Digging out chore begins in Monahans

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

MONAHANS — "Our first priority right now is to dig out," Monahans city manager Jack Forga said.

Monahans residents this morning began the process of assessing damage and cleaning up after two tornadoes hit the city Tuesday af-

Twenty-two homes, including four mobile homes, were completely destroyed. Another 25 sustained major damage and 32 homes received minor damage, Dell Lynch, a representative of the American Red Cross, said today.

Lynch reported to the Midland Red Cross about noon today. He said a Red Cross disaster relief office will be set up in Monahans immediately and more workers will be brought in.

"Food, clothing and shelter are our immediate concerns," Roy Dahl of the Midland Red Cross said.

Tax credit idea part of plan

WASHINGTON (AP) - President federal income tax credits to compensate lower income families who will be hit hard by the President's tough new energy plan, energy chief James R. Schlesinger said today.

As the President was putting final touches on his nationally televised energy speech to a joint session of Congress tonight at 8 CST, Schlesinger said a "substantial" credit would be tacked onto the already existing $35-per-person income tax

Hospital bill moves along

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN - The House Intergovernmental Affairs Committee Tuesday spent less than a minute approving legislation allowing creation of the Midland County Hospital District.

There were no witnesses on SB 1210. Sen. Pete Snelson, Midland, introduced the measure that also provides for administration and financing of the district.

The House version of the bill was approved by the committee. Rep. Tom Craddick, Midland, is the House sponsor.

tornadoes spread. "I could list a bunch (of people who helped), but I'm afraid I'd miss someone, Forga said. Law enforcement officers came from throughout the area, including a sheriff's deputy and several Department of Public Safety units from Midland. Also on the scene were several Texas Rangers and National Guard units from Monahans and Andrews.

Forga said the city had not had problems with looters during the night. A curfew was established and law enforcement officers provided "pretty tight security," he said.

Among the first tasks in the clean up effort is to help the merchants get valuables cleared out of damaged stores so that the curfew can be lifted, Forga said. He said he hopes the curfew can be cancelled tonight.

Fifty hospital patients and 28 nursing home patients were transferred to Odessa and Kermit. Those whose homes were destroyed or damaged were housed by citizens of Monahans, Forga said.

None of the patients in the hospital was injured.

Dahl said that office offered food, blankets and cooking services to Monahans but was informed that the city's needs were taken care of.

Dahl said a national Red Cross disaster worker is in Monahans assessing needs.

The Salvation Army set up two mobile kitchens and worked with church groups to find places for displaced residents, Forga said.

By this morning, sufficient aid had arrived for Forga to request nonresidents to stay away from the city "unless they're called on."

He said he anticipated a problem (Continued on Page 4A)

White funnel hit, skipped

By JIM STEINBERG

MONAHANS - There were dark clouds in the western sky about noon Tuesday that caught the eye of Mrs. Helen Lambert as she was feeding her

"It looked pretty bad and then I could see this funnel," she said late Tuesday afternoon, pausing for moment to look at the wreckage of Ward Memorial Hospital, across the street from her home.

'It seemed to hover out there for a long time, just kind of a long, skinny black column," she said.

"There were some menacing clouds south of town a while ago, and I got to wondering what they were doing. I peeked out the front door and thought there was a fire. There was a tremendous column of dust...then I realized it was a tornado."

It was that second, whitish funnel coming from the south that was believed by many to be the only tornado to hit Monahans Tuesday. although at least three columns were sighted in the area.

When Mike Mitchell first saw it he "didn't give it much thought." Thinking it was nothing but a whirlwind of dust, he continued tinkering with his motorcycle south of Monahans outside his trailer home.

But as it approached, Mitchell said he sensed this was no ordinary "dust devil" and abandoned his motorcycle work for a flat spot on the ground.

The churning column yanked the motorcycle up 10 feet and deposited it as a twisted hunk of metal, he said.

From there it moved on a northeasterly course to the city, tearing a few roofs, uprooting trees and breaking off branches.

It then lifted a house-sized trailer belonging to E. J. Dyer into the middle of the street. The walls, roof and contents of the trailer were scattered over a lot 25 yards by about 15 yards.

Then the twister lifted off the ground some, tore into a few roofs and trees before touching the ground again at St. Paul's Lutheran Church, leaving little in tact.

Afterwards it lifted off the ground again, and drifted to the high population density center section of

About 12:30 p.m., the whirlwind described by Mitchell had become a full-fledged funnel. When it touched down again, "it kind of flattened out at the base and just stayed for a while," M. A. Eckerman said. Eckerman had been watching the path of the storm since it left the St. Paul's Church, which was across the street from his house. "It was suddenly very still," Mrs. Lambert said as she recalled the moments after she realized the cloud near her house was a tornado.

"I ran in the house and opened all the windows." Grabbing her child, she took refuge in the bathroom

"There was this tremendously loud roar like it came from a million miles away, but I knew it was right here,'

Mrs. Lambert said. "The suction was so great it yanked my hands," she said.

Across the street, at Ward Memorial Hospital, patients had been moved into the hallways, and at a nearby bank, people huddled into the

The tornado cut into houses and businesses along a path 200 to 300 yards wide and several blocks long.

A trailer parked by one house was smashed into the front of another some 40 yards away.

Residents gathered to the center area of their homes as what was described as a white cloud struck homes between 12:30 and 12:40 p.m.

The funnel lifted up and drifted out on the northeast part of town before it then, according to some reports, doubled back, striking a restaurant, several gas stations, a motel and a gasoline storage facility. One 62-year-old resident said the tornado "destroyed in three minutes what took me 15 years to pay for."

But reflecting the spirit of Monahans he said, "I've got too many friends to give up, though.

Gross National Product rises 5.2 per cent, best gain in year

WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation's Gross National Product increased at an annual rate of 5.2 per cent in the first quarter of 1977, the largest gain in a year and a signal of an improving economy, the government announced today.

The GNP indicator, which measures the market value of the goods and services produced in the country, might have been bigger still except for the severe winter weather, the Commerce Department's Bureau of Economic Analysis said.

Arthur had just returned from a three day sales trip and was feeling pretty pleased with himself. I decided this was my opportunity to prove a point. To the surprise of everyone in the room, I strode confidently over to my telephone and began to dial a customer in Greenville.

"Is he really going to phone Long Distance?" I heard someone whisper to Arthur.

If he does," Arthur chuckled, "just wait'll the boss sees his phone bill! Long Distance is fine for urgent business, but if you want to reach customers, you gotta do it eyeball to eyeball."

Then I started to talk. "Roger!" I said. "This is Bill at Acme Supply. Yeah, good talking to you, too. Listen, we got a special promotion I think you'll be interested in ... "

The people around me were amazed. I wrote up a big order in just a few minutes. I didn't tell my co-workers, of course, that I had been out to Greenville a couple months back. And that I was simply keeping in touch by phone between visits.

I knew I had my co-workers where I wanted them. So I made another Long Distance call. And another. And another.

A complete triumph! When I had finished, everyone rushed to my desk. "We had no idea Long Distance could be so effective!" Arthur exclaimed. "But your phone bill-" "My phone bill comes to a lot less than your sales trip," I interrupted. Then I showed him how Long Distance not only cut down on my travel expenses, but gave me more time to concentrate on important details, making my work day more efficient

Soon everyone had gone back to their desks, instilled with a new appreciation for the value of Long Distance. Then, a few minutes later by the water cooler, I overheard Larry tell his secretary he was going to dictate some letters.

Confidently, I strode over to my telephone. This was my opportunity to prove another point...

Senate finance panel retains business tax spur

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - The Senate Finance Committee Tuesday refused President Carter's request that it delete from the President's tax package $2.4 billion a year in special tax incentives for business hiring and investment.

Carter had asked that the business tax incentives be shelved along with his proposed $50-per-person tax rebate. In an abrupt about face, the President turned his back on the two

The Finance Committee agreed to kill the rebate as did the full Senate, in

While support for the rebate was lukewarm at best in Congress, business groups have lobbied for-cefully for inclusion of the tax benefits for them. And the Carter Ad-ministration, eager to please business, was not fighting especially hard Tuesday to assure that the benefits would be killed.

Instead of sending Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal to Capitol Hill to lobby for its position, or even Assistant Treasury Secretary Laurence N. Woodworth, the government's top tax analyst, the Administration kept them on hand to help prepare for the President's energy message Wednesday and send Woodworth's deputy, Emil M. Sunley,

After hearing Sunley's arguments for killing the business tax provisions along with the rebate, the Finance Committee voted to drop the rebate

The business tax provisions would offer companies a choice between a new "jobs tax credit" and an increase to 12 per cent from the present 10 per cent in the tax refund, known as the investment tax credit, that they receive for each dollar they spend on new capital equipment.

The jobs credit would give employers a tax refund of 25 per cent of the first $4,200 in wages paid to each newly hired worker after the employer's payroll increased by 3 per cent over the previous year's level.

Following the Senate Finance

Committee's decision not to support deletion of the business tax provision, Sens. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.) and Dale Bumpers (D-Ark.) offered an amendment on the Senate floor to kill the provision, saying it was unfair to give business these benefits when individuals were being denied the Supporters and opponents of the amendment said they were not certain how it would fare. "A lot depends on the mail members receive," a Kennedy aide said. Other provisions of the Finance Committee's bill would:

-Simplify tax calculations for most taxpayers and reduce taxes for some by eliminating the current minimum and percentage standard deductions. They would be replaced by a flat standard deduction of $3,200 for married couples and $2,200 for single individuals. This compares with the maximum standard deduction under current law of $2,800 for joint returns and $2,100 for individuals. The standard deduction is used by taxpayers who don't itemize their deductions.

-Postpone for one year the provisions of last fall's Tax Reform Act that eliminated tax exemptions for some sick pay and some income earned abroad by U.S. citizens.

-Extend through 1977 certain temporary individual and corporate income tax cuts enacted last year.

The House already has passed a somewhat similar bill, containing the $50-per-person rebate.

Nixon-GSA vying for famed tapes

WASHINGTON (AP) - Richard M. Nixon's lawyers are preparing to tell the Supreme Court that the former president should control White House tapes and millions of pages of documents that record the actions of his administration.

After hearing arguments today from lawyers for Nixon and for the government, the court will decide sometime before its current term ends in June who owns the nearly 900 reels of tape and 42 million pages of

THINKING" with ODOM PHILIPPIANS 4:8

It has been months since this scribe has had anything to say about the "WOMEN'S LIBERATION MOVEMENT." I see that they are still having "movement" and in some states making headway while in other states some people have enough sense to turn down such a stupid bill

I was asked the other day by one of our faithful readers, in a gest of course, if I still felt as I did several months ago when I wrote a series of articles on the subject. My reply to him was, "Yes it is. I feel very strongly against any movement that is so in op-position to the Word of God Almighty." When I read where various denominations are appointing wome "officers" and women "ministers" and the such like, am made even more aware that they have no regard for the Holy Bible. Denominational doctrines, which produce religious division in the first place, are quite apparent when they continue to disregard the scriptures by appointing women to places of equality in a religion which professes to honor Jesus Christ. You will notice that I said "which professes to honor Jesus Christ." Naturally every denominational church in the world has a right to appoint any one to any position in their religious institution, because the Lord Jesus Christ has never endorsed all of the various denominations in the first place. Now, I know to the "thin skinned" that is a little harsh, but it is

There is not a man alive in the whole world who can read where there was a female apostle in the first century. There was never a female evangelist in the first century. If you read your Bible you will learn that elders of each local church in the times of the apostles were men, and they were MARRIED men at that! The Bible plainly teaches that the MAN is to RULE his own house. (1 Tim. 3:4,5) This was written to qualify men to serve as overseers of local churches of Christ. Even the DEACONS were to RULE their children and their own houses well. (1 Tim. 3:11,12) Women dealing in public with men were instructed to learn in silence," and if they wanted to know anything they were to "ask their husbands at home. "They were also instructed" to keep silence in the churches." (1 Cor.14:34) They are also instructed to "be under obedience!" The Holy Bible declares in language plain enough for even the women libbers to understand. "But I would have you know that the head of every man is Christ, and they head of every woman is the man. '(1 Cor. 11:3) So, dear heart, since the word of God has not changed in the last few why should I? Better THINK about it!

Telephone service was knocked out by the tornado but had been restored within Monahans this morning. It was still difficult, however, to call into the City of Monahans from outside.

Electric lines were also out, but at least some service had been restored by this morning, the Department of Public Safety said.

In spite of the damage to Ward Memorial Hospital, the emergency room stayed open to treat the injured. Dr. Gordon Palmer said about 15 people were treated. Most were for minor injuries, with a broken shoulder being the most serious injury resulting from the tornado.

mild heart attacks, he said. Those who had to be hospitalized were moved to Kermit and Odessa.

Several people also were treated for

Among those emergency workers sent to the city were 20 Odessa Emergency Medical Systems personnel and ambulances, five police patrol units and 20 officers. Street maintenance equipment and staff from Odessa, along with the city manager and city council, also went to the scene.

After arriving in Monahans, the emergency vehicles were temporarily stalled because the power failure prevented service stations from pumping gasoline. A truck stop in Wickett, five miles away, provided the needed fuel.

The most damaging of the two tornadoes wrecked eastern portions of Monahans. The other was on the western edge of the city, just off U.S. 80, Forga said.

An entire row of business buildings on Fourth Street, directly across from the hospital, was destroyed.

streets were extensively damaged.

Pirst Baptist and St. Paul's Lutheran churches also were heavily damaged.

Schools in Monahans reopened today, according to George Cullender, superintendent of Monahans Independent School District. Cullender said Edwards Elementary School, located in the southeast part of town which sustained the worst damage from the tornado, was the only school hit. Minor damage included broken window lights, air conditioners torn from the roof, playground equipment and a fence.

The teachers and administrators did a good job with the kids," said begins process of digging out Cullender. "They kept the children well protected. The children were well trained and very orderly. They were taken out of the classrooms and into the halls where they were seated along the walls."

The superintendent added that only last week all the schools conducted a

Tim Greenwell of the National Weather Service at Midland likened the tornado's aftermath here to that of a hurricane.

"I've been in a lot of hurricanes," Greenwell said, as he overlooked the rubble at the shopping center. "This is the same type of damage, except there is no driftwood.'

His boss, meteorologist Jim Lunney, probably expressed the sentiment of the townspeople. "About the only good thing you can say is that nobody was hurt" very seriously, Lunney said. It was a wonder. Water well serviceman R. C.

Murray first sighted the tornado south of town. It swirled into town and upon an almost disbelieving and startled citizenry.

"To me, it moved awfully slow," he said a few hours later. "It seemed like to me that it would never get out of town. .

"Boy, it was a booger," Murray said. "I'll tell you right now. Oh, it was pretty hairy, I'll tell you. Murray and his belongings were unscathed by the Monahans tornado. E. J. Dyer didn't see the tornado.

He only heard about it. But his 10-by-55-foot mobile home was torn apart and left bare - almost like an oversized skateboard. He and his wife Bessie were into the seventh day of their fishing trip at Lake Spence when they got word of the tornado. He didn't seem at all angry over his destroyed house.

"That's just one of those things that can't be helped," Dyer said. His dwelling was among the first to be destroyed when the tornado landed in the south part of town and then headed to the northeast. M. A. Eckerman and his wife Inez saw the tornado coming and then skip over their house.

About the same time, another tornado was overhead. But this one with the big "tail" bypassed in Monahans and headed west, where it rammed into an oil camp.

But the "whirlwind" of a tornado headed straight toward the hospital. "In fact," Mrs. Ford later recalled in calmness, "it was detached from hospital's west wing and began tearing into the roof and walls and shattering glass.

Minutes before the tornado struck the hospital, nurses and other staff members moved patients into the hallways and covered them with kitchen to stay with the nurses," he "It was so dark and dusty, you couldn't see what it was doing until it passed," Neace said. "I thought that was the end right there." He weathered the storm, but the glass windows in the store were shattered and the roof was damaged. Next door, Dr. James L. Cam's office building was extensively damaged. The roof had been torn away, and tile partitions had collapsed. The office had been closed for lunch when the tornado struck.

"It's a mess," commented Cam's wife, Tessie, as she was helping with the cleaning-up and moving-out chores. "I've never seen a tornado in my life, so this is enough," she said. Jeannine Acker, insurance clerk to Cam, a doctor of internal medicine, was at home for lunch when the tornado hit the clinic.

"Oh, boy," she said. "I couldn't believe it. . . . I didn't know I didn't have an office to go to.'

Jack Cox, owner of a coin-operated laundry business at what had been the shopping center, lost only the building. His washing machines and dryers were not damaged.

'Outside from losing a roof and a wall," he said, "we're all right, I guess. Nobody was hurt.'

Several houses just east of the shopping center were extensively Margie B. Wilson and her 25-yearold son Jeppie Wilson lived in one of those houses. The tornado removed the roof of the block-tile house.

Minutes before that, however, Wilson had walked outside the house to see what was brewing. It was already hailing. "And I could see two of them

Abruptly, he stopped the car there. 'And I could see the dust and debris flying," Wilson said. He said he "pulled" his diabetic mother "out of in the ditch, and fell on top of her.

Lawmen from Midland, Odessa, Kermit and elsewhere assisted the Monahans police and the Ward County sheriff's deputies in cordoning off the tornado-damaged areas.

Soldiers from the Texas National Guard here and airmen from a radar outpost of the U.S. Air Force's Strategic Air Command also were helping with directing traffic, evacuating buildings, and in cleaning up the debris

'We had too many sight-seers who were hampering the operation," Forga said.

Nevertheless, the "mopping up" after the storm was well underway. Electric power to the damaged areas was being restored. And Forga gave assurances that

Monahans would recover from the disaster on the strength and will of its people. He said he would not seek federal or state aid. However, another form of aid was forthcoming: Insurance adjusters were already at work Tuesday afternoon - long before that sunset and the radiance of the rainbow hours after the storm.

WASHINGTON - President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire. despite the war he has on his hands, wants his American-built C-130 loaded with Coca-Cola before it is delivered to him.

"Things must go better with said one stunned administration official in confirming that "Mobutu has been asking us for a lot of Coke." The official added that the C-130 is the most likely delivery wagon but not necessarily the only one. Another government official said Mobutu intends to spend $60,000 on Coke and recently notified the American government of that intention through the U.S. embassy in Kinshasa.

The United States is sending Zaire what is officially labeled "nonlethal" military support in the conflict that broke out March 8 when a force of former Katanga gendarmes crossed over from Angola into Shaba (formerly Katanga) Province.

Morocco has sent 1,500 troops to help the Mobutu government repel the intruders, and France has sent in military advisers, Until recently, there was little, if any, actual fighting.

War among things that | Carter wants centrifuge plants

By THOMAS O'TOOLE The Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON - President Carter is expected to ask Congress to construct four enrichment plants that would produce uranium for electricity by a new method that has been secretly developed for almost 20 years at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory in Tennessee.

Administration sources said the President will announce in his energy policy message Wednesday his wish to build four gas centrifuge plants that would cost an estimated $4.4 billion and produce, over 30 years, enough enriched uranium to run 90 atomic power plants of 1 million kilowatts each during that period.

To be built over the next 10 years at locations still not determined, the centrifuge plants would serve to back up Carter's promise that the United States will continue to supply the world's enriched uranium needs in exchange for other nations' waiving their rights to use the plutonium fuel generated in the burned-out uranium.

The indefinite postponement of plutonium use is at the heart of Carter's policy to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons. The uranium that the United States supplies the world from its three enrichment plants cannot be used to make atomic bombs. The Plutonium that can be extracted

Since World War II, uranium has been enriched in the United States at factories in Oak Ridge, Paducah, Ky. and Portsmouth, Ohio by a technique called gas diffusion. The same technique is used in the Soviet Union, France and Great Britain, the only other countries of the world with known enrichment plants.

Gas diffusion involves pumping uranium hexafluoride gas through thousands of membrane-like barriers, which trap the heavier isotopes of uranium called U-238 and allow the lighter isotoptes called U-235 to pass through. The heavier isotopes do not fission and cannot produce electricity. The lighter ones fission and pro-

The matching network, installed completely inside the vehicle, excites the entire car into becoming your antenna.

Applied to most vehicles, forward and rear communication distances exceed those for 109" and shorter whips .

This is because the antenna is directive and hence receives less outside background noise. With lower receiver noise weaker signals can be "read" by the CBer

The antenna may be mounted in: Standard Cars (all sizes), Station Wagons, Vans, Pick-Ups, Dump trucks, 18 Wheelers,

The antenna will work on vehicles having a metal "skin" Its use is not recommended on uncovered vehicles (such as Jeeps), cars having fiberglass tops with no underlying metal. or convertibles.

Legitimate complaint

James Roberts, publisher of the Andrews County News and a number of other Texas newspapers, has a seemingly legitimate gripe against the City of Midland for the treatment he received as a result of an overparking violation at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

In his Drifting Sands column appearing on the front page of the Andrews County News, Roberts addresses a letter to Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo, in which he expresses his feelings in a right forceful fashion. He did, however, commend one courteous police officer who volunteered his help. Roberts also was nice enough to offer suggestions for improving a bad situation.

Roberts, in his letter, called to the mayor's attention the fact that he (Roberts) always has appreciated the mayor's "uttendistaste for governmental red tape and have applauded your efforts to illuminate the frustration and indignation associated with dealing with various branches of the federal government.

"We were among the first to publish in full your now classic reply to the request for parking space at Midland Air Terminal."

"I know that you share with me a zealous ambition to stamp out engulfing reels of red tape wherever found," Roberts continued, "and I found it in your own bailiwick."

He then proceeded to state his case in no uncertain terms.

Roberts said he had to make a rush trip to Dallas last Wednesday and that he circled the inside of the parking area at Midland Regional Air Terminal for 20 minutes trying to find a parking place. After the second call for his plane's departure, he gave up the search, returned the parking permit to the attendant, and, "in desperation, parked at one of the meters on the south end of the terminal building."

Upon his return from Dallas six hours later, he said that he fully expected to find his windshield plastered with over-parking violation tickets, and had resigned himself to paying them.

Instead, he found that his car had been towed to Midland on instruction by the police department.

His blood pressure lowered somewhat on the long cab drive to Midland "by reasoning that parking is a problem at the airport and that Midland citizens are paying taxes to support the facility. The fact that area residents of twelve counties support the airlines that pay the fees necessary to pay for the airport are of minor consequence."

So, he paid $6 as he departed the cab at Midland's Department of Public Safety Building. And that's where the red tape began.

A young officer, he said, refused to accept a check, personal or business for two parking tickets and the $12.50 towing charge.

After a lengthy discussion, the officer finally consented to accept a check for the parking tickets. but insisted on cash for the towing charge. Roberts then pulled a "safety-valve" $100 bill from his billfold and offered it in lieu of check. It was refused because the station had no change. After this Roberts carried his luggage and walked to the Midland Hilton where he got five twenties for the $100 bill. He then trudged back to the police station and offered a twenty for the tow charge. You guessed it ... it, too, was refused. There was no change for it either.

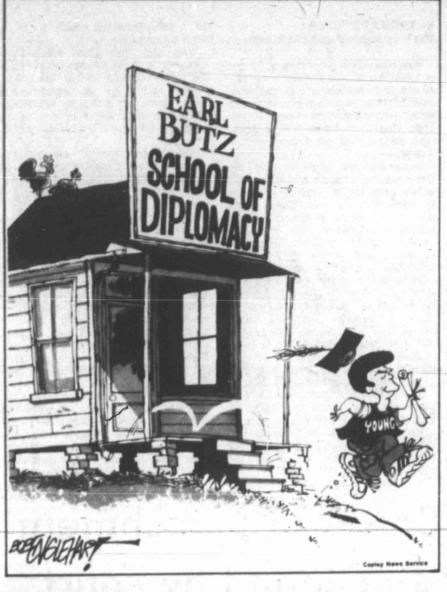

Roberts hit the ceiling about that time, with justification. He said it is one thing to demand cash and another to have no method of handling it. The young officer neither volunteered to have someone with transportation go after change, or to take him downtown to break the $20. Fortunately, Roberts continued, a "Sergeant Burney overheard the outburst and stepped forward to help. He seemed blessed with an overabundance of common sense

... He not only volunteered to break the $20 but to haul me to the city's auto pound. I recovered my car with the rear license plate torn off and drove away three hours later than I had intended."

Roberts said that he realizes that parking headaches will increase at MAT during the construction period, "but I hope you will entertain a couple of suggestions. Might not the pound be established at Air Terminal? And if the policy of demanding cash continues, couldn't you arrange for some sensible method of handling it?"

If Roberts' complaint isn't justified, we don't know what is. Surely his suggestions will receive serious and, hopefully, favorable consideration.

PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE:

Does any person have a right to sunshine?

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — A modest 16-page biweekly magazine is getting special attention on Capitol Hill and among Carter administration energy planners for a recent provocative article on possible legal problems with solar energy.

Question: Does any citizen have a right to sunshine?
Answer: Not always.

That, at least, is the thoughtprovoking conclusion of Gail Boyer Hayes, an attorney with the Environmental Law Institute in Washington.

Her article on the subject was published recently in "Environmental Action" (and reprinted by Xerox Press, as this sub-industry is known here).

Hayes is concerned by the accelerating public interest in solar energy equipment, especially the presently available units that can be mounted on roofs to heat water and rooms.

The problem is that no citizen is protected by laws or building codes that guarantee access to sunshine, either before or after equipment is installed.

Among the main factors: shade from a taller building constructed next door, shade caused by the growth of a neighbor's tree, and neighborhood architectural covenants that prevent installation of rooftop equipment that your neighbors might consider as unsightly as a purple and yellow paint job.

Hayes notes that no city in the United States has a building code that would prevent new residential or commercial construction from casting a shadow over nearby buildings.

"You have no inherent right to receive sunshine, even if you have an expensive solar collector," Hayes concluded.

Hayes notes that Britain grants that right to a citizen whose dwelling has received sunlight for at least 27 years, and Japan recently blocked construction of a high-rise because it would have plunged an adjacent building into shadow.

Other problems discovered in researching this issue include local building codes that unintentionally often prevent new construction from being oriented on lots to take advantage of southern exposure, utilities that have retaliated economically against home owners who rely more on solar equipment, and lending institutions that are not convinced the extra initial cost is a good investment.

Some members of Congress, newly aware of these problems, have introduced legislation to grant citizens a legal right to sunshine.

But this approach is considered wrong by energy planners in the government. In recent conversations they have expressed concern that the legal language is too vague to deal with a highly complex problem.

"We need a steady, rapid and rational progression on solar technology," said one aide to energy chief James R. Schlesinger. "We have a long way to go on the

"We have a long way to go on the technology side, and any laws that try today to establish the rules of the game will only make rational progress that much more difficult."

Hayes and others envision a wild

Hayes and others envision a wild rush to erect buildings and install solar collecting equipment solely to stake out a "right" to sunshine if these presently proposed federal laws are passed or used as models by local governments.

But the point is timely: more serious thought must be given now to the legal problems associated with solar energy so the solutions can keep pace with the technology.

President Carter was 'queasy' about $50 tax rebate

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — After deciding to abandon the $50 tax rebate, President Carter confessed to his close advisers that he was always "queasy" about the scheme and now felt a terrific burden lifted from his shoulders — an ill omen indeed for academic economists.

The rebate was the creature not only of Dr. Charles Schultze, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, but of his profession generally. While Schultze backed the rebate until the bitter end, Mr. Carter decided to follow the business world's consensus and his own instincts. Presidential aides who thought their boss too stubborn to abandon his own baby did not perceive that he never acknowledged fatherhood of an offspring pressed on him by the economists.

Actually, Mr. Carter emerged from his presidential campaign suspicious of academic economists. But during confused transition days, persuasive Charley Schultze talked him into the rebate. Business-oriented officials in the administration held their fire until the rebate faced serious trouble in the Senate.

Senate.

Budget director Bert Lance opened the internal battle two weeks ago, reporting to the President that killing the rebate would be elixir for both the stock market and business confidence in Jimmy Carter. Treasury Secretary

W. Michael Blumenthal waded in at Lance's side against Schultze about three days before the decision was made.

Blumenthal holds a doctorate in economics but thinks more like the business executive (Bendix Corp.) that he was. He warned the President against computerized economic projections measuring the stimulative effect of the rebate's $11.4 billion revenue loss. Moreover, Blumenthal cited personal reports from corporate leaders (such as General Electric's Reginald Jones) to show the economy was doing nicely without the rebate.

One reason Mr. Carter resisted the Lance-Blumenthal advice as long as he did was support given Schultze on the rebate by Vice President Walter Mondale. Insiders believe Mondale has rivaled even Lance in influencing the President, and the rebate abandonment was his first serious setback.

SOFTER SOVIETS?

Talks at the White House Tuesday and Wednesday with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin were interpreted by foreign policymakers as vindication of President Carter's SALT strategy for this reason: Dobrynin's visits were initiated by the Russians, not the Americans.

This may mean the Kremlin feels it overreacted in its rude turndown in Moscow of the Carter arms control proposals, particularly considering popular American support for the President's position. The initiative by Dobrynin also strengthens Mr. Carter against hand-wringing arms control zealots (including some in his own administration) who want a new, softened U.S. proposal without waiting for a Soviet counter-proposal.

Besides resisting this advice, President Carter has definitely not coddled the Russians in general and may end up keeping tough, bluntspoken Malcolm Toon as ambassador in Moscow. Toon, a highly-esteemed professional diplomat, was named ambassador by President Ford and arrived in Moscow Jan. 18 — much to the Kremlin's displeasure.

Averell Harriman, who has alternated between hard and soft toward the Soviets over 35 years, counselled Mr. Carter to dump Toon and instead name a non-doctrinaire businessman who would get, on better with the Russians. That advice seemed likely to be followed until the Moscow meeting. Now, Toon at least is back in the running.

A footnote: The Soviet press broke its official silence on Mac Toon's existence when it reported him present at the SALT negotiations in Moscow — a very faint sign of reduced displeasure with him as ambassador.

LABOR AT THE WHITE HOUSE
Shaky relations between the White House and big labor were not helped when one union chief lectured President Carter in earthy language over lunch April 6. That White House luncheon, attended by top AFL-CIO brass, was opened by Mr. Carter's broad, conciliatory statement. AFL-CIO president George Meany responded by pointedly criticizing the Carter minimum wage proposal as inadequate. That brought on toughtalking George Hardy, president of the Service Employees Union, whose members are directly affected by the minimum wage.

Hardy is reputed for consistently greater density of profanity than anybody else in the labor movement, and he did not spare the President his favorite four-letter word. "Absolutely unacceptable behavior," snapped one high administration official. A union operative, describing Hardy as "an old infantryman," told us "Jimmy must have led a sheltered life" if that bothered him.

Curare sustains patient's paralysis for 72 days

By B. D. COLEN The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - For 72 days, Stanley Wilks, a 44-year-old civilian mathematician for the Army, was kept in a state of suspended animation at George Washington University Hospital here. He was conscious, but unable to move an eye, blink, utter a sound, move a single muscle or breathe without the aid of a mechanical respirator.

Wilks' physicians intentionally paralyzed him with the drug curare, a substance used by some Brazilian Indian tribes on their blowgun darts. Wilks was totally paralyzed by the drug four times longer than any previous GW patient to slow his body

Wilks is now a celebrated GW patient - not only because he is recovering when few thought he would live but also because his hospital bill is so astronomical: between $150,000 and Wilks will not have to pay the bill himself because he belongs to GW's prepaid Health Maintenance Organization. Officials of the HMO said Wilks' bills will cause part of a probable premium increase next year for all of the HMO's members.

Wilks' case also raises the moral question, of how much of the nation's limited health dollars, manpower and resources should be expended on any one individual.

"I was killing an intern a month," said Geelhoed, referring to the fact that each month he would name a new 'Stanley Wilks Memorial Intern" who would do nothing but care for Wilks. The surgeon said he told the staff if we could get him over this. He's a vital entity with four children.

"I told them," Geelhoed added, "I'd take them all to the restaurant of their choosing" when Wilks seemed on the way to recovery. So, on Friday night, between 10 and 20 nurses and physicians will dine at the Rive Gauche in Georgetown at Geelhoed's expense. Neither Geelhoed nor the other physicians treating Wilks know yet what caused the onset of his pancreatitis last November. All they know is "he was as sick as one could be ... He had a pseudo cyst, which means that his pancreas was eating itself and everything around it," said Geelhoed.

Estes parole fate undecided for now

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Billie Sol Estes, the former West Texas promoter and convicted felon, spent more than four hours before a federal parole board Tuesday in an attempt to be removed from supervised parole.

Estes entered the courthouse silently Tuesday and left without commenting on what transpired behind closed doors with the parole board.

There was no indication as to when the board would announce a decision in the case.

Estes was sentenced to federal prison in 1965 for orchestrating a massive fertilizer tank fraud scheme, but was paroled under supervision in 1971 after serving less than half his term.

Jack Bryant, Estes' lawyer, said after the hearing he did not know when the board would make its decision. He had no

The Internal Revenue Service, the Texas Attorney General's office and the FBI are investigating Estes' business activities. The renewed interest in the Abilene resident stems from two suitcases full of documents allegedly removed from Estes' office by Mississippi promoter Don Trull.

Trull, who is not to be confused with the former Baylor University football player with the same name, made the letters, financial statements and canceled checks available to law enforcement officials and The Associated Press. Trull said he officed with Estes in Abilene during the latter part of 1976.

One of the conditions of Estes' parole, beginning July 12, 1971, called for him to refrain from any self-employed or promotional-type activities without specific approval of the parole board.

The hearing was conducted in private with Estes' parole officer Claude Roach keeping reporters at bay in the hallway. Estes' son and daughter-in-law accompanied him to the hearing. The Rev. Floyd Rose arrived shortly after the hearing began and joined reporters in the hallway. Rose, now 38, said he met Estes in Pecos when he (Rose) was 11 and "making speeches" at black churches.

The minister said "He (Estes) just took me in and paid for my education all the way through.'

Rose said he accompanied Estes on several trips around the state before the promoter was arrested in early 1962. However, he said when Estes met with business associates he would 'stay in the hotel and watch TV.'

He said Estes wrote the for-ward for "Money Without Guilt," a book Rose said he wrote and published last year.

Peveto pushed a similar bill through the House in 1975, but it died in the Senate. He then headed a between-sessions study that produced a complete property tax code.

Many regard uniformity in property appraisal for tax purposes as essential to a just system of school finance, since state and local shares of the Foundation School Program are based largely on real estate values.

The school finance bill, pouring $695 million in additional state funds into public education over the next two years, won tentative house approval

Tuesday evening, 108-36, after five days of debate.

It reduces 'local fund assignments'' — each district's share of the Foundation School Program by a total of $357 million over the coming two school years. Included is $73 million that must be returned to property owners in reduced taxes in 1978-79.

Equalization aid, designed to reduce the gap between rich and poor districts, would be increased from $100 million to $208 million over the next two

The bill also increases allotments for routine operating expenses, buses and driver education. It increases the number of teachers for kindergarten through third grade and reduces the school year from 180 to 174 days.

Snators passed on Tuesday a medical malpractice insurance bill different in several key respects from the "compromise" bill approved by the House, which now must decide what to do with it.

The bill places a $500,000 ceiling on malpractice awards, except for amounts to compensate a victim for medical and custodial expenses. Senators added a $100,000 ceiling on "pain and suffering" recoveries.

They also voted to allow judges to reduce awards by House members passed, 132-8, and sent to the the amount a victim has received or will receive Senate a bill legalizing the sale and use of Laetrile, a AUSTIN, Tex. Twenty-four character witnesses testified Tuesday morning for Green, including a tiny, 76-year-old black woman who stopped the show.

Mrs. Josie Derry, dressed all in black and wearing several crosses and other jewelry, shuffled into the courtroom and had to be helped to the witness chair by Green's lawyer, Bob Smith.

Smith stood by her during part of the questioning because she is hard of hearing.

She told of all of the civic allairs she has worked in without pay. Palestine recently held a Josie Derry Day in her honor, she said.

Counselors must understand rape

By LANA CUNNINGHAM Understanding the myths behind rape and what actually occurs during a rape are necessary when counseling rape

Karen V. Duggan with the Texas Rape Prevention and Control Project in Austin spoke at the workshop for community mental health/mental retardation centers held Tuesday in the Midland Hilton

"Rape laws today are pretty much what they were 600 years ago," she said, explaining that rape was considered a crime of property. If the girl was single, she was considered her father's property, if married her

The myth that if a woman fights her attacker, she will not be raped is not true. Duggan cited one case in which a 68year-old El Paso woman fought and kept from being raped. But, she almost died from the 18 siab wounds, broken bones and concussion she sustained in the fight. Many women do not survive. Duggan added.

Another myth that a woman asks for it (the rape) by the way they dress, talk, walk, places they go and occupation are disproved by rape statistics.

"Who determines what is sexually attractive?" Duggan questioned. "Women in this society are encouraged to be as sexually attractive as possible."

In states where treatment programs are available for convicted rapists, the men say they raped because the girl was available-not because of the way she dressed or walked, according to Duggan.

"This is a crime of violence where there is the desire to degrade, control and humiliate the woman," she explained.

Among group rapes where at least two men were involved. 90 per cent were planned ahead of time. In cases involving only one man, 60 per cent were planned in advance, according to Duggan. Following the tone of the myth that women "ask for it," Duggan said there is a tendency to shift the blame of the act from the man to the woman, even among the counselors.

'Even if I wore very little clothing, went drinking in bars a and attracted attention to myself, that man is still responsible for his crime," she explained.

More than half the rapes reported in Texas occur inside the victim's home, she reported to show that women don't, "ask

Statistics from the Federal Bureau of Investigation in 1975 show that 75 per cent of the rapes occur between strangers, and Duggan explained the high ratio to the fact that women are being pushed to report rapes. It is less threatening to report it if it was with someone the woman did not know, she added. In children's cases, 88 per cent of the time people did know each

After viewing a film which showed a dramatization of a rape, Duggan said she was trying to get across the point that no matter how many times a counselor hears the victim's story, there are always "whys" in that counselor's mind. By seeing the film, the counselors may be better able to understand why the victim acted the way she did, whithout asking any "whys."

Counselors also must understand that rape means different things to people of different countries. Duggan cited one case in Houston where a woman from Jordan was studying nursing and she was raped. She told the counselors that for a Jordanian woman to lose her virginity before marriage can be devastating.

"If the bridegroom finds out, he can either have the woman put to death or take her back to her father's house," Duggan said. "Her father has one of two choices. He can have his daughter put to death, or his house will be dishonored by the people for all generations to Victims go through a rape trauma syndrome which the counselors must recognize and work with, Duggan said. The women go through two phasesa mediate one and a long term phase.

In the mediate phase the woman will either have spells of crying or remain very calm. Either reaction is normal, she said. Women will suffer from actual physical pain or psychosomatic pain.

Today's accessories 'most exciting ever'

COLLEGE STATION - Accessorizing today's apparel is definitely an art, and fashionable jewelry for spring/summer '77 is the most exciting ever, Beverly Rhoades, clothing specialist, reports.

A new direction is fabric jewelry, sometimes scented. Silk or cotton cords and strings-plain, braided, or twisted and often with silk flowers, knots, or beads added-will be worn for daytime or even-

Fabric jewelry will be seen at the neck, ankle, or wrist-in soft and romantic and bright and bold colors. Often several colors will be twisted or knotted together, the specialist predicted.

Traditional gold will be more popular than ever, especially for daytime wear. Look for gold and white, gold and ivory, and gold with black. Other popular metals include pewter, silver, and copper.

"Hair ornaments will return with a fresh new look. Try flowers, feathers, headbands (plain or with flowers), combs of every kind, and lots of clips-one is great, but several in a row are better yet.

Digital-disdaining Swiss watchmakers mark time

The Los Angeles Times

BIENNE, Switzerland - The Swiss have long been noted for their fine watches, their strong currency and their ingrained caution

In recent years, however, the Swiss franc and the business reserve of Swiss watchmakers have seemingly worked against the industry - which exports 95 per cent of its production. The Swiss share of the world's watch market fell from a healthy 40 per cent in 1971 to only 30 per cent in 1976. In 1975, Swiss watch exports dropped by 15.2 per cent and they declined by a further 2.2 per cent last year to a value of $1.2 million

Here in Bienne, the center of the Swiss watchmaking industry in the Jura Mountains, the Swiss are searching for ways to regain their supremacy in the industry.

The executives attribute their falling share of the market to the strong Swiss franc, which has made their watches more expensive around the world, and to their slowness in entering the electronic watch field, which originated in the United States.

somewhat when the United States introduced electronic watches." admits Roger Anker, administrative manager of Swiss Horological Industries, a federation of watchmakers.

"We were badly hurt by U.S. space technology, because it was a relatively small step from that into electronic watches. We were cautious about changing the whole nature of our industry. But we are fighting

The Swiss concentrated for generations on making fine mechanical watches - that is watches powered by a spring, whose time base is a balance and hairspring, with the time indicated by hands.

Then, in the United States and then Japan, small batteries were introduced as power sources, with quartz crystals as resonator but still with hands indicating the time.

Finally, the U.S. watch industry brought out the so-called solid-state watch, using batteries, quartz crystals, integrated circuits and a digital display of the time.

The Solid-State components can be mass produced at low cost, hence

digital watches can be sold at a price usually much lower than that (ar mechanical watches.

Now, Ankers group in Bienne and SSIH, another group of Swiss watch makers that collectively ranks third among worldwide producers - after Timex (U.S.) and Seiko (Japan) plan to increase the percentage of their production in quartz watches. In five years, they say, some 30 pe cent of their output will be using quartz crystals instead of mechanical movements, which may cause some hardships among the smaller of Switzerland's 1,200 firms engaged in watchmaking, whose training has been in mechanical craftsmanship, not electronic circuitry.

But despite the popularity of digital watches in America, many Swiss watchmaking decision makers have serious reservations about the trend. And they dispute the watchmaking enthusiasts who predict that solid state digital watches will eventually take over the market. The problem with the digital watch," said watchmaking executive Pierre Brenzikofer, "is that it may be simply a fashion gimmick."

Just ask a Liberian where all their ships are.

Today Liberia has only two ships of its own, but more ships fly under the Liberian flag than that of any other nation; of the world's 23,000 merchant freighters, more than 10 per cent fly the red, white and blue Liberian flag; are under Liberia's colors.

Some maritime experts contend that flag-of-convenience nations frequently permit dangerously decrepit and ill-manned vessels to remain in operation. They point out that of the record 19 tankers jost last year, 11 were registered in Liberia.

Since 1971 Liberia has had its own marine inspection division, with control offices in New York, London, Rotterdam and the Far East. Government officials here say their ships are involved in more mishaps only because there are more of them, and that maritime studies have shown that Liberia's safety record is at least as good as the safety records of most small countries that are not part of the flag-of-convenience agreement.

At a Washington press briefing last month outlining new proposals to prevent oil spills from tankers using U.S. ports, White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said there is 'no maritime nation, including our own, that does not share responsibility" for the spills.

Inadequate register may add to death toll

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - It was the day after Christmas. A hulking tractortrailer, flying down a New England highway, rammed a small car from behind - demolishing half of the car and pitching the other half and the family inside onto the road.

Kenneth and Frances Nathanson of Bethesda Md., recovered from their injuries, buried their daughter, and began an investigation into their own

They found out that the driver of the truck had lost his license several times for violations and accidents in

Yet, like millions of others, the trucker kept driving by jumping state lines to get a new, valid license. The trucker's cross-state maneuver worked because the National Driver Register isn't working.

'If our program had worked the should have, his daughter (Kamy Nathanson) would be alive,' said Brian Connell, chief of the National Driver Register.

The register is a section of the federal Department of Transportation which was designed to act as a store-house of information on Americans who have had their licenses suspended or revoked in any

The program is not effective, according to Connell, primarily because all the states are not fully par-

Connell said New York, California, Florida and Puerto Rico jurisdictions with over 20 per cent of the nation's population - do not fully participate in the register.

"It absolutely baffles me that Americans raise hell about people getting stabbed, shot and drowned while these drivers commit murder like clockwork every day and no one gets excited," said Connell

Connell said the register turns up the names of 750 people each day who have had their license revoked or suspended in one state and are seeking a new license elsewhere. Based on that figure and the knowledge that many states are not using the register fully, Connell estimated that there are millions of drivers on the roads who have gotten their current licenses by slipping across state lines.

The register receives 6,000 reports of suspensions or revocations daily from states and makes inquiries on 90,000 license applications a day.

Connell said his estimates do not include persons who falsify their identification when crossing state lines to apply for another license after losing their first license.

A spokesman for the National Highway Users Association offered another example of a driver who was able to continue to drive and eventually kill because of poor communications between state licensing agencies. Last March 9, in Lynchburg, Va., a truck hit a school bus while it was stopped on the side of the road. Three children were killed. The truck driver was a North Carolina man who had licenses in at least two states, North Carolina and Florida. On his North Carolina license the man had over 25 moving traffic violations and some accidents Authorities refused to disclose the number of accidents on his record. His North Carolina license had been suspended at least five times.

The truck driver's Florida license had three moving traffic violations on

THERAPEUTIC HYPNOSIS OF AMERICA .

Lose Weight . Stop Smoking

it. One of the violations occurred in Arkansas while his North Carolina license was suspended

Officials in Florida and North Carolina said they didn't know of the man's other license or his other violations.

The Highway Users Federation estimates that there are 10 million drivers without licenses or with invalid licenses on American roads, out of 129,100,000 drivers in the nation.

A 1976 study by the National Highway Administration of 197 fatal accidents in 1973 found that 11 of the drivers involved in those accidents were driving with suspended or revoked licenses. Another 21 people involved had had their licenses suspended or revoked in the past.

Connell said the first step in any Brock crackdown on Americans who ignore licensing regulations will have to be improvement of the register.

in the register, but they also limit the register's access to state records through privacy laws.

Massachusetts and Pennsylvania will inform the register if a driver has had his license suspended or revoked but they won't disclose the reason because of the two states' privacy

Police, the courts, insurance companies and firms that hire drivers cannot use the register because of federal privacy laws. Even the Bureau of Motor Carrier Safety, which conducts studies of fatal accidents for the Department of Transportation, the same agency that oversees the register, is forbidden to use the register because of privacy

"It is unbelievable," said Connell. "We have public records covered by the privacy act instead of being covered by the freedom of information laws.

Connell said all states will refuse to issue a license to a person once they are informed that the person is under suspension or has had his license revoked by another state.

The problem, Connell said, is creating a system that will ensure that the states learn about suspension and revocations in other states.

Connell warned that federal laws requiring states to fully participate in the register would not solve the register's problems but would involve the register and the states in a tangle of legal problems.

Connell said a survey found that 80 per cent of the states want instant electronic communication with the register and they want more information stored in the register.

Currently it takes 24 hours plus mailing time for the register to answer the 90,000 inquiries it receives daily.

"There are going to have to be some criticism. changes," said Connell after citing the case of two truck drivers who had licenses despite a combined record of 49 driving offenses. In two separate accidents in 1975 and 1976 they killed nine people, injured 10 and did $31,000 in damage, he said.

Meanwhile the Nathansons have continued their mission against the bad driver who stays on the road by testifying before Congress, and talking to Department of Transportation administers about improving the driver register.

"We can't bring our daughter back," said Nathanson, "and we can't save everyone else from being killed but we might save someone else's

Studies on senses of smell, taste hold fascination for physician

The Washington Post

His Georgetown University laboratory and clinic impaired senses of taste and smell - conditions that affect 1 million to 2 million Americans.

EVERY YEAR, 500 to 700 patients flock to Henkin's clinic to be treated for a variety of sensory ailments. He has a devoted band of followers made up of people he has helped regain their sense of taste or smell and others who see him as their only hope.

He also has detractors in the medical profession, some of whom regard his research as esoteric and others who question his ethics.

While his sometimes controversial research led to qualified expert, a one-of-a-kind scientist.

humidity rise. We have come to hear a young man plead - if not literally for his life, then at least for his living.

He is Robert John Aurelio, 22, of Rosemead, Calif., a Vietnam veteran with an undesirable discharge, one of some 250,000 Vietnam-era veterans with less-than-honorable discharges who were bypassed by President Carter's pardon of a like number who evaded military service altogether.

Much has been made of the pardon - the first official act of the Carter presidency. Some on the political right deplored it as a wretched excess, some on the left as a wretched insufficiency, and an amorphous middle group tended to smudge the phrase "draft evaders and deserters" into one catchall word - seemed to think that finally wrapped it up on Vietnam. (Only 24 servicemen ever were convicted of desertion to avoid hazardous duty in Vietnam.)

No one in this sweltering room appears to labor under the latter belief - least of all Aurelio and Pat Wood and Michael Tedesco, his two advocates from the Los Angelesbased Center for Veteran's Rights.

The kernel of their belief and cause is summed up by Lawrence M. Baskir, former chief executive officer and general counsel to the Presidential Clemency Board in the Ford Administration and co-author of "Reconciliation After Vietnam: A Program of Relief for Vietnam-era Draft and Military Offenders." Baskir wrote: "Almost one-third of all military offenders were educationally disadvantaged, many of whom were brought into the military through the 'Project 100,000' and 'New Standards' manpower programs. Instead of calling up the reserves or drafting college students - either of which would have involved immense political consequences - the government met its manpower needs during the Vietnam buildup by accepting hundreds of thousands of recruits whose limited mental abilities would have disqualified them before and after the Vietnam war."

It's a politico-journalistic cliche that for the bereft, the maimed and the desolated, the war will never be

Thus in this room. To Aurelio and his law-student advocates, the Vietnam war remains a grisly living thing. Other assumptions on which their task is based are:

-That the catchall "draft evaders and deserters" is a specious, sometimes malicious equation between two totally different groups and that it seeks to set one minority against another and polarize society

-That the pardon of the evaders is only simple justice, and

-That that simple justice is nonetheless more equal justice than that meted out - or withheld from those who served and got administrative, or "bad" discharges.

Like most Vietnam-era veterans with general, undesirable, bad conduct or dishonorable discharges known as GDs, UDs, BCDs and DDs - Aurelio has found heavy sledding on the home front. to the Veterans' Administration, vets with UDs or worse don't even exist, so the timehonored VA benefits by which previous generations bootstrapped themselves into higher socioeconomic niches are out of reach. And few indeed are the prospective employers who will touch anyone officially labeled undesirable.

So Aurelio knows how much hangs on his appearance before the board today. He is as well-dressed and slicked up as anyone could wish, and in his opening remarks to these five people, he speaks with painful care and his most formal manner:

"I would extremely like to finish my schooling, and I can't do this unless you will correct something that I think was misjust

Over the next half-hour, Auerlio's story develops:

He quit high school to go to work. then started night school, and in October, 1972 enlisted in the Marine Corps for its much-advertised educational and career opportunities.

He went to combat engineering school, was ultimately promoted to lance corporal, did one and one-half years in Okinawa, and liked the service quite well, until about the end of

He had married in September, 1974 and his wife, on getting pregnant. developed toxemia, a blood infection, and alarmingly high blood pressure. Aurelio, stationed then in North Carolina, asked for a compassionate reassignment to Southern California, so that nearby family could help him care for his wife.

The request was denied - Aurelio says he was not told why - and he embarked on a one-year career of sporadic misbehavior - getting drunk and falling asleep on guard duty, going AWOL, turning himself in and getting drunk some more. He illadvisedly joined a drug class though he says he never messed with drugs - because friends told him it was a sure way of getting shipped home. All it got him was another rap toward his UD.

Aurelio's son, Robert Jr., was born on June 5, 1975, and while Mrs. Aurelio and her baby went into intensive care for two weeks, Aurelio went AWOL for 73 days. Mother and baby recovered and Aurelio turned himself in, then went AWOL again two weeks In November, 1975 - three years and one month after he voluntarily joined the Marines - Aurelio was discharged as undesirable, lower on the ladder than when he enlisted at 17. There are two or three mild questions from the review board nothing harsh or driving, like a crossexamination; they have benevolent faces, these five, and have treated Aurelio with ample respect and seriousness. It would be unfair to portray this board as anything less than courteous, relaxed and cordial toward Aurelio. Finally, he is asked:

"Mr. Aurelio, is there anything else at all you would like to tell us, to add to your statement?"

Aurelio blinks. He's a muscular, healthy-looking and bright young man with a good mind that sticks to the point and a big, painstakinglyacquired vocabularly that he's still learning how to control. This halfhour has cost him as much physical strength, courage and thought as anything he's ever done, and he's already given it his best shot.

He swallows, and then plows ahead. No big words this time, no more effort to appear suave, mature, selfpossessed. "I was not a coward at any time. I got upset a few times, and I did wrong... And I got drunk, but ... " He halts in confusion for along moment, then ends quietly, "I need a fair shot.

The plea is so simply put, so naked, that an odd little silence drops on the room. A few people quickly look that often surpasses polite speech. Perhaps angriest is Tedesco, second-year law student at Southwestern University, from which all his fellow advocates have come to staff the year-old Center for Veterans'

The fury and frustration that Tedesco vents — that bubbles variously throughout the staff — must be viewed against a backdrop of beliefs that the staff take as givens:

-Given, that the Vietnam war was immoral, imperialistic, an economic enterprise that even former Secretary of state Henry Kissinger has conceded was a "mistake" and "misadventure."

-Given, that the military practiced massive racial, ethnic and educational discrimination - a claim supported by four separate "establishment" task force studies, including one by the Defense Department itself.

-Given, that the basic immorality and economic nature of the war influenced the military to rely on administragive discharges at an unprecedented rate simply to save money in military or VA budgets, thus passing future costs, either in welfare or in prison support, to state and local budgets.

-Given, that the immorality of America's first politico-economic war and the demoralization of military justice throughout it renders the assigning of honor or dishonor by the old rules of our just wars a ludicrous moral conundrum that defies reason.

Wood, director of the Center, says, There was just so damned much sloppiness, the way so many of these guys were taken in who never should have been, and the services should damned well have known it. So now, the boards are just sort of hearing us out with very little hostility, as if they're saying, 'Well, yeah...' And we're getting upgrades on 75 per cent to 80 per cent of the cases we file. But of course, that's just a drop in the bucket.

"There are thousands of guys with bad discharges who aren't near a city with a center like this, or who don't have the dough for a private attorney. or who don't even know they can petition for review. Those guys will just fall through the slats and maybe never know they might have stood a

Commission told tentative staff recommendations

By LARRY SUTHERLAND

Midland Parks and Recreation director Robert Thomson told the Midland Parks and Recreation Commission Tuesday that tentative staff recommendations are to proceed with pursuing many of the improvements turned down in a recent bond election implemented with money from next fiscal year's budget.

Thomson said he is uncertain about the availability of some of the money to carry out improvements without passage of the bond issue, but said the improvements could be phased in gradually to ease a financial burden.

Some of the tentative priorities which the commission will discuss formally May 12 during a budget review session - include building a new park with financial aid from the Kiwanis Club, land acquisition for possible future park development, a ighted softball complex, cart paths at Hogan Park Golf Course and pumps for irrigation at the golf course.

Rex Worrell, golf pro at Hogan Park, will recommend to Mayor Ernest Angelo that Worrell undertake constructing a pro shop and con-cession facility, commissioner Fred Faulkner said. The proposal will ask the city to allow Worrell to recover the costs of the facility by keeping some rental equipment a the course.

The city would not pay for construction of the facility, but it would pay for costs related to the facility, Thomson said.

Worrell's proposal will be given further study by the department staff. the commissioners agreed.

The commissioners were not in agreement, however, with a suggestion by superintendent of parks Wayne Kohout that the commission recommend to the Midland City Council that it accept a Department of Housing and Urban Development directive requiring the city to accept a $66,000 rental assistance program.

Kohout said a tentative $114,000 parks funding from $946,000 in HUD Community Development funds for fiscal year 1978 could be in jeopardy. He said the $946,000 likely will not be approved by HUD unless the city accepts the rental assistance

Mayor Angelo at the last city council meeting opposed HUD's requirement for the rental assistance program and suggested the city could do without the Community Development money.

Kohout objected to HUD's requirement also, but said the city should go ahead and accept the rental assistance program if it threatens the Commissioner Bob Paxton said making such a recommendation to the city council is "completely out of our bailiwick. I do not propose we get involved in it.'

No commissioner endorsed Kohout's proposal, but the commission did recommend that the council increase the funding for parks to $200,000 if it decides to accept the Community Development funds.

Prior to the commission's meeting in city council chambers, commissioners Martha Houston and Frank Wolfe were presented with plaques honoring their service on the commission. Mrs. Houston is resigning her post and Wolfe's term is expiring.

The terms of commissioners Paxton and chairman William Spruill expire this year, and both have said they want to be reappointed. In other action, the commission:

- Approved Trinity School's request for use of the showmobile

- Approved Girl Scouts' request for use of Elkin Park June 13 through 17 as an activity center

- Approved East Side Lions Club's request for use of Cubs Stadium and Simon Field for semi-pro baseball on some Sundays, but recommended against selling beer at Simon Field.

- Approved Boy Scouts' request to use Hogan Pool June 6 through 10 for special project.

Approved Midland YMCA's request for exclusive use of Washington, Alamo, Hogan and Halff pools for certain periods of time during June, July and August. - Approved dropping a provision in the recently adopted tennis court rules that would allow individual reservations. - Approved Camp Fire Girls' request for use of Hogan Park for a day camp June 13 through 17. Withheld approving Midland Miss Softball America's suggestion to have the organization have restrooms built in Lancaster Park, where their games are played. The commission directed Thomson to discuss the costs of the project with the organization prior to approval.

Millionairess pauper not really that rich

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. (AP) -When police searched the garbagestrewn apartment of Kathleen Nelson Colley, they found stock certificates and bankbooks which, they said, indicated she was a millionairess.

It turns out that the woman known to her neighbors as "Garbage Mary" isn't worth a million. But she is by no means a pauper.

At a recent competency hearing in nearby West Palm Beach, her lawyer, Morgan Bragg, said she had assets of about $170,000. The judge ruled her to be incompetent and took under advisement a petition to name Bragg her guardian.

Bragg said this past weekend that the original estimate of Mrs. Colley's worth was "grossly exaggerated. Some wasn't stocks, just fancy looking certificates. Others were for only a couple of shares."

Mrs. Colley has two brothers in Houston, Tex., an a sister in Joliet, Ill. She is a graduate of Knox College in Galesburg, Ill., where she was born. She has been married twice and divorced. Her father was a stockholder and a member of the board of a Galesburg bank.

The case began in February, when police found Mrs. Colley, 48, sifting through a garbage can at a shopping center. Officers searched her car and $150- a-month, two-room apartment and found the stocks, bankbooks and garbage.

Funding cuts may hurt program

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

Funding cuts probably will reduce the number of out-patients that can be served by mental health-mental retardation centers; agency staff members were told Tuesday.

Dr. Jon D. Hannum, deputy commissioner for community services of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, gave the keynote address Tuesday to the West Texas regional quarterly conference of the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation. The conference was at the Midland Hilton.

Hannon said the mental health and mental retardation agency appropriations bill, as reported out by the House committee, calls for budget reductions which would mean that 14,000 fewer patients can be treated on an outpatient basis than this year. The administration budget also has been cut in the House bill. Hannon

Hannon said the Senate is unlikely to restore the cut funds.

The bill contains "marginal increases" in the areas of special education, sheltered work training and day-evening-care and 24-hour resident and alternate resident care,

A rider to the appropriations bill will cause further problems to community mental health-mental retardation centers, Hannon said.

That rider prohibits transfer of funds from one category to another. Thus, a surplus in special education classes funds could not be transfed to a sheltered work training program.

"If your needs change. . . there will be no flexibility for you to change your dollars," Hannon said.

Another proposed bill which seeks to cut down on the number of patients hospitalized would involve the community mental health-mental retardation center in determination of whether persons should be admitted involuntarily to mental hospitals, he said.

Hannon said 49 per cent of the approximately 20,000 mental health admissions each year are the result of court orders. Under the provisions of the proposed bill, the local center would report to the court on whether or not needed services are available in the community, he said.

Participants in the conference attended a series of workshops Tuesday afternoon.

This morning, workshops were held on quality assurance; work evaluation training and foster residential programs for Mr; levels of client functioning as criteria for placement in a service delivery system; screening, visiting and following up state hospital patients; , strengthening relationships between VA hospitals and community MHMR centers; community consultation and education; problem oriented record systems, and non-medical alcohol

Pasadena has big volunteer fireman unit

PASADENA, Tex. (AP) -It was 6:20 p.m. when the bleepers sounded in the homes of the 160 firefighters in the industrial city of Pasadena on the outskirts of Houston. One minute and 15 seconds later, the first truck was rolling to the fire at a supermarket near the downtown area.

Sam Hembry had just finished eight hours of work at a paper mill, but when he heard the alarm, he snuffed out his cigarette, left his beer to warm, and soon was on the scene Hembry is the fire chief

Jay Goyer had worked nine hours as a city building inspector and he, too, left the comfort of his easy chair to leap on the back of a fire truck and join the effort to snuff out the blaze.

Goyner is the assistant fire chief. The other firefighters had spent the day working at the many petrochemical plants that encircle Pasadena, or as businessmen, or tax consultants, or salesmen or store clerks.

The department, serving a city with a population of 120,000, claims to be the largest volunteer fire unit in the United States.

None of the firefighters receives one penny in pay Many take their vacations to learn better firefighting techniques

When asked about the turnover rate in this unpaid department, Chief Hembry said, "I think the last check showed that the men have about 1,200 years of seniority. I have been around for 20 of my 50 years and the assistant chief is only 39 and he has 17 years Moneywise, the Pasadena Police Department has

"A young chick, buck-naked, came out of another window," he said. "I only had my pants on and that's all I still got. I would have come out of there naked like she did to get away from that fire," he said.

Firemen brought the fire under control shortly before dawn. By then only part of the front wall stood. The rest of the building was a pile of smoldering rubble. Burned bedposts and suitcases could be seen sticking

Three bulldozers were brought in to clear the debris and allow firemen to work their way in and search for bodies. Two bodies were pulled out in sacks early in the morning before the fire was controlled. Before noon,

Glover told newsmen he "smelled this funny, reeking odor, something I never smelled before. I was watching a late show on television and thought I better see what that smell was."

"I opened the door and saw all the smoke. I went down the hall and tried to get out the front door, but it was all in flames," said Glover, who works in Beaumont as a sandblaster.

The Energy Crisis: Who a barrel, and what yo

Every citizen should be informed.

Reading this report will alarm you. It will make you concerned. It will also make you informed on an energy situation made confusing by short-term expediency and self-serving rhetoric.

Unfortunately, for all of us, the gasoline shortage of 1973 and the natural gas shortage of 1977 were not just temporary malfunctions of the U.S. energy supply system. In this question and answer interview, prepared originally for Dresser shareholders, Dr. John J. McKetta, a leading energy authority, cites evidence to show these problems were only the tip of the growing U.S. energy crisis iceberg.

We are not going to escape all the consequences of our energy neglect over the past years. But, as informed and concerned citizens, we can minimize our problems down the road...by conserving energy and by encouraging our Congressmen to take corrective action now, before it is too late.

Dr. John J. McKetta is Professor of Chemical Engineering at the University of Texas and among the country's most qualified spokesmen on the subjects of energy and environment. In 1970-1971, he served as Chairman of the Advisory Committee on Energy to the Secretary of the Inerior and, during that period, was among the first authorities to call attention to the serious energy problem facing a then unaware United States. His predictions have been chillingly accurate.

Dr. McKetta is a charter member and a director of the National Council for Environmental Balance. He was Chairman of the Committee on National Air Quality Management for the National Academy of Science and Engineering, 1970-75. In 1976, Dr. McKetta received the coveted Lamme Award from the American Society of Engineering Education, the Joe J. King Professional Engineering Achievement Award and the Triple E Award from the National Environmental Development Association for outstanding contributions to the national issues of energy, environment and economics. He is widely published internationally on these subjects as well as chemical technology, processing and design.

Dr. McKetta's wide scope of interests and accomplishments make him exceptionally well qualified to present a balanced, expert opinion and timely warning about the threatening nature of our country's energy situation today.

Q. Dr. McKetta, for more than a decade you have consistently stated that the United States energy situation was growing progressively worse. Is that still your view?

A. In 1971, I termed the circumstances serious. But we have since passed that point. We are now facing disastrous consequences from our inability to meet our energy needs.

Q. What are our chances of rectifying our energy predicament?

A. Unfortunately, since the gravity of our problem was spotlighted by the Arab oil embargo in 1973, almost everything we have done has tended to worsen the situation. Time is running out on us. Even if we could move tomorrow to develop a workable energy policy and were able to implement it at once, we would still experience at least a deterioration in our standard of living in this country by 1985. If we do not move quickly, the situation will become dire.

Q. Would you please elaborate on what you mean by dire!

A. I mean that we will experience deep and painful disruptions in our whole economy. We will have a severe recession by 1985, brought about by shortages of domestic energy. In fact, unless we move immediately, there will be an energy shortage in the United States that we simply cannot imagine at this time. Most of this is, and will be, caused by the vote consciousness and shortsightedness of our government in energy matters.

If we allow our energy programs to drag on as they are today, I predict the government, by 1985, will have on its payrolls a large number of "regulators" who will appear at our homes to make certain that we maintain low temperatures in the winter and high temperatures in the summer, and that our clothes dryers are permanently disconnected. Air conditioners in automobiles will be banned and we will drive on Saturday and Sunday for emergency purposes only.

I further predict that escalator use will be prohibited, elevator use severely limited, that unemployment will be as high as 14 percent, prime interest rates as high as 15 percent and that we will have the worst recession in the history of the country.

Q. Since the oil embargo, the prices of crude oil have gone up substantially; drilling activity has been increasing steadily and the Federal Power Commission recently set a new price ceiling of $1.42 per thousand cubic feet on new interstate natural gas. Haven't these factors brightened the domestic energy outlook?

A. The $1.42 price level has not been fully resolved. If it were, it would improve to a small degree the economics of gas production. Still, all the factors you cite can do little, if anything, to prevent the disasters we face. The increase in drilling activity has been insignificant when weighed against the problem.

In 1974, the U.S. produced 9 million barrels of oil per day. The figure declined to 8.5 million in 1975, and declined again in 1976, even while demand was rising at higher than expected rates. We aren't gaining in production — we are continuing to lose ground. We aren't moving toward energy selfsufficiency; we are moving farther away from it. Just a few years ago, we were importing about 25 percent of the oil used in this country. In 1976, we imported approximately 45 percent, and the figure is still growing. Our increasing dependence on imported oil brings greater risks of another embargo, and more intimidation in the conduct of our foreign policy. This endangers and jeopardizes our nation.

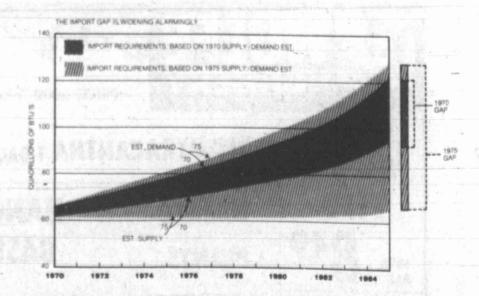

Since 1956, out total energy demand growth rate has outstripped our total energy production growth rate, causing a disturbingly high growth rate in energy imports.

Q. What about energy sources other than oil and gas? Can we count on them to close the gap between our production and demand?

A. Our projection regarding other U.S. energy sources has declined substantially between 1970 and 1975. In 1970, we estimated that all of our energy sources could provide 95 quadrillion British Thermal Units by 1985. Our 1975 estimates show that we were overly optimistic and now we expect only 62 Q's from all energy sources by 1985. (1 Q equals one quadrillion British Thermal Units. This is the energy in 1 trillion cu. ft. of gas or 46 million tons of coal or 180 million bbls. of oil or 243 million megawatt hours.)

While our predictions of oil and gas production by 1985 have been revised downward by 3 Q's, predictions of supplies of other energy sources, such as coal, nuclear, geothermal, solar and synthetics, have been revised downward by almost 30 Q's. The outlook now is that coal will be the only energy source other than oil and gas that can make a significant contribution to our energy supplies over the next ten years. Nuclear energy, for example, will provide only about 9 Q's by 1985, if all planned nuclear plants are actually built.

At the same time, 1975 predictions of 1985 energy demand have been revised upward from the 1970 estimates. The chart shows the supply and demand estimate made in 1970 and the 1975 revisions through 1985. As may be noted, the gap between the supply and demand estimates widens perilously. What's more, in 1976, it appears that we will not be able to produce even at the low level of the 1975 estimates.

Obviously, we must make every effort to develop all energy sources, but oil, gas and coal are the only ones that can make a significant contribution to our needs in the immediate future, or, at least, the next two decades. We have no choice but to concentrate our efforts on hydrocarbons, especially oil and gas, until other sources of energy are able to share the load — probably around the year 2000.

Q. What are the consequences of our rising energy imports?

A. First, we must conclude that our increasing dependence upon imported oil could result in a profound and dangerous weakness in the U.S. position abroad. Today, for example, we face the dilemma of supporting Israel, with whom we have religious and friendly ties, or supporting the Arab states, whose oil supply is vital to our nation.

Second, there is the specter of economic disaster. In 1976, the U.S. cost of imported energy liquids will be $37 billion. It was only $6 billion in 1973. If we project import trends based on our 1970 production and demand projections, we would need to import 8 billion barrels of oil during the year 2000. The cost of that amount of fuel could be over $200 billion. This is equivalent to 20 million new jobs at $10,000 per person per year. If we use 1975 projections for production and demand, the situation becomes even more disastrous.

We should also keep in mind that our rising bill for energy imports has the same effect as if our tax bill were increasing... the result is that industry has less funds to provide new jobs and consumers have less funds available to spend to support employ-

Q. Is our growing dependence on imported oil proof that the United States is running out of oil and

A. No, the tragedy of our problem is that the crisis is developing even though expert scientific studies indicate there are sufficient domestic resources of crude oil and natural gas to last for the foreseeable future, and certainly until other energy sources, such as nuclear power, develop to the point of supplying the greater part of our needs. As of 1975, the U.S. had proved recoverable reserves of about 228 trillion cubic feet of gas and 34 billion barrels of oil. Estimates of undiscovered U.S. recoverable potentials go as high as 750 trillion cubic feet for gas and 104 billion barrels for oil.

Q. You mentioned earlier that in addition to oil and gas, coal must be used more extensively. Why is its use limited now?

A. In 1970 the Mine Safety Act and EPA regulations caused declines in the production and usage of coal. Twenty-two percent of the total mines were closed during 1970-71. Since that time, restrictions on the use of high sulfur coal have decreased usage. Production and usage have risen since 1971, but 1975 levels will have to triple by 1985 if we are to approach self-sufficiency.

Q. What must be done to reverse the energy situation in this country?

A. Simply stated, we must close the gap between supply and demand. More precisely, we must adopt an energy policy that establishes specific objectives and provides the incentives and controls required to achieve them.

Our strategy should be to increase domestic production and reserves of oil and gas over the short term, say to 1990, to gain time for development of our alternate energy resources.

Q. Specifically, what steps should be taken to accomplish this?

A. One of the first steps should be to return to a free market for energy. If we decontrol the price of oil and gas, we will have higher prices. Although basically unpopular, higher prices would help correct our energy situation in two ways: first, they would slow demand; second, they would spur domestic exploratory drilling, which would eventually increase both our production and reserves. We know from the experiences of other countries that when gasoline costs more than a dollar a gallon, consumption drops substantially.

Higher prices for oil and gas would also encourage greater recovery of oil and gas from existing wells. Only about 35 percent of known oil deposits is recoverable using present technology. Higher prices would allow technological advances which, in turn, would contribute to improvement in recovery rates of existing oil reserves. Also, there are known natural gas deposits that are not now commercial; higher prices would change the economics, encour- Limited copies of the interview with Dr. McKetta age drilling in those fields and help increase our gas are available upon request to Dresser Industries, Inc., production.

In addition, we need to triple the use of coal, because it represents our most abundant and easily accessible source of domestic energy

Q. Do you have other thoughts about making the problem less severe?

A. In addition to accelerating our production, we need to conserve energy through more efficient use. One area subject to significant improvement is power generation. For example, the conversion of natural gas to electricity results in an energy loss of over 30 percent. Also, we should convert immediately to coal for electrical power generation, especially in states that do not produce large quantities of natural gas.

We should declare a moratorium on automotive catalytic converters and exhaust gas recirculation devices, except in the few cities with special environmental problems, and put lead back into gasoline so that we could return to the more efficient engines for automobiles.

We must become reasonable about environmental demands and establish trade offs between energy development and environmental constraints. We need to review many of the obstructive governmental regulations. We have to take a more rational approach to the prudent use of nuclear energy. Finally, research must be increased to develop every practical energy source as rapidly as possible.

Q. Is it too late to head off our energy shortage?

A. Yes, it is too late to completely eliminate the gap between supply and demand over the next 15 years. Some of the actions we just discussed, however, would decrease oil demand by about 2 million barrels per day and increase the oil supply by some? to 4 million barrels per day by 1985.

As I said at the outset, time is running out. No matter what we do, we are going to feel the adverse effect of the energy crisis on our living standards.

America has the resources to solve our energy problem. Our only hope is that the U.S. Congress will put national interests above politics and adopt comprehensive energy policy that will reduce our energy problem to manageable proportions.

Every citizen can help.

The threat of growing energy shortages and rapidly-rising costs bring new urgency to the need for a comprehensive U.S. energy policy.

In the development of an energy policy, your Representatives and Senators need the views and support of all citizens.

Let your elected representatives in Congress know how you feel. In most communities, a listing of these officials is contained in the telephone directory under "United States Government - Congressional offices." Or, you may write to your legislators c/o House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515 or c/o United States Senate. Washington, D.C. 20510.

Additionally, every citizen should do all that he or she can about energy conservation. Many helpful booklets on how to save energy are available free or at nominal cost from the Federal Government or local utilities.

Soviet Union trying to woo Syria back

By PETER OSNOS The Washington Post

MOSCOW - The Soviet Union, once again in the midst of a major effort to influence Middle East peacemaking, is currently concentrating on improving relations with Syria that were strained last year because of differences over the Lebanese civil war.

Syrian President Hafez Assad ended two days of Kremlin talks with Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev and other top Soviet leaders Tuesday afternoon. Details of the discussions were not disclosed, but it was evident that both sides are intent on putting behind them their rift over Syria's participation in the fighting against leftist and Palestinian forces.

Breznhev went to the airport Monday to effusively greet the arriving Syrians, an unusual gesture of friend-ship. All aspects of the visit are being given noticeably extensive coverage in the Soviet media, more for instance than that accorded Lybia's Muammur Qaddafi, Iraq's Sadam Husain or Yasir Arafat of the Palestine Liberation Organization, all of whom have traveled to Moscow in recent months.

That attention reflects Moscow's belief that Syria is its most important and ultimately most durable ally in the Middle East, particularly since Soviets have fallen out so Syrian interests are also in maintaining close relations with Moscow, primarily because the Soviets are Assad's arms supplier and a major source of economic assitance. There have been reliable reports that the Kremlin followed through at least to some degree on a warning made to Syria last summer that continued intervention in Lebanon would mean a cutback in that aid.

Assad never backed down from his stance, and Syrian forces now represent the bulk of the Arab peacekeeping forces in Lebanon. But the PLO and Assad have ended their feud, and some Syrian commandoes are even said to be fighting flongside Palesti-nians against Christian soldiers in RANKIN RANKIN - A kite contest will be held from 1:30 ·p.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday in Rankin sponsored by Rankin Lions Club.

Richard Robertson, an Austin kiter, will be master of ceremonies and will demonstrate flying techniques and conduct a kite-building clinic the day before the contest.

There will be events for three age groups, with awards for the largest, smallest, most beutiful most unusual and highest flying kites.

Main events include a kite race, an air drop with objects falling slowly to earth and a category of most kites flying on one line, the Lions Club said.

on President's talk By ROBERT B. CULLEN WASHINGTON (AP) - Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe was one of the few Texans in Washington who did not voice criticism in advance of President Carter's upcoming energy message tonight. Congressional leaders who were briefed on the message Tuesday said it contained a number of features that will not be popular in Texas. They included a ceiling price of natural gas that will be as low as $1.55 next year, according to one source, and federal regulation of the intrastate gas

Those who had been briefed said there would be additional taxes proposed for crude oil and gasoline; a stiff tax on gas-guzzling automobiles; and a schedule for conversion to coal that will severely discomfort Texas electrical utilities which rely on

Gulf official says U.S. can't use more debate

HOUSTON — Jerry McAfee, Gulf Oil Corp. board chairman, said Tuesday it is important for an energy action plan to be adopted now.

"This country simply cannot afford to get bogged down again in an endless, and fruitless, energy debate in which every group seeks to promote its special interests at the expanse of the nation's future," McAfee said.

Speaking at the company's annual shareholders meeting, McAfee said Gulf is prepared to support en-thusiastically and vigorously the constructive objectives of the energy program President Carter is to

At the same time, he added, Gulf is not surrendering its right to "speak out against specifice energy proposals which we believe would retard energy development." In any case, he said, "our response will be reasoned and our criticism constructive.

"We at Gulf pledge in the months ahead to work with the Administration and the Congress in every way possible to help structure a compreensive energy program based on realistic, sensible and attainable goals," McAfee said.

James E. Lee, president, said the earnings decline was caused by temporary conditions, including inability to recover in the marketplace the full cost of recent increases in the prices of imported crude oil.

Lee said nearly half of the $2 billion planned for capital expenditures this year will support deomestic exploration and production efforts.

"Currently, we have a while or part interest in 41 wildcat wells being drilled both onshare and offshore in the United States and we have 25 seismic crews evaluating some 1.5 million of our onshore acres," he said. "This represents more than nine per cent of all such exploratory work being conducted by the industry in the

But at a news conference, Briscoe refused to critisize the President's message in advance. He also refused to say Carter had broken the promise he made to deregulate natural gas in an October letter to Briscoe and the governors of Oklahoma and Loui-

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 20, 1977

The Texas governor said "I have complete confidence in the president, that he will, as stated in his letter, move in the direction of deregulation .. Perhaps I'm an eternal optimist."

Despite the fact that Carter sat in on part of the briefing for congressional leaders Tuesday, Briscoe said he did not think the final decisions on gas deregulation have been made. He spoke Tuesday with Carter aides Frank Moore and Bert Lance and said they promised to convey his sentiments about deregulation to Carter.

U.S. Sen. John Tower, a
Republican, said that if the advance word he had gotten was correct, then Briscoe and the other governors "were flimflammed" by Carter's October letter.

Briscoe said that he had used the letter extensively in his campaigning for Carter and that it was a factor in Carter's victory in Texas.

Another congressional source, who requested anonymity until after the Wednesday message, said that Carter might try to call his program a step toward deregulation, "but that would be a misuse of the English language." The source said the price of natural gas would be pegged to the price of oil under Carter's proposal. In practical terms, that would mean a natural gas price of $1.55-$1.75 next year.

The federal government would also assume allocation control over gas that now flows in the intrastate market to supply Texas industries. Under federal allocation rules, that gas would flow instead to regions where homeowners and small businesses were short of fuel.

The governor said he will stay in Washington to see the energy message and return to Texas Thur-

Californian tells Midlanders new provinces best oil hope "And, by 1995, our nation's present production of 8 million barrels of oil

"I believe all of the huge oil pools in the continental United States already have been found," Todd M. Doscher, University of Southern California professor and Society of Petroleum Engineers Distinguished Lecturer, said here Tuesday night.

Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers of AIME in Ranchland Hill Country Club, Doscher told his listeners that didn't mean there is not more oil to be found.

"Nationally we need to go into new provinces such as the Alaska Gulf and offshore both our coasts for large field discoveries," Doscher said. He pointed to the Prudhoe Bay area of Alaska as a good example of oil to be found outside the continental limits of this nation. There is a very slim chance of our finding more big pools such as West Texas and East Texas and other important priducing areas." the He explained that it took only 14 per cent of all the wells drilled in this country to find 75 per cent of our reserves. "Most of the big finds came in the early going. He also pointed out that as big as the North Slope area is from the standpoint of production that "it will not challenge West Texas as one of the great producing areas."

Doscher, who is a professor of engineering at USC, said indications are that the Prudhoe Bay area will have a comparatively short life.

"Even though it is the largest single field ever found on the North American continent, production probably will be down to about threequarters of a million barrels of oil per day 10 years after full production is begun," Doscher said.

proximately 3 million assuming we find no more large fields. To stay at our present level, we would have to find a field such as Prudhoe every other year, and that isn't likely.' "Right now, we are using about 21 million barrels of oil every day. Now, per day will be down to ap-when the production gets to about 3 million, you can see how enormous the production-use gap will be.

"Where are we going to go to fill that gap?" Doscher asked.

He answered the question by saying we will have to go to enhanced oil

Doscher explained that there still is a lot of oil in the old fields even after secondary recovery operations. He pointed out that carbon dioxide secondary and tertiary recovery programs will help get that oil to the surface, but that it is becoming more and more expensive.

'The availability of carbon dioxide gas is not that easy either, he said."
"We are exploring for carbon dioxide gas now, but we are not finding very much. And, when we do find it the transportation may make it too expensive." he added. Our best future source of carbon dioxide will come from the coal degassification process. A tremendous amount of carbon dioxide gas will be a by-product of degassification. But of course, that is a long way off." Doscher pointed out that the Spraberry Trend Area field, the majority of it in Midland County, is an area to look to in the future when secondary recovery operations are planned.

"Operators have been trying for 20 years to unlock the vast amount of oil in the Spraberry. Right now, it is estimated there are 9 billion barrels of oil in the huge field, and the present recovery rate is about five per cent. So you can see what a plus it would be to get even 50 per cent of that oil to the surface," Doscher said.

membership outside Midland; Byron Graves,

Doscher pointed out that even with successful secondary and tertiary recovery we can expect to add little more than 3 million barrels of oil per day to our production during the next 20 years, and that "can come about only if oil reaches a price above $25 a

He warned that the Middle East production will peak by 1982 and then those reservoirs will start their depletion process. "By the time their production peaks, we will be paying exactly what they want for their oil."

'We must turn to other sources of energy. But, take uranium for instance. There only are enough reserves of that mineral to equal 40 billion barrels of oil.

"On the other hand, coal can suppl energy to equal 1,000 billion barrels of oil - enough to run us a couple of centuries."

average of 30 industrial stocks was up a token .34 at 939.11. Gainers and losers ran about even in the over-all count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. In its preoccupation with the energy issue, the market continued to show little response to favorable news on the pace of the economy. The government reported this morning that the Gross National Product, after adjustment for inflation and seasonal factors, grew in the first quarter of the year at double the rate of the last three months of 1976.

Franklin Mint was actively traded, falling 4¼ to 18. Analysts noted disappointment over the company's report that its earnings registered a gain of only about 5 per cent in the first quarter. The NYSE's composite index edged up .02 to 54.52. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .34 at 112.74. Volume on the Big Board came to 9.17 million shares at noontime, against 8.79 wrong, too

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: In a recent column you said people should'nt always trust experts' opinions, even if they're written up in the papers. Seems to me, though, that doctors especially must be pretty good before papers or magazines are interested in their opinions. Do you think they try to come up with new things too fast? If not, how do you account for the fact that they seem to be wrong quite often nowadays?—

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

DEAR JOE: I have two answers for you. One, I account for doctors being occasionally wrong by the fact that they're human. Two, I think you should have ended your question one word earlier.

"Nowadays" has nothing to do with it. Doctors, like others, have been wrong in earlier times as frequently as now; and then as now, it was often the best of them that made mistakes, because the more people have on the ball, the more likely they are to think new thoughts. Stands to reason that if you have a lot of new ideas, not all of them will be good-which is why we had some spectacular goofs in the good old days, too.

For instance, around 1800, doctors simply refused to recognize that the mind can affect the body, and therefore didn't believe in physical illnesses caused by emotions (psychosomatic disorders). However, that did'nt stop psychosomatic disorders). However, that did'nt stop ninpsychosomatic disorders from happening, so doctors had a choice of either denying what they saw (like unwounded soldiers dying from emotional battle effects) or finding a reason that fit their beliefs. One doctor found a lulu of an explanation for these woundless battle deaths: the cause was the wind of the cannon ball!

Then some of his colleagues refined that theory, and declared it wasn't exactly the wind, but the 'electric matter, but "light substances" (grass or mud) that went past the soldiers' bodies at great

Finally, in 1813, still another pioneer wrote an anonymous article stating that none of the explanaions of these "wind injuries" held kup. Unfortunately, he didn't stop there, but followed up with a great example of sound reasoning gone sour: If "wind in-juries" really existed, they'd show up also in actual contact wounds--which they didn't. (Bravo!) Therefore they didn't exist, but were inventions of sailors, who "surpass all others in credulity.

Now you may wonder: didn't anyone come close to the truth? Yes, one came pretty close: Benjmain Rush, one of the great physicians of is day. And guess what: His opinion wasn't even criticized; it was simply ignored in silence, out of respect for his reputation. It took nearly a hundred years before his notions concerning the emotional cause of some physical conditions became respectable.

Who knows? Perhaps some of the things we now ignore will turn out to be new specializations a century from now!

Steers rout Pack, 7-0

It was the same old story for the Midland High baseball team Tuesday afternoon. Errors, which have been the Pack's downfall on more than one occasion this season, turned the trick again, as Big Spring used seven fielding miscues by Midland as a stepping stone to a 7-0 win at the Memorial Stadium diamond.

The gloomy, overcast weather, which finally let loose with hail and heavy rain before the contest was over, mirrored what was running through Coach Larry Peel's mind, as the Pack lost their sixteenth game in 20 seasonal starts, and got the second half of District 5-4A play off on the wrong foot. Big Spring upped their overall log to 12-6, and is 1-0 in second half district action.

Mike Harris went the distance on the mound for the Steers, limiting Midland to six hits, striking out five, walking none, and not allowing a single Bulldog to reach third base.

Kevin Pearce, who was credited with the Pack's last mound victory way back when, was tagged with the loss. He didn't pitch that bad of a giving up only two earned runs before being lifted in the seventh, but the seven errors squelched any chance he ever had of walking away with the win.

Harris aided his own cause with three hits, while Kevin Widner and David Johnston led the Midland offenisye attack with two hits apiece.

The Steers didn't waste any time getting out in front. After a scoreless first frame, they busted out of the gate for four runs in their half of the second. Midland gave them a helping hand with an incredible five errors. and Big Spring didn't waste a one. Destruction came twofold as second baseman Steve Evans' two run single did the damage to Midland on the scoreboard, and Billy Hayes' body dealt them a blow on the field. Hayes collided with Pack catcher Roger Copeland while trying to score, and broke the Tall City lad's nose. Hayes was tossed out of the game for not sliding, but it was little consolation to Copeland.

The Steers added another run in the third on a solo home run by catcher Kyle Pfieffer, and yet another in the seventh on - you guessed it - a Midland error.

The 'Dogs never really threatened in the game, as three double plays killed rallies before they even got off the drawing board. Midland will be home with Permian Thursday afternoon . The 5-4A tilt will

"If you've got to fall behind 16-1," said Washington Coach Dick Motta, "it's best to do it at the start of the Motta's Bullets did precisely that in the opening game of their National Basketball Association quarter-final best-of-seven playoff series at Houston Tuesday night, then rallied and beat the Rockets 111-101.

"There was no place for us to hide in the first quarter," said Motta. "If I could have gone home then. I would

Instead Motta stuck around and watched his club outscore the Rockets 23-5 in the final six minutes of the second quarter for a 46-46 halftime tie. The Bullets went ahead to stay 71-69 on a jumper by Phil Chenier with 31/2 minutes left in the third period and pulled away despite 14 points in the fouth quarter by the Rockets' Mike Washington's bench provided the impetus, rookie center-forward Mitch Kupchak pouring in a career-high 32 points and guard Larry Wright scoring 14. Among the starters, Elvin Hayes scored 22 and Chenier 20.

Newlin led the Rockets with 24 points and Rudy Tomjanovich scored

Rebels capture 5-4A golf title from three strokes back here Tuesday afternoon on the final 18 holes of play to capture the District 5-4A golf championship at Maxwell Municipal

Golf Course. The Rebels shot a final round 300 to overtake San Angelo for the title. Lee finished with a 1505 total, while the Bobcats finished second with a 1509, after shooting a 307 Tuesday. Both Lee and San Angelo will now advance to the regional golf tournament April 27-28 at Lubbock's Meadowbrook Golf Midland High, which had been 19 strokes behind Lee going into Tuesday's action, shot a final round 299, the best of the day, but it wasn't quite good enough to earn them a regional berth. The Bulldogs' Shayne Berry had the best individual round of the afternoon with a 70.

Lee's Steve Wise shot a 73 to finish on top in the 5-4A individual medalist race with a 286. Three strokes back was Marshall Brown of San Angelo at 289. Wise's teammate, Billy Sitton, fourth at 296. Other top medalist finishers were Joe Terrazus, San Angelo, 297; Kelly Eng. Midland, 298; Kyle Rowland, Lee, 299; Mike Orren, 323 at Maxwell, winning the struggle for fourth place with Cooper. Permian finished with a 1552 total, while Cooper was a stroke back at 1553.

Bobcats nip Rebels, 2-1

SAN ANGELO - Robert E. Lee's Rebels dropped a 2-1 heart-breaker to the San Angelo Central Bobcats Tuesday afternoon to open the second half of the District 5-4A baseball race

Trailing 2-0 going into the seventh inning, the Rebels loaded the bases and scored one run, but it all ended when Dwayne Vest fanned with three runners left stranded on the bases.

Mike Richard and Mark Mullen, a pair of juniors, hooked up in a great dual with both righthanders tossing a Central took a 2-0 lead off Richard in the bottom of the first inning. Joe Paul Bramhall doubled past first and Jody Martinez walked. Carl Brainard doubled in Bramhall and scored what proved to be the winning run moments later when Richard uncorked a wild pitch.

Mullen, a 6-2, 210-pounder, walked three and fanned 10 Rebs in chalking up the big win for the Bobcats and the big junior had a no-hitter going for five innings before Lee catcher Jeff Mathews hit a double.

Lee had its shot in the seventh, but lost the services of its top hitter in Todd Clements in the sixth inning when the junior outfielder was thrown out of the game for protesting a play

In the seventh, Brad Wright led things off with a single, but pinchhitter John Hopkins struck out. Mullen also fanned David Pitts, but hit John White with a pitch and walked Mathews to load the bases.

Vest struck out to end the game, giving Lee a 14-9 season mark and a 0-1 loop reading. San Angelo, mean-while, is now 11-9 on the year and 1-0

Lee faces Odessa High in Odessa Thursday in a makeup game while the Bobcats also have a makeup game with Abilene Cooper in Abilene

Craig Van Horn will be Coach Ernie Johnson's choice to face the Bronchos on Thursday. Then the Rebs return home Saturday to face Cooper.

In other 5-4A games Tuesday, Big Spring blanked Midland, 7-0 and Odessa upended Cooper, 5-3. The Odessa Permian-Abilene game was rained out and will be played at 2 p.m. today in Odessa.

NEW YORK (AP) — Charges of irregularities in the United States Boxing Championships, promoted by Don King and sponsored by ABC-TV have taken a bizarre twist with reports that two persons involved in the tournament received anonymous

The two were boxer Ike Fluellen and fight promoter Harlan Haas, both of Houston.

Fluellen told the Houston Post Tuesday that he was receiving six or seven threatening calls a night, Fluellen was supposed to have participated in the tournament but was dropped when ABC obtained his affidavit stating that he was approached by promoter Chris Cline about obtaining top ranking from Ring Magazine despite a year's Haas, who is a correspondent for Ring Magazine and a frequent representative of Houston-area fighters, said he received an envelope that contained newspaper clippings of gangland crimes over which his name had been penciled.

The threats were revealed the same day ABC announced it had appointed Michael Armstrong, former chief counsel to the Knapp Commission, to head its investigation of "irregularities and possible corruption in the United States Boxing Championships.' The Knapp Commission was responsible for exposing police corruption in New York and involved testimony by Frank Serpico, whose story was made into a movie and later a television series.

Fluellen, a member of the Bellair police force in Houston, said, "If this isn't organized/crime. I'm not a policeman. I'm not paranoid, but I'm almost afraid to start my car without looking under the hood. I do look under the hood."

Bellrings for Ruthven

By The Associated Press

Disregard Dick Ruthven's spring training record. It is the regular season that counts. The Atlanta right-hander ran his record to 3-0 Tuesday night with a five-hit, 10-strikeout, 4-1 victory over the San Diego Padres. During spring training. Ruthven was cuffed around for a 9.43 earned run average. But on the baseball calendar it is no longer spring. 'Somebody rung a bell," Ruthven said of the regular season. "As soon as the season started, I knew I would be ready. I might have given somebody ulcers in the spring, but not

The hit was the 2,842nd and home run No. 268 for Robinson in a shining career that extends back to 1959. But it was only his third appearance this season, since he has been reduced to part-time status in the twilight of his outstanding career.

"It's tough when you go up and pinch hit," said Robinson, whose fabled glove already has been retired to Baseball's Hall of Fame. "It takes a special kind of guy and I don't think I'm that kind of guy.

Cleveland Manager Frank Robinson talked with reliever Dave LaRoche and decided to let the lefthander pitch to the right-handed hitting Robinson.

"Frank probably looked up and said, 'Here comes old Brooksie. It's a tailor-made double play," said Brooks Robinson.

But the ball went up and out instead of into the ground, as the Cleveland manager had hoped.

"They did nothing wrong," said Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver. "It was just Brooksie rising to the occasion, fighting off good pitches until LaRoche finally missed.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - The Philadelphia Flyers thought they could do without Reggie Leach and Wayne Stephenson during the regular

But both players proved otherwise in the fifth game of the National Hockey League quarter-final playoff series against the Toronto Maple

Leach was benched at various stages of the regular season when Flyers Coach Fred Shero lost confidence in the strong-shooting winger. And Stephenson, a goalie, was allowed to go home in a fit of pique over a salary hassle.

Leach worked his way back into the lineup and wound up with 32 goals and 14 assists, far off his previous season's production of 61-30. Stephenson finally decided that playing hockey was better than auditing books, and returned to win 12 games as the Flyers won their

Tuesday night, Leach scored both goals in a 2-0 victory, while Stephenson stopped 21 Maple Leafs' shots for his second career playoff shutout. The victory gave the Flyers a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven game series, which returns to Toronto for Game Six Thursday night.

Ironically, Leach, one of the most powerful goal scorers in the league, burned Toronto goalie Mike Palmateer with two tantalizing short shots that almost crawled into the net.

Otherwise, Palmateer, a rookie, was even more sensational than Stephenson. The Leafs' goalie stopped 37 other Flyers' shots. Several times he was almost knocked into his net by the force of bullet-like Philadelphia "I'm a playoff player," said Leach, whose goal in overtime last Sunday gave the Flyers a 6-5 victory, tying the series. "This game was really satisfying to me. I was having a bad year this season. I made up my mind to work hard in the last five or six games and get ready for the playoffs. Leach's first goal came in the opening period when Orest Kintook a rebound of a long drive by Bob Dailey. Kindrachuk was just to the left of the net. "I yelled to 'O' (Kindrachuk)

Leach made it 2-0 with 4:43 left in the final period, lifting a soft shot over Palmateer from a scramble in front of the net. "I don't know how it happened," Leach said, "All I know is that a (Toronto) defenseman knocked me down, and I was flat on my back. and I got my stick on it and backhanded it in." Stephenson would not talk about his salary problem or why he decided to go home and pursue his accounting trade, then reversed himself and came back to the Flyers. He was typically modest after his third straight triumph in the series. "A goaltender is only as good as the team in front of him," said Stephenson, pressed into action late in the second game for beleagured Bernie Parent. "The win is all that really counts. The shutout just makes "The big thing," said Stephenson,

"is that I want to play. I haven't been happy sitting. Fred knows that."

Kings spill Boston, 3-1

BOSTON (AP) - Rogie Vachon of the Los Angeles Kings was loose and recalling one of his games with the mighty Montreal Canadiens about 10 years ago. That spelled victory for the Kings and defeat for the Boston

Vachon turned in a spectacular 39save effort as the Kings remained alive in the National Hockey League's quarter-final playoffs Tuesday night with a 3-1 victory over the Bruins.

The Kings, who lost to the Bruins in their first three games, now have won two in a row and get a chance to tie the best-of-seven series Thursday night at Los Angeles. A seventh game, if necessary, would be at Boston Sunday night.

"I felt sharper tonight," Vachon said. "I was a lot looser. At the start of the third period, I remembered a playoff game in Boston when I was with Montreal in '67 or '68. We won 2-1 in the second overtime for the series. I thought tonight was the same kind of game. I just had that flash."

Stung by a power play goal by Dave Schultz in the first period, the Bruins tied the score 1-1 in the second period during a 19-shot barrage at Vachon. Rick Middleton got the goal when Gregg Sheppard's rebound went in off his skate. Then, with the third period just one minute old, the Kings got a big break. Bob Murdoch, on a two-on-one break, had his shot kicked out by Boston goalie Gerry Cheevers. However, Boston defenseman Brad Park accidentally put the puck into an open net, giving the Kings a 2-1 lead.

The Bruins went all out to pull even, but Vachon continually frustrated them with acrobatic saves. Then, the Boston attack faltered when referee Dave Newell called a hooking penalty on Sheppard at 14:38. The Kings clinched the triumph on Mike Murphy's goal into an empty net with one second remaining.

New England Coach Harry Neale was critical of his team's play. "Our team didn't play very well in the whole series," Neale said. "And we capped it off tonight. Even the game we won we didn't play well." "I don't know why," Neale added.

I'm not looking forward to next year. I suppose I will think of next year tomorrow, after I get up. Quebec goaltender Richard Brodeur stopped 19 New England shots and was supported by goals from Andre Boudrias, Serge Bernier and Bob Fitchner The underdog Oilers, meanwhile, braced themselves for more of the patented Aeros' roughness. Playercoach Glen Sather said Tuesday that, he had great respect for Houston's offensive power.

"They finished first in the league," he said. "They know how to handle the puck and they know how to score goals. We can only beat them by getting the best possible effort from everybody.

Martin skips Yanks' tightrope

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) - Fiery, combative Billy Martin is walking a tightrope as boss of the beleaguered New York Yankees.

One slip and the little gut fighter, survivor of countless on-and-off-thefield brawls, may find his managerial career following the same imponderable course that marked his abbreviated tenures first with Minnesota, then Detroit and finally

Call them the "Second Time Around

What mysterious quirk is there in the personality of a man who can take a baseball club, turn it into an instant winner and then suddenly find himself

Television commercials kid about fading popularity in hawking their deodorants and mouthwashes. With Billy Martin, it is nothing so personal. His abrupt falls from grace in the past apparently can be traced almost exclusively to an unbending independence and an arrogance in dealing with his employers.

In the case of George Steinbrenner,

Ohio State faces probe from NCAA investigator

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) Ohio State University Athletic Director follows the lodging of charges. that OSU coaches:

The athletic director, saying he was "not directly involved" in the visit, declined to discuss the matter further, other than to say he believed it was a routine probe which always

The investigation stems from stories printed in the Michigan State University student newspaper last August and September which alleged -Promised and gave money to

-Paid police officers and an Ohio high school coach to transport prospective players to the Columbus campus for visits. -Paid for expensive meals and a stubborn and ironwilled individualist himself, this could be catastrophic for Martin.

Steinbrenner didn't create a shipbuilding empire by being a shrinking violet. Neither did he throw his hard-earned millions into baseball without expecting some deference from the men to whom he is paying, in many cases, unrealistic salaries.

Returning to Yankee Stadium to find his gold-plated Yankees mired in the cellar after losing eight of their first 10 games. Steinbrenner called the team into the locker room Tuesday, gave them a good chewing out and handed Manager Martin a tentative vote of confidence.

"One acorn doesn't make a fall," he said. "We'll snap back." Then he acknowledged he had to treat baseball as he does his business. "In a big corporation, if the earnings are poor, what do you do? You replace the president," he said. "In baseball, it's the manager. His job is to produce or else."

Martin may have anticipated this punch earlier in the week when, before starting the calamitous series with the expansion Toronto Blue Jays, he quipped: "If I'm gonna be fired, I'm gonna be fired my way."

Martin's managerial career has followed a fixed pattern. Aggressive, thoroughly likeable, good in his relationship with players, he has moved into dormant situations and produced winners. Then, when apparently on top of the baseball world, he has been dumped.

Some have said he has a faculty for heel.

alienating his bosses through sheer bull-headedness.

Billy took a losing team at Min-nesota and, in the first year, led the Twins to the divisional championship. A month later he was fired. He went to Detroit in 1971 and next year had the Tigers atop the American League East. He was let out in 1973, picking up a job with Texas. He brought the Rangers from sixth to second before being let out in 1974.

Regular writers covering the Yankees say that a majority of players side with Martin in confrontations with Steinbrenner. Martin is said to have a talent for gaining the confidence of his men. But this could work to his ultimate disadvantage if Steinbrenner should ever suspect that his manager is seeking to turn players against him-not that this is the case.

Reports involving such things as the Sandy Alomar trade, the acquisition of shortstop Bucky Dent and rumored attempts to unload outspoken pitcher Dock Ellis have painted Martin as a man stoutly defending his players against unconscionable management.

Martin is correct in brooking no interference from Steinbrenner or anyone else in the handling of his team. You have to admire his grit.

But he must carry water on both shoulders. He must win the respect and confidence of the players. At the same time, he cannot have an adversary relationship with the man who pays the freight.

The latter could be Billy's achilles

Quiet, young kids seize fate of Baltimore Birds

By THOMAS BOSWELL The Washington Post

BALTIMORE - The Baltimore Orioles locker room is silent now. Gone are Frank Robinson's Kangaroo Court, Paul Blair's rock'n roll, Reggie Jackson's State of the Buck messages and the chirping of two dozen cocky. boisterous, pennant hungry Birds.

"This is the quietest bunch of ball players I ever saw," said Brooks Robinson, his soft voice the loudest thing in the crowded clubhouse. "These new kids never say a word."

The old Orioles are gone. Since last opening day alone 14 of the 25 players on the roster have changed.

Seldom has a club gone through so radical a transformation as these Orioles. For better or worse, the future of the O's franchise is on the Memorial Stadium field right now.

What Oriole fans see on the Birds' 25-man roster now is basically what they will get, not just for the next few weeks but probably for the next several seasons. Over the last 20 years the Orioles built the best record in baseball with the jewels mined from their rich farm system. Now the AAA level of that system has been plucked of every feather. Every promising player in Baltimore's high minors has been called up and given a shot at a job in this time of distress. Either these young birds fly or the Orioles fall. There is no one behind them to take their places and the O's aren't planning to join the free-agent sweepstaeks.

As general manager Hank Peters "We now have a vacuum at the AAA level. Our pennant-winning team at Rochester last year has been almost completely dispersed through the expansion draft, trades and the players we have brought up."

It is appropriate that in a time of crisis when the free-agent wars and simple old age have disassembled a once powerful team, the Orioles should look to the minors.

The source of the Orioles' 20-year success was simple and indisputable. The O's signed and developed a dozen players in the late '50s and '60s who made at least one All-Star team during their Bird days: Jim Palmer. Boog Powell, Dave McNally, Blair, Mark Belanger, Dave Johnson, Milt Pappas, Andy Etchebarren, Steve Barber, Ron Hansen, Chuck Estrada and, of course, Brooks Robinson, the only player to spend 23 seasons with one team.

What these dozen farmhands did not produce on the field, they brought in trade, e.g., Frank Robinson for Pappas. Ironically, the Orioles' gradual slide in the '70s from being the scourge of baseball from 1969 to 1971 to the role of just another solid contender, can also be laid at the farm system's door.

After those dozen all-stars blossomed in the '60s, Baltimore's minor leagues produced only one Bird who broke in during the '70s who has yet made an All-Star team - Bobby For the most part, the highly touted farmhands of the '70s - Don Baylor,

Al Bumbry, Rich Coggins, Doug DeCinces, Jim Fuller, Paul Mitchell, Terry Crowley and Dyar Miller have been at best slight disappointments and at worst absolute flops.

As Brooks and Frank Robinson, Powell, McNally, Mike Cuellar, Biair

because of advancing age or simply grew ancient in the Baltimore harness, they were never adequately replaced with youngsters. The Orioles' shrewd front office kept the team near the top for the past two years with a pair of larcenies pulled off within 24 hours in December 197. Lee May, Ken Singleton and Mike Torrez were spirited out of the National League in trades for five players who have since produced almost nothing (McNally, Coggins, Rob Andrews, Engs Cabell and Bill Kirkpatrick). Had it not been for Andy Messersmith and a judge, those thefts might have been enough to keep the Orioles above 30 victories a year through the decade

When Peters got Jackson and Ken Holtzman for Baylor and Torres last and Don Buford were either traded April, the Orioles seemed to have done it again, stealing in shrewd trades what they were no longer developing themselves.

Then the full meaning of free agency came home to Peters and the Orioles. It was nothing less than a death knell for Baltimore pennant hopes for the foreseeable future.

Baltimore executives could not kid themselves. They knew exactly what attendance their town could give them. "The absolute top is 1.2 million," said Peters, adding that "more realistically" the average (for a winning team) is just under a

You project your future attendance, then apply it to a budget and a payroll," said Peters. "If you put the financial jigsaw together and the pieces don't fit, you have to take a look at what you're doing.

New 49er coach thinks peace with boss possible

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ken Meyer, who replaces untameable Monte Clark as head coach of the San Francisco 49ers, says he won't have any problems getting along with controversial General Manager Joe

"The lines of demarcation have been spelled out and I'm perfectly satisfied with what I have." said Meyer, until Tuesday the offensive coordinator of the rival Los Angeles

"I never get involved in the Xs and Os," added Thomas. "The coach makes the decisions on the field and I'm responsible for personnel—the draft and cutting.

Both Thomas and Meyer said the new coach would have input in personnel decisions, but Thomas will

Texas blanks Cougs

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)-Kem Wright twirled a six-hitter and Billy Gleaton had three RBIs without a hit Tuesday as Texas blanked Houston 4-0 in Southwest Conference play.

Gleaton grounded out twice to score runs and added a sacrifice fly to provide hitless punch for the have the final voice if there are conflicts.

The naming of Meyer, 51, Tuesday by 49er President Edward J. DeBartolo Jr. ended a two-week search during which four persons, all offense-oriented, were seriously considered, Thomas said. He did not name the three not chosen.

The search started when Clark, who guided the 49ers to an 8-6 record in his first year as a National Football League coach, was ousted because he refused to renegotiate a contract which gave him much of the power now wielded by Thomas.

Clark had indicated that while he was willing to give up some of his control over personnel, the measure of authority he felt he needed would not be compatible with Thomas' role. Thomas said he decided on Meyer, a 49er assistant coach in 1968, because he had been with winning teams and knew the NFL's western division and its personnel

'It's tough most of the time to have to select an assistant because he has no track record," Thomas said, "but I think we have a fine head coach who has been in some very good programs.

for an undisclosed sum was the fulfillment of the dream of any assistant and promised to deliver "an aggressive, - hard-hitting; welldisciplined football team."

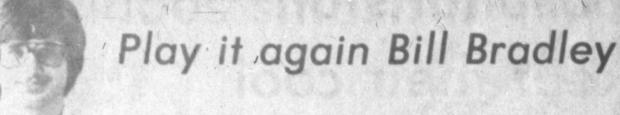

"One thing I know from my years in football is that you win with the defense," he added. "Offensively we want a balanced attack. We will have a team on the field that will move the football and score.

Meyer declined to comment on Clark's departure, saying he did not know exactly what happened and "that's all behind me and I'm looking forward to something else.

Meyer has been an assistant coach for 24 seasons, starting at his alma mater, Denison College in Ohio, and coaching at Wake Forest, Florida State and Alabama before joining the 49ers in 1968.

He was an assistant under Weeb Ewbank with the New York Jets for four season before joining Chuck Knox at the Rams in 1973. Meyer had worked with Knox at Wake Forest.

"He is greatly responsible for the Rams' productive offense, which led he NFC in points scored in 1976," Knox said. "He deserves a fair share of credit for the Rams' 44-11-1 record SPORTS CHATTER

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

It was one of those scenes that will live on in my memory forever. I guess it's what I like best about sports; the memories. The pleasant ones seem to mirror everything that's good about

Like that eventful day in June of 1969. I was only 14 then, but I'll never forget it. Since I was old enough to walk, I had always worshipped Mickey Mantle. All through little league, I emulated his every move, and dreamed of someday being just like him, minus the bad knee. I had scrapbooks filled with his heroic achievements, and I never forgave myself if I missed him on TV.

But on that sunny Sunday afternoon in the Bronx, I wasn't watching him on a television set. I was one of the 60,000 fans there in Yankee Stadium for "Mickey Mantle Day." They were retiring his pinstriped uniform, with the big, beautiful number "7" on the back forever, and sending it air freight to the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y. I can't put into words what I felt then as we gave the Mick a seven-minute long standing ovation, but I can tell you I'll never forget it.

Nor will I forget the memory of Edwin Moses and Mike Shine embracing last summer before 70,000° people in the Montreal Olympic Stadium after their one-two finish in the 400-meter finals of the Olympic

Or the memory of Chris Chambliss fighting through hundreds of crazed, happy fans as he tried to circle the. bases after his pennant-winning ninth inning homer off Mark Littell in the fifth game of the 1976 American League playoffs last October.

TO THAT list of unforgettable memories. I recently added one more. It was the sight of Al McGuire, the tough, gruff, streetfighter from New York City sitting at courtside in Atlanta's Omni near the end of the NCAA basketball championship three weeks ago, and trying desparately to hold back the tears, as his Marquette University team gave their coach one helluva going away present - the national title.

It was the perfect ending to a legendary career. The storybookfinish that happens to all great men of

Well, almost all.

WESTERN AUTO

A few Sundays past, the end came for two more people, but their farewell performance was not quite like McGuire's. There was no title at stake, and the eyes of the sporting nation weren't rivoted on them. A meager 5,389 fans were present at Detroit's Cobo Arena, as the

There was still the playoffs ahead for Detroit. But for New York, their coach Red Holtzman, and 33-year-old forward Bill Bradley, it was the end. There will be no tomorrow. They finished with a 40-42 record, ten games behind Atlantic Division winner Philadelphia, and out of contention for a post-season berth.

IT WAS Holtzman and Bradley's swan song to the NBA. They were retiring, and neither one could see fit to sit down and shed tears of joy like McGuire, because their glory days had come . . . and gone.
Although I've never met him, I've always had a great deal of respect for Bradley, the former Rhodes scholar from Princeton who led the Knicks to world championships in 1970 and 1973. He was the unique professional athlete who, as the New York Times once put it: "did his job in the way it was supposed to be done, simply and without frillis.

Bradley never did look like an athlete should look. He didn't have an especially powerful body. It was sort of lean and lanky. Often times, you found yourself waiting to see somebody like Bob Lanier elbow poor 'Dollar Bill" right out of Madison Square Garden. And that heavy beard of his made him look like a guy on a one-month long bender. But looks are deceiving folks.

While Bradley wasn't the most overpowering forward in basketball, he may have been the smartest, as well as one of the finest open shooters the game has ever known. He was the epitomy of team play, and when the Knicks won their two crowns, they did it exactly that way - with team play.

BECAUSE BRADLEY didn't have the opportunity to go out a winner like McGuire, he found himself going back into the past, to another day, another time not so very long ago. He said as much in his best-selling book, "Life on the Run," which was released last

"I recall, for about the 50th time this season," he wrote, "how it was in 1970, the first time we won the NBA championship. I stood at midcourt, in Madison Square Garden, two fists raised, chills coursing up and down my spine. Since I was nine-years-old, I had played basketball to become the best. Individual honors were nice but insufficient. An Olympic gold medal gave satisfaction, but it was not topflight basketball. The NBA was clearly the highest caliber in the world, and there I was a part of the best team.

"All those statements of team pics, hometown Pistons lost to the New York Knicks, 144-126, in the NBA school; all the hours of loneliness, regular season finale for both teams. a gym somewhere in the world; all the near misses in the smaller championships - high school and college - of America's sports hierarchy; all the missed opportunities in other fields; all the denied personal enjoyment; all the conflicts supressed and angers swallowed — everything seemed worth it for the feeling at center court on May 8, 1970."

Bradley said one more thing in his book that really made an impression on me. It revealed his feelings towards retirement. I have always wondered what goes through a professional athlete's mind when those final days, hours and minutes deteriorate, and the finish line keeps getting closer. What are they feeling Regret over not having accomplished the goals they had set for themselves many years before?

Fear of an uncertain future, where your every move will no longer be guided by a coach, owner or agent, and your meal money will no longer by supplied for you?

Joy maybe, of not having to agonize through another grueling training camp? What?

'There is a terror behind the dream of being a professional ballplayer," Bradley wrote. "It comes as a slow realization of finality and of the frightening unknowns which the end brings. When the playing is over, one can sense that one's youth has been spent playing a game, and now both the game and youth are gone.'

Play it again Bill. Play it again.

Hospital staff kept their cool

MONAHANS — "I told her it would be a long time before I visited her in the hospital again," said one eye witness as she recounted her ex-periences with one of the two tornadoes that were confirmed as touching down here Tuesday.

Mrs. Beverly Boase, society editor of The Monahans News, was visiting a friend in the Ward County Hospital when the disaster, reportedly the first tornado to occur in the town, struck. Her own car was destroyed while sitting in the hospital's parking lot.

"I couldn't hear the roar everyone talks about. All, I remember is flying glass and it was windy. Many of the hospital staff put their own bodies over patients to cover them from the debris," said Mrs. Boase.

She did not have enough praise for the hospital staff, the townspeople who sent food in, paramedics from surrounding towns, Kermit nurses and the off-duty Monahans nurses that showed up. "I'm totally grateful how everyone reacted," said the hospital volunteer.

She said that it was lucky they saw it coming because it hit "a couple of minutes after they spotted it. It was an awfully long two minutes."

Robert K. Hill, the hospital administrator, "gave the word and everyone went into action," said Mrs.

"Only a few patients panicked, but nurses quieted them. I was impressed with their (nurses) calmness. I am proud of the hospital staff. Their only concern was for the patients. They never wailed about their own homes or families," she added.

Mrs. Boase noted that the hospital was evacuated only because of the possibility of fire when the power was eventually restored. The patients, the ones that were not dismissed, were taken to Odessa Medical Center Hospital and Kermit Hospital. She said she heard that approximately 20-30 people injured in the tornado were treated at the Monahans hospital.

Helicopters, said Mrs. Boase, began flying over the hospital and landing on the facility's back parking lot almost immediately after the tragedy oc-

Enriched Flavor tobacco seen as major factor in unprecedented smoker move to low tar.

Since its introduction, MERIT has become one of the most popular new cigarettes in twenty years.

A popularity largely responsible for a significant growth in low tar smoking.

The reason: 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. Tobacco that delivers extra flavor without the usual corresponding increase in tar.

The kind of flavor smokers can switch to—and stick with.

Here are the taste-test results which show why smokers are switching to MERIT. If you smoke, you'll be interested.

Tests Prove Taste

MERIT and MERIT 100's were both tested against a number othigher tar cigarettes. The results proved conclusively that Enriched Flavor' tobacco does boost tastewithout the usual increase in tar.

Overall, smokers reported they liked the taste of both MERIT and MERIT 100's as much as the taste of the higher tar cigarettes tested.
