Carter: U. S. 'eager' if arms limit unfair

CALHOUN, Ga. (AP) — President Carter, disclosing he has had private exchanges with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, said Friday that the United States is re-evaluating its strategic arms limitation proposals and would "be very eager" to change them if they are inequitable.

If the Soviet Union comes up with "some explanation" of its own arms capabilities "of which I am not aware," Carter said, "I would certainly take that into consideration" as well.

Carter spoke with reporters at Dobbins Air Force Base in Marietta, Ga., en route to an Easter visit to his eldest son Jack in this small town north of Atlanta. Most of his family accompanied him.

The President said he has spent considerable time going over the U.S.

proposal for strategic arms reduction since it was rejected by the Soviet Union, and "my own opinion so far ... is that our proposal was fair and equitable."

But he said that if upon further study it is found to be inequitable, as the Soviets contend, a change in the proposal is possible.

Although both he and his top national security advisers have said before that some parts of the American proposal are negotiable, this was the first time that Carter has said flatly that the United States would be eager to change any inequities.

Carter called the messages with Brezhnev "a routine sort of exchange," and said they are part of the reason he is hopeful a new arms limitation agreement will be reached. "I am not discouraged," he added.

He declined to say what the exchanges were.

In discussing a possible change of the U.S. position, Carter noted that a month remains before the arms limitation talks resume in Geneva.

"During that period of time, we'll be reassessing some of the objections that the Soviets have raised to see if there is some alternative that can be equally fair to both sides," he said.

"We are now making projections of our own level of nuclear armaments and the number of missiles, the warheads and throw-weight and the diversity of nuclear capability that would be in existence in 1985 if our proposal is accepted," Carter said.

"If during this re-analysis we show that there is any inequity there, we would be very eager to change it," he said.

On other matters, Carter said:

— The Palestinian people should have a spokesman at any Geneva conference on the Middle East, but whether that spokesman should be a Palestinian or "a surrogate" remains to be worked out.

— He thinks "we have a good chance to pass the rebate plan" returning $50 of tax money to most Americans, "but it's not going to be easy."

— Despite U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young's criticism of the British for alleged racism, "I don't think the British were any more guilty than we were."

Carter said a meeting Thursday between Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin to discuss arms limitation was encouraging.

In addition to his exchanges with Brezhnev, Carter said other encouragement came from a close reading of Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko's news conference following Soviet rejection of the U.S. proposals.

The proposals were presented by Vance in Moscow last week.

The administration sought to reduce the number of strategic bombers or intercontinental ballistic missiles from the 2,400 ceiling set in the SALT II pact.

Turning to the Middle East, Carter said he did not think Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's withdrawal as a candidate for re-election because of a personal financial scandal would disrupt efforts to reconvene the Geneva conference.

The Carter family, except son Chip, flew south aboard Air Force One, and planned to scatter throughout Georgia. Chip Carter was on his way to China with a congressional delegation.

Carter's aides said the President planned a private weekend. The only public event on his schedule was attendance at the First Baptist Church in Calhoun, Ga., on Easter Sunday.

Carter said that although his son Jack and Jack's wife, Judy, had been married three years, the President had not yet seen Jack's home.

So, the President, his wife Rosalyn and 9-year-old daughter Amy decided to spend the weekend with Jack and his family.

Holy day rites begin at dawn

By ROGER SOUTHALL

Sunrise Easter services, a tradition of long standing in Midland, will be held here Sunday and in cities and towns throughout the area, the state, the nation and the world. The events will proclaim once more the joyous news of Jesus Christ's triumph over death and darkness through His resurrection and of God's promise of eternal life after death for mankind.

Resurrection Sunday, the most important day in the Christian calendar, will see Midlanders flocking not only to the several sunrise services scheduled here but to religious services being held later in the day at scores of city churches.

Among the sunrise events scheduled here are community-wide services sponsored by the Midland Association of Churches and the Midland Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance.

The Ministerial Alliance's service will begin at 6 a.m. Sunday in the Alexander Temple Church of God in Christ, 200 N. Tyler St. The Rev. C. S. Johnson is host pastor.

Special music at the event will be presented by a massed choir made up of singers of various participating churches. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. H. F. Doyle, longtime Midland minister and civic worker. The service will be open to all interested persons.

The Midland Association of Churches again will hold its sunrise service in Resthaven Memorial park north of the city on the Lamesa Highway. Joining the association in handling arrangements for the event is the religious service committee of the Midland Kiwanis Club.

The service will begin at 6:45 a.m. The Rev. Paul Cox, pastor of Gardens Assembly of God, will

UT a bit wealthier, thanks to auctioneer

Every now and then, just to break the monotony of dollar talk, Blake Moore would peel off a folksy East Texas yarn — tersely but smoothly.

Or he'd take a swig of water and chaw with the pipe-smoking and somber James Zimmerman, the honcho for the day.

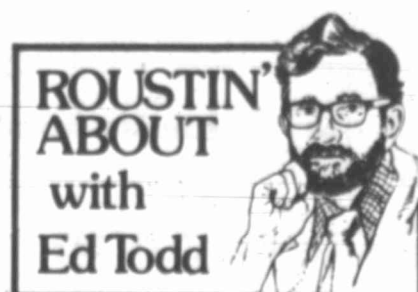

Then Moore would resume calling out numbers with the rapidity of a ticker-tape and with the smoothness of a polished grease gun.

He was jacking up prices and bent on making some money for the far-reaching University of Texas System.

Usually, he'd start the bidding off at $5,000 and go as high as almost half a million dollars on a half section — 320 acres — of land that held promises for oil and gas production.

At least, that's what the bidders were hoping.

And Moore, the Paris auctioneer, was one heck of a drummer — a commanding salesman.

He'd call off the tract lot number, throw out a figure, say five grand, and start asking for more. He got tract No. 178, over at Crockett County, up to $66,000. But he wanted more, and so did Zimmerman, geologist in charge of the University Lands Office in Midland.

"Sixty-six, all right, sir," the auctioneer with the East Texas twang would say.

But that wasn't high enough for a tract of ranch land that possibly covered barrel upon barrel of precious oil.

"Sixty-six, 67, to you, ... 67, 68, 71, 72, 73, 73, 73, 74, 75," Moore would say, as hands rose and heads nodded.

The price to the rights of the minerals, if any, would go higher. Moore, the veteran auctioneer, would see to that.

"... 85, 84, give me 85, 86." Some rich soul finally offered $86,000 for the rights to exploit the oil and gas under the ground at Tract No. 178.

But the money-making Moore wanted more.

"... 87, who'll give me 87, third and last call ... No one offered $87,000 for the tract, so Moore let it go for a mere $86,000.

The sale, which started at 10 a.m.

Remodeling for airline under way

A representative of Southwest Airlines will be at Midland Regional Air Terminal next week to supervise remodeling a portion of the Air Terminal Building to make way for the May 20 start of operations by Southwest.

Walls in the south end of the building have been torn down at city expense, and Southwest will pay to build a new wall for the remodeling. Darrell Adams, an assistant to Terminal manager Col. Wilson H. Banks, said.

Southwest plans to have a ticket counter next to Texas International in the south end of the terminal, Southwest president Lamar Muse said.

Bill Franklin, the airline's vice president of ground operations, will oversee the remodeling operation, Muse added.

The president said he expects remodeling to take most or all of the time prior to May 20.

He said the renovations should "cost at least $15,000" and the firm will bear all of the costs. An earlier tentative arrangement had the city bearing half the costs.

City man tells of visits by alleged Oswald link

By JIM STEINBERG

A Russian-born Dallas college professor implicated in a purported scheme that led to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy was at one time a frequent visitor to Midland.

That man, George de Mohrenschildt, committed suicide in Palm Beach, Fla., recently. He had claimed to have acted as a middleman in a conspiracy between Lee Harvey Oswald and the late oil millionaire H. L. Hunt, according to Dutch journalist Willem Oltmans.

Longtime friend Ross Moore, an independent oilman here, said he was surprised to learn de Mohrenschildt committed suicide and was somewhat startled to find his friend's name linked to a Kennedy assassination conspiracy theory.

He met de Mohrenschildt through his father-in-law, and later, while living in Dallas, took his family swimming at the de Mohrenschildt home. De Mohrenschildt would, in turn, frequently visit the Moores in Midland.

Oltmans told the House Assassinations Committee recently that this conspiracy involved both Hunt and anti-Castro Cubans. A spokesman for the Hunt family called the charges the "product of a distorted imagination."

"During the late 1950s and early 1960s, George worked with a group in Dallas to help emigrants from Latvia, Estonia, and Russia get acquainted with this country," Moore said. "It was a welcome wagon type of thing. And it was through this organization that I suspect he became acquainted with Marina and Lee Harvey Oswald," he said.

During a visit to Midland, de Mohrenschildt told Moore about one time when he was with the Oswalds and "Marina was in a rage about her husband spending $30 for an Italian carbine when he didn't have enough money to put bread on the table."

It was with a mail-order Italian carbine that the Warren Commission determined Oswald killed President Kennedy Nov. 22, 1963, in Dallas.

With the passage of time, Moore said he was not sure if de Mohrenschildt told him about this incident at the Oswald home before or after the Kennedy assassination.

De Mohrenschildt was found shot to death March 29. A coroner's jury ruled that the death was suicide, but the panel did not investigate what led to the death.

Moore discounted de Mohrenschildt's role in the latest of the Kennedy assassination theories.

"You had to take what George said with a grain of salt. He was a soldier of fortune, in many ways. At times I would think he would say anything if he thought he could get a nickel out of it," Moore said.

Moore's father-in-law, E. E. "Bill" Hurt of Bloomberg, met de Mohrenschildt at The University of Texas after he first came to this country as a graduate student in geology. Hurt, a petroleum engineer, met de Mohrenschildt while taking a course at the university.

He said in a telephone interview with The Reporter-Telegram that the first time he had ever heard Oswald and his old friend linked together was when he read about the suicide.

"If George knew the Oswalds, I suspect his real interest was in Marina Oswald," Hurt said.

Hurt, who received his training in Poland, said the six-foot-two de Mohrenschildt was born in Russia and raised in an oil producing section of that country, later moving to Poland.

He was an officer in the Polish army and was sent to Spain as an observer during the Spanish Civil War. When cut off from Poland by the outbreak of World War II, he joined the British Army and was used in an intelligence capacity because of his language skills.

Hurt described him as "no heavyweight as an engineer, but as someone who could manipulate people well."

"For years he rattled about Dallas always on the verge of making it big, but never quite making it. He was quite a charmer with the ladies and a manipulator of people. The last I heard of him he was recruiting people for some survey type work in Haiti," Hurt said.

Anticrime fund source due ax?

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department is considering whether the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, which has distributed almost $6 billion in crime-fighting funds to the states, should be drastically reorganized or abolished.

Department sources confirmed Friday that Attorney General Griffin B. Bell has ordered appointment of a joint Justice-LEAA study group to examine the controversy-plagued agency and make recommendations about its future.

LEAA, part of the Justice Department, was established in 1969 to serve as the spearhead of the Nixon administration's much-publicized war against street crime. Its principal function is to channel federal money to the states for research and support of local crime-fighting programs.

That gives LEAA the biggest share of Congress's annual appropriations for Justice Department activities. LEAA's budget for the fiscal year that ends Sept. 30 is $753 million, or 32 percent of the overall Justice Department budget.

The FBI, which accounts for the second-largest slice of the justice budget, now has a budget of $513 million.

Throughout its history, LEAA has come under constant fire for allegedly wasting money on poorly conceived and ineffective projects. Its critics charge that LEAA funds too frequently have become a "pork barrel" device for local police forces to buy expensive hardware and finance grandiose projects that have had no impact on crime rates.

Since becoming attorney general in January, Bell has repeatedly made clear that he is dissatisfied with LEAA's past performance. Justice Department sources say Bell was especially upset when he learned, shortly after assuming office, that the agency was going to spend $2.5 million on a brochure telling local police departments how to apply for LEAA funds.

The attorney general has said several times that he regards reform of LEAA as one of his top priorities. He also has said that his chief reason for choosing former Pittsburgh Mayor Peter F. Flaherty as deputy attorney general was a desire to enlist Flaherty's administrative expertise in reshaping LEAA.

One of Bell's first acts was to fire former LEAA Administrator Richard W. Veide and his two top deputies. Since then the agency has been marking time under the temporary direction of James M. H. Gregg, a career employe who heads LEAA's office of planning and management.

In the meantime, Bell has been engaged in an extensive search for a new administrator. Reliable sources say that at one point it seemed certain the job would go to Herbert Struz, director of the Vera Foundation.

Steel talk deadlines pushed back

WASHINGTON (AP) — Steel industry and union negotiators repeatedly pushed back self-imposed deadlines Friday to give themselves more time to reach agreement on a new contract and avoid binding arbitration.

Lloyd A. McBride, president-elect of the United Steelworkers Union, said the negotiators were trying to wrap up a settlement before the end of the day.

However, McBride conceded that several issues were still unresolved.

"I'm not sure," he said when reporters asked if he was optimistic. "There are still some ends we've got to tie up."

Some members of the union staff were more optimistic.

Sources indicated that the union's key demand for "lifetime" job security was one of the issues causing the delay.

A committee of 600 local union presidents stood by for a report on the talks, but their scheduled meeting was twice postponed to give the negotiators more time. The union's constitution requires the committee to approve any settlement.

Carter's fuel deferral may add to disposal bind

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's deferral of plutonium reprocessing in an effort to halt the spread of nuclear weapons will increase the troubles the nation has with its radioactive garbage heap, federal energy officials said Friday.

Robert W. Fri, acting administrator of the Energy Research and Development Administration, told a Senate hearing that spent fuel rods from nuclear-power plants must now be considered waste and disposed of accordingly.

But, Fri added, the disposal system also must provide an option for later retrieval of the spent fuel in case the United States ever wants to resume the nuclear-fuel reprocessing program.

"Our (nuclear-waste) management program has been redirected" as a result of Carter's Thursday anouncement, Fri told the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

"It does increase the problem and also increases the need for more technical data on storing both forms of waste," said G. W. Cunningham, director of ERDA's nuclear-waste management program.

Carter withdrew government support for commercial reprocessing of spent reactor fuel and also downgraded the plutonium-breeder-reactor program to an experimental project.

He said he was acting in an effort to curb the spread of plutonium, which is suitable for use in atomic weapons. The slightly enriched uranium now used in civilian reactors cannot be used to build bombs.

The government estimates that 90 per cent of all the spent nuclear fuel ever used in commercial reactors is still being stored at the reactor sites.

Until Thursday's announcement, it had been widely assumed that much of this radioactive material would be sent to reprocessing plants.

These plants would retrieve from the spent fuel the plutonium that is a byproduct of nuclear fission. The plutonium itself could then be used as a nuclear fuel, either in conventional reactors or in breeder reactors that "breed" more plutonium even as they generate electric power.

But Carter's decision appears to foreclose this possibility, at least for the near future.

Fri said a system must be developed so that spent fuel can be retrieved — if necessary — while a "fail-safe" plan for long-term disposal is also established "so people know there is some place we can store this stuff permanently," Fri said.

Sen. John H. Glenn Jr., D-Ohio, said the President's decision means greater difficulty in dealing with nuclear waste and will add to the volume of radioactive waste, which can remain deadly for centuries.

Fri agreed, saying that spent reactor fuels are essentially more radioactive than the wastes from reprocessing.

Although commercial atomic reactors have been operating for several years, there still are no central storage facilities for their spent fuel.

"So it just goes on accumulating," Glenn said.

KLM crew never got tower word

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Because of radio interference, a KLM Royal Dutch Airlines crew never heard vital control tower instructions that might have prevented the Canary Island airport runway collision of two jumbo jets that killed 577 people last month, informed sources said Friday.

A preliminary study by U.S. investigators of the tape recordings from the KLM jetliner's cockpit also appears to confirm that the Dutch crew started their takeoff without receiving formal permission from air traffic control.

The result was that the KLM Boeing 747 jet collided with a Pan American World Airways 747 on the runway at Los Rodeos Airport on Tenerife Island in the Canaries. Only 67 people survived the fiery March 27 crash, which was the worst disaster in aviation history.

Since the early days of the investigation, it has been known that the air traffic control tape contained no takeoff clearance for the KLM jet. Dutch officials said so. They also said that the Pan Am jet missed a turnoff that would have carried it safely off the runway before the KLM plane started.

Since that time, the investigation by Spanish, U.S. and Dutch authorities has centered on what was heard in the cockpits of the two airplanes.

According to a transcript of the radio traffic tape made available by the Spanish, this important exchange took place seconds before the accident:

KLM to tower — "KLM is now ready for takeoff and we're waiting for our ATC (air traffic control) clearance."

The tower then gave the KLM crew navigational instructions to be followed after takeoff.

KLM to tower — "We are now on (or at) takeoff."

Tower to KLM — "OK, Standby for takeoff. I will call you."

According to sources familiar with the investigation, the tape recording of what was said and heard in the KLM cockpit shows that the words "Standby for takeoff, I will call you," were never heard by the KLM crew.

The KLM crew apparently heard only "OK," and started to roll.

The rest of the tower transmission was blocked, experts theorized, by another transmission from a third source — possibly even the Pan Am plane.

Easing of voter rules has heated precedent

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — President Carter's proposal to ease voter registration rules in federal elections may stir controversy long after it is either rejected or approved by Congress. That's what has happened in Wisconsin, where the plan was implemented last year.

The Wisconsin law, allowing voters to register at the polls on election day, is credited by political observers with aiding in a number of Democratic successes — including Carter's 35,000-vote victory over former President Gerald R. Ford.

Under the statute, voters who have not preregistered may register by presenting proof of identity just before casting a ballot. Before the law was passed, voters in communities of less than 5,000 were allowed to register at the polls because there were no preregistration requirements in the smaller cities and towns.

Carter's plan, part of an election reform package, would allow voters to cast ballots in federal elections by showing up at the polls with proof of identity or residence.

So far, there have been no announced protests in last Tuesday's spring primary, despite a heated mayoral race in Madison in which former campus radical Paul Soglin was re-elected.

In its first statewide implementation last Nov. 2, the Wisconsin law resulted in about 200,000 extra ballots cast, according to a survey by the League of Women Voters. That's the number of persons who registered at the polls. About two million voters were cast in all.

Proponents of the law say it encouraged persons who otherwise would not have voted to do so.

But opponents, like former GOP Gov. Warren P. Knowles, said the law allowed election fraud to occur.

Knowles, leader of Ford's election drive in Wisconsin, filed a protest the night of the Nov. 2 election. And a campaign mounted later by the U.S. Labor and American parties left certification of the state's 11 electors in doubt until mid-December, when the state Supreme Court finally refused to order a recount.

The debate over the Wisconsin law has continued, including consideration of legislation to repeal it.

Hill files brief on phone hikes

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Atty. Gen. John Hill said in a brief filed Friday that it would be against the public interest for an Austin judge to allow Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. to impose — even temporarily — rates rejected by the public utility commission.

Hill has asked State District Court Judge James Meyers of Austin to stay the commission order setting telephone rates pending the final outcome of its appeal.

Hill's brief said this would enable Bell to collect $173.7 million per year more than the $57.8 million revenue increase allowed by the commission.

"The public interest would be poorly served by the grant of a stay in this cause. Southwestern Bell had an opportunity to present its case in full to the commission. . . . The issue the company is actually bringing before the court is its desire for even more profits," Hill said.

He said the commission had found Bell was entitled to an 8.37 per cent return on $3.4 billion—adjusted value of invested capital.

"The commission has determined that is a fair rate and stands ready to defend it against any customer challenge," Hill's brief said.

He also defended the commission's decision to give the original cost of Bell's total Texas plan a 69.4 per cent weight and its current replacement cost a 30.6 per cent weight. It could have weighted original cost as high as 75 per cent or as low as 60 per cent under state law.

Testing procedure

Yes, it was disappointing but not unexpected for Cyrus Vance to get the cold shoulder in the Kremlin on a new agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union to limit strategic arms.

The Russians yet are acting like Russians, and this actually is no reason for undue alarm. It is, however, a very good reason for caution. The United States should continue to speak out for human rights throughout the world. And Americans should continue to work patiently for arms limitation.

But one thing should and must be remembered. This nation must never let down its guard when dealing with the suspicious, insecure, unreliable leaders of the Soviet Union, who most certainly have no love for the United States.

In fact, it might have been more hazardous for America had Secretary Vance received a more cordial welcome.

President Carter has said that we have no evidence that his human rights talk was responsible for the failure in Moscow. But Chairman Leonid Brezhnev told the U.S. Secretary of State plainly that Mr. Carter has been violating the basic principles of detente by interfering in the national affairs of the Soviet Union.

The Russian response might have been the same, even if there had been no talk of human rights.

They are testing President Carter's nerve, just as Khrushchev tested John Kennedy's nerve in Vienna in June 1961. They want to show a new president how tough they can be.

The cold light of reality now has been cast on President Carter's more optimistic pledges of disarmament in his inaugural address and subsequent speeches.

This nation's security and the Russians' rest ultimately on the balance of power. Total war is unlikely so long as neither side can win. The unthinkable holocaust is the best guarantee of peace between the superpowers.

But a workable strategic arms limitation treaty to renew SALT I, which expires in October, would have symbolic value, showing both sides are reasonable. It is necessary to strive for such a treaty. The Russians are pragmatic. They yet may come around.

Justly concerned

Uria Coulter of Kermit, who classifies herself as a concerned Christian, is very much concerned, as undoubtedly are many, many other Americans, about a petition (R.M. 2493) which now is before the Federal Communication Commission.

And the fact that the petition was filed by Madalyn Murray O'Hair, self-styled leader of atheism, is enough to frighten most anyone.

Mrs. O'Hair, by her petition, would bring to a halt the freedom of religion in America. The petition, incidentally, bears 27,000 signatures. The number apparently was sufficient to cause the F.C.C. to grant a hearing on the subject in the near future.

"Petition 2493 would ultimately pave the way to eliminate proclamation of the gospel via airways of America," Ms. Coulter pointed out in her letter to the editor appearing in The Odessa American. "All Sunday worship services that are currently being broadcast either by radio or television will cease."

She said it would make it impossible for elderly persons, shut-ins and hospital patients who depend on radio and television to fulfill their worship needs each week.

Some persons might think that Mrs. O'Hair's plea doesn't have a chance of being granted ... but don't sell the nationally-known atheist and her efforts short. She has accomplished some almost unbelievable goals in the past, such as the banning of group prayer sessions in public schools.

Ms. Coulter says a million letters should be addressed to the Federal Communication Commission, 1919 M St., N.W., Washington, D.C., 20036, voicing opposition to Mrs. O'Hair's petition. It would help to write "Petition No. 2493" on the outside of the envelope.

"Be thankful to God for our freedom of religion," the Kermit letter-writer concluded.

INSIDE REPORT:

U.S. Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan's Rubicon

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — One of the Democratic party's major financial angels informed a meeting last week that he truly wishes he could get back his substantial contribution to Daniel Patrick Moynihan's successful Senate campaign in New York last year — pointing up an important political side effect of the Senate's dramatic Warnke confirmation fight.

The complaining liberal business tycoon was expressing his chagrin — and surprise — over Sen. Moynihan's vote nearly a month ago against Paul Warnke as President Carter's chief disarmament negotiator. Indeed, the shock over Moynihan's resisting their quiet but intense lobbying may never quite subside for liberal pressure groups.

Quite apart from the merits of Warnke or strategic disarmament questions, Moynihan's vote was the crossing of a political Rubicon after only two months in the Senate. He signalled he was counting on a voter constituency markedly different from that of conventional New York Democrats and, moreover, was aligning himself with the centrist bloc of Senate Democrats as opposed to the liberals, led by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy. For the brightest new Democratic face to enter the Senate in many years, that is a choice of some significance.

Such a course might have seemed preordained by Moynihan's stress on national defense in last year's

Evans

Novak

Democratic primary victory against leftist Bella Abzug. But hard-eyed New York politicians, including some on Moynihan's own staff, viewed this as merely a temporary expedient in running against three ultra-liberal opponents. This opinion was reinforced by his reduced emphasis on defense questions during his general election campaign against conservative Sen. James Buckley.

Accordingly, the conventional wisdom in New York was that Moynihan would slip into the normal mold of a liberal Eastern Senator. Just to make sure, pressure for Warnke's confirmation was applied by liberal groups that had backed Moynihan against Buckley. When Moynihan did not immediately come around, his campaign contributors were sent to lobby him.

The underlying presumption was that Moynihan would sublimate his doctrinal arms control opposition to Warnke for reasons of political expediency. Those reasons boil down to this: no Democratic politician from New York could dare defy the forces lobbying for Warnke.

The truth was quite the opposite. As he admitted to the Senate, Moynihan is not at home in the arcane world of arms control. What he did not tell the Senate was that his opposition to Warnke was essentially political and based on what he considers unbreakable political bonds with Sen. Henry M. Jackson.

As seen by Moynihan, the Warnke appointment was, consciously or not, the victor (Carter) thumping his nose at the vanquished (Jackson). Besides viewing this as a blunder for the Democratic party leader who should be concerned with post-election harmony, Moynihan determined that it made support for Warnke an act of disloyalty to Jackson.

Moynihan did waver briefly on Warnke, because he wanted to show approval of Mr. Carter's "human rights" support for Soviet dissidents. But once Jackson decided to fight Warnke's confirmation, Moynihan's vote was determined. Beyond a mere vote, he delivered one of the most widely noted Senate maiden speeches in recent years in opposition to Warnke.

"I think Pat's gone loony," a liberal activist told us. "He's going to suffer for this." But some party leaders in New York privately disagree, feeling an anti-Communist hard line will keep him popular so long as he keeps pushing bread-and-butter economic measures for the state.

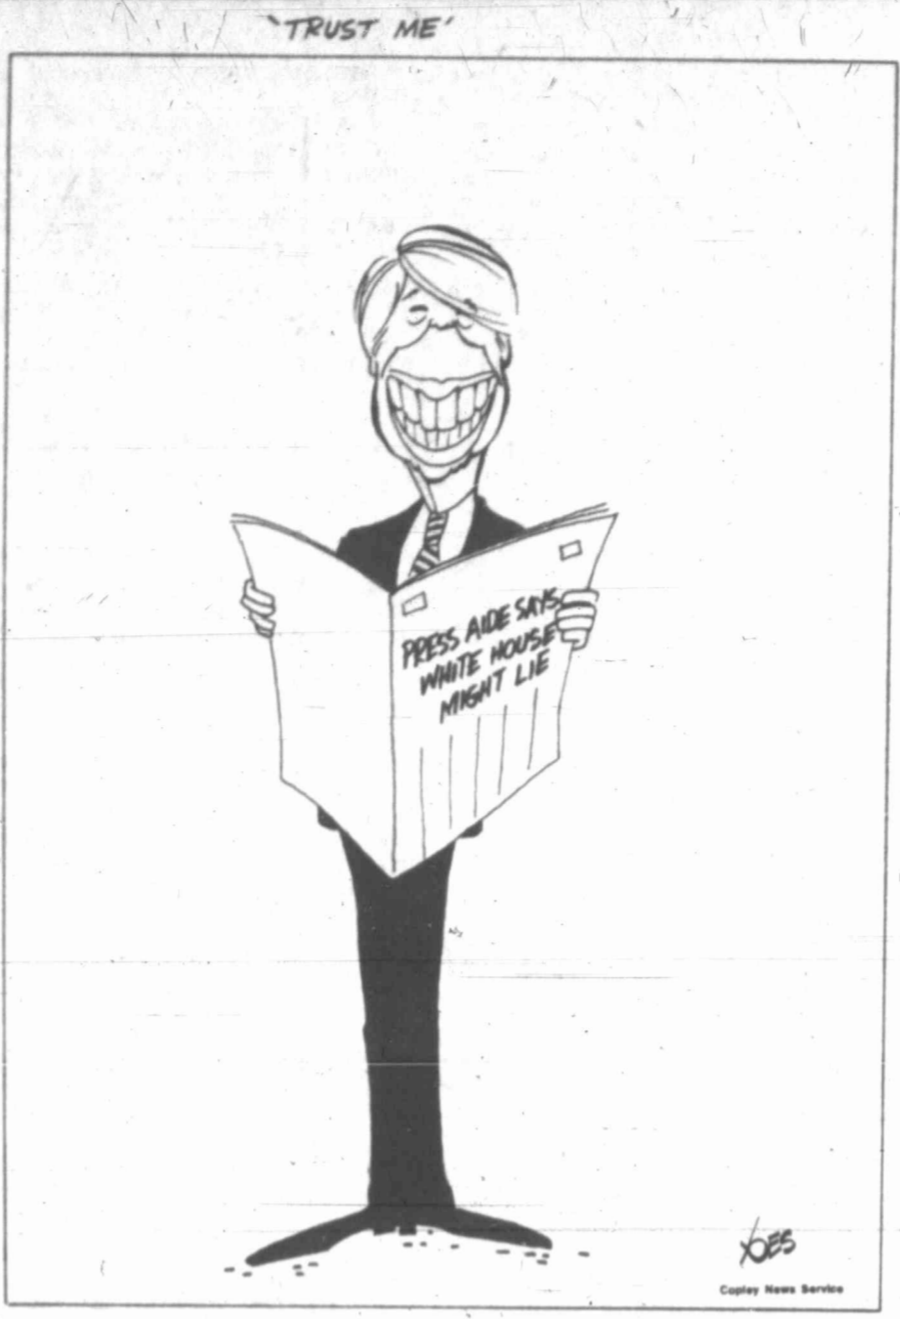

In the Senate, Moynihan is developing a close relationship with Senate majority leader Robert Byrd (whom he supported against Sen. Hubert Humphrey) and Finance Committee chairman Russell Long. Although Byrd and Long voted for Warnke in deference to the new President, both implied in debate that they would be with Jackson and Moynihan on a SALT treaty confirmation (and Long lavishly praised Moynihan's maiden speech).

By his Warnke vote, then, Moynihan quickly positioned himself in the Senate with the Byrd-Long-Jackson wing, as distinct from the Kennedy wing. That is particularly meaningful considering the Kennedyite persuasion of New York's leading Democratic party.

Moynihan has by no means burned his bridges with the White House. He informs colleagues that the President told him he was most impressed with Jackson's written views on SALT. But the big, colorful Irishman from Harvard has made unmistakable where he will stand on an issue cutting down the middle of the Democratic party.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Watergate hurts haven't healed

By JACK ANDERSON with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — For most Americans, the Watergate era has ended. But for some who were damaged by the Nixon excesses, the wounds have yet to heal.

For instance, former Gov. Warren Hearnes of Missouri is still trying to clear his name. The tough, old-style politician who once headed the National Governors Conference seldom hesitated to take on the powerful. In fact, he once had the temerity to lambaste Lyndon Johnson at the height of his presidential power. The scrap hit the headlines; Johnson backed down and invited the feisty Democrat to his Texas ranch to make peace.

When Hearnes endorsed Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Me., for president in late 1971, therefore, there was talk that he would end up as Muskie's running mate. The rumors reached the Nixon White House, which considered Muskie the prime threat to oust President Nixon.

In deepest secrecy, Nixon aide Alexander Butterfield, who later exposed the infamous White House taping system, asked the FBI to dig up some dirt on Hearnes. Butterfield, who handled many similar assignments, told us any such orders probably would have come from White House major domo H.R. Haldeman or from Nixon himself.

The White House demanded not only the FBI dossier on Hearnes but any other damaging information the G-men could dredge up from the Internal Revenue Service. The bureau, in a confidential wire to agents in the field, stressed the "urgent nature" of the White House request.

Within two weeks, the FBI dispatched a confidential reply to Butterfield. "On Dec. 22, 1971, you requested an up-to-date name check and check of the records of the Internal Revenue Service concerning Governor Warren Eastman Hearnes of Missouri," it began.

"An applicant-type investigation" had been conducted on Hearnes in 1969. This was furnished to Butterfield, said the letter and included unproved allegations that Hearnes received political contributions from "hoodlum elements in St. Louis."

The heavily censored correspondence doesn't reveal precisely what other information the White House received. But we have confirmed that the FBI also compiled numerous unsubstantiated allegations about Hearnes' private life. The bungling bureau also had in its files reports that Hearnes was a "conscientious objector" when, in fact, he was a gung-ho West Point graduate.

Watergate "dirty tricks" helped derail Muskie's campaign, but Hearnes was not forgotten. After Nixon was reelected, IRS agents walked into Hearnes' office and told him he was under investigation. The case has dragged on, and Hearnes is still haggling with the government over a few hundred dollars in taxes.

Publicity from the tax probe haunted him when he ran for a Senate seat last year and he was also tarnished by an unrelated federal bank investigation. Hearnes lost the primary, but got a second chance when the winner died in a plane crash. He finally lost to Republican John Danforth last November.

U.S. medicine is difficult to beat

By VIRGIL PINKLEY
Copley News Service

Virgil Pinkley

Dr. John C. Wilson Jr., internationally famed orthopedic surgeon and president of the Good Samaritan Hospital in Los Angeles, feels that it is inevitable that the government will participate more and more in the health services of the country.

He hopes, and is working with other dedicated doctors, to try to make certain that we maintain the best parts of our present excellence in health care. He does not want to see hospitals lose their dedication to patients or lower their standards.

The medical profession has achieved more in the last 50 years than in the previous 2,000.

Think of it — the transplanting of organs; bypass heart operations; restoring aorta; hip, knee and elbow replacements; the removal of cataracts and the restoration of a great deal of eyesight; control over communicable diseases; and an almost endless list of medical miracles — even some gains against cancer.

This has been done largely through the private sector and because of the great dedication and devotion of many doctors, surgeons, specialists and nurses.

In an interview, Wilson reviewed the advance of medical science and hospitals in the United States, and spoke about the immediate prospects, including what role the government will play.

"In 1950," he said, "President Truman proposed a health program which was subsequently defeated, largely by strong opposition from the American Medical Association."

"After World War II, however, federally financed research led to the massive infusion of dollars into the medical schools, thereby affecting permanently their structure and development."

"With the defeat of President Truman's health bill the political power of organized medicine, as exemplified by the American Medical Association, became obvious to the general public and the medical profession entered firmly into the public domain. Doctors became then, and have remained ever since, fair game for public criticism."

As the government moved into the medical field Congress passed and President Johnson signed into law the now-famous Medicare legislation of 1966.

Wilson believes that "regardless of the party in power or the president in the White House, government will increasingly involve itself in health care."

He also believes that physician manpower development is probably the function of government rather than of the profession itself.

In 1974 President Ford signed into law the Health Planning and Resources Development Act, which establishes health agencies which are private, nonprofit organizations run by boards of directors with consumer majorities. In the opinion of Wilson, "These health service agencies have the awesome assignment of containing health costs, preventing duplication of medical services and upgrading the health of all Americans."

Wilson, who is a third generation orthopedic surgeon and received his medical training at Stanford and Harvard, went to England a few years ago to observe an English surgeon named John Charnley, who had developed the concept of a "greenhouse" and its controlled environment to scientifically create in it a spectacular breakthrough in orthopedic surgery. Within the 12x12-foot greenhouse orthopedic procedures could be performed in an almost totally sterile operating room atmosphere: 99.97 per cent bacteria free.

Wilson returned from England to train his own surgical team, comprised of another surgeon, a nurse, a technician and an anesthesiologist.

At present total hip replacements, as well as knees and elbows, are being performed in many parts of the United States to relieve those who are suffering from severe osteoarthritis, rheumatoid arthritis, aseptic necrosis of the femoral head, or whose former prosthesis has worn away the surrounding bone.

Mark Russell says

Billy Carter said he had to move away from Plains because of an accumulation of little things. Like the time a tourist wanted a beer can for a souvenir. And Billy was drinking it. At midnight. In bed.

Billy knew things were getting out of hand the night he couldn't get into his house because the turnstyle was stuck.

Then there was the time he drove into his own gas station and was told he could put the cover charge on his credit card.

And when at Sunday morning church services, the Choir started off with "There's No Business Like Show Business."

Even though Billy moved 20 miles away, he can still see the Plains skyline out of his window; also the ferris wheel, the rollercoaster, and the giant slide.

Border shops gear up for Easter peso flow

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Merchants along the Texas border spread out the red carpet this weekend as a flood of Mexican visitors began to roll in — hopefully to spend some devalued but still welcome pesos in Texas stores.

Easter weekend, traditionally a four-to-five-day holiday in Mexico, was in past years one of the busiest weeks for Texas merchants. But since last September, when the peso was devalued from 12.50 to a dollar to its current rate of 22 to one, Texas merchants saw their business drop by as much as 50 per cent or more.

This week, however, merchants were beginning to smile again.

Chambers of commerce in the Valley area reported that motels and hotels were booked solid for the weekend with about 32 per cent of the visitors coming from the Mexican interior, including Mexico City.

"Traffic is heavy," said a spokesman for the McAllen Chamber of Commerce, pointing out, however, that although the number of tourists was expected to be at about the same level as last year, "they will be spending less dollars because of the peso devaluation."

"Merchants have told this is the best week for them since the initial devaluation," said Hack McNally of the McAllen Chamber of Commerce.

A similar situation was reported in other cities along the border including Laredo.

"We are optimistic," said Harold Goodwin of Central Drug Co., adding that the loss in revenue was felt mostly by retailers.

Overall, the feeling was the weekend would be one of the best since the devaluation. The Mexican economic situation has begun to settle following the change of government.

"Sales in Laredo are gradually coming up a bit," Goodwin said. "We are still about 25 per cent below last year. Hopefully, it will get back to the level of other years."

Nitro jars never found

HOLLIDAY, Tex. (AP) — Mrs. Georgia Lynch, 72, said Friday she really never meant to cause a lot of commotion when she told the Army that several jars of nitroglycerine were buried in the collapsed cellar of her late sister's home.

But because a commotion she did and right in the main street of this North Texas town of 1,000.

An Army demolition crew from Ft. Sill, Okla. spent three days waist deep in sludge digging every inch of the cellar and decided to go home Friday leaving the city and county a 15 by 11 foot hole to fill.

"We have gone past the edges of the cellar, beyond the walls and beneath the floor," said Lt. David Farmer of the demolition team.

While the team was digging, residents of the nearby area were evacuated and returned to their homes only at night when the digging stopped.

Strauss: TV import curb likely

The Los Angeles Times
TOKYO — Robert S. Strauss, President Carter's special trade representative, said Friday that the United States and Japan have "set the stage" to reach "a reasonable and fair" agreement to curb imports of Japanese color TV sets into the United States.

Strauss, meeting newsmen shortly before returning to Washington, refused to go into detail as to how many TV sets might be permitted to enter the United States and at what tariff rates under a governmental agreement.

But he said he felt confident that negotiations to be continued next week in Washington would produce "an agreement which is reasonable and fair to both the people of Japan and its industrial interests and to the people of the United States and its industrial interests."

Last year, Japanese TV exports to the United States expanded by 2.4 times, reaching 2.7 million sets. The International Trade Commission on March 22 recommended that President Carter slap a 25 per cent tariff on imports for two years and then gradually lower them until they returned to the present rate of 5 per cent in five years.

Strauss' negotiations were aimed at producing a government-to-government agreement which would substitute for a presidential decision on the Trade Commission's recommendation.

Strauss called Japanese newspaper reports that Japan had agreed to voluntarily restrict the number of TV sets exported to the United States "a bit exaggerated."

"We didn't reach firm agreements because we were not seeking firm agreements (this time). But we set the stage for quickly solving matters between us," he said.

That stage, he indicated, would come in next week's negotiations in Washington.

"Whatever form the agreement takes, we think it will be an effective restraint arrived at in good will by both parties," he said.

Strauss also said he told Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda at a meeting Thursday that he would urge President Carter to join Fukuda in seeking "some dramatic push" at the London economic summit in May "to move (overall trade) negotiations which have been deadlocked in Geneva off dead center."

Princess to make queen a grandmother

LONDON (AP) — Princess Anne, daughter of Queen Elizabeth II, is expecting a baby in November. Buckingham Palace announced Friday. The baby would be the first grandchild for the queen and a special family event to top off her silver jubilee celebrations this year.

Anne, 26, an Olympic equestrienne, is fourth in line for the British throne. When the announcement was made, she was spending the Easter weekend with her husband, Army Capt. Mark Phillips, 28, at the Brigstock Horse Trials near the English Midlands village of Brigstock.

A palace spokesman said a brief visit that Anne plans to make to the United States in June will go ahead as scheduled.

He said the princess will be in the United States "two or three days" to unveil a statue of Queen Anne in Centerville, Md., June 18. Centerville is in Maryland's Queen Anne County, named for an ancestor of the princess.

The princess and Phillips were married Nov. 14, 1973, in Westminster Abbey, where Britain crowns and buries its kings and queens. The wedding was watched by a television audience estimated at 500 million around the world.

"It is announced from Buckingham Palace that the Princess Anne is expecting a baby in November," the announcement said. "The princess will be able to carry out public engagements already arranged between now and July but she will not be competing in further equestrian events."

A palace spokesman added: "Naturally the princess and Capt. Mark Phillips are delighted, as are other members of the royal family."

The queen will be 51 on April 21, but she will celebrate her official birthday June 11 with a parade to coincide with gala celebrations marking her 25th year on the throne.

First in line for the throne is Anne's elder brother Charles, Prince of Wales. The prince is 28, still unmarried and considered one of the world's most eligible bachelors. The queen also has two other sons, Prince Andrew, 17, and Prince Edward, 13.

The baby would be fifth in line for the throne behind Anne, who turns 27 on Aug. 15, and her brothers.

Despite the child's lofty birth, the infant could be the first royal baby without a title, according to Patrick Montague-Smith, editor of Debut, the bible of the British aristocracy.

The baby would be just Master or Miss Phillips, Montague-Smith said, because Capt. Phillips has not accepted a hereditary peerage.

"No title can come through Anne," Montague-Smith said. "The only thing that can happen is that the queen can declare that she is offering the baby a courtesy title. There is no precedent for this, but there is nothing to stop the queen doing it."

The queen's planned tour of Canada in the middle of October was not expected to be affected, but a palace spokesman said, "I am sure that the queen will want to be at home for the birth."

SYMBOL OF LIFE

Instrument of Death

Can you imagine the electric chair or the gallows being thought of as a symbol of life? Every day we see the Cross; but only on Good Friday do we remember it was once an instrument of execution.

This tremendous reversal in the meaning and implication of a device of torture and destruction bears simple witness to the profound effect the Resurrection of Christ has had on human culture.

Yet the thrust of the dramatic events that led to that first Easter is aimed not at culture but at YOU and ME. Christians believe Jesus died and rose again for US.

Celebrate Easter with all who share this joyous belief. The Lord made the Cross a symbol of His life — an inspiration for ours.

Special programs set at Midland churches to mark holy day

Special music and special programs will highlight Easter services in numerous Midland churches Sunday.

Kelview Heights Baptist Church, off North Big Spring Street near Scharbauer Drive, is inviting the public to attend its 10:30 a.m. Sunday service, to be highlighted with a special musical presentation by the church's 70-voice choir. The presentation will be "Behold, He Cometh." The sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Frank Johnson, pastor, and the nursery and Children's Church will be open.

The Youth Deliverance Choir of Faith Temple Church of God in Christ will be featured in a special candlelight musical drama during the Sunday evening worship hour.

The program will begin at 8 p.m. and will be open to the public, said the Rev. W. C. Kenan, pastor. Faith Temple Church is at 1605 N. Terrell St.

A special program will be presented by the Pee-Wee and youth departments of Antioch Baptist Church, 1400 E. Golf Course Road, Sunday morning. Special music for the program will be presented by the senior choir and the Inspirational Singers of the church.

For the service, scheduled to begin at 10:30 a.m., the Rev. Johnny A. Mitchell, pastor, will deliver a sermon titled "It Is Finished."

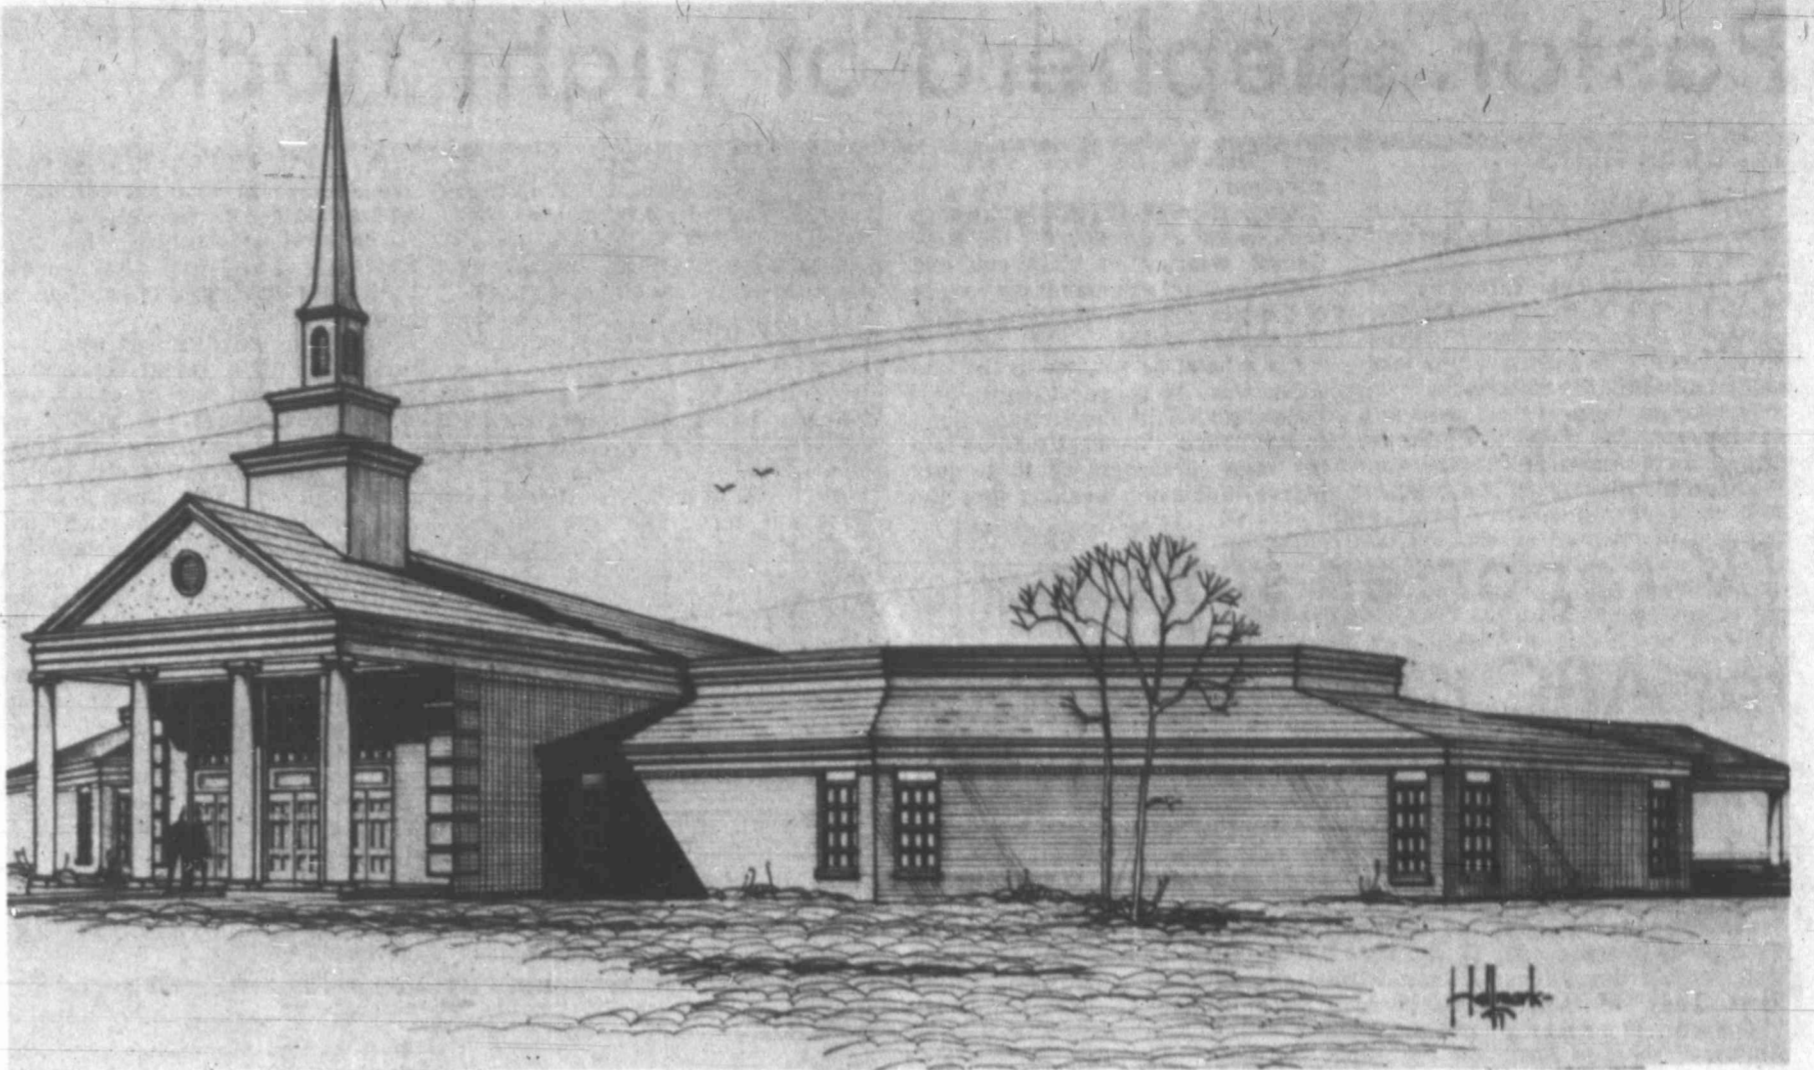

Crestview Baptist Church, 3300 Thomas St., will have special music presented by the choir and an instrumental ensemble during the 11 a.m. worship service Sunday. The sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Kenneth James, pastor.

At the Sunday evening service, scheduled to begin at 7, vocalists Ty and Linda Morris will be featured in a "mini-concert" of sacred duets, with piano accompaniment by Linda Sellers. Morris is minister of music at Crestview Church. At the service, to be open to the public, the sermon will be delivered by Kevin Shelburne, member of the Crestview congregation and currently a ministerial student at Baylor University.

A prayer breakfast beginning at 8 a.m. and a worship service at 10:45 will highlight the Easter observance at the Christian Church of Midland, 2808 Neely St.

The church choir will present special music at both the breakfast and the service. The choir is under the direction of Mark Worley, associate minister.

At the worship service, Robert E. Blazek, minister, will present a sermon composed entirely of scripture. The sermon will consist of some 300 scripture verses which he has committed to memory. The public is invited to hear the sermon.

Proposed Westside Church of Christ

Plans for new church unveiled

Midland's Westside Church of Christ congregation is announcing plans for a new church home.

The congregation, which has occupied its present structure at West Illinois St. at North Midkiff Drive since June 1956, will erect a new building on a five-acre site at the corner of West Illinois and Dewberry Drive.

According to congregational spokesmen, the new church will feature a fan-shaped auditorium with seating for 614 in its initial stage. The auditorium can be expanded to 914 in a second stage of construction, and to 1174 in a third stage.

New educational facilities will include 18 classrooms, offices, a library, a nursery and other facilities. There will be parking space to accommodate 188 vehicles at the outset, with ultimate expansion to provide more than 500 parking spaces.

The DSA Construction Co. of Cleburne will be general contractor for the structure. That firm has erected more than a thousand church structures throughout the Southwest. Total cost of the new facilities is expected to be in the neighborhood of $385,000. Much of this total has already been contributed by members of the congregation; to finance the remainder of the construction costs, the Westside congregation recently offered $270,000 in church bonds for sale. At the present time, less than $60,000 worth of bonds remain to be sold.

The Westside congregation held its first meeting Jan. 9, 1955 in a commercial building here. The congregation first occupied its present church home on June 17, 1956, with 26 family groups in attendance.

The congregation's current minister, Dr. Owen Cosgrove, came to Midland last August with a background of 26 years' preaching experience in churches in Texas and Oklahoma. He holds B. A. and M. S. degrees from Abilene Christian University and an M. A. degree from Sul Ross State University. He received a Ph.D. degree from North Texas State University. Elders of the Westside congregation are Don Bradley, George Hooper, Irving Jaratt, W. E. "Bill" Nance and vigil and a march.

James Wade. The church also has nine deacons. Construction of the new church plant is expected by late October.

The affair was to protest resumption of capital punishment in this country under a 1976 Supreme Court decision upholding revised state statutes, with Utah's January execution of Gary Gilmore the first such penalty carried out in the United States in 10 years. Currently, 342 prisoners are on death rows.

IT'S IN THE BOOK

Wise man in tune with rest of world

Editor's note: The Bible has always been a best seller. Suddenly it has become "hot copy," which means individuals, couples, families are turning to scripture for answers. Dr. Charlie Shedd has been asked to do a weekly Bible study for the whole family.

Mary Frana taught us something one summer.

We were out in a boat together in a lake in Minnesota and our whole family was there.

Mary was twelve and lived on the lake. As we rowed over the peaceful water, she soon had us all looking at the clouds. She showed us the face of George Washington and a little lamb skipping across the sky. There was also an old lady walking with a cane and a hen with her baby chickens.

Mary saw every one of these clearly. And we saw them too when she showed us where they were. Very exciting. Something new for us. Then as we drifted along, our twelve-year-old guide to the wonders of cloud formations came up with a statement I've never forgotten. Almost to herself, and rather sadly, she mused, "I feel sorry for you folks. They're up there all the time."

King Solomon was noted for his wisdom. He wrote proverbs, ruled a kingdom, and people came from all over to meet him. But maybe the wisest thing about him was that he stayed tuned to the wonderful world around him.

A summary of I Kings 4:25-34 reads: "Solomon had it made. He had it made like few people ever. He lived in a palace so big you could hardly believe it. He rode in the fastest chariots drawn by beautiful horses. He was rich enough that if you built a fence of gold around your place he could buy it from you. Six feet high, solid gold, and he could still afford it."

"Sounds exciting, doesn't it. But here's the most exciting thing about Solomon. He never lost his interest in the little things. Although he had everything money could buy, and more, he studied animals, birds, fish. He had an interest in trees, shrubs, grain, rocks. And even tiny little flowers growing in a crack of the wall, he got their message. All of life, and every day taught him something." (See verses 33 and 34.)

For family discussion: In our rush to get ahead, or even in our clamor to keep up, do we pass right by life's smaller blessings?

Look around the room. What little things would we miss if they weren't there? How many other meaningful items, large or small, went overlooked today?

Tomorrow everyone bring an interesting object, a new idea, a happening for discussion.

As a centerpiece for this session, why not put some small seeds in a dish and discuss what they grow.

Prayer for the whole family:

Lord, forgive us. Sometimes we push so hard to make a living, we forget to really live. Help us tune in every day, all day, to the thrilling little things you have put in your world for us to enjoy. Amen.

Pastor's conference scheduled

Simmons University's Harris, and is open to all division of religion, pastors of West Texas headed by Dr. Lindell O. and surrounding region.

Try to forget things not worth re-thinking

By REV. W. LEE TRUMAN
Copley News Service

Will Davis complained once too often about forgetting something. Will is the president of a small bank, an extremely well-read and articulate person. I tried to tell him that his forgetting might be a blessing. "Will, you would not be in this job if you did not have the ability to forget many things."

He challenged me. Over a long lunch, we put together this list. I am sure that there isn't an original idea in it, but it is an assortment of truths about life.

Many of us tend to forget the obvious from time to time and if you want to get ahead, here are a few things. Will agreed, we all would be better off to forget:

Forget sniping and criticism. No one who tries to do anything worthwhile escapes obstacles and objections. First, decide where you are going, take a realistic view and do whatever is best to get by the roadblocks. When you know what your goal is and you have charted your course, keep the eye on the goal, not the obstacles.

Forget destructive criticism. There are people who will be quick to tell you what cannot be done. Listen to the persons who tell you how something may be done better. Forget the souls who have a thousand reasons why it cannot be done. Forget injustice. You will be handed more than one raw deal. The human reaction is to punish those who have wronged you but it is an extravagant luxury to try and even old scores. Time does a far better job on taking care of those persons who give pain, more than you can ever accomplish.

Forget the smallness of people. People are the greatest things on earth, but sometimes they can make life pretty miserable for others. It is very much like trying to listen to good music in a noisy apartment. Sometimes, some sounds, like neighbors, have to be tuned out. Forget the small and the annoying sounds some persons make.

Forget to be sorry for yourself. Is it that the whole world is against you or are you against the whole world?

If the whole world is against you, it is time to stop feeling sorry for yourself and take a personal inventory. Get in step the way things are and you will go a lot faster and further.

Forget the clock. It is not the hours we put in that matters, it is what we do with our time that is important. Concentrate on doing more things and more important things. The clock is for clock-watchers, not for persons who want to achieve, excel and to be successful.

Methodist youths slated to participate in seminar

Ten high school age young people of Midland's First United Methodist Church will participate in a Christian Citizenship Seminar next week in Washington, D. C. and New York City.

During their week's stay on the East Coast, the group and four adult counselors from the local church will visit the offices of Rep. George Mahon and Senators Lloyd Bentsen and John Tower and will attend State Department briefings on such issues as the world energy situation and world peace. They will visit such historic sites as the White House, Arlington National Cemetery and the Lincoln Memorial.

In New York City, the Midlanders will have a day of tours and briefings at the United Nations as well as a day of sightseeing.

In both cities, the group will attend briefings presented by the Board of Church and Society of the United Methodist Church to interpret the role of the church in national and international concerns.

According to the Rev. Bill Weir, minister of Christian education at First United Methodist Church, the purpose of the seminar is to give the young people an insight into governmental functions and to foster a deeper appreciation of the national heritage and the nation's resources, as well as to provide better understanding of the church's role in contemporary society.

Participating in the seminar will be Kevin McCarter, John Schwartz, Anita Shipman, Jennifer Martin, Bill Leifeste, Dan Shoemaker, Cindy Weir, Janie Good, Blanche Overton and Beth Ormand.

Pastor shepherd of night flock

By WILLIAM GILLEN

NEW YORK (AP) — Duke Ellington called him the shepherd of the night flock. Since the Rev. John Garcia Gensel came to New York in 1956 as the pastor of a Lutheran church on the West Side, his life and that of the jazz community have been intertwined. The "Jazz Vespers" he conducts Sundays at St. Peter's Lutheran Church in midtown Manhattan and the church's annual "All Night Soul" jam sessions are New York institutions. Although he admits that he "used to keep much wilder hours," the Rev. Gensel, wearing his black suit and clerical collar, still makes the rounds of the jazz clubs around New York a few nights a week. It's a habit he got into in the late 1950s, when he began to realize how little attention the church was paying to jazz artists. "I wasn't running into too many preachers at these jazz places," he said, recalling how the musicians and other jazz people were at first suspicious of and then receptive to his visits to the jazz haunts. Gradually, the jazz community accepted him as one of their own. The Rev. Gensel, who was with Ellington the night he died, has married, christened and buried members of the jazz community and their families. A few months ago, he delivered the eulogy at a funeral for Erroll Garner in Pittsburgh. After almost 10 years tending his West Side flock by day and his jazz flock by night, the Rev. Gensel was named in 1965 as a fulltime pastor to the jazz community, which numbers an estimated 3,000 to 5,000 musicians in New York alone.

The Rev. Ralph Peterson, the pastor at St. Peter's, asked his congregation to support the Rev. Gensel's unusual ministry. It did, and jazz has been at home at St. Peter's since. The freestyle Sunday jazz vespers begin at 5 p.m. Since the church began experimenting with worship in the jazz idiom, hundreds of jazz people have performed at St. Peter's, worshipping

TV reporter slated for ABC morning show

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Preceded in her co-host job by two actresses, Sandra M. "Sandy" Hill, a TV reporter by trade, will step into her new job as First Lady of ABC's "Good Morning America" show on April 25. When the two-hour show began in January 1975 as "A.M. America," actress-interviewer Stephanie Edwards was co-host. She quit that spring and was replaced by actress-singer Nancy Dussault in November that year.

KABC-TV, is getting her shot at the big time because Miss Dussault is leaving on April 22 to resume her former career. A native of Centralia, Wash., Miss Hill, 30, was asked this week why she thought ABC hired her and not another actress for the "Good Morning" job in which she'll be working with actor David Hartman. "Well, I must confess I haven't been able to watch the show much because I'm spending a lot of time in the field and I've been doing the 7 a.m. newscast here," she laughed.

But it is my understanding they've made a solid commitment to a more news-oriented program ... and I hope their decision to go with me means they're re-emphasizing their commitment to news. Miss Hill, who in 1966 was named winner of the "Miss Washington" beauty pageant, then graduated from the University of Washington two years later, didn't start in news. She started in banking in Seattle. She said she felt frustrated working as an employment interviewer — "I had gone as far as I could go there" — and happened to read a want ad for a woman's editor. The job turned out to be at KIRO-TV.

with a heart to try the club finesse, losing to West's king. West was now out of spades, and any other return found South taking nine tricks: two spades, two hearts, one diamond and four clubs. The crucial play came at the first trick, when East muffed a play that he would make in his sleep if he were playing the hand as declarer. East must not win the first or second spade trick.

SIMPLE SIGNAL
Instead of winning the first spade, East should drop the nine of spades, signaling encouragement with the highest card he can spare. On winning the ace of hearts, West leads another spade. East plays the five, confirming his signal. Declarer must eventually try the club finesse, and West persists with his last spade. East takes the ace of spades and is then ready to win tricks with his last two spades, defeating the contract.

DAILY QUESTION
Partner opens with one club, you respond one spade, and partner bids 1 NT. You hold: S-A9532; H-9854; D-K8; C-52. What do you say?
ANSWER: Pass. Partner shows a minimum opening bid (about 12 to 15 points in high cards), and your hand does not add enough to produce a game. Pass at the first convenient part-score contract.

Both want out of their series because they now realize it is affecting their marriage. Minor separations to avoid confrontations have proved to be unsuccessful in keeping the marriage together. It seems for two super-egos, there can be only one star in the family. But which one — LEE or FARRAH? Only time will tell. Could the answer be starring in their own show, together?

Comedienne Fields back in action in Las Vegas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — "It's like being reborn, I felt like I was home," said comedienne Totie Fields, opening on the Strip one year after a serious illness that ended with the amputation of her leg. Between shows, she was the star at a party attended by Milton Berle, Jerry Lewis, Lucille Ball, Phyllis Diller, Steve Allen, and a number of other persons. They flew here from Los Angeles in chartered planes to watch the portly entertainer resume her career.

Last year, she suffered phlebitis complicated by vascular problems that forced the amputation of her left leg. She has since lost 75 pounds and undergone five operations. Thursday, as she opened at the Hotel Sahara, she was greeted by dozens of show business personalities. Billboards along the Strip proclaimed "Welcome back, Totie."

As Totie entered the party, riding on a specially designed cart, she received a standing ovation from the 600 guests and declared, "I certainly deserve it."

Later, she was given another lengthy ovation as she opened her second and last show. Then, sitting on a chair with her husband, George Johnston, behind her, Totie did her 80-minute show, starting off with a handful of jokes about her missing leg. Aided by a clear plastic cane, Totie stood up to more applause and the song "Friends," which was given to her as a present by its writers. "This experience has taught me one thing," Totie told a reporter before the show. "I learned that when God gives you a gift, it's a gift."

Both girls were killed in 1975 but were not found until last August, when their bodies were discovered in a pasture near Kerrville. State District Court Judge Robert Martin said he would sequester the jury when testimony starts Monday.

Peso devaluation still felt in border towns

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — One good thing that can be said about business along the U.S.-Mexico border eight months after the first peso devaluation is that things aren't any worse.

Mexican citizens, with 40 per cent less to spend because the peso was devalued that much, remain largely absent from American stores in proximity to the border.

In border cities such as Nogales and Douglas, as much as 90 per cent of the retail business was done with Mexican citizens before the first devaluation last August. That business is all but gone now for many merchants.

"Our business in February was off 34 per cent and in March 32 per cent," said Charlie Fowler, director of the Nogales Chamber of Commerce. "It doesn't look like it's going to get any better."

Business has improved a little since last fall, and Mexican citizens still purchase basics, such as groceries, on the American side of the border, Fowler said. But Nogales has a 15 per cent jobless rate, a lot of it due to slow retail business, he said.

Some merchants say they have noticed a little improvement in the last few days, holidays in Mexico because of Easter week. But the business is considered temporary or so small in volume that it makes little difference.

"If there's been any improvement, it's been minimal," said Henry Quinto, president of Levy's Department Store in Tucson. "Fundamentally, the great bulk of that business is still absent."

Levy's, the biggest single retail store in Arizona, and other Tucson department stores have estimated that 10 to 15 per cent of their business was with customers from Mexico before the devaluation.

"Mexico provided 15 per cent of our business," said Guy Dean, manager of one of two J.C. Penney's stores in Tucson. "That business is nil now—we've lost 15 per cent of our business."

Even northern Mexico's best produce and shrimp catching seasons in a quarter of a century have not spurred the economy there, and subsequently along the border, Fowler said.

"Some merchants here want to go out of business but they can't because there's not enough trade for them to liquidate their stock," he said. "Five or six Nogales merchants closed in the first three months after the initial devaluation."

Harvey Bracker, owner of Bracker's department store in Nogales, said his business has improved, although it still is 30 per cent off what it was a year ago.

Bracker said he has more than 6,000 credit customers from Mexico, who accounted for 90 per cent of his sales volume before the devaluation. In the first month following it, his sales were off 70 per cent, he said.

"But things are normalizing themselves," Bracker said. "As people get used to the new exchange rate, they'll start spending again." He said shopping north of the border by middle and upper income Mexicans will start to pick up.

"I do see continued improvement," Bracker said.

In Douglas, Ariz., the devaluation hit hard at first but some scrambling by merchants has improved the situation a little, said Chamber of Commerce Manager Pat Shannon.

"We've been able to diversify our economy," Shannon said. "Our retail sales entrepreneurs re-educated themselves on marketing procedures and public relations."

"We had a 30 per cent business loss in the first two months. But when the peso settled off, we reduced the loss to 15 per cent," he said.

Shannon said Douglas is the largest marketplace for six northern Mexico communities, so Mexican citizens really have few alternatives. He said the twin plants program and Mexico's duty-free purchase allowance also help.

Businessmen with less good fortune said two steps can be taken to improve the situation. One is exempting Mexican citizens from Arizona's 4 per cent sales tax and the other is easier border access for Mexican citizens.

Nogales chamber director Fowler said both steps are needed badly. Others agreed, but some Tucson merchants said the sales tax exemption will be more of a psychological step than an actual way of increasing purchasing power.

"The state is not collecting much in sales tax revenues from Mexican citizens now, so we don't have much to lose," if legislation passes, Levy's Quinto said.

"I'm not sure it's going to help," said J.C. Penney's Dean. "It certainly won't help the peso. The only thing that's really going to help is the stability of the peso."

Jack Redmond of the Tucson Chamber of Commerce agreed. "We may simply have to wait it out for a significant impact to occur again," he said. "We'll have to wait for people to get accustomed to the situation. It's kind of a psychological thing."

Making it easier for Mexicans to cross the border would help, businessmen said. Currently at Nogales, it can take more than a month to get a temporary permit for a Mexican citizen to cross.

This week, Rep. Morris K. Udall and Sen. Dennis DeConcini, both D-Ariz., wrote President Carter asking for help in easing the crossing situation.

They asked that the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service "modify various operations and practices which are contributing to the economic deterioration along the U.S.-Mexico border."

"The main objective is to take advantage of potential economic benefits, although we are equally interested in insuring that Mexican citizens are treated with the respect and dignity they deserve," Udall and DeConcini said in the letter.

They also asked Carter to consider setting up a temporary "open port" at Nogales next week when thousands of Mexican citizens will be in Nogales, Sonora, for Mexico's national basketball championships.

An open port would allow freedom of movement across the border, eliminating the permit procedure, they said, adding that it would bring increased business for Nogales, Ariz., merchants.

War on fire ants long, costly

By the Associated Press. Nine southeastern states have been waging war on the prolific fire ant for more than two decades, but the ants are still winning.

More than $100 million has been spent in research and control programs and nearly 4,000 chemicals have been tested. But nothing has been able to stop the pesky bug.

There are 150 million acres of fire ant-infested land in Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas, North Carolina and South Carolina.

Experts have given up trying to eradicate the fire ant. Efforts the past several years have been concentrated on just controlling it.

Now, even the control program is in jeopardy. The only chemical proven effective against fire ants, Mirex, is about to be banned.

Scientists agree something has to be done, but they disagree on what.

The sun-loving fire ant, called solenopsis invicta, was first found in this country in the 1940s in Mobile, Ala. It was believed imported from South America.

In those early years before quarantine regulations, the ant was transported on root stock shipped from Alabama to other states. Then too, the insect migrated on its own. The queen has a flight range of 10-12 miles.

It wasn't until 20 years ago that federal and state officials joined with entomologists in an all-out effort to eliminate the pesky ant.

The fire ant is a menace to people, newborn wildlife, land and farm equipment.

The sting is painful and can cause an allergic reaction. One ant can deliver as many as 20 stings. In Mississippi, a young child fell in a colony of ants in the backyard and was bitten by 50 or 60 of them. Her father, a doctor, said if he had not been near she might have died.

Dr. William Buren of the entomology department of the University of Florida and a recognized authority on fire ants says severe reaction is limited to less than one per cent of the people stung.

Dr. William H. Schmid, a St. Petersburg, Fla., allergist, says allergic symptoms range from mild swelling in most cases to moderately severe chest pains and nausea in a small number of people.

Whoosh...thwack! new sound of spring?

By SIDNEY C. SCHAEER Newsday

Whoooooooooosh... thwack.

Another sound of spring.

But you can forget that old-fashioned call to "play ball!" The real sound of spring these days is the silence of the Frisbee. Feel free to recognize, as have the sages of fun, that the ubiquitous saucer-shaped disc, once a fad of the '50s, has emerged as a serious, competitive sport. World championships, prizes, and recognition by that ultimate arbiter of the real: the Guinness World Book of World Records. Consider the lowly Frisbee:

Two doctors did, and in the New England Journal of Medicine elevated the "Frisbee finger" to the same level as tennis elbow.

The U.S. Navy did, to the tune of $375,000, but failed to find any practical military applications. A California psychiatrist spent years developing a nine-stage theory of flight beginning with the classic release he labeled "Whelm."

In Oak Grove Park, near Los Angeles, they certainly recognized the Frisbee. In fact they set up a municipal Frisbee course.

And in Cambridge, Mass., they set up a course of study in it at MIT.

With all this, "Play Frisbee" may be the new call of the spring. But which Frisbee? There is Guts Frisbee, and Frisbee Golf, and Ultimate Frisbee, and Freestyle Frisbee.

FRISBEE GOLF is scored just like the real thing, but you design your own course and don't have to wait in line. It can be a three-hole course, or for really serious all-day players, design an 18-hole course. According to Paul Dickson, author of "The Mature Person's Guide to Kits, Yo-Yos, Frisbees and other Childlike Diversions," "two of the most popular holes in use today are wire baskets and metal poles set into the ground." Actually any good tree will do.

ULTIMATE FRISBEE is a noncontact sport played by two seven-member teams on a playing field that is 60 yards long and 40 yards wide. The end zones are 30 yards deep. The game is a combination of football and soccer, and the object is for the attacking team (the team with possession of the Frisbee) to move it down the field to score a goal. Only passing is permitted. The Frisbee may never be handed from player to player, and no player may walk, run, or take steps while in possession of the Frisbee.

This application is most popular in the East Coast, and, according to Al Bonopone, an information specialist for the Frisbee association, it has gained club status at many colleges. Among the best college squads in recent years were Rutgers, Amherst, Cornell and Delaware.

GUTS FRISBEE originated in the Midwest. This is another team application, and the standard squad is composed of five players who face each other separated by parallel goal lines 14 meters (about 15 feet) apart. A team scores a point when the opposing team makes a bad throw or misses a catch. The first team to score 21 points wins, and the winner must have a two-point advantage. A good throw must cross the goal line without touching the person who made it.

11-year-old boy held as pusher

NEW YORK (AP) — They are boys and girls, the littlest pushers, carrying heroin to customers in return for handouts. They are enlisted by older youths because they are immune from adult prosecution.

An 11-year-old boy arrested Thursday is one of them.

Seized along with him on charges of selling heroin from a Harlem apartment was his 18-year-old "boss." That was unusual, police say, because too often the "boss" is not caught.

"He's a dumb little kid," said a community resident who knows the 11-year-old. "A baby who doesn't know right from wrong. He didn't even know how much he was going to get paid."

A child from a broken home, the boy's name was not revealed because of his age. His mother is on welfare and "all she knows is that she sends the kid off every day to school," said the resident, who asked not to be identified.

His arrest was the latest in a four-month crackdown on New York City's notorious Eighth Avenue drug marketplace by a special team of police.

The children have been recruited for the drug trade because it allows the older pushers to skirt the life sentence the state's strict drug laws mandate for possession or sale of large quantities of heroin.

"We arrest them that young every day," said police officer Joseph Garcia, one of the arresting officers. "We've arrested them as young as 6."

"Kids go get the drugs and are pushing the drugs," said one veteran observer of the scene. "The older guys are on the side just picking up the money."

Recruiting the youngsters is no problem, he said. "They see these older guys who are their idols on the block, they're well dressed, they're flashing money so the kids look up to them. They do what they ask in the hopes they'll get something from them."

The recruited youths are known as "holders" or "runners." One undercover officer described a scene in which he asked a pusher for two bundles — each with twenty-five $10 bags.

The pusher called a girl jumping rope in the street and had her roll up her sweater sleeves to reveal bundles taped to her arms. He took what was needed and she went back out to play, the officer said.

One requirement for a recruit to the drug business is that the youngster be streetwise. "Who can pick out a cop, who can see the radio car coming down the next block, that sort of thing," said one source.

Welfare reforms may include jobs, cash

WASHINGTON Post — Welfare reforms ranging from guaranteed jobs for selected parts of the population to a broadened cash-assistance program for all poor persons are among the options being considered by Carter administration specialists in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

A welfare task force Friday presented four types of reform proposals to an HEW consulting group, which appeared to be divided over a number of basic issues in welfare reform. The document was the first indication of the outlines and possible costs of welfare reforms being considered at President Carter's instructions.

The four plans vary widely in cost — ranging from $6 to $8 billion for the cheapest to between $30 and $40 billion for the most expensive, based on costs in the 1974 fiscal year budget.

One of them is expected to become the basis for a welfare system overhaul to be presented by May 1 to President Carter, who is scheduled to send his recommendations to Congress later this year.

There were no public indications Friday which path the HEW task force and Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. would choose.

Krueger raps Carter pick

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Tex., told President Carter Friday he is disappointed the Carter administration did not name an Hispanic-American to be U.S. ambassador to Mexico.

Krueger's telegram of "disappointment" was sent to Carter just hours after the administration announced Wisconsin Gov. Patrick Lucey had been named to the ambassadorship.

"It is distressing that a Democratic administration has not found an Hispanic-American who it considers deserving of the post," Krueger said.

Sources familiar with the studies under way, however, said they sensed a consensus was building around a form of cash assistance program that would replace several of the existing welfare grant systems. It is similar to, although broader than, the old negative income tax concept that underlay the Nixon administration's aborted family assistance plan.

Under the plan defined Friday, the income floor for a family of four would be about $4,350, or 75 percent of the current poverty level income. That is neither as high as welfare rights groups would want nor as low as many members of Congress have favored in the past.

That plan would replace such existing welfare programs as aid to families with dependent children, food stamps, supplemental security income, and a low-income housing supplement.

Winner to receive trip

STANTON — An all-expense-paid trip awaits the winner of the Government-in-Action Youth Tour Contest to be held Monday, sponsored by Cap Rock Electric Cooperative.

This year's contest has drawn a field of eight contestants from the Cap Rock service area. These students will be competing for a trip to Washington, D.C., June 9 to 21.

The contest will begin promptly at 7 p.m. Judges this year are Bruce Griffin, Howard County extension agent; Tommy Hart, editor of the Big

Man charged with arson

A 20-year-old Midland man was arrested Friday by Midland police for the April 3 arson at Tall City Laundromat, Eamt Schubarber Drive.

Russell Cron, 1115 E. Hickory Ave., was freed on $3,500 bond after being charged with arson.

GRAPEFRUIT HEIST — At least one thief in Midland likes to make sure he has ample supply of Vitamin C. Midland police said Friday that someone broke into the residence of Georgia Bryant, Route 3, and stole three cans of grapefruit juice.

FRONT-LOADER THEFT — Charles Russel, 1001 N. Colorado St., told Midland police Friday morning that his front-end loader, parked on a parking lot at 600 S. Atlanta St., was stolen.

Police said the $2,000 machine apparently was driven from the lot and possibly loaded on a truck.

Spring Herald, and Bill Miller, staff assistant, Lynteger Electric Cooperative, Inc., Tohoka.

Two egg hunts set in McCamey

MCCAMEY — Two Easter egg hunts are planned Sunday for McCamey youngsters.

The American Legion and its auxiliary will sponsor a hunt from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. for children 1 to 10 years old.

A family hunt is scheduled for 5 p.m. at the McCamey Country Club, with a hamburger feed at 7 p.m. A $1 fee will be charged for members and a $2 fee for out-of-town guests.

Tax violation complaint filed

SAN ANTONIO — The U.S. attorney's office here has announced that charges of failure to supply information on tax returns and filing a fraudulent employee withholding allowance certificate were filed against a Midland man this week.

The complaint alleges that Ruel Frank Brown failed to supply information on his individual tax returns for the years 1974 and 1975.

A charge that he filed a fraudulent employee's withholding allowance certificate with his employer also was lodged.

Haunted Watson shares Masters lead

Gary Player reacts to missed birdie putt on 16. (AP Laserphoto)

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Tom Watson took the haunting memory of last-round collapses with him to the practice range.

"It's a matter of trusting your swing," the personable redhead said. He then sought a quiet corner of the range at the Augusta National Golf Club, hoping to come up with something that will withstand the grinding pressures that exist in all tournaments and, to an even greater degree, in the storied Masters championship.

"I didn't hit the ball very solid," he said after a hard-won, three-under-par 69 had given him a share of the second round lead Friday with longshot veteran Rod Funseth.

"I'M HAPPY with my score, but I'm not very happy with the way I played," said Watson, who has won two tournaments this year and missed chances for two more in his last two starts.

"It's a matter of rhythm. I just got a little bit fast out there."

The same thing happened, with disastrous results, in each of his last two starts.

He had a two-stroke lead with nine holes to go in the Tournament Players Championship and failed to bring it home. He had a four-stroke lead going into the last 18 holes of the Heritage Classic—and that one got away, too.

"I've choked," he said. "Everybody's choked. But I don't think that's what happened. I just didn't have a swing I could believe in."

"It's mental in that I didn't believe in my swing. It just didn't hold up. If you believe in your swing and it holds up, you win. If not, you don't."

"When I don't believe in my swing, I don't tend to perform well."

AND WATSON, who has won twice this year and performed well enough to head the season's money-winning list despite his recent problems, headed for the practice range to find a swing he could trust.

Funseth, a quiet, unassuming man, gained a share of the lead with four birdies in a row on the way to a 67 that was posted before the gusty winds kicked up and swept away the hopes and dreams of earlier pace-setters.

They were tied at 139, five under par for two trips over the windswept, gently rolling hills of the famed Augusta National Golf Club course.

Both insisted they aren't yet considering the possibility of winning the first of the season's four major tests of golfing greatness.

"It would mean a lot—a helluva lot," said Watson, a freckle-faced former British Open champion. "But at this stage, I'm not thinking about winning. Just playing one shot at a time."

Funseth, a 44-year-old who has won twice in 17 years of tour activity, shrugged off his chances of holding off an elite, international corps of the world's finest shot-makers, now tightly bunched halfway through this revered event.

"They probably don't have a green jacket that would fit me, anyhow," he said.

HUBERT GREEN and old pro Don January, who were 1-2 at the end of 18 holes, each encountered their difficulties under the hot Southern sun that sent temperatures into the 80s.

Green followed his opening 67 with a 74 and was two shots off the pace at 141. His biggest problem came on the par three 12th hole. He put his tee shot into a bunker, blew it across the green into a pond, had to drop back in the bunker, just got that one out and then hooked a 25-foot putt for a double bogey.

"I didn't know how to play the shot," he said of his buried lie in the bunker. "I shouldn't have played it. It's stupid to practice in a major championship."

January, at 47 the self-styled "Old Folks" of the tour who is suffering from a chronic back ailment, moved slowly, painfully, to a four-over-par 76 that left him at 145.

Bill Kratzert, a powerful, unawed 24-year-old rookie and perhaps the best of the young men who have moved into a dominant position this year, and Ben Crenshaw were at 140, only one shot off the lead. Crenshaw shot a 69.

GREEN, slumped-shouldered little South African Gary Player and Australian Bob Shearer were next at three under par. Shearer got his 67 on the board before the gusty winds kicked up. Player, now 40 and the only foreigner ever to win the Masters, salvaged par from a ditch on the 12th but bogeyed the final hole from a fairway bunker for a 70.

The putting miseries continued for Jack Nicklaus, who had a 70-142. He three-putted twice, missed two others of about four feet and now has required 72 strokes on the slow, grainy greens for his two rounds.

"I guess I ought to be thankful I'm two under par, the way I'm putting," said Nicklaus, the only five-time Masters champion and generally regarded as the finest player the world has seen.

Saul counts on hustle to make up for youth

BY TED BATTLES

With only a few days to go until the Texas League opener, Midland Cubs Manager Jim Saul, for the first time, this week was able to match some names with positions and speculate as to the kind of team would come to the Tall City next week.

Of course, there will be other last minute changes. There always are, but the tall Virginian has been working with a team that could open the season at Cubs Stadium against San Antonio's Dodgers Tuesday night.

It's a club Saul believes will be strong in pitching, strong enough on defense, capable of running and maybe short on power.

"JOE HERNANDEZ (centerfielder from Pan American) has hit some balls out here that I'm sure would be out in some of the parks we'll play in," Saul said. A few minutes later, it was almost as though the Texan had been eavesdropping.

Playing in the huge Seattle Mariners' playground at Tempe, Joe hit a double to left, 390-feet. In Midland the same spot is 365 feet.

"Eric Grandy (a loose, lanky free-swinging from Baltimore) can hit and may supply some power," Saul says.

However, power is not something Saul is depending on. Hustle has been a trademark of the Cubs this spring and it will play an important role in the Cubs' 1977 strategy.

"I'M THE type who likes to take it to the other club. We'll be aggressive on offense," says Saul. "I can't sit back and wait. If a situation calls for a hit-and-run, we'll hit-and-run."

The current Cubs roster may be long on hustle, but it will be short on AA experience. Thirdbaseman Bill Huisman, catcher Steve Haug, outfielder Earle Chew and pitchers Wayne Doland and Darrell Turner are the only ones with full seasons of AA ball under their belts.

Saul is confident second base is in good hands with Keith Drumright, who joined the Cubs in mid-summer off the University of Oklahoma campus, back. Keith hit over .320 for Midland.

Steve Davis, out of Stanford last spring, is at shortstop and Saul feels "he can do the job with the glove, but has been fighting himself at the plate. I told him the job was his and to relax.

AARON RANDALL'S hitting this spring has nailed down the first base job and the Grambling College grad is determined to stick this year after two seasons in Pompano Beach.

Karl Gordon, Kevin Drury and Tim Ireland are battling for infield berths Gordon coming off surgery that sidelined him all of last season.

In addition to Chew, Hernandez and Grandy, Brian Bosinski and Mike Anderson (University of Texas) are in the outfield battle. The Cubs will bring four to Midland. Anderson spent most of last season in Pompano trying to rebound from the effects of a leg injury and surgery suffered in 1975 during what was turning out to be a sensational Fall Instructional season for him in Arizona.

SINCE THE Designated Hitter is out in the Texas League this year when National League farm clubs face one another...and the only time they won't be against El Paso and Tulsa...Saul will have to go with a 10-man pitching staff.

Byron Wilkerson, up from Pompano Beach, Jeff Albert, 8-3 with Bellingham, Wash., and Darrell Turner, 4-12 at Midland, are starters with Dan England, 10-3 at Bradenton, and Jack Ledbetter also in the running.

Bobcats wrest lead from Rebs

SAN ANGELO—The San Angelo Bobcats used their home San Angelo Country Club course to advantage Friday to wrest the District 5-4A golf lead from the Midland Lee Rebels.

San Angelo fired a sizzling 303 Friday to give the Bobcats a 1202 team total through four of the five tour stops. Lee's 308, however, kept the Rebels in second place with a 1205 score.

The 5-4A run will end Friday in Abilene and the top two teams will advance to the regionals in Lubbock two weeks later.

Midland High's 314 kept the Bulldogs in third place with a 1222, but the 'Dogs will need to make up at least 17 strokes Friday in Abilene to earn a regional berth.

Joe Terrazas' 74 and Marshall Brown's 75 paced the heated Bobcat attack that saw San Angelo make up a two-stroke lead by Lee going into the fourth round. When the smoke cleared, the Bobcats led the Rebels by three strokes.

Lee's Steve Wise, who led the medalist chase from the first week after a 64 at Big Spring, ballooned to an 81 Friday to fall into second place with a 294, four strokes behind Brown, a junior. Terrazas is third with a 297 while Lee's Kyle Rowland kept fourth with a 74 and a 299 total. Billy Sittion of Lee had a 76 for a 302 total and seventh place.

Midland High's Kelly Eng again led the Bulldogs with a 76 and kept fifth in the medalist race with a 300. Shayne Berry had a 77 for the Pack linksters.

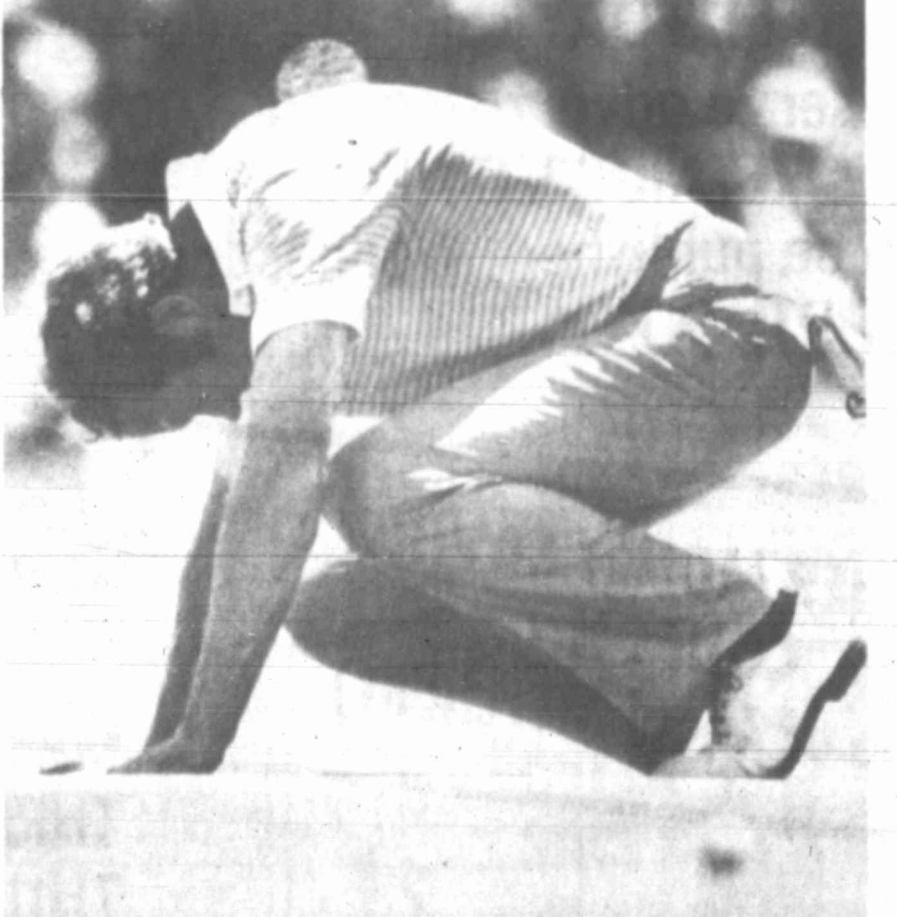

Berry has a 304 four-round total for eighth place in the medalist competition. Other Midland High scores Friday were Mike Mahan, 80; Russ Brown, 81; and Phil Littlefield, 87.

Other Lee scores included Wendell Fallin's 77 and Gary Raney's 82. Jeff Hull led the Lee JV's with a 78 while Jeff Lutke topped the Midland High JV staff with an 81.

Marshall changes mind

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Equivocal Mike Marshall has changed his mind. He returned to the Atlanta Braves and his relief pitching job Friday in time for the season opener.

Marshall never really quit. He only said he would. The 34-year-old Cy Young Award winner left the team and returned to his home here Wednesday to renew a dispute with Michigan State University officials, the local prosecutor's office and anyone else who wanted to jump into the fray.

The hot-tempered Marshall said Thursday he was quitting baseball to protect his family from alleged harassment by Michigan State officials. Then he said Friday he felt the harassment had ended and he now could play baseball. He boarded a plane Friday afternoon bound for Houston and the Braves' first game.

He said the harassment involved the interrogation of his wife and friends by Michigan State officials following allegations by three students that Marshall threw a baseball dangerously close to them

Rebels, Bulldogs in spoiler roles

Midland Lee's Rebels and Midland Bulldogs can play the part of spoilers today in the District 5-4A baseball race.

Lee entertains the Abilene Eagles while the Purple Pack hits the road for a date with the Cooper Cougars in the Key City in 2 p.m. games.

Abilene, Cooper and Big Spring, share first place with 4-1 records and if the two Tall City teams can knock off the Warbirds and Cougs, the Steers would be in great shape to win the first half of the loop race.

Lee sports a 2-3 5-4A record and will call upon junior righthander Mike Richard to face the Eagles which are 1-1 on the year. Abilene's mound choice will be junior Byron Roberts, also a righthander.

Richard beat Big Spring one week ago, 4-1, and has thrown well in recent games for Coach Ernie Johnson's outfit.

Lee takes a 12-8 season mark into the game while Midland is 4-13 on the year and 1-4 in league action. Cooper, meanwhile, stands 10-5 on the season.

MIDLAND HIGH will use Kevin Widner while the hurler for Cooper most likely will be Steve Taylor.

Big Spring is at Odessa High in the other 5-4A contest.

Frankie Rubio of Big Spring continues to hit the ball at a blistering pace with a 32 league average with 12 hits in 19 trips to the plate. He also leads in runs-batted-in with 11.

Barry Russell, Cooper's shorstop, is the No. 2 hitter in 5-4A with a .500 average along with Chris Dawson of Odessa Permian and San Angelo Central's Joe Paul Bramhall.

Todd Clements leads the Rebel attack in loop play with a .412 average while Larry Murphy paces MHS with a .400 average. Richard who plays shortstop when is on the mound, owns a .385 mean in district play.

CRAIG VAN HORN of Lee is hitting .353 in league competition.

On the season, Clements, Van Horn and Richard pace the Lee. Clements is hitting .474, Van Horn .456 and Richard .444 average in 20 games.

Midland is led by Murphy's .355 average while Steve Cole is hitting .333.

Table with 2 columns: Team and Record. Lists records for various teams in the District 5-4A tournament.

This Week's Games: Tuesday's Results: Odessa Permian 3, Midland Lee 3; Odessa 1, Midland 1; Big Spring 4, Abilene Cooper 3; Abilene 3, San Angelo 1. Thursday's Results: Odessa 1, Midland 1; Odessa Permian 12. Today's Games: Abilene at Midland Lee, 2 p.m.; Midland at Abilene Cooper; Big Spring at Odessa.

Astros defeat Braves in 11th

HOUSTON (AP)—Joe Ferguson, one of four newcomers in Houston's starting line-up, blasted a leadoff home run in the 11th inning Friday night to give the Astros a 3-2 seasonopening victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Ferguson connected off Bob Johnson, who made the Atlanta club as a free agent in spring training and relieved starter Andy Messersmith in the 10th.

Atlanta's Jeff Burroughs, obtained from the Texas Rangers for five players during the winter, blasted a two-run homer off J.R. Richard in his first National League at-bat in the first inning to give the Braves a quick lead.

Morgan sparks 6-3 Reds' win

CINCINNATI (AP)—Joe Morgan, the National League's Most Valuable Player the last two seasons, drove in four runs with a three-run homer and a sacrifice fly, propelling the world champion Cincinnati Reds to a 6-3 victory over the San Diego Padres Friday night.

It was the Reds' second consecutive victory this year and 10th in a row over two seasons, counting their 1976 playoff and World Series sweeps plus a victory in the regular-season finale.

Billingham was relieved by Dale Murray, who went 1-3 in innings to get his first save as a Red. Murray was obtained from Montreal in the Tony Perez deal along with Woodie Fryman, the winning pitcher in Thursday's opener.

Billingham tossed six shutout innings before yielding a run in the seventh. He departed with two out in the eighth after giving up a two-run homer to Gene Tenace.

Crowd's roar like old times

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—Arnold Palmer knocked in an eagle three on the 13th hole en route to a second-round 71 Friday in the Masters golf tournament, and the roar of the crowd was music to his ears.

"It was like a drink of water for people who had been stranded in the Sahara for a long time," he said.

That was for the crowd, someone suggested. What was the effect on Palmer himself?

"Like I had a beer," he said.

The sudden emergence from a prolonged slump by the 47-year-old four-time champion added a fresh spark to the tournament that he dominated for nearly a decade, starting in 1958.

"It was more fun than I have been having," Palmer said after describing a round that included three birdies and an eagle—an old Palmer trademark.

"The trouble with me is that I haven't been having too many birdies lately. I don't mind bogeys if I can make some birdies. Today I felt I was doing something I haven't been doing for a long time."

McAdoo's spree paces Buffalo Braves

BUFFALO (AP)—Bob McAdoo made a triumphant return to Buffalo Friday night, scoring 41 points to lead the New York Knicks to a 104-102 National Basketball Association victory over the Braves.

It was McAdoo's first game in Buffalo since the Braves dealt him to New York Dec. 9. He hit on 18 of 29 shots and led all rebounders in the game with 17.

Naber wins 15th title

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—John Naber collected his 15th national amateur swimming title and 14-year-old Tracy Caulkins took her second victory of the week as both swam in American record time Friday night in the Amateur Athletic Union indoor meet.

The 21-year-old Naber, who says he will retire from the sport after this championship, held off University of Southern California teammate Steve Pickell to win the 100-yard backstroke.

The 6-foot-6 Naber lowered his own national record from 49.36 to 49.31 seconds. He had won the 200 backstroke earlier in this short course competition.

The 5-foot-7 Miss Caulkins, who weighs 107 pounds, swept to triumph in the 200 breaststroke in American record time of 2:16.98, beating the previous mark of 2:18.77 Marsha Morrey of Decatur, Ill., had set in 1975.

The eighth grade student from Nashville, Tenn., also had won the 100 breaststroke with an American record two nights earlier and Branin Natatorium.

Alice Browne, 14, a high school freshman from Mission Viejo, Calif., became the first woman to shatter the magic two-minute barrier in 200 yard butterfly competition.

Ken Rosewall upset victim

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Unseeded Brian Teacher, a 22-year-old seeking his first pro tournament success, rattled top-seed Ken Rosewall with a ferocious serve and net game Friday night for 6-2, 6-0 semifinal victory in the Tennis South Invitational.

In the other semifinal, second-seeded Chris Scanlon edged veteran Cliff Richey 7-6, 6-4 in an even match which hinged on two or three critical points.

Teacher, a 6-foot-3 Californian, was a last-minute addition to the $58,000 tournament after other players dropped out.

Celts rip Washington

BOSTON (AP)—Jo Jo White and John Havlicek each put together strong fourth quarter performances to lead the Boston Celtics to an 120-109 National Basketball Association victory Friday night over the New Orleans Jazz.

Maravich, who scored 14 points in the first half, had 23 of New Orleans 35 points.

Tompson's Canadiens, Blues bat spark Longhorns open NHL play

By The Associated Press The only things certain about round two in the National Hockey League playoffs is that the New York Islanders will be facing off against the Buffalo Sabres and Montreal begins its title defense against St. Louis. From there on, it's all a mathematical uncertainty. The Islanders and Sabres swept into the second round of Stanley Cup play Thursday night, New York nosing out Chicago 2-1 in the Black Hawks' "home-away-home" game and Buffalo bashing the Minnesota North Stars.

Norris Division winner Montreal, the point champ (132). SATURDAY NIGHT'S game in Los Angeles could be a repeat of the Thursday night brawl, in which 94 penalty minutes were handed out. It was the Flames' first playoff victory ever. "It increases our chances if we play physically," said Atlanta Coach Fred Creighton. "The psychological factor was there—never winning a playoff game. Hopefully it will give us confidence to go out to Los Angeles and beat them now that we have one playoff victory under our belts."

CLARK GILLIES celebrating his 23rd birthday, got the tie-breaking goal in the second period for the Islanders, officially listed as the visiting team in their Nassau Coliseum with Chicago wearing the home whites because its own arena was booked for a rock concert. Jim Lorentz scored three times and Jocelyn Guevrement had two goals in Buffalo's romp. The other two first-round matchups were tied at one victory apiece Thursday night with the deciding games set for Saturday night. Atlanta edged Los Angeles 3-2 and Pittsburgh topped Toronto 6-4. Whichever two teams survive will determine who plays who in the next round—when the four division winners get into the act. One of them will play the Adams Division-winning Boston Bruins, the other will face the Patrick Division champion Philadelphia Flyers. Based on the NHL's playoff matchup system, in which the team with the most points plays the team with the least, the next-to-most plays the next-to-least, etc., it happens that the Islanders host the Sabres Monday night in the opener of their best-of-seven series and Smythe Division champ St. Louis, with the fewest points (73) of any second-round team, is at chances if we play physically," said Atlanta Coach Fred Creighton. "The psychological factor was there—never winning a playoff game. Hopefully it will give us confidence to go out to Los Angeles and beat them now that we have one playoff victory under our belts."

Hawks' Murray blasts bosses

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — A season of embarrassment has ended for the Chicago Black Hawks, who bowed gracefully out of the National Hockey League playoffs some say they should never have reached. They won 26 games of the 80 they played during the regular season, managing just 63 points but making the playoffs by finishing third in the Smythe Division. They lost an estimated 162 manpower games through injuries, endured the traumatic firing of Coach Billy Reay and the subsequent readjustment to Bill White, then suffered their final indignity when they couldn't play a home game in the playoffs. AND ONLY one player spoke out about it, a fair-haired 22-year-old defenseman named Bob Murray, who may have endangered a promising career by telling the truth. "The people upstairs kissed us off," he told the Chicago Sun-Times. "Everybody feels the same way but they're afraid to say anything." The players must have wondered about losing that home game—not that it would have helped against the New York Islanders. The game was taken away because a Led Zeppelin rock concert had been booked into Chicago Stadium Thursday night.

SURE, THE Hawks got to wear their home uniforms, and got all the privileges accorded a home team, but they were advantages in theory only. The game still was played at the Nassau Coliseum, and Chicago won only seven games on the road all year. "I'm sure it makes good business sense; they got a sellout for Zeppelin and they wouldn't sell out for hockey," said Murray. "But where is the justice? Everyone has given up on us." Only Tony Esposito left the Nassau Coliseum here with his head held high. His magnificent performance in Game Two salvaged a shred of dignity for a team that has lost its self-respect. Chicago scored just three goals in two games against New York—all on power plays—and managed just 35 shots in the series while the Islanders took 35 in Game Two alone.

Kingman says he's finished with Mets

CHICAGO (AP) — Slugger Dave Kingman says he's finished with the New York Mets, one way or another. Angry over a winter-long contract war with club management, Kingman insists now that the season has started that he will not sign a 1977 contract. He'll play out his option if he has to but really would prefer a trade.

The slugger had demanded a six-year, $2-million contract but the club refused to pay him anything above the $225,000 which pitcher Tom Seaver earns. "In today's market, they are trying to maintain standards, their standards," Kingman said. If the club succeeds, "they won't have any ball players in two years."

So, Kingman says he will play without signing, absorbing a 20 percent salary cut to about $76,000 in order to become a free agent. "I will never sign with the Mets, you can count on that," said the 6-foot-6 slugger. "I want my freedom to go. This club is going downhill rapidly under the present management. I hate to think how lousy they're going to be in a couple of years."

Kingman accused Met management, particular M. Donald Grant, chairman of the board, of pursuing a no-win attitude. He said Grant is so concerned with public opinion that he should be running for political office, not operating a ball club. Kingman said Grant doesn't know what to do with him. "He is afraid to do anything about me," said Kingman. "He is afraid to trade me because of what people would think. He belongs in politics, not in baseball."

With his contract demands rejected, Kingman asked the Mets to trade him, preferably to Los Angeles. He said he is confident the Dodgers want him but consider the Mets' asking price too high. "The trouble is that the Mets don't realize they're never going to get face value for me," he said. "But something is better than nothing. If they don't make a deal for me, they aren't going to get anything because I'll be a free agent in October and able to make my own deal." He doesn't believe negotiations are over and said he may be traded "tomorrow, next week or next month." "Meanwhile I'm just happy it's opening day and that we won. Happiness is where you find it and I'm happiest on the field in a baseball uniform, not worrying about contracts."

Amerola fans again in patent on bat PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Amerola Products Corp. struck out for a second time Friday in a return trip to federal court to defend its disallowed patent on a metal baseball bat. The U.S. 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals agreed with a lower court ruling that said Amerola's patent on the bat was unfair. The lower court ruled the patent invalid. Sport Products Co., a division of the Aluminum Co. of America, brought suit against Amerola in 1973, claiming Amerola's patent was particularly unoriginal. Alcoa claimed the Amerola bat had its roots in an Alcoa aluminum bat made from 1934 to 1937, an Alcoa aluminum softball bat, Alcoa's so-called "fungo" bat and Alcoa's "Duke Alumabat."

Ex-Midlander paces Texas Tech victory

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP)—Rightfielder Paul Johnston, first baseman Gary Ashby, and third baseman Ernie Helweg each collected three hits Friday as the Texas Tech Red Raiders defeated Texas Christian 11-5 in a Southwest Conference baseball game. Tech is now 20-19 for the year and 8-8 in SWC play. TCU is 17-21-1 and 6-12-1 in conference action. Helweg had five RBIs for the day coming on a triple, homer and single. Ashby hit a home run and a double. Freshman pitcher Lenny Garcia earned his first collegiate victory against three losses. Randy Owens, 2-5, was the loser.

Baylor's Bickham ups record to 7-1

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Sammy Bickham surrendered 10 hits and walked seven, but managed to survive as Baylor edged Arkansas 5-3 Friday in a Southwest Conference baseball game. Bickham, who upped his record to 7-1, was helped by three Baylor doubleplays. He also recorded two strikeouts in key situations late in the ball game.

Bruening to fill Jordan's shoes

DALLAS (AP) — Linebacking job. Dallas Coach Tom Landry, operating at his unpredictable best, announced Friday that former Outland Trophy winner Randy White of Maryland will not be the heir apparent to Lee Roy Jordan's middle tabbed outside linebacker Bob Bruening to become only the third middle linebacker the Cowboys have ever had. Jerry Tubbs, now a coach on the team, was Dallas' middle linebacker in the expansion years of the early 1960s. White, an All-American and the Cowboys' No. 1 draft choice in 1975, will be moved to the left outside or strongside linebacker position occupied by Bruening last season.

There was a possibility of White moving into the line but we felt we did not want to attempt to replace two quality linebackers (Jordan and White) at the same time," said Landry. "Strongside linebacker will be a familiar position to White because he played a similar position throughout his college career at Maryland. Bruening is a natural middle linebacker anyway." Bruening played middle linebacker at Arizona State. Landry said "Bruening will make the adjustment into the middle more quickly than Randy would have." "So, that leaves White and Mike Hegman on the strongside and D. D. Lewis and Thomas Henderson on the weakside," said Landry. "They'll be competing through the summer for jobs. White also will be available to backup Bruening in the middle if something happens. If we were to pickup a couple of top linebackers in the draft things might change a little. But as of now, this setup looks the best for us."

White is one of the strongest physical players in the National Football League and played down linemen, linebacker and on the Cowboy specialty units

Defeat doesn't dim Tanner's enthusiasm

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Manager Chuck Tanner leaped back in his office chair, took a relaxed puff on a long, choice cigar and exhaled optimism about his Pittsburgh Pirates. "I'm very happy about the way Duffy Dyer hit the ball, the way Willie Stargell swung the bat and the way Jerry Reuss pitched. I saw good things, very much so," he said in a smooth, unruffled tone. Wait a minute. Time out. Tanner did and said those things Thursday on a cold, rainy, dismal afternoon that saw the Pirates pounded 12-4 and somewhat embarrassed by the St. Louis Cardinals in the season opener for both sides.

Tanner also reflected on how he felt in his first game with a Pirate team he'd dreamed of managing since retiring as a player. "I was excited. I had a tingling feeling in my stomach. Coming back has a lot of personal meaning for me. I don't know how many of my friends and relatives were out there in the stands," added Tanner.

TANNER'S TEAM had just made three first-inning errors, new relief pitchers Grant Jackson and Terry Forster had faltered and the Pirates, making an attendance push, had looked bad in front of about 36,000 paying customers. Yet there sat Tanner, his new, striped uniform looking as fresh and unrumpled as if it had spent the day on a hanger. When he removed his cap, even his reddish hair was neatly arranged, accented by grey sideburns that would look at home on a U.S. senator. Indeed, Chuck Tanner—a manager whose baseball feats include

Easter weather, fishing look good

BY GREG AKINS

With the windless and fair weather we have been blessed with the last week, it appears we are headed for a beautiful Easter weekend. It also appears that the fishing is shaping up to be fantastic.

One place to consider if you are planning to wet a hook would be Balmorhea Lake, which is about three miles southeast of Balmorhea. It is fed by two large springs and Sandia Creek, giving it a constant water supply.

The lake is fertile and produces good strings of crappie and channel cat. The black bass fishing is reported to be excellent with some six and seven pound fish being caught.

I NOTICED while reading this month's "Outdoor Life" that Brady Lake, which is located four miles west of Brady, is considered by the state's chief fisheries to be the top "sleeper" bass lake in Texas. According to creel surveys made on state lakes, Brady was out ahead of some of the famous impoundments, including Livingston, Toledo Bend and Sam Rayburn, in number of hours required to catch a bass over six pounds.

Brady, being my hometown, allows me to speak from experience when I say there is good fishing for most varieties of fish on the lake. They also have excellent camping facilities.

Another lake reporting excellent fishing is Oak Creek Lake near Blackwell. The water temperature is now around 62 degrees, and it looks like the spawning season is at hand.

SOME BASS are being caught with bruised tails, which is an indication that they are preparing their spawning beds. Glen Hixon of Midland was there recently and caught bass on almost everything he threw at them. Several of the bass were in the five to six pound range. Cat fishing is good as well, with a 13-pound blue cat brought in by Bill Fall of Odessa.

Lake Spence, near Robert Lee, has really been hot this spring with all varieties biting well, especially the stripers. Stripers, ranging all the way from three pounds to 24 pounds (which is the new lake record), have been taken this spring.

Colorado City Lake is reporting black bass being caught in the five to six pound range, and catfish up in the 10 to 15 pound class.

LA's Yeager warns Cincy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Dodgers' Steve Yeager sounded as if the days were dwindling into September.

"If we don't finish ahead of the Reds, it won't be because we get beat, but just because we run out of time," the Los Angeles catcher said.

His statement came just after the Dodgers had opened their 1977 baseball campaign with a 5-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

The two California rivals, off Friday, resume their series Saturday night at Dodger Stadium. Doug Rau is scheduled to pitch for Los Angeles, with Jim Barr trying to give the Giants and new Manager Joe Altobelli their first 1977 victory.

Following the opening-day triumph, the Dodgers mentioned the Cincinnati Reds almost more than they did the team they'd just whipped, the Giants.

They were probably still smarting from the past two years, when they finished far back of the Reds in the National League West.

"Who said we couldn't catch the Reds this year?" asked a voice from the back of the Dodger clubhouse.

"And it took us only one day," Yeager yelled back. Don Sutton, who four-hit the Giants to give rookie Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda his first victory.

Following his fine debut, Sutton, too, was talking about the Reds.

"The key to this team's success is pitching," he said, "because we know we'll get the runs."

"There are 25 reasons we can beat Cincinnati this year — and all of them are right in the clubhouse. 'I'll also say," Sutton continued, "there aren't too many people around who can beat us too often. We have no superstars, but we sure have a lot of outstanding players."

Amarillo to launch defense of pennant

By The Associated Press

Amarillo opens defense of its Texas League championship Tuesday as baseball's oldest minor league resumes action.

The Texas League was born in 1888 with various interruptions from time to time. The Eastern Division will have Tulsa, Jackson, Miss., Shreveport and Arkansas while the Western Division has Amarillo, El Paso, San Antonio and Midland.

The season will be split into halves. The first half ends June 25th. The winners in each division will play each other in a best of three series for the right to advance to the Texas League championship playoff. Of course, if a team winds both ends of the season it automatically advances.

The changes this year saw the Tulsa Drillers come from Lafayette, La.

The Tuesday openers find El Paso at Amarillo, San Antonio at Midland and Shreveport at Arkansas. Tulsa is at Jackson on Wednesday night.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

You are encouraged to attend Midland Community Development Program, public hearing number two.

All citizens are invited to attend the second public hearing to be held in the Council Chamber, City Hall, April 12, 1977 at 3:45 p.m. This public hearing will be for final consideration on Midland's Third Year Community Development Program beginning October 1, 1977. The Council will determine the programs that Midland will enter into during the third year. Approximately $946,000 is available for the third year. A Draft Community Development application and Housing assistant Plan are on file and may be obtained at the City Secretary's Office, room 204, City Hall between 8-5 p.m. Monday thru Friday.

Vida Blue keeps mum

OAKLAND (AP) — Vida Blue returned to the Oakland A's, as promised, for a Friday workout but declined to discuss his situation.

The left-handed pitcher, 18-13 last season, had been scheduled to pitch Saturday's season opener against the Minnesota Twins.

But he left the team's spring training camp in Arizona on Tuesday and A's owner Charles O. Finley placed him on the disqualified list and said Blue would be fined $500 a day until he returned and would be suspended if he didn't show up by Friday.

Rocky ignores revenge

NEW YORK (AP) — Fighting is a business not a sentimental journey for Rocky Mosley Jr., and he plans to keep it that way today even though he's fighting a man who knocked out his father two years ago.

"It ain't gonna be no grudge fight," said the 20-year-old Mosley of his fight against Mike Colbert in a meeting of unbeaten middleweights Saturday at Miami Beach, Fla. "It's between Colbert and me."

"I don't feel nothin'," Mosley said of his father's two-round knockout by Colbert Feb. 6, 1975, in Colbert's hometown of Portland, Ore.

"My father never was in shape and was just in there for fun (against Colbert)," Mosley said over the telephone from a gym in his hometown of Las Vegas.

According to The Ring magazine, only once before has a professional fighter fought a father and son. Jersey Joe Walcott, the former heavyweight champion, knocked out Phil Johnson in three rounds in 1936 and then knocked out Harold Johnson in three rounds in 1950. Harold Johnson later became light heavyweight champion.

Rocky Mosley Sr. retired last year after a spotty career that began in the early 1960s. He was knocked out twice in two rounds and once in three in four fights in 1975.

"He had a couple of fights in Canada last year and is just relaxing now," Mosley Jr. said. He also said he saw his father, who lives in Seattle, fight four times but did not see the bout against Colbert. He also said he has worked out with his father.

"He was my first sparring partner," Mosley said. "He was pretty tough and used to bang me around." "The father wasn't as dedicated a fighter as the son is," said Stan Tischler, who managed Rocky Sr. at the end of his career and now manages Rocky Jr.

Mosley earned his bout against Colbert in the United States Boxing Championships semifinals by getting off the floor in the third round to stop Johnny Baldwin in the fourth at the Marion State Correctional Institution in Ohio. Mosley' 16th victory and 10th knockout in an unblemished career was worth $10,000 and he will earn another $15,000 for his nationally televised bout against Colbert.
