longer visit Uganda.

To keep the troops content, Amin opened Uganda army shops, similar to American PXs. They sell luxury imports such as watches, radios and beer as well as basic commodities such as sugar and flour, generally unavailable to civilian consumers.

Even the army shops are running out of supplies, however, so the soldiers have reportedly become bandits who regularly kill to steal whatever they

In 1972, Amin expelled uganda's 30,000 to 40,000 Asians of Indian and Pakistani origin. Most of them were merchants, businessmen, professionals or skilled technicians. They were not permitted to take their belongings with them and Amin parceled out their businessess and property to his soldiers.

Katangese extend control

By The Washington Post

KINSHASA - Katangese rebels are now con-solidating their hold on Zaire's southern Shaba province, setting up civil administration, trying to maintain social services, and bringing in new supplies.
Intelligence sources here Wednesday claim the Katangese entrenchment - politically and militarily is in preparation for an attack on Kolwezi, Zaire's valuable mining center, in what could amount to the first real contact in the month-old rebellion that has been noted for the absence of any significant

Since the fall of Mutshatsha, the last town before Kolwezi, over a week ago, there has been a lull in military activity in the southeast region of this massive central African country. But the lull does not reflect a military slowdown, the sources claim.

Perhaps the most significant reflection of the rebels' highly organized strategy is the reopening of the railway link between Mutshatsha and Dilolo, a Zaire town on the Angolan border. Dilolo is believed to be the new headquarters of Katangese forces, the former policemen in Shaba (formerly called Katanga) province who backed the secessionist movement of Governor Moise Tshombe after the Belgian Congo gained independence in 1960.

The railroad could speed up the resupplying operation and transporting of reinforcement troops from bases in Angola. It could also provide a covered means of bringing in heavier equipment.

The Katangese are apparently attempting to maintain normalcy in the one-third of the province they have taken since March 8. The few Europeans in the area have communicated via radio that there has been little change in services since the rebels came

A railway employe in Mutshatsha, who witnessed the takeover, said the rebels allowed him to leave when he explained he was not a member of the local Lunda tribe, to which the Katangese belong.

He walked to the next railroad junction and was the first to verify reports that the town had been captured. He reported a "peaceful" takeover.

Meanwhile, the tension in the capital, some 1,500 miles away has mounted noticeably since Sunday, when a government-sponsored rally, designed to show support for the troubled administration of President Mobutu Sese Seko, fell far short of expec-

Over the past three days the local media has in-creased its criticism of the foreign press for 'distorted" reporting that exaggerated the military situation and played into the hands of the attackers.

A Western reporter, from West Germany, was ordered to leave the country after only two days in Zaire. He has not filed a story since his arrival, however security police questioned him about an Angolan visa in his passport, which he used over 18

A French television crew had its film of the capital's main boulevard confiscated Tuesday. A CBS crew was threatened with jail Wednesday while filming Kinshasa suburbs. After questioning by security police, they were released, but their film was confiscated.

A local journalist who works part-time for United Press International and Associated Press was arrested on Monday. Security police have refused to release, the charges against him.

Despite power, Carter has task in reorganizing

WASHINGTON - President Carter Wednesday signed legislation that gives him the authority to reorganize the federal government, which he noted was "the most consistent commitment" he made during his campaign.

The first target of reorganization will be the Executive Office of the President, which includes the White House itself and 17 White House support agencies such as the National Security Coucil and the Council of Economic Advisers.

Bert Lance, the director of the Office of Management and Budget, said a plan to reorganize the Executive Office of the President is expected to be submitted to Congress in June.

But in a briefing for reporters, Lance downplayed the importance of reducing the number of federal agencies, which Carter once boasted would be a major benefit from reorganization.

During the campaign, the President promised to cut the number of federal agencies from the some 2,000 that now exist to about 200. Hamilton Jordan, a top White House aide, has since admitted the number 200 was totally arbitrary, arrived at without much

"I don't think we should say we will cut the number to 200," Lance said in response to a question Wednesday. "Numbers are one measure, but they shouldn't be the prime measure. I don't think we should play the numbers game."

Lance also shied away from suggesting that the net result of the three-year reorganization process would be a net reduction in the cost of government. Asserting repeatedly that he did not want to "pre-judge" the course reorganization will take, Lance said one of the main goals of the effort will be to "fix accountability and responsibility in the government, thereby making it more efficient and responsive."

The legislation the President signed Wednesday, surrounded by members of Congress in the traditional ceremony, gives him authority for the next three years to submit reorganization proposals to Congress. The proposals would automatically take effect unless vetoed by either house of Congress within 60 days of their submission.

The reorganization authority, however, does have limits. Under it, for example, Carter cannot abolish cabinet departments or create new ones. Thus, he has submitted separate legislation to Congress that would create an Energy Department.

In keeping with the importance the President places on reorganization, the White House released two documents on the subject. Although Lance said the administration has not decided which areas of government will undergo reorganization studies first, one document said areas targeted for "early action" include energy, oil spill pollution control, consumer affairs, civil rights and advisory com-

New wiretap bill in works

By JOHN M. GOSHKO The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The Carter administration plans to ask Congress for legislation requiring a federal judge's permission to use wiretapping in investigations of foreign intelligence activities within the United States.

That request will mark the administration's first attempt at reforming the rules for intelligence investigations by erecting safeguards against federal police agencies violating civil liberties under the guise of national security.

Reliable sources said Wednesday that the proposed bill is being worked out by the Justice Department, the Senate Intelligence Committee, the House Judiciary Committee and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.). Kennedy tentatively has agreed to sponsor the bill in the Senate.

The legislation is being reviewed at the White House, the sources said, and Attorney General Griffin B. Bell has promised to deliver the proposed draft to Kennedy by April 15, and it is expected to go to Capitol Hill within the next few weeks. It is intended to replace a bill that was prepared by the Ford administration under direction of former Attorney General Edward H. Levi and introduced into the Senate last year. Kennedy also acted as chief The bill proposed by Levi was approved by both the Senate Judiciary and Intelligence Committees. However, the Senate leadership abandoned efforts to pass it after it ran into fierce opposition from civil liberties forces who charged that it did not contain adequate safeguards against abuse. Following the arrival of the Carter administration, Levi's successor, Bell, decided that, instead of attempting to revive the old bill, an attempt should be made to draft new legislation with a better chance of

The aim is to substitute a judicial warrant requirement for the controversial present system that assumes the President's right under his "inherent constitutional powers" to authorize electronic eavesdropping in foreign intelligence cases. In practice, the President delegates to the Attorney General the decisions on when the FBI and other federal police agencies can use wiretapping or bugging

In 1972, the Supreme Court ruled that a warrant is required for wiretaps in security cases where a purely domestic threat is involved. But it left unanswered the question of whether the President's "inherent powers" permits the use of warrantless wiretaps against foreign agents. In its main features, the sources said, the proposed new law is similar to the Levi bill. It would require federal officials to demonstrate to a U.S. District Court judge that there is "probable cause" for believing that the object of a proposed electronic surveillance is the agent of a foreign power.

The government also would have to give the judge a sworn affidavit by an authorized representative of the President that the information being sought was related only to foreign intelligence matters and could not reasonably be obtained by other investigative

The sources said it was still unclear how the new bill will deal with the principal objection raised against the Levi proposal — the charge that the law would not prevent eavesdropping on the conversa-tions of persons who have committed no crimes. Kennedy, the sources said, wants to narrow the "probable cause" requirement to mean that the government must show "probable cause" that a crime is being committed. But the Justice Department so far apparently has been unwilling to go beyond language specifying a "probable cause" showing that the surveillance target is a foreign agent, they added.

harmless by comparison with, say, heroin-but this means nothing at all. It's also all right to cut off your foot, compared to slitting your throat.

By now, scientists have accumulated an impressive number of studies proving the damage that marijuana does to message across. Most likely the reason is that the damage is slow to show up and that the victim is lulled into a false sense of wellbeing-which is itself a result of the toxic effect of pot. Drs. Harold Kolansky and William T. Moore of the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine recently summarized their main findings in several controlled studies. One of the first things they discovered was that the harm starts the moment you start smoking the stuff, but it doesn't end the moment you stop. In their patients, the symptoms took from three to 24 months to disappear. Here are some of the symptoms they encountered regularly in all the pot smokers they studied: slowed-down thinking, shortened attention span, reduced self-awareness and judgement, an increasing lack of sense of purpose, and "prevailing illusion of recently developed insight and emotional maturity." Note the word "illusion:" The patients thought they were getting maturer and wiser; nobody else did.

Many experts feel that occasional, moderate use of marijuana is relatively harmless, but they forget how often "occasional" turns into frequent, and moderate into excessive. And that's when the real trouble starts.

It's been shown that marijuana stays in some tissues for as long as eight days, causing a pyramiding effect in steady smokers. It's

The event will be at the school and will last all

Carnival rides, an arts and crafts fair, a bakeoff, dancing and games will be among the ac-tivities provided.

At the arts and crafts fair, work in a variety of mediums will be exhibited. Entertainment will include hourly performances by bands, vocal groups, dancers and others. Live popular music for dancing also will be provided.

A variety of foods from tamales to pastrami sandwiches will be sold at lunch and a chicken dinner with trimmings will be served at night. Snacks, soft drinks and beer will be available

A gourmet kitchen will have hor d'oeuvres, salads, casseroles and party foods for the freezer on sale. Cookies, cakes, pies and pastries from the bakery will be sold also.

Midland cooks can test their skills in the cake bake-off for a $1 entry fee. First, second and third place awards will be given. All cakes entered will be sold at the bakery, A variety of games also are scheduled for the fair. Business barkers prey on women

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) - Women seeking advancement in corporate management are being ripped off by peddlers of "positive assertivness" and related success formulas, says a noted management authority.

'The power of positive assertiveness is the current prescribed cure-all for the aspiring woman manager," said Prof. Eugene Jennings, who branded it a deception by modern medicine men, shamans and barkers.

Thousands of women each day attend conferences, seminars and meetings sponsored by government, universities, women's groups and consulting firms that, he claims, result in little but frustration and wasted money.

And yet, says Jennings, an informal survey of meetings in big city hotels shows these programs draw larger audiences than do sales and management meetings of the more might be a professor, an author or maybe even a government official, "commands women to step forth to grab for the brass ring, telling them 'You can do anything you want to

Trustees OK new board

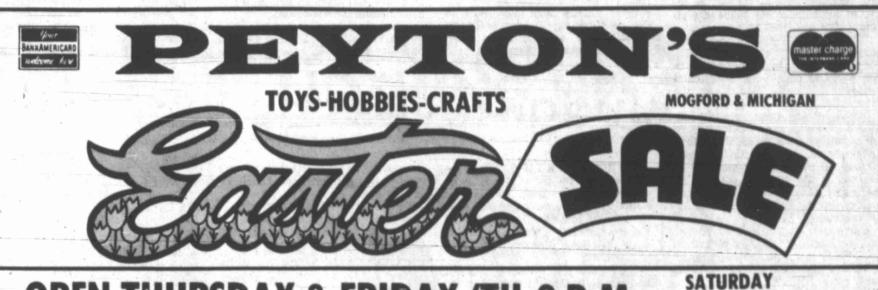

Midland College trustees Wednesday approved appointment of Walter B. Holton to the Midland Board of Equalization.

They also approved reappointment of Patsy Bohannan and Gene Mc-Daniel to the board at a special meeting of the trustees. Holton replaces Byrne O'Neill. The appointments were approved by Midland Independent School District trustees Tuesday.

Each appointment, by law, is for a one-year term. The school system, college and city share the board of equalization and have agreed to keep each member on the board for three one-year terms, rotating one member off each year.

There was some confusion about the appointments Wednesday and the trustees had to reconvene after adjourning in order to reappoint Mc-Daniel and Mrs. Bohannan Sandel said she was supported by a married Mexican resident during that period. Sandel said she went back to Piedras Negras last December and stayed there until three weeks ago before turning herself in Monday /at San Antonio.

"I was tired of hiding and running all the time. I had nothing to hide," said Mrs. Carrasco on her return to San Antonio late Wednesday

Asked about her reasons for leaving Texas, Sandel said, "She said she was afraid to stay in San Antonio because of all the publicity surrounding the escape attempt. She said she was afraid someone would hold her children for ransom, and she didn't have any money. She said she came back because she missed her children, who were staying with her mother.

Sandel said Mrs. Carrasco will remain free under $100,000 bond until the grand jury acts on her case. He said that Nicholas, her attorney, suggested she planned to seek employment with a nursing home.

FORT STOCKTON. Tex. (AP) - Defense and prosecution lawyers today began questioning a new 80-member panel of prospective jurors for the captial murder trial of Alan Ladd Woody.

The 11th juror for the trial of Woody, 20, of Center Point, was selected Wednesday.

Woody is being tried in the strangulation death of Mrs. Beth Pearson, 15, of Kerrville. He is also charged with murder in the death of Carol Ann London, 18, also of Kerrville. The bodies of the two girls were found last August near Cypress Creek in the Kerrville area after they had been missing for about a year.

Judge eyes tape custody

FORT WORTH (AP) Prosecutors in the Cullen Davis capital murder trial will retain custody of a tape recording that says the lives of Priscilla Davis and Stan Farr had been threatened by someone other than the millionaire Fort Worth industrialist.

Contents of the recording have not been revealed publicly other than the information that a woman apparently told investigators she heard someone threaten Mrs. Davis and Farr. District Court Judge Tom Cave said Wednesday that the tape could be withheld from defense lawyers

despite their arguments that they are entitled to any information beneficial to their client. Davis is charged with the slaying of Farr and with attempted murder in the shooting of his estranged wife.

He also is charged with attempted capital murder in the shooting of Gus Gavrel and the slaying of his 12-yearold stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn.

The current trial, for which seven jurors have been selected, deals with the Wilborn slaying.

The shootings occurred last Aug. 3 in the Davis mansion where Mrs.

Davis was living with Farr while the Davis' divorce was pending.

The woman who said she had heard the threat before the shootings was identified as Sandy Guthrie Myers. Mrs. Myers was among those who attended Wednesday's closed meeting to determine custody of the tape recording. She told investigators she had spent several evenings at the Davis mansion after Mrs. Davis was given temporary custody of the palatial home. It was during that time that she heard the threat, she said.

TMA dispels rumor on labels

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - The Texas Medical

Association would like everyone to know that kidney dialysis is paid for by Medicaid — not those blackstriped price code labels on food cans.

A TMA official said Wednesday that the organization's office here is being deluged by calls from Texans seeking a place to redeem the labels to aid kidney patients.

"It's crazy," assistant communications director Steve Carrell said of the rumors. "People in communities all over Texas have been led to believe the tags can be redeemed. 'They're going nuts collecting these things. The rumors have been reported in several Texas towns, including Jasper, Center, Marshall, Giddings, Longview, Houston, Pflugerville and Nacogdoches, Carrell said. 'Nobody knows how the rumor got started," added Carrell. "One town had a grocery store that thought the hospital was redeeming the labels, while the hospital thought the grocery store was redeeming

Similar rumors in the past have caused Americans to collect pop top tabs, tea bag tags and cigarette packages. Popular rumor had it that you could redeem empty cigarette packages for a wheelchair during the polio scare of the early 1960s, he said. State Medicaid pays all dialysis costs for the first three months and federal Medicaid picks up 80 per cent of the tab thereafter, Carrell explained.

Carrell said National Kidney Association officials in Houston told him they are also getting several calls a day from persons wanting to redeem the

"It's an easy community project. People are quick to get together and help in things like that, especially in the spring, Carrell added. "Communities and groups hear about it and start these massive movements to collect these things.

an immediate explosion. In the years that followed, the military installed similar explosion prevention systems in many of its planes, including all 77 C5A jumbo cargo jets and the craft which fly U.S. presidents.

Meanwhile, the National Transportation Safety Board was documenting more and more instances where airline passengers survived the initial impact of crashes but were killed by explosions and fastspreading fuel fires.

The NTSB itself cannot order changes in planes or air operations, so in 1971 it urged the Federal Aviation Administration - which can - to require commercial airlines to install systems to curb explosion and fire dangers.

Three years later, the FAA acknowledged "there are several feasible, practical and reliable means" to do this, and proposed regulations mandating the safety

But the regulations have never been implemented by the FAA. and the delay now is cited by one congressman as a classic case of "regulatory lag and lethargy which courts disaster ...

It's not the only case. In the days since aviation's worst diaster - the fiery collision of two jumbo jets at a Canary Islands airport — a series of interviews by Los Angles Times' reporters and examination of extensive government documents have spotlighted other instances where bureauratic red tape, corporate lobbying or institutional inertia has stalled implementation of air safety recommenda

Today, the fatal accident rate for U.S. commercial airlines is .001 per million aircraft miles "A truly remarkable accomplishment," said NTSB chairman Webster B. Todd Jr.

But Todd and other officials agree that the government's cumbersome regulatory processes have helped throttle some safety recommendations.

The scope of this regulatory lag was detailed by Rep. Elliott Levitas (D-Ga.) in a House speech on March 15, less than two weeks prior to the Canary Islands disaster.

Levitas said his inquiries found 135 instances during the past eight years where the FAA had rejected the NTSB's safety recom-mendations, and another 281 cases where the FAA agreed with NTSB recommendations but had yet to fully implement them - including 95 recommendations dating back three or more years.

He cited examples ranging from the explosion and fire suppression system to improved seatbelts, more reliable oxygen systems and better marking of emergency exits where safety recommendations have not been implemented.

It's impossible to know whether any of the stillpending safety steps could have saved the lives of any of the 577 passengers who died when a KLM Royal Dutch Airlines 747 speeding toward takeoff last Sunday rammed a Pan American Airways 747 taxling on the same run-

By TENDAYI KUMBULA The Los Angeles Times

FRESNO, Calif. — Up to 450 American and British mercenaries are being sought to fight in Africa on behalf of the beleaguered pro-Western government of Zaire President Mobutu Sese Seko, The Los Angeles Times has learned. This latest effort to recruit soldiers of fortune came to light in a help wanted ad which appeared in the Fresno Bee.

It was confirmed by other sources in the mercenary community. Robert Stevenson, a spokesman for the U.S. Justice Department, said "we're aware of allegations that (mercenary) recruiting has resumed"

The Fresno ad, which seeks personnel with a military background for a high risk operation, was placed by David Bufkin, a controversial Fresno area crop duster who was also involved last year in recruiting mercenaries for one of the pro-Western groups which was defeated in the Angola civil war.

According to the ad those interested in the Zaire jobs, which reportedly pay $1,200 to $2,000 a month, were asked to mail discharge papers and resumes to a Fresno address.

In an interview here earlier this week, Bufkin, who claims to be the only American mercenary who was not killed or captured during the Angola operation, said $80,000 had been made available to recruit and ship 80 to 100 Americans to Zaire.

He said preference would be given to those at least 30 years old, have Special Forces experience in Indochina and could leave for Africa within a month.

The remaining 300 to 350 mercenaries would be assembled in Britain, he said.

Bufkin said the "paymaster" for Bufkin said the "paymaster" for the mercenaries was a Briton named Chet Akins, who was also involved in the Angola operation. He said Akins was working closely with a "Col. Mizuki," identified only as a Zaire military attache in London.

Bufkin, 40, declined to reveal who was bankrolling the entire mercenary operation. However, he said the Central Intelligence Agency was aware of his activities.

Bufkin, who said he was trained as a paratrooper and pilot, said in the 1960s he fought as a mercenary first in Zaire (then known as the Congo) and in Nigeria for the secessionists who wanted to carve out a separate country known as Biafra.

"But now I plan to stay home. I have done my duty. Now I will do what I can for Angola and for Zaire but I do not plan to fight again. I have a wife, three children and a home. I think they need me here.

"But I'll continue to do whatever I can in the states to support Mobutu and the FNLA. I am still loyal to the FNLA," he said."

The FNLA, the National Liberation Front of Angola, was one of the pro-Western factions defeated by the victorious Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, in that country's civil war. The pro-Western faction was aided by the United States, South Africa, China, and a number of European countries while the Soviet Union, Cuba and others helped the MPLA.

Exiles from Shaba province, a copper-rich southern Zaire region once known as Katanga, also fought with the MPLA and Cuban forces. It is believed that the same Katangese rebels reentered Zaire about, a month ago and have been fighting Mobutu's

Fewer first-strike weapons aim of Carter arms plan

By GEORGE C. WILSON The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The United States and the Soviet Union have piled up enough H-bombs to destory each other — regardless of who strikes first other—regardless of who strikes first.

But war planners on both sides still fear that a large part of their nuclear offense might be crippled in a surprise attack, called a first strike.

To keep a first strike from looking tempting, both the United States and the Soviet Union have fortified and dispersed their offensive weapons so all of them could not be destroyed in a first strike.

Both sides have buried their land missiles deep in the ground and piled concrete on top of them. They have put other H-bombs inside bombers that would take off at the first warning of attack so they would not be caught on the ground. And still other missiles have been sent to sea in submarines.

Rather than keep building and diversifying more and more of the offense this way so there is enough left over even after riding out a first strike, thereby persuading the other country that it would not be worth starting a nuclear war, Carter is proposing that both sides get rid of some of the weapons that would be best for striking first.

For the United States, this is the MX blockbuster missile under development. For the Soviet Union, this is the SS-18 intercontinental ballistic missile which is now being installed.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance took to Moscow last week a proposal for a series of trades: the MX for some SS-18s, and a "we won't if you won't" offer to stop improving the accuracy of multiple, independently targetable re-entry vehicles (MIRVs). The Carter package delivered by Vance represented a feeling of self-assurance by the United States that its accuracy was far enough ahead to allow the Soviet Union to keep its edge in sheer rocket brawn, called throw-weight.

The Soviets rejected the deal with essentially this response: You want us to cut back on our best weapons while you keep all of your advanced modern ones in place, except for the MX which is not yet built.

Carter administration officials countered they had made a fair offer that would end up in "rough equivalence" of nuclear power while taking a lot of nervousness out of the current gun-at-the-temple

The Soviet Union, under the Carter plan, would settle for 550 MIRVed ICBMs but could have only 150 of its new SS-18 missiles in that force. The SS-18 has the throw-weight to hurl eight big MIRV warheads at the United States compared to the three smaller MIRVs in the nose of the American Minuteman III. The Soviets had planned to deploy 308 SS-18s under their modernization program, according to U.S. officials.

Limiting the number of heavylift SS-18 type ICBMs in the Soviet landbased MIRV force would, according to U.S. specialists, reduce the Soviet throw-weight advantage from 3 to 1 to 2 to 1. Carter is counting on superior U.S. MIRV technology to bring up the balance to "rough equivalence."

To help ensure that American accuracy continues to offset the Soviet edge in throw-weight, the Carter proposal would make it harder for the Soviets to close their MIRV gap.

close their MIRV gap.

Perfecting a highly accurate MIRV requires a lot of experimental flight tests. U.S. weapons specialists persuaded Carter that limiting Soviet flight tests to six a year would keep the American MIRV lead until around 1983. Both American and Russia would limit themselves to six tests a year under the arms control proposal.

Soviet military leaders are expected to protest hotly such restraints on catching up on MIRV. If their opposition becomes crucial to an agreement, Cater could go back to a suggestion made while the arms control proposal was being formulated — letting the Soviets conduct 12 flight tests to the U.S. six.

Besides having to catch up with the United States in MIRV accuracy, the Soviet Union still has a ways to go to put MIRV heads on 550 ICBMs to match the Minuteman III force already on the line. The Soviets are believed to have MIRVed about 300 of their missiles.

If the Soviets would agree to the American proposal, U.S. defense officials argue, both Washington and Moscow could breathe easier because of the reduced threat of a surprise nuclear attack. learn

Easter inspires family to put egg tree in home

By DOROTHY CRYDER Copley News Service

When Mrs. Ray Steffes of Joliet, Ill., said she had an Easter egg tree, she wasn't kidding

The tree, six feet tall, sweeps the ceiling and dominates their living

This is a family project.

"Our tree started 18 years ago after we visited friends in Cleveland, Ohio, at Easter and saw trees outside the homes decorated with colored eggs," Steffes said.

"They were so pretty, we decided we would start an egg tree of our own inside the house. The first year it wasn't a tree, but a piece of driftwood decorated with whole, blown-out eggshells dyed in assorted colors.

At that time there were six children, two boys and four girls in the Steffes family plus Jill, a foster child who now has been adopted by the Steffes.

"The boys weren't too interested, but the girls really loved making decorations for the tree, and almost before we knew it, our piece of driftwood had graduated to a small tree which has grown larger each year," admitted Steffes.

She said finding a tree big enough now to hold all the decorations is a major project.

"We try to keep the same tree for several years, but after awhile it becomes so brittle that we have to discard it and start again." Now, even though all the children except two are married and have families of their own, they still are alert for new and different decorations for the tree. "My daughter Judy who works in Chicago, is by far our most avid decorator," Steffes said, adding that Judy also has taken many courses in ceramics and makes whole families of pottery bunnies, chicks and lambs.

After a few years, the fragile, blown-out eggshells were discarded in favor of Styrofoam eggs decorated with flowers, lace, ribbon, beads and sequins. Many are hollowed out to create miniature nature scenes.

Still others have been transformed into tiny bird houses, clown and bunny faces. Chicks and bunnies of yarn and felt also may be found nestling on the branches and hiding in and around the

There are yarn-scrap eggs, crazyquilt eggs and patchwork eggs.

"I think my favorite is patchwork eggs, created by my daughter, Sharon, who worked for a florist until her baby was born," said Steffes.

She explained Sharon now has started a tree of her own for her family, but still contributes to the big "family" tree.

She made the patchwork eggs with scraps of cloth, pasted on Styrofoam eggs and then used black marking pencil to give the eggs a quilted effect. Other favorites of the Steffes family are the sculptured eggs. They are made by adding glue to a Styrofoam egg, pasting a colorful paper napkin on the egg, and when the colors come through, adding more glue and glitter to highlight the pictures.

"There's no limit to how far the imagination can go, but there is a limit to how much bigger our tree can get," laughed Steffes.

LAGUNA HILLS, Calif. - Just outside one of the gates of Leisure World, much to the consternation of the elderly residents inside, a mortuary was built

Since then the senior citizens have taken to joking about it, referring to that particularly entrance as the Pearly Gates. The guard is called Peter. Death is a fact of life in this retirement community, not pervasive, but not absent either.

No man is an island entire of himself, certainly not in Leisure World, and when 27 of the residents die in a plane crash on the Canary Islands, the bell tolls for

The 27 victims lived in 16 homes. The homes are easy to spot. They are the ones with the yellow tags on the doors.

"As soon as we heard about the plane crash we called the travel agency here, because we knew some of our people were aboard," recalled Jerry Murphy, manager of community relations. "When the names we called the Orange County public administrator's office.

And that Sunday evening, while the tourists should have been on a luxury liner cruising the Mediterranean, they were instead being put into wooden boxes in an airplane hangar and the door locks of their homes were being sealed with yellow tape. To Dep. Rodney Reighard, who had the weekend duty, fell the task of sealing each dwelling, including six where the 10 occupants eventually would turn out to be among the few survivors of the crash. As soon as the survivors were made known, their door seals were removed.

"But for those who didn't make it, we take this action for three reasons: To protect the taxing authorities, to protect the creditors and to protect the heirs at law or beneficiaries under a will," Reighard

Also attached to the outside doorknob is a tag that reads: "For information regarding this sealed manor contact Leisure World Security.

James E. Heim, the public administrator, conceded that the seal is actually no legal barrier. "We do it as a courtesy," he said. "It discourages people from entering who don't belong there.

In the next few days the seals were broken-by deputies themselves - who entered (always with a witness) to search for wills.

"Do you have the key?" Dep. Art Block asks the security sergeant who has accompanied him to the home of Benjamin S. Malin, as a set of wind chimes tinkles mournfully above them.

After opening the lock, the two men discover that before Malin had left for his fateful plane flight he had also chained the door from the inside, and undoubtedly had the key which would free the chain. After fiddling unsuccessfully with a screwdriver,

The debate is a familiar one in some corners of the developing world: to give in or not to give in to the allure of tourist money and the problems that may come with it.

Tourism has benefited Sri Lanka's ailing economy - inflation rate nearly 40 per cent, unemployment 20 per cent plus. The industry brought in about $25 million last year, ranked fifth as a foreign exchange earner and gave jobs to about 25,000

New York's gamblers may commute via hydrofoils

By GEORGE WHEELER Newsday

NEW YORK - When gambling casinos begin operating in Atlantic City next spring, high-rollers from the New York area will be able to speed down to the resort city in 50-mile-anhour hydrofoils.

Edmund Colanzi, one of five commissioners for the New Jersey city, told Newsday that Potamic Transport Co., has been hired to acquire several hydrofoils, a type of craft that skims the surface of the water at high speed, for making the 80-mile run between Atlantic City and lower Manhattan. The trip might be extended to Kennedy International Airport in Queens.

The transport company wants to operate the service, Colanzi said, but the city is expected to decide within

Student at Whitharral kills school principal

WHITHARRAL, Tex. (AP) — The principal of the Whitharral High School in this West Texas city was shot and killed this morning by a student, police said

The principal was identified as

Malcolm Omar Tripp, 31.
A spokesman for the sheriff's office at Levelland said a 17-year-old boy was taken into custody. "The investigation is still going on. All I can tell you is that the principal is dead at this time," the spokesman said.

A school official said the shooting occurred in front of the school. School officials said the student, a freshman, fired three shots and hit

Tripp in the back twice. School superintendent Louis Mc-Cormack said that after the shooting, the student walked across the street to a grocery store and laid the gun on the counter and told the attendant he had just shot and killed the school principal. He then asked him to call the police and an ambulance and satdown to wait.

Tripp had been in Whitharral for two years, having moved here from Richland Springs.

The school has 215 students and 20

Protocol chief learns hard way

WASHINGTON (AP) - Chief of Protocol Evan S. Dobelle, balancing precariously on his tiptoes, was showing just how he managed to make a fool of himself at the White House recently.

He was in a limousine with United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, preparing to hop out and race around the car to make the official introductions to Presdent Carter.

But the car door slammed into the North Portico when he tried to open it, leaving Dobelle room only to rise to his toes, arms dangling about his head, and inch along between the car and the wall until he was free. By the time he joined Carter and Waldheim it was too late for his carefully planned formal introduction.

"Do you know everybody?" the protocol chief, smiling weakly, asked the President. Not your normal presidential introduction.

No longer does Evan Dobelle leap out of cars. Now, he skips the ride and positions himself at the White House well before the visiting party arrives.

After six weeks on the job, leaping out of cars is just one thing the nation's official greeter has stopped because "it made no sense."

Dobelle, a Republican who became a Democrat a year ago to work for candidate Carter, carries out the President's wishes for "traditional and simple" ceremonies.

So far, that has meant eliminating the playing of "Hail to the Chief" and the presence of an abundance of flags and bugles. It also means no more liquor at most White House functions and a general de-emphasis of the more ostentatious trappings of government.

Dobelle, interviewed in his large State Department office, insists the new way is no less formal than the old. Just less pretentious. And often less costly.

"What you saw before had nothing to do with protocol," he said of the grand ceremonies preferred by past presidents. "They were em-bellishments that were totally unnecessary. We didn't need all the ruffles and flourishes."

But just as Jimmy Carter reassured the nation that he would dress properly for formal occasions, Dobelle stresses that he understands the need to display proper form to foreign dignitaries.

For instance, limousines definitely are here to stay even if Carter doesn't want his appointees to use them. "You are not going to take a cab to pick up the president of Egypt," he says. The very thought of it makes him smile.

But always, moderation: "We don't have a limousine for every member of the visiting party, as may have been the case in the past.

Magic travel word? 'Charters

Newsday

Traveling abroad? The magic word this year is "charters.

More people are flying charter than ever before, and the burgeoning charter business plans to grab a hefty chunk of the overseas market in the months ahead. Charter officials predict that one of three transatlantic passengers in 1977 will be flying on a chartered aircraft.

Freed from many of the charter restrictions in effect a couple of years ago, scheduled and nonscheduled airlines alike have jumped into the competition for the charter dollar. The trend has even touched off such charter novelties as "first class" service and optional return dates.

Charters, of course, fly to domestic as well as foreign destinations. But time, distance and the economic squeeze of recent years particularly heighten the appeal of low-cost flights

Literally thousands of international charter flights have been scheduled for 1977. Many are to the popular tourist destinations in Mexico and West Europe, but more and more exotic ones are being added. This spring, for example, you can buy charter packages to Tahiti, Yugoslavia, Nairobi, Casablanca and the Philippines.

To buy a charter, you must first understand some of the jargon involved. Cheapest of the charters is still the so-called affinity charter, which is not open to the general public. These require passengers to be members in a qualified organization for at least six months. Until the Civil Aeronautics Board began easing the rules 18 months ago, affinity charters were the biggest game in town - and flaunting of the requirements was widespread.

Now, however, you don't have to sneak around corners or lie about your membership in the Benevolent Order of Chowhounds. Charters have been opened to the public at large, and scheduled airlines have joined the no-scheduled airlines in competition for the budget buck. There are four basic charters available to everyone. two involving transportation only and two combining hotels and other amenities into a package.

The transportation-only charters are the TGC (travel group charter) and the ABC (advanced booking charter). The ABCs are the newer ones, and because they have fewer restrictions they're far more popular. In many areas, the TGCs have just about disappeared from the travel

The package charters are the ITCs (requiring three destination stops) and the OTCs (one-stop tour charters). Here, too, the newer OTCs have fewer restrictions and thus are far more numerous.

The primary advantage of these charters is, of course, price. Though they're not quite as cheap as affinity charters, they're still well below "normal" air fares. In many cases, the charter package, including hotel and transfers, is priced below what regular air fare alone would run. For the economy-minded, charters will make it possible to travel to Europe and back for under $300. From New York to London, the figure is as low as $249 for transportationonly ABC flights this March, $269 in April and $299 in July and August. One-week OTC packages starting in April run from $299 to $519, with most in the $350$-450 range.

Naturally, you have to pay the piper for such bargains. In this case, it's with advance purchase requirements (30 days for overseas OTCs, 30 and 45 days for ABCs abroad), more inflexible scheduling, penalties if you have to pull out, and the possibility of cancellation by the tour operator.

Where do you book charters? Only through travel agents, or tour operators who are also travel agents. While scheduled airlines such as TWA and Pan Am are flying and promoting charters, they're not permitted to

Carter requests agency for consumer advocacy

WASHINGTON - President Carter Wednesday asked Congress to create an "Agency for Consumer Advocacy," and within hours, in a closely coordinated display of enthusiasm, bills were introduced in the House and the Senate to do just that.

In a special message to Congress, Carter endorsed a package of four consumer proposals, including essentially the same Consumer Protection Agency which Congress passed in 1975, but never sent to the White House because of a promised veto by then-President Ford. Wednesday's actions mean consumer groups stand a good chance of getting the agency they've lobbied for for eight years. The new bills are almost identical to the 1975 versions. Senate aides rate their chance of passage by both houses as excellent.

Presidential aide Simon Lazarus said the President's proposals are 'substantially or completely met by provisions which appear in one or the other of those bills.

Both congressional bills would appropriate $15 million for an agency charged with advocating the views of consumers before other federal

Retired black couple moves back to ghetto

CHICAGO (AP) - Most blacks who can afford to are moving out of the ghetto. Charles and Inez McCord moved back in.

The retired couple, both in their early 60s, gave up their $390-a-month apartment in a predominantly white neighborhood and moved into a battered black neighborhood on the city's South Side. For $8,500 McCord bought the house where his family first lived when it moved to Chicago in 1925.

"It takes vision, a minimum of money and guts, but you can go home again," McCord said. "I'm home and I'm happy. Part of the trouble with the black community is that too many people who could help to improve it want to leave.'

The McCords sank their life savings into refurnishing the old two-story brick rowhouse on a once-fashionable boulevard now blighted by years of change and decay.

McCord said the decision was chiefly motivated by a need to "come back to our roots. For years I'd been living in high-rent, middle-class apartments in areas with mostly whites. I felt I was losing my identity as a black in-

McCord operated a janitorial service until his retirement last year. His wife was a college library director. He has four grown daughters by a previous marriage.

The McCords moved into their new home last December following a nine-month remodeling job that brought their total investment near $50,000.

New dogs under test that protect sheep

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) - Dogs which have protected sheep from wolves in Hungary are trying to protect sheep from coyotes in this country.

Called Komomjors, they are being introduced here as companions to sheep-herding dogs. The husky, strong dogs with long, cord-like hair strands do not herd sheep themselves. They mark the territory around a herd with their own scent, then stay within the perimeter to protect sheep against predators.

Sacramento breeder Ken O'Brien had bred more than 60 of the dogs, placing several on California and Idaho ranches as experiments. He said the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the University of Nebraska are conducting similar tests. He said there

Genetic engineering provokes lively controversy

By GEORGE ALEXANDER The Los Angeles times

In keeping with a long tradition of English law - which assumes that a person is innocent until proven guilty -American public opinion has long extended an attitude of presumptive approval to many other parts and ac-tivities of society, including scientific research and technological innova-

Indeed, it was not all that long ago that such advertising slogans as "Better Living Through Chemistry" and 'Progress Is Our Most Important Product" could be taken as expressions of American creed. laboratory, it was generally agreed, was a font of good things.

But during the last several years, that feeling of trust and approval has been giving way to one of suspicion and apprehension among increasing numbers of Americans, in part because of the controversies surrounding insecticides, herbicides, pollutants, the ozone layer and nuclear energy, and in part because of political scandals.

The upshot of all this appears to be that the American public is coming to regard scientific research (along with other elements of modern living) with what might be termed a Code Napoleon attitude. Just as that French legal system presumes that an individual is guilty of an alleged crime, and places the burden of innocence on the accused, so does this evolving public attitude presuppose that new research is more likely to be harmful than beneficial, that disadvantages are more likely to outweigh advantages.

Nowhere is this growing and — to scientists at least — disturbing public attitude more evident at the moment than in the field of genetic engineering. Known also as gene splicing, genetic manipulation and by its scientifically proper name, recombinant DNA, it basically involves the removal of genetic material from one organism (for example, a fruit fly or a frog) and the transfer of those genes into a totally different one (say,

Unlike nuclear power plants, which were around for a decade or more before engendering any appreciable public opposition, the field of genetic engineering has barely gotten off the ground. And yet it already has given rise to protest groups in some parts of the United States where local univer-

In California, with nearly a dozen private and public universities intent upon doing this sort of genetic research, two Assembly committees

- Health, along with Resources, Land Use and Energy - recently held series of joint hearings in Sacramento on the subject. The purpose of the hearings, Health Committee Chairman Barry Keene pointedly emphasized at the very first session, was not to develop legislation that would restrict the conduct of such research, but rather to explore the environmental and public health ramifications of genetic experiments. Only after the subject had been illuminated, Keene went on to say, would the two committees decide whether state legislation was required to regulate this field. Toward that end, the members of the two Assembly committees listened attentively to a series of witnesses.

They heard from Dr. Clifford Grobstein, a University of California at San Diego biologist and vice chancellor, who explained some of the fundamentals of molecular biology and genetics and who described the recently developed techniques that now enable scientists to splice together genes from different organisms.

They heard from Dr. Liebe Cavalieri, a biochemist with the Sloan-Kettering Institute and Cornell University medical school in New York City, who spoke of the potential hazards of such research, and Dr. Herbert Boyer, a UC Medical Center-San Francisco biochemist, who spoke of the benefits to be derived.

They also heard from Dr. Maxine Singer, a National Cancer Institute biochemist and section head, who outlined the guidelines established by the National Institutes of Health for the conduct of genetic experiments, and from Dr. Paul Berg, a Stanford University professor of biochemistry and one of the first scientists to explore this new field.

Indeed, it was Berg who was both one of the first scientists to engage in genetic engineering experiments and one of the first to reflect upon its possible consequences. It was his call, made jointly with 10 other scientists in late 1974, for a worldwide pause in these experiments that set in motion a series

These guidelines spell out in considerable detail the various physical and biological conditions under which genes may be cut apart and pasted together again to make new genetic mosaics. Some experiments - that would, for example, confer penicillin resistance to infectious bacterial strains now vulerable to the drug or enable otherwise harmless bacteria to synthesize dangerous toxins like diphtheria and botulinum - are flatly banned at the present time.

Others may be carried out, as Dr. Singer explained to the joint committee hearings, but only under welldefined stipulations.

Perhaps the least tractable questions surrounding recombinant DNA research is whether or not dangerous new forms could be created inadvertently - bacteria, for example, that carry genes both for a devastating toxin and a resistance to antibiotic drugs.

Some scientists believe strongly that science will rue the day it gained the ability to reset the evolutionary clock. Others insist that such fears are vastly overstated.

Genetic engineering, Berg has declared publicly, "is going to produce great and profound benefits, not theoretical ones." Some of these benefits will have commercial impact, such as the development of bacterial "factories" capable of producing large quantities of human insulin at low cost. But the most important benefit, he and others have maintained all along, "is the knowledge (we can acquire) of the human body and how it works, both in health and in

The Stanford biochemist told the Assembly committees that, in the past two years, a large number of genetic hybrids have been made in laboratories in the United States and overseas, "and there hasn't been a whiff of a problem associated with

Stanford Prof. Stanley N. Cohen has also made the point that the safeguards that science has erected against hypothesized dangers of monstrous new life forms are effective against all but one thing: the human imagination.

"You can develop a plausible 'scare scenario' around almost any kind of human activity, any research,' Cohen said during a recent interview on the Stanford campus. "These have as much, or as little, basis in real fact as most of the scarey situations conjured up for recombinant DNA research.

Three in one family struck by rare Addison's disease

By HARRY NELSON

He felt dizzy when he stood up. Climbing a flight of stairs was exhausting. Sometimes he felt so weak he could barely stand.

Of course, he reasoned, he had been working very hard lately. He was a fulltime student at Santa Monica College, and he put in 32 to 36 hours a week on the midnight to 8 a.m. shift stocking the shelves of a supermarket.

But this weariness seemed different. Deeper. Several medical facilities checked David but could find nothing wrong When David fainted about a week ago, two of his brothers took him to the family's physician in Pasadena. By that time, he was in a near comatose state. The physician quickly guessed the cause of the problem: Addison's disease. Tests subsequently performed at Huntington Memorial Hospital have verified the diagnosis.

Addison's disease is a disorder resulting from the sometimes sudden failure of the body's stress glands, the adrenals, to produce certain hormones that are essential for normal body metabolism.

When one particular hormone, cortisol, no longer is produced, the individual becomes progressively weaker, loses weight and becomes nauseated. If the missing hormone is not replaced, the patient will die.

Only about four persons in every 100,000 have Addison's, making it a rare disease. President Kennedy is known to have had Addison's disease. What makes David's case unusual is that he is the third member of his family to acquire it.

A sister, Mrs. Mary Bober, 33, of Rochester, N.Y., discovered she had Addison's at age 14. James, 33, Cook's suit the brother who took David to the Pasadena doctor, learned he had it when he was 16. There are eight other children in the family ranging in age from 15 to > David's doctor, Dr. Francis E. Schlueter, and Dr. Paul Speckart, a University of Southern California endocrinologist, say that considering the rarity of the disease in the general population, three cases in one family are almost unheard of.

> Because David cannot afford the expensive care and tests he is receiving, the hospital and the doctors are helping out. He is in the teaching wing of the hospital where the interns and residents can learn from his case.

> 'This is a success story in every way," say the doctors. "David's longevity will be normal if he takes special precautions.

> The special precautions consist of taking daily doses of cortisol, the missing hormone, and guarding against the effects of excessive stresses. Addison's disease used to be due mostly to tuberculosis, which attacked the adrenal glands. Today, the cause of most cases is unknown, but it is suspected of being an autoimmune disease. In autoimmune diseases, the body - for some

WASHINGTON (AP) -Acting as much from ignorance as knowledge, the government is preparing to deal with illegal aliens in ways that could affect not only the aliens and their employers but workers all over the United States.

The extent of the alien problem is unknown because, like an iceberg, the alien subculture in American society exists beneath the surface, out of sight of government surveys

Nonetheless, the first major step in the government's campaign s beginning: the distribution of new 'counterfeitproof'

Rep. Joshua Eilberg, a Philadelphia Democrat who heads the House subcommittee on immigration, is sponsoring a bill aimed at penalizing employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens.

Workshop scheduled April 27

Creating exhibits from common objects such as oatmeal boxes and moving cartons will be the subject of a day-long workshop for area museums' representatives April 23.

Starting at 10:30 a.m. in the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Arminta Neal, a nationally known consultant on problems of small museums, will conduct the workshop, the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum said.

It will be offered free to member institutions of the Permian Basin Museums Institute and those interested in museum work who are not associated with the institute. A barbecue picnic will be held on the museum grounds at noon.

Miss Neal is assistant director of Denver's Museum of Natural History, a United States representative to the International Council of Museums and an author of several books about museums.

MORE THAN 300 oilmen and businessmen were on hand Wednesday at the Midland Country Club to honor members of the Board for Lease of University Lands. The reception was hosted by the Midland Wildcat Committee. The board members and past board members are in Midland for the University Lands public auction of oil and gas leases which got under way in the Midland Hilton this morning.

From left are Wales Madden Jr. of Amarillo, past board member; State Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson of Midland; James B. Zimmerman, geologist in charge of the University Lands office in Midland; Dr. Sterling H. Fly Jr. of Uvalde, member of the board, and Dan C. Williams of Dallas, vice chairman of the board.

Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame's antique rig exhibit is officially opened Friday. Williams also is vice chairman of the Board of Regents of The University of Texas System. The dedication of the "Oil Patch" will be at 10:30 a. m. Friday following a reception for members of the Board for Lease of University Lands and the boards staff at the museum. Homer Fort, director of the museum, said the dedication ceremonies are open to the public. Russell J. Ramsland, president of the museum's board of trustees, or

Emil C. Rassman, president of the museum's board of executors, will make the introductory remarks prior to Williams' address. Charles Fraser, president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, will present Santa Rita Medallions to Board for Lease members, including Chairman Bob Armstrong, general land commissioner for the state of Texas, Williams, and Dr. Sterling H. Fly Jr. of Uvalde. Williams is chairman of the executive committee of Southland Eife Insurance Co. in Dallas.

The "Oil Patch" exhibit is immediately north of the museum building

Fort said the exhibit, about 95 per cent complete, has required the expenditure of approximately $100,000 and countless hours of volunteer

The Santa Rita medallions that will be presented to the Board for Lease members were struck to commemorate the discovery of the Big Lake oil field in Reagan County in 1923 on University Lands.

But he did suggest that the administration, while it has not finalized its plan, was preparing to suggest:

-Partial decontrol of prices for gas on the interstate as well as intrastate markets. However, price ceilings would be set in such a way that gas would allowed to rise to a rough equivalency with the price of oil.

This would mean a ceiling price of about $2.25 to $2.40 per thousand cubic feet for the first year, rising by 10-15 per cent each year thereafter. Current prices average about $1.42 for new gas on the interstate market and about $1.60-1.80 on the intrastate market. -Extension of federal allocation

Pecos probe yields oil C&K Petroleum, Inc., Midland, No.

I-A Jasper CSL, west offset to the Devonian oil pay opener in the BMH field of Pecos, County, reversed out 1,000 feet of oil and flowed gas at the estimated, daily rate of 1.250 million cubic feet on a drillstem test in the Tool was open two hours and 10 minutes on the test taken from 8,200-8,447 feet, on which gas surfaced in six minutes, flowing at the above rate on a 1/2-inch choke.

The sample chamber recovery was 3.12 cubic feet of gas and 225 cubic centimeters of oil. Flowing pressures were 486- 785 pounds, initial and final shut-in pressures were 3,270 and 3,325 pounds, respectively, times unreported.

The project is bottomed at 8,570 feet, and operator was running logs. It is 1,065 feet from north and 5,967 feet from east lines of section 1, block 104, Jasper CSL survey, seven miles southwest of Bakersfield.

The Washington Post MEXICO CITY - One illustration of the seriousness of Mexico City's air pollution problem is the fact that it is a world center for research into bronchial and other respiratory ailments. Sixty per cent of that orange-brown haze hovering over the capital at least half the year is created by cars, buses and trucks that blow their poisonous fumes freely into the air. (City authorities say the area has 1.5 million vehicles of its own and another half million floating vehicles). Private cars, often 10 years old, as well as trucks and buses owned by the federal and city government, Jeffers, 1,320 feet from are equally guilty. The second sinner is industry. While Mexico City is the nation's main industrial center, factories rarely adhere to government emissions standards. In addition, about one-third of the 11 million inhabitants of the Valley of Mexico live in one-room dwellings where heating is improvised with whatever will burn. To be fair, much of the chronic pollution results from the city's above sea level, where the air is thin and photosensitivity more intense. Moreover, surrounding mountains trap pollution within the valley. Only in the windy winter months, and sometimes in the summer rainy season, are the skies blown clear. In 1972, the previous administration turned the environment commission into a full-fledged Undersecretariat "For Envorinment Improvement." Between 1972 and 1975, the new body has been able to accomplish little else besides making a nationwide inventory of smoke, gas, dust and water pollution. In the last year, it began to give technical assistance and set standards for industrial polluters, even producing attractive tax incentives to woo industry away from the urban Sixteen monitors have been placed in the valley and city to register pollution and warn the authorities. Recent-Undersecretariat says, it has launchthe Environment ed patrol cars which stop and fine cars with emission or noise problems.

Research reveals truth about race

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

More than two thousand years ago the newspapers were full of the big race. Research reveals that the race was actually a bridge match between Diogenes Q. Hare and Aesop D. Tortoise and that Tortoise won in a walk when they both played the hand shown today. North dealer

Opening lead - * K At both tables of the match West opened the king of clubs and continued the suit. Hare ruffed the second club and dull noise you may have heard two thousand years ago was Hare's jaw dropping when the trumps failed to Hare turned to the diamonds, but West ruffed the third diamond and drew three rounds of trumps. That ran clubs. Down two. SLOWER START Tortoise was slower getting started.

Instead of ruffing the second club he discarded a spade. When West led a third club, Tortoise discarded another For lack of anything better to do, West led a fourth club. Tortoise ruffed in dummy with the ace of trumps just to show that he could be flashy when it pleased him. Then he lead out four rounds of trumps, drawing all those held by West. Tortoise slowly took the rest of the tricks with the ace of spades and good diamonds, making his contract and winning the match. It took him fifteen minutes to make his contract, while Hare had managed to go down two in only five minutes.

DAILY QUESTION Partner opens with 1 NT (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes. You hold: SKJ93; H62; D952; CA762.

What do you say? ANSWER: Bid two clubs the Stayman Convention, asking partner to bid a major suit of four or more cards. If he bids two spades, you will jump to four spades. If he bids anything else, you will bid 2NT.

Losers held an 8-7 lead over

gainers among New York

Stock Exchange-listed

The market was faced with some adverse inflation news,

as expected, at the opening

when the Labor Department reported that the wholesale price index jumped a seasonally adjusted 1.1 per sharpest rise since October

Analysts noted that investors had been bracing for such a negative reading all week, with the Dow recording a net loss of 12.63 points over the past three sessions.

Moore-McCormack

Resources rose 1 to 4814. The company declared a 3-for-2

stock split and a dividend

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks edged up .01 to 53.27.

On the American Stock

Exchange, the market value

index was down .18 at 110.63.

Volume on the Big Board continued to set a sluggish pace, totalling 7.47 million shares over the first two hours against 7.01 million in the like period Wednesday.

Here come your three little cotton tails hoppin' NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market posted a small down the news trail. Hippity, hoppity, Easter's on its loss today following word of Vacation began today, bring every boy and girl baskets of Easter joy, whether it is going to parties, going out of town or taking it easy and soaking up another jump in the The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial some sun rays. stocks was down .67 at 914.06.

Last weekend the track team traveled to San Angelo. Robert Wilson set a new record for the mile run. He ran it in 4.18. This is the secnd lowest record in the State of Texas. Way to go Robert!! More track stars were; Alvin Price, who came in fifth in the 100 yard dash and qualified for the finals in the 220 dash: Jeff Atkins, who placed fourth in the mile run; and Bryan Booker, who took fifth place in the shot put. The team left Wednesday for Roswell for another meet. We will take this opportunity to congratulate the following track men for a terrific job: Jeff Adkins, Kip Agar, Craig Badon, Chuck Barron, Brain Booker, Walter Bryson, Jerry Bundage, Mark Cecil, Pat Dardin, Paul Dardi, John Davis, John Dean, Gerald Dedrick, Brad Dudley, Bobby Floyd, Bob Gleen, Link Grimes, Bryon Hixon, Tom Hunter, Mike Jobe, Todd Liberty, Todd McMillian, Robert Montgomery, Randy Moore, Matt Morrison, Doug Noel, Grag Parr, Alvin Price, Harold Stewart, Chuck Stump, Gene Turtle, Billy Walker, Robert Wilson, Bart Wolfe, David Isby and Craig Heineman.

More from the sports report is featuring the baseball team. Last Saturday the team took a victory over San Angelo with the score 8 to zip. It was a great game! Congratulations go out to Bud Brigham, Jeff Johnson, Errol Winkler, Steve Cole, Robert Young, James Allen, Joe Mowles, Roger Copeland, Robert Strack, David Johnson, Kevin Widner, Kevin Miton, Kevin Pearce, Rick Foster, Doug Atnipp, Kevin Cooper, James Zachery, Larry Murphy, Mark Mead and Ricky Goode. This Saturday the baseball team will play Cooper Abilene. The crosstown rivals will face our mighty Bulldogs Tuesday on the baseball diamond at Midland Memorial Stadium. Everybody be there to back the pack!!

The state champion tennis team is playing district for individual competeition.

The girls golf team played in their last tournament today. The results should be known soon.

Is everybody getting excited about the Senior Girls Party? Don't forget, it's Hawaiian style. Hurry girls and grab your date before it is too late.

There will be tryouts for the Pack Backers for next year. Be sure and stay tuned for further information. During the Easter vacation the boys golf team will be playing its last two district golf matches in San Angelo and in Abiline. They only need to pick up nine more shots to be qualified for regionals. Good luck goes to the following golfers: Kelly Eng, Shayne Berry, Russ Brown, Phil Littlefield, Mike Mahon, Richard Minnix (who has a good chance to make all district), Tommy Walker, David Brimberry, Jimmy Kern and Jeff Lutke.

Everybody is getting together for lunch! Where? Of course, you should of known, at the Youth Center!! All Senior Girls of the Junior council are invited to eat in the Seinor Girls room. What's in the Senior Girls Room? Couches and a T.V. and tons of gossip! Come join the Senior Girls.

The sights and sounds of spring are around. Sitting in class you can hear the distant sound of lawn mowers manicuring the grass and while you walk to the Youth Center for lunch you may occasionally get sprayed by the sprinklers. Yes, spring is here!! It is all around you.

Other signs of spring are parties, spring fever and many friends. Some may have many cases of spring love. Sometimes Spring inspires mischievous deeds. such as stealing peoples' cars and then their keys, or shoe polishing cars and worst of all pouring "stink perfume" on someone? Ask Bobby Floyd?

We hope everyone has a great Easter vacation be careful but have a blast!

Subcommittee okays A&M regent nominee

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - A Senate subcommittee approved a Houston physician today as a Texas A&M regent despite emotional objections that he was an 'abortionist" who is "unworthy to associate with moral and civilized people." The appointment of Dr. John Coleman was forwarded to the full Senate on a 6-1 vote, but subcommittee chairman Peyton McKnight said he would not ask the Senate to confirm Coleman until after the Easter weekend. Coleman would be the first black to be confirmed to the A&M board.

The delay was sought by Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston, who fired such questions at Coleman as 'What do you do with the baby's body?'

"Oh, Walter," protested Sen. Betty Andujar, R-Fort Worth, "do we have to go into this?" Mengden replied, "We are adult, grown people dealing with a medical process."

Coleman, 47, acknowledged that he is part owner of the Cullen Women's Center, where an estimated 6,000 abortions are performed each year. Coleman said he had personally performed aproximately 500 abortions.

Houston lawyer Lewis Berry said Coleman was 'unworthy to associate with moral and civilized people." He said it is legal to be a Communist or a Nazi, "but are we to appoint them to public office?"

McKnight, D-Tyler, instructed Berry that such comments were out of order.

Ira Early of Houston, president of Life Advocates, referred to Coleman as an "abortionist" and talked of the "abortion chamber" at the clinic.

Coleman said abortions are performed in pregnancies up to 18 weeks, but Early asserted, "I submit that they are doing abortions past seven

Coleman, an obstetrician and gynecologist, said the clinic represents only a small part of his practice.

The subcommittee hearing had been held up at the request of Sen. Bill Moore, D-Bryan, who said he wanted to check out rumors that Coleman was appointed in exchange for black support of Calvin Guest of Bryan for re-election as state Democratic Party chairman.

Lousewort priority

Mack Wallace, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, said in Austin recently that many Americans appear to be more concerned about the snail darter and the kangaroo rat than they are about national security and energy shortages.

"I believe there is, in fact, a feeling in this country today that the lousewort, the caribou, the black-footed ferret and the kangaroo rat are more important than national security," the commissioner said.

He sharply criticized environmentalists who have stalled or wiped out energy-producing or generating projects.

We do not know what got Wallace so riled up on the subject at that particular moment, but he is absolutely right in his observations, and it is hoped that his remarks will generate a similar outpouring from others on the subject. This is something in which more and more Americans must become concerned if any relief is to be gained.

"This nation," said Wallace, "did not become the nation it is without oil and gas and without coal. We cannot maintain our position in world affairs by protecting the Tennessee snail darter, the clam larvae and the Furbish lousewort."

He then pointed out that environmentalists' defense of the lousewort - a plant which bears feather-like leaves - - has stalled a $700 million which Mack Wallace was talking.

hydroelectric project in Maine. He noted also that a $3.5 billion project to convert Western oil shale to fuel had to be scrapped to avoid intruding on the ferret's territory. "Back here in Texas," he said, "we know that animal to be a member of the polecat family."

And neither did the commissioner overlook Congress in his comments. He criticized Congress for not having passed one bill that has found one cubic foot of gas or one barrel of oil.

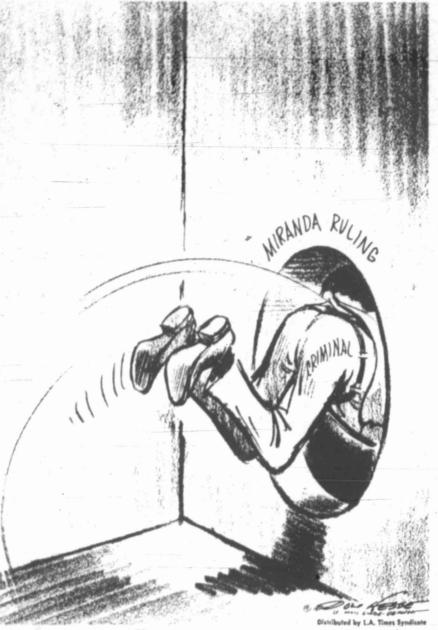

"It is impossible," he continued, "for the State of Texas and other producing states to subsidize the rest of the United States any longer in energy. We have had them on energy food stamps since the 1950s anyhow.'

Wallace knows whereof he speaks and we are delighted that he has spoken out as he has on these subjects. It is hoped that he and many, many others will continue to hammer away at the injustices he has mentioned. This is what we must have if any headway at all is to be made.

Somewhere along the line, many of the unjust, unwarranted, expensive demands of the loudsquawking environmental extremists must be sidetracked in both Washington and Austin and elsewhere.

It is felt that some progress is being made at this time. Let's get the non-oil-producing states off those "energy food stamps" about

ART BUCHWALD

Anyway, it was great trip, AOAIC man said

WASHINGTON - One of the most important organizations in the State Department is the Agency for Op-timistic Appraisals Of International Conferences. It was set up to shed a good light on summit meetings between the United States and another power to counteract the publicity that a conference has failed.

The Assistant Secretary of AOAIC is Sandy Merriweather, a jocular, affable career diplomat, who is in charge of preparing position powers showing that no matter how the meeting was portrayed in the press, there is a silver lining at the end of the tunnel.

When Secretary Vance returned from what was described in some pessimistic circles as a disastrous trip to Moscow I went over to see Merriweather

"We got everything we wanted out of the talks," Merriweather said, chuckling as he drank a bottle of Pepto Bismol

"How's that?" I asked him. "Secretary Vance got to see the Bolshoi with Foreign Secretary Andrei Gromyko. We know Gromyko hates the ballet, and the fact he went with Vance shows that deep down the Soviets want an arms agreement."

"There are some people who say that President Carter and Secretary Vance misread the mood of the Soviets and it was a mistake for Vance to go to Moscow before the Soviets had studied the U.S. proposals.

"That's ridiculous," said Mer-

riweather, dropping two Alka Seltzers into a glass of water. "We knew what the mood of the Soviets was. We expected them to take a hard line and throw the proposals back in our face.' "Then what was the purpose of Vance's trip?" "To clear the air and set the stage for our talks in May. We knew the Soviets were testing Carter. He has publicly stated his position on disarmament and human rights. By sending Vance to Moscow at this time we were confirming that Carter wasn't just talking for domestic consumption. But what we didn't know was how the Soviet leaders felt about the Carter proposals. By refusing the U.S. package out of hand, we can now formulate a foreign policy based on their negative and hurt feelings."

"Wouldn't it have been better if the suggestions had been made privately to the Soviets without the whole world watching the Kremlin's reaction?' Merriweather poured himself a glass of Bromo Seltzer. 'Of course not. That would have been devious. Mr. Carter has said he would never resort to secret diplomacy to gain an advantage over an adversary. It isn't his style. "But," I said, "whether we like it or not Vance came back from Moscow with egg on his face.' Merriweather took out a package of Tums and popped four in his mouth. "You seem to miss the point. We never expected the Soviets to accept our proposals. We would have been in a lot of trouble if they had. Congress would have been up in arms if the Kremlin had said the deal was all right with them. If the Soviets had taken the package it would have meant that there was something wrong with it. The fact that the Russian leaders rejected it shows the pro-

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

WASHINGTON - The Army has warfare. conducted hundreds of germ warfare tests in places like New York City's subway system and Washington's National Airport. Yet, incredibly, no one has bothered to prepare plans to protect the American citizenry from a biological attack The military has spent millions on ways to defend against biological warfare, but has concentrated only on protecting its own troops. The general population is supposed to be guarded against biological attack by the Public Health Service. Yet the agency admits it has no program whatsoever to protect the public

WHITTEN

This glaring deficiency in the national defense occurs at a time when military analysts fear that the United States is becoming increasingly vulnerable to a biological attack from the Soviet Union.

The United States destroyed the last of its offensive biological weapons in 1973 after an agreement with the Soviets to ban germ warfare. But worried Pentagon officials say they have no way of verifying whether the Soviets have actually completed their end of the agreement Contends one Army official with access to the intelligence reports; "The Soviets clearly intend to maintain an offensive capability, an ability to fight war in a chemical environment.

The agencies of government nevertheless, keep passing the buck instead of protecting the public. Declared an Army Spokesman: "The Army isn't supposed to protect the general population from biological

Germ warfare: No protection

Echoed a spokesman for the Public Health Service: "We don't have a role. There is no formal function for preparedness against a germ warfare attack in the Public Health Service." Footnote: The Agriculture Dept. developed defoliants for use in Vietnam in the 1960s. It has the responsibility to defend the nation's animals and crops against chemical warfare. But the Agriculture Dept., too, has no defensive program. Sen. STRANGE DIPLOMACY - While the world spotlight is focused on Soviet-American talks, relations between the United States and Czechoslovakia have seriously deteriorated.

Curiously, the reason for the rupture can be traced to the influence of a potent Washington law firm. The firm's most prominent partner, ex-Sen. George Smathers, D.-Fla., is a backslapping buddy of Senate Finance Chairman Russell Long, D.-

At the law firm's instigation, the obliging Long began obstructing delicate negotiations with the Czechs He recently fired off a brash letter to Secretary of State Cyrus Vance about the Czech situation. The powerful senator warned that certain conditions must be met before he would allow normalized relations with Czechoslovakia.

The story should be told from the beginning: During World War II, the Allies confiscated 18.4 metric tons of Czech gold. Later the Communists nationalized U.S. corporations in Czechoslovakia, leaving the companies with more than $80 million in claims against the Czech government. U.S.-Czech relations quickly soured.

But some two years ago, the State Dept. and the Czech foreign ministry completed negotiations which were supposed to lead to normalized relations between the two countries. The Czechs were willing to settle the corporate claims for about 40 cents on the dollar. In return, the United States would grant Czechoslovakia better trading status and would return the Most of those with claims against Czechoslovakia considered the settlements the best deal that could be obtained. But the larger corporations, which didn't need the money and could write off the loss, weren't satisfied.

After considerable persuasion from Smathers' law firm, Long and Sen. Mike Gravel, D.-Alaska, destroyed the agreement that the State Dept. had labored so hard to assemble. They introduced an amendment to the Foreign Trade Act that denied Czechoslovakia all the promised concessions until the Czechs paid off 100 per cent of the claims. This was an unreasonable and impossible request. our sources contend.

The State Dept. pleaded with Long to drop his opposition, but the stubborn senator refused. Even a group of Louisianans that wanted to sell rice to the Czechs couldn't change his mind. Long's amendment passed Congress and became law.

Long also wants to keep the Czech gold, valued at $100 million, even though the State Dept. has told him the United States has no legal right to it. The new administration also has been unable to budge the intransigent

In his private letter to Vance, Long fumed that the Finance Committee felt "total irritation" about the Czech affair. "I have concluded that the proper course" is for the United States to pay off the corporations with the Czech gold, Long bluntly declared.

Footnote: Through a spokesman, Long told us his "only motive is to prevent this country from a claim based on post-World War II agreements for a dime on a dollar." Long said he never discussed the matter with Smathers. Smathers did not return our ealls and Gravel refused to comment.

all of us," he said early this week, "a

Egypt and Saudi Arabia are working in tandem on the peace effort for good reason. Proof of the seriousness of this coordinated move is the constant presence in Cairo of Kamal Adham, a key adviser to Saudi Arabia's King Khalid.

Sadat has big economic trouble at home and recently had to put down the worst urban rioting Egypt has seen in many years. Egyptians are weary of war and their low standard of living. Moreover, Sadat has kept momentum largely on a pledge to get most of the occupied territories back and a peace which would raise the standard of living. That's a plateful, and he has to deliver. Saudi Arabia suffers not from a poor economy but from the great need to build its country from the great oil riches. That's why the Saudis have become a strong foreign policy force in the world.

Another Middle East war, with both sides using more sophisticated, expensive weapons, would cost Saudi Arabia anywhere from $5 billion to $10 billion in aid. Such a war would also put the Saudis in the position of imposing an oil embargo on the United States, something they don't want to Finally, with the influx of guest workers, Saudi Arabia is now a teeming nation, increasingly susceptible to infiltration and attack by radical Arabs. If the Palestinians don't get what they regard as justice by peaceful means or in war with Israel, they could turn their fury on the rich, moderate Arab nations, and Saudi Arabia is a prime target.

There is merit to the argument that 1977 is a very good year to hold serious talks about settling the Middle East trouble. There is considerable moderate sentiment in several Arab states friendly to the United States. The Saudis kept oil prices down partly as an incentive to the United States to push on Israel for a settlement. The Soviets are making moves again to reenter the region (Kuwait made its first arms/deal with the Soviets last

The United States has a new President and a new secretary of state, both capable of new approaches. Mr. Carter is aware that he won't have to indulge in electioneering for nearly four years.

The United States needs a moderate Arab world as much as it needs to protect Israel. Both can be accomplished, and what a kudo for the President who accomplishes these consistent goals. Sadat was friendly and charming this week. The Saudis were behind the scenes reciting how the United States will depend on Saudi Arabia for the biggest portion of its imported oil in a few years and, by 1982, will be importing 52 per cent of the oil it uses.

Mr. Carter absorbs all this during the Sadat visit and will hear more when he meets in the near future with Jordan's King Hussein, Prince Fahd of Saudi Arabia and Syrian President Assad

Reawakening fears of inflation cooling off hopes for market

By JACK EGAN The Washington Post

NEW YORK - The reawakening of fears about inflation has sent a decided chill through a stock market that still vividly remembers how stock prices were early cut in half during the 1973-74 inflationary

Professional money managers, who trade the billions of dollars in stocks held by pension funds, bank trust departments and other institutions, are afraid of once again getting caught with large stock portfolios at a time when rising interest rates make bonds and Treasury bills preferable investments.

And there is not much confidence on Wall Street that the Carter administration can do much to stem a new inflationary cycle if it turns out that the recent reacceleration in the price indices is more than the temporary fallout of the bitter winter weather that hit much of the country.

participants are risk adverse," according to Eric Miller, chairman of the investment policy committee at Oppenheimer & Co., a major institutional

"They're still feeling the anguish and the pain of the last several years, and almost everything involves not sticking their necks out and always tending to fear that the unknown will be the unpleasant unknown," said Miller.

Despite all of the negative psychology, the overwhelming majority of market analysts believe that the market's recent protracted slide does not have much further to go. They base this on the continued strength of corporate earnings and other fundamental factors.

Most put a bottom on the decline of about 850 points as measured by the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks. Few think that a bear market has commenced. But the near consensus at the beginning of the year that the market had a good chance in 1977 to break through its all-time record of 1051 on the Dow is crumbling. The widely watched Dow industrials recorded a slender gain on the New York Stock Exchange Tuesday. But the upturn was misleading because nearly twice as many issues declined as advanced on the Big Board. In the past level in more than 14 months. It is now nearly 90 points below the level at which it began the year.

The overriding concern weighing on the market is the fear of inflation. Industrial wholesale prices have been on the upsurge since last summer and have climbed at an 8 per cent annual rate for the eight months ended in February. New wholesale prices figures for March are due to be released by the moving parts months ended in February. New wholesale prices government today. The expectation is that they will again be in the worrisome double-digit range.

Consumer prices also increased at a double-digit rate in February. And while the sharp hikes in food and fuel that primarily caused the overall jump were clearly weather-related, they have not been easily

Show entries being received

Entries in the 11th annual Southwestern Area Art Show currently are being received.

The exhibition, sponsored jointly by the Midland Arts Association and Museum of the Southwest, will open April 29 and continue through May 30 in the museum's Turner Memorial Gallery, 1705 W. Missouri Ave. Leonard Sipiora, director of the El Paso Museum of Art, will be the juror and will recommend cash awards totaling $1,000.

Paintings, sculpture, ceramics and crafts, graphics and photography will be eligible for entry in the show.

Entries may be delivered to the museum's Lancaster House at 1705 W. Indiana Ave., between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. today, Friday and Saturday. The show will be judged April 11 and 12.

then Jakarta. The tourists had encountered one of the Philippines' remarkable musical exports: strolling players.

Rivals in Singapore, Bangkok and elsewhere in Asia may resent it, but Filipino entertainers are acknowledged masters of this specialty.

Nor are they a recent development based on chains of new hotels and international tourism. Old records indicate that the white Rajahs of colonial Sarawak, now a province of Malaysia, enjoyed "musical selections played by a Filipino band at Sunday concerts."

Old or new, the Musicians Union of Singapore called on the government earlier this year to regulate the entry of foreign music men on a reciprocal

"In this way, local musicians may have more local opportunities for employment and perfecting their musical skill. Then our local musicians may be able to become good enough to perform abroad and win fame and publicity for Singapore," a union statement said.

Through its efforts, the union said, foreign groups can remain here no longer than six months and a local group has to be engaged whenever a foreign group is employed.

Top singer Carman Patena says she and other Filipinos "understand the complaints against us by some local entertainers in the other cities." The demand continues, however.

A top executive at a hotel here said, "Filipinos seem more extroverted, more eager to please than many local entertainers (Singapore is more than 70 per cent Chinese) who may be as technically adept. Also, Filipino groups have been at it a lot longer.'

A check in Manila indicated 3,500 to 4,000 singers and musicians are out of the country each year performing as far afield as North and South America, Japan, Iran, Australia and New Zealand

Eleuterio Gardiner, president of the Philippine Entertainers, Exporters and Promoters Association, says, 'Our people are very versatile. That is why they are preferred abroad. They can easily adapt from one style to another and they are easy to get along with.

Kirbo acts as 'kitchen cabinet'

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) - Not long after the message came in from Moscow, President Carter was on the telephone with his old friend and counselor, telling Charles H. Kirbo about Soviet rejection of the administration's first arms limitation proposals

"I talked to him, and he told me that the indications were that there wouldn't be much progress," Kirbo recalled, with customary understatement, his soft drawl broken by pauses long enough to drive a Yankee sentence through

In fact, there had been no progress. At times like that, it helps to have a friend, one with no position to protect and no ax to grind. That's Charles Kirbo, 59, the

Atlanta lawyer who chose to stay home instead of going to Washington with the President of the United States. These days, Kirbo is the kitchen cabinet all by himself.

"I just kind of watch things and try to keep up with the news and talk to him every now and then," Kirbo said in an interview in his 25th floor law office, overlooking downtown Atlanta. 'Whenever I talk with him, whenever

I go up there, we have no set agenda. It's sort of a relaxed, wandering discussion of what either one of us "Up there" means Washington.

Kirbo prefers Atlanta. He never did have much use for government jobs. And the President's best friend doesn't need portfolio.

"I'd never argue with him and tell him he's wrong. I'd tell him what my feelings are and ask him if he wouldn't rethink the thing, and I've always found him willing. I've tried to help him anticipate things."

He and Carter have been friends for 15 years now, since Kirbo took the recount case that won the President's first election, for the Democratic nomination to a Georgia state senate

Any time he's in Washington, Kirbo can have a fancy office with White House view to use as his base. That would be Room 175 of the Executive Office Building, the suite Richard M. Nixon had refurbished for his own

"There's enough damn room in there for a platoon of men," Kirbo snorted. "I haven't got any use for that damn place.'

Still, once in a while, Kirbo gets to thinking that he should be closer at hand. "It's hard, I find, to know what the hell is going on in a specific area. If you're not there, it's usually over before you find out what's happening.

Report says Arkansas water could be exported to Texas

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN-Surplus water from Arkansas could be made available for exportation to the High Plains, a report released by the Texas Water Development Board asserts.

That document, a $24,000 study prepared for the board by a Little Rock engineering firm, will be included as an "alternative" in the revised Texas Water Plan now at the printers, the board's executive director, James Rose, told board members. Rose told the panel that "mutual benefits" can be derived by Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and other nearby states "through an enlarged, more cost effective transfer

The report says that large quantities of water in excess of the needs of Arkansas citizens pass through or by Allowing for the water needs of Arkansas-estimated at 5.5 million acre-feet of water per year by the year 2020-and meeting a possible requirement of bordering states to allow up to 40 per cent of all gauged surface water to flow over state lines, the report projects that in 2020 approximately 43 million acre-feet per year would be "excess and surplus.

"It has been estimated that six million acre-feet of water annually would be adequate to maintain current irrigation levels in the High Plains of Texas," the report notes. This quantity, the report says, could be provided from excess flows of the White, Arkansas, Quachita and Little River systems in Arkansas.

Since the water needs of the High Plains represent less than 10 per cent of the water leaving Arkansas, not including the Mississippi River, the report says the actual export of water would be "much greater," leaving Arkansas with adequate water to fulfill all foreseeable needs.

The study recommends the development of a plan that will export water during the wet season-identified in the document as December through July-so there will be no interference with the water-needs of Arkansas now or in the future.

Rose noted that the report addresses only availability of excess water in Arkansas and a preliminary recongaissance of a probable route of conveyance and collection.

The report says exporting water from Arkansas to Texas would require the construction of a series of canals and pressurized conduits to transport water from the White River below DeValls Bluff southwestward across Arkansas.

The mostly downhill channel route wuld pickup additional waters from the Arkansas, Quachita and Little rivers (Millwoods Reservoir) with termination in Wright Patman Reservoir west of Texarkana in the extreme northeast corner of Texas.

Most export plans are based on steady flow rates while the Arkansas exportation plan would restrict such appropriations for four months during

"An export system based on maximum flows that occur approximately 30 per cent of the time will be much more expensive, the difference being the cost to transport excess and surplus waters during high flows,' the report says.

Rose said an analysis of the cost-both in money and energywould probably take "about two or three years." The cost of this type analysis itself could be quite expensive, and Rose suggested that the board might seek financing on a regional basis

A possible source of this analysis funding could be the High Plains Study Group—a six-state council set up to find solutions to the diminishing groundwater supplies in the Ogallala

That group, chaired by Gov. David Boren of Oklahoma, already has received federal monies for an Ogallala study and could possibly seek funds from Washington for the Arkansas water exportation cost analysis.

The report carries a grim forecast for the High Plains if additional water is not forthcoming.

"By 1985, if a supplemental surface supply of water has not reached the High Plains, the region will have begun an area-wide retrogression to dryland farming," the report warns. "The economic consequences, not only on a state level but on a national scale, will be severe.

Factors which will need to be considered before any final determination can be made as to the avialability of Arkansas river waters to Texas are many the report says. "Consumptive, navigation, water quality and legal requirements can be identified while aquifer recharge, scouring, upstream and ecological balance requirements are much more difficult to determine and require lengthy study," the report notes.

Water from the Arkansas River-projected to supply 48 per cent of the export water-may pose water

Unlike the White, Quachita and Little Rivers, the Arkansas "has a history of elevated salinity and has not been considered adequate for irrigation purposes in the past.'

The report, notes, however, that there has been a "noticeable improvement" in the Arkansas water quality in recent years. Salinity varies with stream flow and, the report says, the river water can be used for irrigation with proper monitoring.

Yet, the report notes that there may be concern by Arkansas citizens over the impact of lower-quality Arkansas River entering the Millwoods Reservoir, on the Little River.

"A project of this nature could require substantial committment of land and alteration to roads, bridges, railroads and existing drainage structures," the report says.

The water availability and route alternative document was prepared by Stephens Consultant Services Inc., Little Rock, Ark. It is dated December, 1976.

Missouri makes many vehicles

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., (AP) -When the American public thinks about cars - they usually don't give Missouri a second thought.

They should, says Donald Estell the state's director of Commerce and Industrial Development, because Missouri assembles more automobiles that any city except Detroit - and some years it produces

Estell reveals that in 1975 Missouri produced 637,918 cars to Detroit's 477,676. "Unfortunately," he added, 'not many people know about it - not even Missourians.'

Future not rosy for Big Spring

Fort Worth Star-Telegram Written for The Associated Press

BIG SPRING, Tex. (AP) - A few yards from the end of the Webb AFB runway there stands perhaps the most strategic liquor store in the whole American defense system.

From behind the counter, Elvin Lay, 74, watched a small silver speck cream down the runway until it turned into a roaring T38 jet trainer as it lifted up just in front of his picture

Lay, a retired farmer, shook his head and said he may be the only man in Big Spring who won't be sorry to see the base close

"Sometimes it sounds like they're going to suck you right up the tailpipe," he observed. "It's nervewracking.

"They could close the thing tomorrow as far as I'm concerned.

But for other residents of this West Texas city of 28,000, the news that Webb will close has not been

Even though it has been expected for nearly a year, the announcement last week of Air Force Secretary Thomas C. Reed's decision still seemed to leave much of Big Spring in a state of semi-shock.

For starters, Big Spring expects to lose about one-fourth of its population or more. The government predicts as many as 1,830 persons could eventually leave when closing of the base is completed in six to eight months.

For those who remain, an impact statement predicts unemployment will go from the current 3 per cent to perhaps as high as 12.8 per cent. Webb AFB is Big Spring's biggest employer. A $38.2 million payroll will also evaporate.

The impact statement predicts as many as 2,938 housing units could go on the market as well. Merchants can count on a drop of about 16.9 per cent in retail sales.

School enrollment, too, will drop drastically, a range of 15 to 23 per cent, and Big Spring is already counting on closing at least three schools-possibly four.

But those are only cold statistics of the gaping economic hole Big Spring will feel when it loses a base that has been here 26 years.

Relatives and classmates and uprooted families and old friends soon will be among the many "who are go-

Sales already have been dented on the row of car lots that leads from the Big Spring square to the air base.

Because of the Air Force customers, the car business was big in Big Spring. The city has more than 20 dealers. But several said business has been in a state of limbo since it was first learned nearly a year ago that Webb might be closed. "Over the years there was a time when we did probably 75 per cent of our business" with servicemen, said Thomas' partner, Wayne Crady.

With its flat, red ground backed up to cedar speckled mesas, the economy of Big Spring as long as most residents can remember has always been tied to cotton, cattle, oil and the U.S. Air Force.

The effect of the Air Force base on Big Spring is so far reaching it is hard to find anyone who will not be affected by the change.

Mayor Wade Choate, for example, manages the federal credit union at the base. City Manager Harry Nagel owns a convenience store near the

Nearly everyone expects to suffer economically. The big questions are: How much? And for how long?

The crisis of losing the base seems to have divided Big Spring into two schools of thought. On the one hand "you have doomsdayers," said newsman Hart.

But a larger-or at least more vocal-camp is the group of civic boosters, most of them businessmen, who keep vowing that Big Spring is going to rebound full speed from the jaws of economic disaster. J. Tom Graham, publisher of the

we can do." Graham said the economic pressure extends to the city's government and schools "But we're going to get some government assistance in that area," he said. "There's no danger that the city schools would go bankrupt -or that taxes will go up that much.' But for a Big Spring that is already economically edgy, one big fear is that the legislature this session will put through a new refinery tax that could fall heavily on the Cosden Refinery, Big Spring's second biggest employer.

'A town like this can stand one blow," Graham said, "but I don't know about two.

"That tax would cost the refinery $1 million a month."

Most Big Spring leaders have tied their main hopes for recovery on a loan that calls for the city to take over the more than 2,000 acres and $130 million in facilities at Webb and use it to recruit and house new industry.

But a stumbling block to that am-bitious plan is that Big Spring lost its year-long fight to keep the base open. It seems to have taken its toll on the town's morale.

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - rise to $5.15 wholesale by No more jail house cof- July. fee, says Travis County Sheriff Raymond Frank. However, prisoners who go on to the state prison at Huntsville will continue to get their morning cup of java. Frank said his nocoffee decree will save local taxpayers $27,847 a year with coffee at $4.18 a pound and expected to

County prisoners whose relatives bring them unopened cans of ground coffee will be allowed to brew it in their cells, the sheriff said.

At the city jail, officers said they brew a 90-cup percolator each morning and most everybody gets some coffee, with the jail population averaging 50 to 75 prisoners.

The Texas Department of Corrections told the Austin, American-Statesman that state prisoners would continue to get a daily cup of coffee, mainly because the TDC imports, roasts and grinds its own coffee beans. The department is currently paying $2.84 for the beans

Residents of institutions under the state Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation also will continue to get coffee, although the agency's bill for a six-month supply now totals $62,000.

MHMR spokesman Harley Pershing told the American Statesman that the agency was con-sidering using a "coffee extender."

Reds break from gate screaming 'Geronimo'

Geronimo's post-game comments must have left the San Diego Padres cold—just like the weather.

THE SLENDER Cincinnati Reds centerfielder was explaining how he raised his batting average 50 points in 1976 to a career-high .307. "I quit trying to hit home runs," said Geronimo, who had only two homers last season.

His two-run homer off Cy Young Award winner Randy Jones Wednesday broke a 2-2 tie and triggered a 5-3 victory for world champion Cincinnati in major league baseball's season

"I wouldn't be surprised if that is the only homer I get this season," said Geronimo.

It was an improbable happening in a day of bizarre events.

Wednesday dawned in the birthplace of professional baseball with three inches of snow on the ground and sub-freezing temperatures. "I thought they'd forget about playing the game," said Geronimo, who had seen snow only once before in his life. OVERCOMING numb hands and a rusty swing, he deposited one of

Jones' elusive sinkerballs over the right field fence.

"I was just trying to hit the ball. It was a good pitch, just below the knees. I think it was where he wanted it," said Geronimo, a native of the Dominican Republic.

The bad weather conditions didn't keep a sellout crowd of 51,937 fans from showing up at Riverfront Stadium. But the show they saw was straight out of the sandlots, with routine plays turning into adventures.

REDS MANAGER Sparky Anderson called it a "horrible" game.

"I thought somebody was going to get killed out there," he said, referring to the weather related misplays. "I doubt if anyone could played well out there, not even a hockey team, said Padres Manager John McNamara, grumbling about the 14degree wind-chill factor.

He blamed the loss on a case of opening-day jitters. "We gave away the ballgame by giving them a couple extra outs. If the Reds get more than three outs per inning, they'll kill you." Errors by Gene Richards and Mike Ivie kept innings alive.

McNAMARA pronounced Jones' arm sound, saying, "He wasn't as sharp as we've seen him, but those were unusual circumstances."

In his last five innings Jones gave up all five runs on nine hits. "I made too many mistakes," said the twotime 20- game winner.

He said his ill-fated pitch to Geronimo was "a sinker that stayed afloat. It was supposed to be down and away and there's no way that ball leaves the park. Instead, it was up and in. "But I've got to say overall I thought I had good stuff."

The victory went to 36-year-old Woodie Fryman, the dean of National League starters. Rawly Eastwick, a bust in spring training, preserved the triumph with three innings of one-hit Rookie Mike Champion and Ivie had three hits each for San Diego. Ivie had a solo homer and a double.

By LES THOMAS Fort Worth Star-Telegram Written for The Associated Press

BIG SPRING, Tex. (AP) - A few yards from the end of the Webb AFB runway there stands perhaps the most strategic liquor store in the whole American defense system.

From behind the counter, Elvin Lay, 74, watched a small silver speck cream down the runway until it turned into a roaring T38 jet trainer as it lifted up just in front of his picture

Lay, a retired farmer, shook his head and said he may be the only man in Big Spring who won't be sorry to see the base close.

"Sometimes it sounds like they're going to suck you right up the tailpipe," he observed. "It's nervewracking.
"They could close the thing tomorrow as far as I'm concerned.' But for other residents of this West Texas city of 28,000, the news that Webb will close has not been welcome. Even though it has been expected for nearly a year, the announcement last week of Air Force Secretary Thomas C. Reed's decision still seemed to leave much of Big Spring in a state of semi-shock.

For starters, Big Spring expects to lose about one-fourth of its population or more. The government predicts as many as 1,830 persons could eventually leave when closing of the base is completed in six to eight months.

For those who remain, an impact statement predicts unemployment will go from the current 3 per cent to perhaps as high as 12.8 per cent. Webb AFB is Big Spring's biggest employer. A $38.2 million payroll will also evaporate.

The impact statement predicts as many as 2,938 housing units could go on the market as well. Merchants can count on a drop of about 16.9 per cent in retail sales.

School enrollment, too, will drop drastically, a range of 15 to 23 per cent, and Big Spring is already counting on closing at least three schools-possibly four. But those are only cold statistics of the gaping economic hole Big Spring will feel when it loses a base that has been here 26 years. Relatives and classmates and uprooted families and old friends soon will be among the many "who are go-When the word came Wednesday, the news didn't wait for newspapers to print it. It went door to door, ear to "It got around town like a prairie backed out. It cost me $800."

Sales already have been dented on the row of car lots that leads from the Big Spring square to the air base. Because of the Air Force customers, the car business was big in Big Spring. The city has more than 20 dealers.

But several said business has been in a state of limbo since it was first learned nearly a year ago that Webb might be closed. "Over the years there was a time when we did probably 75 per cent of our business" with servicemen, said Thomas' partner, Wayne Crady.

With its flat, red ground backed up to cedar speckled mesas, the economy of Big Spring as long as most residents can remember has always been tied to cotton, cattle, oil and the U.S. Air Force.

The effect of the Air Force base on Big Spring is so far reaching it is hard to find anyone who will not be affected by the change

Mayor Wade Choate, for example, manages the federal credit union at the base. City Manager Harry Nagel owns a convenience store near the

Nearly everyone expects to suffer economically. The big questions are: How much? And for how long?

The crisis of losing the base seems to have divided Big Spring into two schools of thought. On the one hand "you have doomsdayers," said newsman Hart.

But a larger-or at least more vocal-camp is the group of civic boosters, most of them businessmen, who keep vowing that Big Spring is going to rebound full speed from the laws of economic disaster. J. Tom Graham, publisher of the

we can do. Graham said the economic pressure extends to the city's government and schools.

"But we're going to get some government assistance in that area," he said. "There's no danger that the city schools would go bankrupt -or that taxes will go up that much.

But for a Big Spring that is already economically edgy, one big fear is that the legislature this session will put through a new refinery tax that could fall heavily on the Cosden Refinery, Big Spring's second biggest employer.

"A town like this can stand one blow," Graham said, "but I don't know about two.

"That tax would cost the refinery $1 million a month."

Most Big Spring leaders have tied their main hopes for recovery on a loan that calls for the city to take over the more than 2,000 acres and $130 million in facilities at Webb and use it to recruit and house new industry.

But a stumbling block to that ambitious plan is that Big Spring lost its year-long fight to keep the base open. It seems to have taken its toll on the County prisoners whose relatives bring them unopened cans of ground coffee will be allowed to brew it in their cells, the sheriff said.

At the city jail, officers said they brew a 90-cup percolator each morning and most everybody gets some coffee, with the jail population averaging 50 to 75 prisoners.

The Texas Department of Corrections told the Austin American-Statesman that state prisoners would continue to get a daily cup of coffee, mainly because the TDC imports, roasts and grinds its own coffee beans. The department is currently paying $2.84 for Residents of institutions under the state Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation also will continue to get coffee, although the agency's bill for a six-month supply now totals $62,000.

MHMR spokesman Harley Pershing told the American Statesmanthat the agency was con-sidering using a "coffee extender."

Reds break from gate screaming 'Geronimo'

Geronimo's post-game comments must have left the San Diego Padres cold-just like the weather.

THE SLENDER Cincinnati Reds centerfielder was explaining how he raised his batting average 50 points in 1976 to a career-high .307. "I quit trying to hit home runs," said Geronimo, who had only two homers last season.

His two-run homer off Cy Young Award winner Randy Jones Wednesday broke a 2-2 tie and triggered a 5-3 victory for world champion Cincinnati in major league baseball's season

"I wouldn't be surprised if that is the only homer I get this season," said

It was an improbable happening in a day of bizarre events. Wednesday dawned in the birthplace of professional baseball with three inches of snow on the ground and sub-freezing temperatures. "I thought they'd forget about playing the game," said Geronimo, who had seen snow only once before in his life. OVERCOMING numb hands and a rusty swing, he deposited one of

Jones' elusive sinkerballs over the right field fence.

"I was just trying to hit the ball. It was a good pitch, jest below the knees. I think it was where he wanted it," said Geronimo, a native of the Dominican Republic. The bad weather conditions didn't keep a sellout crowd of 51,937 fans from showing up at Riverfront Stadium. But the show they saw was straight out of the sandlots, with routine plays turning into adventures.

REDS MANAGER Sparky And erson called it a "horrible" game.

"I thought somebody was going to get killed out there," he said, referring to the weather related misplays. "I doubt if anyone could played well

out there, not even a hockey team.' said Padres Manager John McNamara, grumbling about the 14degree wind-chill factor.

He blamed the loss on a case of opening-day jitters. "We gave away the ballgame by giving them a couple extra outs. If the Reds get more than three outs per inning, they'll kill you." Errors by Gene Richards and Mike Ivie kept innings alive.

McNAMARA pronounced Jones' arm sound, saying, "He wasn't as sharp as we've seen him, but those were unusual circumstances.'

In his last five innings Jones gave up all five runs on nine hits. "I made too many mistakes," said the twotime 20- game winner.

He said his ill-fated pitch to Geronimo was "a sinker that stayed afloat. It was supposed to be down and away and there's no way that ball leaves the park. Instead, it was up and in. "But I've got to say overall thought I had good stuff."

The victory went to 36-year-old Woodie Fryman, the dean of National League starters. Rawly Eastwick, a bust in spring training, preserved the triumph with three innings of one-hit

Joe Thomas arrives; Monte Clark leaves

SAN FRAINCISCO (AP) - The new owners of the San Francisco 49ers told Coach Monte Clark that despite his winning start with the team, their man Joe Thomas would now be his

Take it or leave it, they added, so

Clark left it. Although 49ers President Edward

J. DeBartolo Jr. wouldn't say the coach was fired, Clark said Wedne sday, "There's no way I'd resign." Thomas, who signed a longterm contract as general manager after the DeBartolo Corp. assumed ownership of the National Football League franchise last week, thus begins life in his fourth NFL post amid instant controversy.

"You can't always be popular in this game," the 56-year-old Thomas said at Wednesday's news conference, which had been scheduled to introduce the new management but instead featured the announcement of Clark's departure.

"I benched Johnny Unitas," the 49ers' new general manager reminded everyone, recalling his early days with the Baltimore Colts. He has helped build NFL winners in Baltimore, Miami and Minnesota.

Thomas said he was "the man in the middle" in last year's feud at Baltimore between Coach Ted Marchibroda and owner Robert Irsay, and he could be in the same spot

The DeBartolo family, before obtaining control of the team for $17 million, told Thomas that if they ever were able to buy an NFL franchise they wanted him to run the show. Clark's coaching contract, with three years to go, made him, in effect, general manager as well as head

"We have great respect for Monte, but we feel we need Joe Thomas to run the club," said DeBartolo, the 30year-old team president who asked Clark to stay on as coach but give up much of his authority. "I wanted Monte Clark to coach this club. What

Jones' record may hold up

Coach Cleburne Price says there is a chance Johnny Jones' time of 9.85 seconds in the 100-meter dash at the Texas Relays will be recognized as a world record.

Price said he learned Tuesday that the International Amateur Athletic Federation's rule against recognizing hand-timed records does not go into effect until August.

The currently recognized record, 9.95 by Jim Hines at the Olympics in Mexico City in 1968, also was handtimed, Price said.

Price will submit Jones' mark to the National Amateur Athletic Union, and if that body gives its blessing, it will be sent on to the IAAF

Submitting a claim for a record involves a lot of paper work, including a remeasurement of the track, Price said. "The survey shows Johnny actually ran 22 millimeters over 100 meters, almost an inch over 100 meters." he said

Beginning next August, the IAAF will recognize only automatically timed sprints.

Texas has an automatic timer, but it malfunctioned on each of the three 100-meter races run Saturday.

Jones had a four mile-an-hour wind behind him, barely within the allowable. But he also slowed perceptibly about seven yards from the finish when he mistook the finish for the 100yard dash for the correct line.

Midlanders capture seven first places

Midlanders won seven of the first 12 events Wednesday as the Midland-Odessa Junior High Track Meet got underway at Memorial Stadium.

Official point totals will not be released until after today's running finals, which begin at 3:30 p.m.

In the seventh grade division, Alamo's Joe Carrasco beat his school's record in the shot put for the third time in a row with a winning toss of 41-10 feet. Al Ochoa of San Jacinto won the long jump with a leap of 18-114 while teammate Bobby Gotovac won the high jump with a 5-2.

Alamo's Clyde Smith won the eighth grade shot put with a school record of 50-134 while teammate Scott Stovall won the high jump with a 5-6.

Austin's Tony Thurman was the talk of the ninth grade division after he won the long jump with a 19-111/2, and Austin's Chip Wilson won the high jump with a 5-8. Wilson was also second in the long jump with a 19-101/2.

Krukow makes rotation

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz.-One time Midland Cub pitcher Mike Krukow has made the Chicago Cubs' starting pitching rotation, but he still isn't sure what number he is.

When asked whether or not he would follow Ray Burris, the opening day starter, he told a visiting Texas sports writer, "I don't know, I was hoping you could tell me.

When the Chicago sports writers pick their annual rookie of spring training camp, it would have to go to the 6-foot-4 righthander from San Gabriel, Calif., or shortstop Ivan DeJesus. Both have been pleasant surprises.

Probably, Mike has been the bigger surprise, however.

THE CUBS traded for DeJesus and may have known something when they demanded the minor league shortstop in the Rick Monday for Bill Buckner swap.

DeJesus could turn out to be the Bill Madlock of the deal. When the Cubs traded Ferguson Jenkins to the Texas Rangers, Vic Harris seemed the more significant player coming from the American League club. Madlock wound up winning two batting championships while Harris gradually drifted from the scene.

DeJesus won't win any batting championships, but he is a known defensive quantity, which should endear him to the pitching staff, and has the speed to steal some bases. When he came to Scottsdale, critics said, "Speed is great, but how is he going to steal first base.

HIS .300-plus average here indicates he may have figured a way. Krukow's 7-9 season last year at Wichita gave no hint that he was ready for the majors, and if that's all he had behind him, he probably wouldn't have made it this soon. "No, I haven't added any new pitches, and I'm really not throwing any differently than I did in Midland (13-6 in 1975). It's just a matter of consistency and confidence. Mostly confidence," he said tapping a forefinger to his forehead.

He figures he acquired a substantial portion of each ingredient pitching for former Midland manager Doc Edwards in the Puerto Rico League last winner. Mike's not only pitched against a smattering of major league players, but helped his team to a pennant and playoff championship.

Montefusco seeks 2nd no-hitter

By The Associated Press

The first hit off John Montefusco today will not only be a blow to his ego, but to his pride as well.

The San Francisco pitcher who believes he can do anything will try to do something only one person has ever done in baseball-pitch two consecutive no-hitters.

"I'd really like to pitch another nohitter because I may never get the chance again to throw two in a row," Montefusco said as he prepared to pitch the Giants' opening game against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

MONTEFUSCO, a swaggering right-hander who pitches as good a game as he talks, hurled a no-hitter against the Atlanta Braves in his final appearance of 1976-losing a perfect game by walking a batter in the fourth inning.

If Montefusco manages to hold the Dodgers hitless in today's game at Los Angeles, it will match Johnny Vander Meer's golden accomplishment of 1938, when he pitched consecutive no-hitters against the old Boston Braves and Brooklyn Dodgers.

Montefusco, a 16-game winner last season, is matched against Don Sutton, the Dodgers' 21-game winner of 1976. A year ago in their opener at San Francisco, the Giants beat the Dodgers with the same pitchers star-

The game is one of eight baseball openers on the second day of the major league season. Elsewhere, it's St. Louis at Pittsburgh and New York at Chicago in National League inaugurals. In the American League, Chicago will be at Toronto, Kansas City at Detroit, Texas at Baltimore, Milwaukee at New York and Cleveland at Boston. ROOKIE MANAGERS will be starting on both sides in the Los Angeles-San Francisco game. Tom Lasorda has replaced Walter Alston as the Dodgers' field boss and Joe Altobelli is the new Giant manager, taking over Bill Rigney's job. Two new pilots and some new styles are featured in the St. Louis-Pittsburgh contest.

Vern Rapp has taken over for Red Schoendienst at St. Louis and has brought a new face to the colorful Cardinals with his orders to remove all beards and mustaches. Chuck Tanner, replacing the late Danny Murtaugh at Pittsburgh, is managing in the National League for the first time and his Pirates are billed as "Lumber and Lighting"-a tribute to their hitting and speed.

Rapp has nominated John Denny. the NL's earned run average king last year, to pitch against Pittsburgh's Jerry Reuss.

Field opener.

TOM SEAVER makes his 10th straight opening-day start for the Mets. The New York ace has never lost in that role, with five victories and four no-decisions. Herman Franks, making his debut as the Chicago manager, nominated Ray Burris to face Seaver in the Wrigley

Major league baseball makes its debut in Toronto with the Blue Jays hosting the White Sox before an expected crowd of 45,000, among them Kuhn and MacPhail, who flew overnight from Seattle for the opener.

Bill Singer, leader of the Toronto pitching staff, has the opening-day assignment against Chicago's Ken Brett. The game will be played in Exhibition Stadium, home of the Canadian Football League's Toronto Argonauts. The stadium was refurbished for baseball at a cost of nearly $18 million. KANSAS CITY, the defending

American League West champion. opens with Paul Splittorff against Detroit's Dave Roberts at Tiger Stadium, where a crowd of 54,000 is expected. No doubt many of those tickets were sold anticipating the appearance of Detroit's Rookie of the Year Mark Fidrych, but Fidrych tore knee cartilege in spring training.

Texas Manager Frank Luchessi, recovering from a beating administered by second baseman Lenny Randle, rejoins his Rangers for their opener at Baltimore. Bert Blyleven starts for Texas against Baltimore's Cy Young winner, Jim Palmer. The New York Yankees send Catfish Hunter against Milwaukee's Jim Slaton. Both teams have expensive free agents in their lineups-with Reggie Jackson ($2.9 million) patrolling right field for the defending AL champion Yankees and Sal Bando ($1.4 million) at third base for the Brewers.

Ferguson Jenkins has been nominated to pitch the opener for Boston against Cleveland's Dennis Eckersley. A crowd of 35,000 is expected at Boston's Fenway Park.

Besides the openers Thursday, California will play the second of its five-game series at Seattle with Nolan Ryan going for the Angels against Mariners rookie Enrique Romo.

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas track oach Cleburne Price says there is a hance Johnny Jones' time of 9.85 Weiskopf shuns Masters' heat

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) - Tom Weiskopf says he doesn't worry about how he plays, what the media thinks of him or the sudden emergence of challenging young players all around him on the pro golf tour.

It sounds almost as if the talented, outspoken Weiskopf isn't much concerned about how he fares in the Masters. But he is, and his fellow competitors are well aware of it.

Jack Nicklaus, a five-time winner here, was favored as the first of the season's four major golf cham-pionships opened today on the par-72, 7,030-yard Augusta National Golf Course. The 72-hole event concludes

There were other top contenders in the field of 77, too. Proven winners such as defending champion Raymond Floyd, Hubert Green, Al Geiberger, Tom Watson and Hale Irwin. Young phenoms such as Ben Crenshaw, Bruce Lietzke and Mark Hayes. Foreign stars such as Gary Player of South Africa and David Graham and Graham Marsh of Australia. Even players battling nagging injuries, such as Johnny Miller and Jerry Pate. And, of course four-time Masters champion Arnold

Palmer, in a class by himself. But none of the players was ignoring Weiskopf. Although he hasn't made much noise this season, he's been playing pretty well-third at Doral, in the top 12 four other times. And he plays very well at Augusta, having finished second a record four times-to Nicklaus in 1972 and '75, to Player in 1974 and to George Archer

Also, it doesn't hurt to card scores like the 30 he shot on the back nine Sunday or the 31 he scored on the front side Monday in practice.

"I don't pay any attention to practice," he was quick to point out. "This is a completely different golf course when the tournaments starts. "There's a relaxed atmosphere when you practice. You hit at the pins, fire it right over the creek. All you can lose is a little money out of your pocket if you're betting. "But when the tournament starts, every shot counts and one shot can be the difference between winning and losing. Also, the greens get fast Thursday and get faster and faster as the tournament goes on." Still, he'll admit the course agrees with him.

"I hit the ball high into the greens." he said. "You have to drive uphill a lot so my length off the tee is a tremendous advantage. And the par 5s are to my advantage." At age 34, the native of Columbus,

Ohio, has won 11 tour events plus the 1973 British Open and accumulated years on the tour. Those are star statistics.

At a lean, ramrod-straight 6foot-3 with possibly the finest swing in the game, he projects an almost regal presence on the golf course. Those are star qualities.

But he's a slightly tarnished star, due to being labeled temperamental. He says the tag is undeserved. He says he's merely forthright.

MC netters split with OC

It was another case of kissing your sister Wednesday afternoon, as the Midland College and Odessa College tennis teams split a pair of important Western Junior College Conference matches. The Chap men's team toppled OC, 4-2, on the strength of two doubles victories, while the Wrangler women avenged the loss by defeating MC's girls by the same score, 4-2.

With the men's battle deadlocked 2-2 after the four singles matches, the Chaps swept the doubles to put things away. Derek Edmonds and Reg Luttrell teamed up to defeat the Wranglers' Mora and Otto in straight sets, 6-2, 6-4. Then, Denis McKeown and Tony Luttrell ended any hope of an OC hope when the Chap duo got by Hermansen and Richardson, 6-2, 4-6, 7-6. The Midland pair won the tie breaker in the third set, 5-4.

The Chap girls weren't quite as fortunate. They fell behind after the singles action, 3-1, with Ann Layman being the only Midlander to win. She defeated OC's number one performer in singles, Andrea Gallaway, 6-3, 6-2 But Jana Hanks, Karen Schuchard and Blanca Barriga were all beaten, and the best Midland could hope for entering the two doubles matches was a tie. That went by the board when Sandy Collins and Debbie Phillips of Odessa defeated Barriga and Schuchard, 6-2, 6-2.

Rockets snatch crown

By The Associated Press

This season, when someone asks Rudy Tomjanovich, "What's wrong with the Houston Rockets?" he can finally answer, "Nothing!

"Every season I listen to 'What's wrong? What does the team need? Who will you draft? What are the problems?" Tomjanovich said. "This year we're on top.

And a good share of the credit goes to Tomjanovich, who scored 28 points as Houston defeated the Boston Celtics 104-93 Wednesday night and clinched the National Basketball Association's Central Division title for the first time. 'It's like coming out of a cave for me," Tomjanovich continued. "It's a great team. We've had no problems all year. It's just all the guys put together. We go out and play tough. I can remember 10 or 12 games we've been out of and come back and won.' This wasn't one of them; the Rockets led most of the way. When the Celtics, led by John Havlicek, pulled within three points with just under nine minutes remaining, three points by Mike Newlin and Moses Malone's two free throws broke it open. Newlin finished with 21. 'We can give our guys a couple of days off and scout some teams," said Coach Tom Nissalke, "Probably the toughest teams for us in the playoffs would be Boston or Philadelphia. We Havlicek, playing in his 14th pro season, broke the 25,000 point barrier with a lay-up midway through the second quarter. He entered the game with 24,994 points and scored 21 to become only the fourth NBA player to score 25,000 points. Wilt Chamberlain. Oscar Robertson and Jerry West are the others. Houston had to win to clinch the title because the runner-up Washington Bullets edged the Chicago Bulls 97-96. Elsewhere, the San Antonio Spurs walloped the Philadelphia 76ers 131-109, the Denver Nuggets trounced the Atlanta Hawks 110-95 and the Buffalo Braves downed the New Orleans Jazz

Bullets 97, Bulls 96 Dave Bing came off the bench to score 19 points and spark a fourthquarter Washington surge that handed Chicago only its fourth defeat in the last 22 games. The 33-year-old Bing, seeing more playing time as the Bullets prepare for the playoffs, got 11 of his points in the nip-and-tuck fourth

The Bullets overcame an 80-76 deficit and built a 97-90 lead with 48 seconds to play, but Chicago scored the game's last six points. Elvin Hayes, who also had 19 points for the Mark Olberding, George Gervin and Louie Dampier added 15 points apiece. A standing-room-only crowd of 11,246 saw the Spurs' final home game of the regular season.

Nuggets 110, Hawks 95 David Thompson scored 28 points as Denver won its fourth straight game and tied a 31-year-old NBA record with a 365 home mark. The Nuggest took the lead for good at 9:41 of the first quarter on a three-point play by Bobby Jones. By halftime it was 51-36. Coach Larry Brown played every man on his roster, with veteran Byron Beck, the only original Nugget, coming off the bench to score 10 points.

Braves 107, Jazz 102 Randy Smith scored 13 of his 25 points points in the fourth quarter as Buffalo erased an 11-point thirdperiod deficit. Smith's jump shot with 23 seconds to go put the Braves ahead to stay. Adrian Dantley made 11 of 12 shots and led Buffalo with 28 points.

Hockey playoffs continue

By The Associated Press

The Atlanta Flames and Minnesota North Stars return home tonight hoping to deadlock their best-of-3 opening-round National Hockey League playoff series.

The Pittsburgh Penguins, meanwhile, hope to stay alive on the road while the Chicago Black Hawks, who will be wearing home uniforms, will nonetheless have their backs against the wall of the New York Islanders' Nassau Coliseum.

TONIGHT'S SECOND games in the respective series find Chicago at New York, the Buffalo Sabres at Minnesota, the Los Angeles Kings at Atlanta and the Pittsburgh Penguins in Toronto to meet the Maple Leafs. By winning, New York, Buffalo, Los Angeles and Toronto would advance to the playoffs quarter-finals.

Waiting in the wings to join the firstround survivors are the four division champions-the Montreal Canadiens, Philadelphia Flyers, Boston Bruins and St. Louis Blues.

The Black Hawks, with Tony Esposito starring in goal, seemed on their way to a stunning upset of the Islanders until third-period goals by Denis Potvin, Billy MacMillan, Bob Bourne and J.P. Parise turned a 2-1 deficit into a 5-2 triumph.

ORDINARILY, the Hawks should have had the home ice advantage for the second game. But a scheduling boo-boo at Chicago Stadium gave tonight to a rock group, which has an unbreakable concert.

"There's nothing really we could do about that," said Coach Bill White. Center Pit Martin, noting that the Hawks have the worst record of the 12 playoff entries, even found a bright Buffalo also had to rally to beat the North Stars. But the Sabres did it early, taking only 48 seconds to wipe out a quick Minnesota goal.

"I WAS very surprised the way they came at us," said Buffalo's Rene Robert, who scored twice. "I was amazed how hard they worked. There is no doubt in my mind that they can skate with us, but our experience in the playoffs could be the telling fac-

Atlanta doesn't lack for confidence despite its openinggame setback.

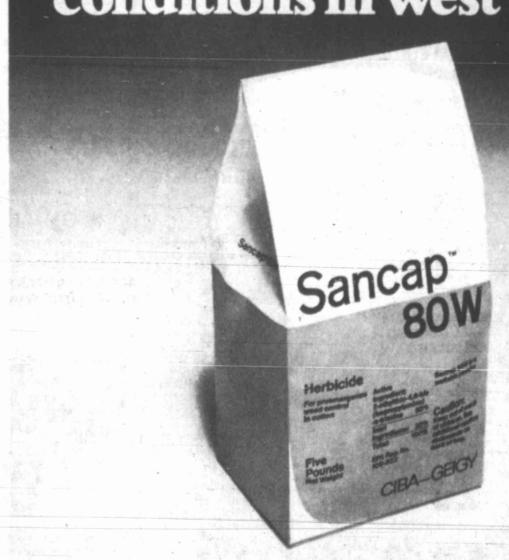

"If we play our game there's no way we don't beat them," said goalie Daniel Bouchard. "We've got to get the whole team going and involved in the game.' Coach Fred Creighton isn't so sure.

"They're a quicker and more mobile team than we are," he said. To Pittsburgh's Jean Pronovost, there's no difference between a home and road game. We get booed here (Pittsburgh), we'll get booed there (Toronto)," said. "It's the same thing."

Blue Jays' common denominator is anonymity

By DON MERRY The Los Angeles Times

DUNEDIN, Fla. - The names include Butch Edge, Jerry Garvin, Garth Iorg, Steve Staggs, Dennis DeBarr and Ernie Whitt.

Their common denominator is anonymity.

But there are some familiar faces, too. Ron Fairly is here, his flaming red hair, freckles and youthful enthusiasm belying his 38 years. Bill Singer is also here with a sore elbow and a sore shoulder. It seems Singer was always hurting or injured in his days with the Dodgers and Angels but he was also a 20-game winner in both the National and American leagues.

There are some faintly familiar names. Alan Ashby. Wasn't he once a first-string catcher at Cleveland? Jim Mason is a former New York Yankee shortstop whose moment in the sun came last October when he became the only member of his team to hit a home run off Cincinnati pitching in the World Series.

Then there is Pedro Garcia, once a runnerup to Al Bumbry as American League Rookie of the year and catcher Phil Roof, 36, a peripheral major leaguer since 1960.

In part, these are the Toronto Blue Jays, the latest experiment in expansion baseball and the American League's gift to Canada. Cynics might say that as a gift this would rival presenting a switchblade to a toddler. But Toronto hasn't reacted that way. Bereft of baseball since 1966 when its 80-year association with the International League ended with the sale of the franchise to Louisville, the city has adopted the Blue Jays, a strange melange of mediocrity, with a fervor which borders on the fanatical. As of the moment, the Blue Jays have sold 8,200 season tickets. In the American League, only Boston has sold more. The total may hit 10,000 by opening day and the Blue Jays anticipate a season attendance in the 1.6 million range. "We figure to make $1 million just from the sale of souvenirs," said 34year-old executive vice president Peter Bavasi, who was weaned in the game by his father, E.J. (Buzzie) Bavasi, first in the Dodger organization and then with the expansionist San Diego padres beginning in 1969.

Whereas Peter endured apathy and empty seats along with a succession of defeats during San Diego's formative years, he is encountering the opposite in Ontario. The Blue Jays have a lucrative radio and television package, are receiving incredible coverage from the media — they are a hotter item in March than the hockey Maple Leafs and team mementos are being distributed by a national department store chain. 'We've already sold 20,000 pairs of cuff links," Bavasi smiled. "We'll establish a record for season ticket sales by an expansion team and we might have more money in the bank by the time we open the season than any other team in baseball."

It is a phenomenon to rival the New York Mets of 1962, who became infamous for ineptitude by losing a record 120 games. Fittingly, the manager of the Blue Jays has never managed a day in the

SWC contest switched

DALLAS (AP) Houston and Texas A&M, two teams expected to be nationally ranked in col-legiate football next season, have moved their regularly scheduled game to Dec. 8 so it can be shown on television, it was learned Wednesday. ABC television officials declined to confirm the report, but the Dallas Times Herald said it had learned that two other games involving Southwest conference teams, Houston versus UCLA in the Astrodome on Sept. 12, and Texas A&M versus Michigan in Ann Arbor on Oct. 1, will be shown on national television.

THE CHANGE in the schedule would give Texas A&M some rest in a four-week itinerary that had the Aggies playing Texas Tech, Michigan, Houston and Baylor. Houston and Texas Tech were the only teams to defeat A&M last year.

In addition to the three national games, the SWC can expect to have between four and six games televised regionally.

The conference had a successful television campaign last year with fourteen showings including five national games. The conference collected $2.7 million from the ABC-NCAA package. participated in televised games. Teams involved in national games get to keep 20 per cent of the take with the remainder going to the conference for a nine-way split. Teams in regional games keep 30 per cent of the gate. TCU and Rice were the schools not shown on television and their shares came to $230,000 Texas and Texas A&M were the big financial winners each taking $380,000. Baylor and Houston took $335,000 each. Arkansas claimed $325,000 and Texas Tech and SMU received $280,000 each. The figures do not include payoffs from bowl games. Houston received $235,000 from the Cotton Bowl. The conference's other eight schools received $85,000 each.

Cosell joins baseball

NEW YORK (AP)-ABC gets its Monday night baseball package under way next week with the New York Yankees against Kansas City in the main game and Philadelphia against the Chicago Cubs in the secondary game. The network will generally go with two games every Monday, but may televise three of them at times. Keith Jackson, Bob Uecker and Howard Cosell will broadcast the primary games with Al Michaels and Bill White on the backup games. Warner Wolf and Bob Gibson have been relegated to the third string. They will work on the few occasions when ABC does three games and will be available to fill in when Jackson or Cosell has another assignment.

WASHINGTON (AP) - When Judge Nelson R. Link of Palestine, Tex., first came to Washington to get some federal money for his favorite water project, Jimmy Carter was just a peanut farmer from South Georgia.

And, if all goes according to his plans, Link expects to still be coming to Washington for his project long after Carter has returned to Plains.

Link is one of thousands of people who have come to Washingtin in the past two weeks on an annual pilgrimage to the federal pork barrel. His experience illustrates some of the problems Carter faces trying to cut back on the size and nature of the federal public works program.

Judge Link's project is the Trinity River project, the biggest single effort the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has ever undertaken.

If it is ever fully completed, it will create several massive reservoirs in East Texas and turn landlocked Dallas and Forth Worth into seaports by means of a 350-mile barge canal to the Gulf of Mexico. It will cost more than $2 billion.

The environmental lobby, which Judge Link tends to characterize as "a bunch of professional dogooders from upstream," thinks of the project as a classic boondoggle that will destroy thousands of acres of natural habitat to enrich a few businessmen. That's not what Judge Link wants Congress to think. So, on Tuesday, he and 161 other Texans boarded a chartered plane and flew to Washington. The group included bankers, utility officials, newspaper publishers and other businessmen from the Trinity basin. It also had a full compliment of local officials like Link. The group leaders, over 15 years, have polished their Washington routines. They started off with a reception in the Rayburn House Office Building in a room provided for them by Rep. Olin Teague, D-Tex. One by one, the members of the Texas congressional delegation whose districts abut the Trinity basin dropped by to have a drink and reiterate their support for the project. They included powerful congressmen like Jim Wright, the House majority leader, who originally introduced the Trinity legislation in the 1960s; Ray Roberts, chairman of the water subcommittee of the House Public Works Committee, which authorizes projects; and George Mahon, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, which funds them. After an evening on the town, Judge Link was ready to play his role as one of the ten Texans who would actually testify. The rest crowded into the committee rooms behind him.

He asked the committee to disregard the environmentalists and plough full speed ahead with the Trinity and other projects in years past.

appropriations for Tennessee Coloney Lake, a massive reservoir near Palestine that he feels would solve the flood problem

Link called this year's $15 million fund request modest," and compared to the eventual cost of the whole project, it seemed to be. The full cost is spread over many years of planning and construction.

The judge never mentioned, and the subcommittee did not ask about, the complex calculations of costs, future benefits, and environmental impact that formed the basis for the Carter administration's challenge to Trinity project. That opposition has been at least temporarily abandoned, thanks in part to Wright's intercession at the White House.

Nonetheless, the Texans were warmly received by the subcommittee chairmen, in the House and Senate, Rep. Tom Bevill of Alabama and Sen. John Stennis of Mississippi.

'Very impressive. The best presentation we've had so far," said Bevill.

By contrast, the handful of Texans who have made their way to Washington to testify against the Trinity are a disorganized and inconsequential group: a theology professor, a long-haired organic farmer, and John Henry Faulk, the television personality who was blacklisted during the McCarthy era and now lives in Madisonville, Tex.

Faulk, testifying a few days before the pro-Trinity group, managed to get into an argument with Stennis about the short amount of time allotted to the opposition — five minutes. But he did say that the Trinity project was "the largest floating crap game in Texas," a "classic boondoggle designed to line the pockets of a small group of determined businessmen in Dallas and Fort Worth and landowners and bankers along the river downstream." Link doesn't dispute the contention that the businesses of many Trinity backers will indirectly profit if the project is completed. But, he says, 'basically, that's the American way.' He personally has no financial stake, he said. The voters in the Trinity area so far seem to agree with Faulk. In 1973 they rejected a bond issue that would have provided the local share of the canal cost. Link doubted that his brief appearance would do much to counter the presentation of the project backers and the momentum they have built over the

"Once these people run their snouts into public trough, you can't knock them away with a branding iron." he said.

Bevill, who feels that without dams, the United States would be "like an undeveloped South American country," corroborated that assessment. The subcommittee, he saft, has heard nothing so far to change the favorable judgment it has given the WASHINGTON (AP) - House Republican Leader appointed by him, are running $1-million-a-year print shops rent-free on the Capitol grounds.

"This is one of the archaisms around this place that need to be re-examined and changed," Rhodes said through a spokesman.

"It's clear that some other arrangement is necessary because I don't approve of Congress subsidizing these people."

Rhodes was reacting Wednesday to disclosures that clerks Thomas Lankford and David Ramage reap substantial profits and salaries from their privately owned print shops, in addition to the nearly $15,000-a-year salaries they each received from the taxpayers. Their print shops, which grind out millions of newsletters, press releases and political handbills at bargain rates for members of Congress, get free space in the basement garage of the Rayburn House Office Building. They also get free utilities, delivery service and local telephone service. Taxpayer's funds are used to pay a large part of the congressmen's printing costs. Each House member is alloted $5,000 to communicate with constituents, and in 1976 the House paid a total of $1.25 million to the clerks' firms for members' private printing bills. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill made no negative comments about the subsidies when questioned by reporters. He said he had used their services himself. "I'll look into it," he said, after a reporter pointed out that Lankford got a bigger yearly House salary. Rhodes said he would meet with the House GOP leaders after the Easter recess "to decide what our alternatives are

Rep. William Ketchum, R-Calif., said he favors throwing the print shop concessions open to public bidding. Each clerk is appointed by his party leader. Each provides free printing for his patron in return for his House salary The extent of the printing operations was revealed publicly for the first time in a General Accounting Office audit released Tuesday. It showed each shop had $1 million in sales last year.

Ramage reaped $41,470 in salary from his one-man corporation, and $60,940 in after-tax corporate profits, which the firm retained. Lankford got a salary of $77,400 and the firm earned $43,595 in aftertax profits.
