Bad winter weather may chill consumers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration sharply revised upward Friday the forecasted increase in consumer prices by the end of the year, blaming the change mostly on bad weather in January and February.

Figures released by Budget Director Bert Lance now forecast a 6.7 per cent hike in consumer prices for the year Jan. 1 through Dec. 31, which is 1.4 per cent higher than the 5.3 per cent increase the administration had forecast just two months ago.

At the same time, the administration reduced its estimate in the growth of the Gross National Product. The budget office said it now estimated GNP growth of 4.9 per cent for the year, compared to 5.4 per cent predicted two months ago.

Charles Schultze, director of the Council of Economic Advisors, said severe winter weather in January and February had resulted in higher food prices. He also said there were higher natural gas and other fuel prices for the period.

The upward revision was not totally the result of the winter weather, Schultze said, adding that there were some other things like rising coffee prices.

Schultze said the administration did not believe the figures forecast a return to a major higher inflationary shift, but that "what we have is a temporary blip. It sure doesn't help consumers but it doesn't indicate a return of renewed inflationary pressure."

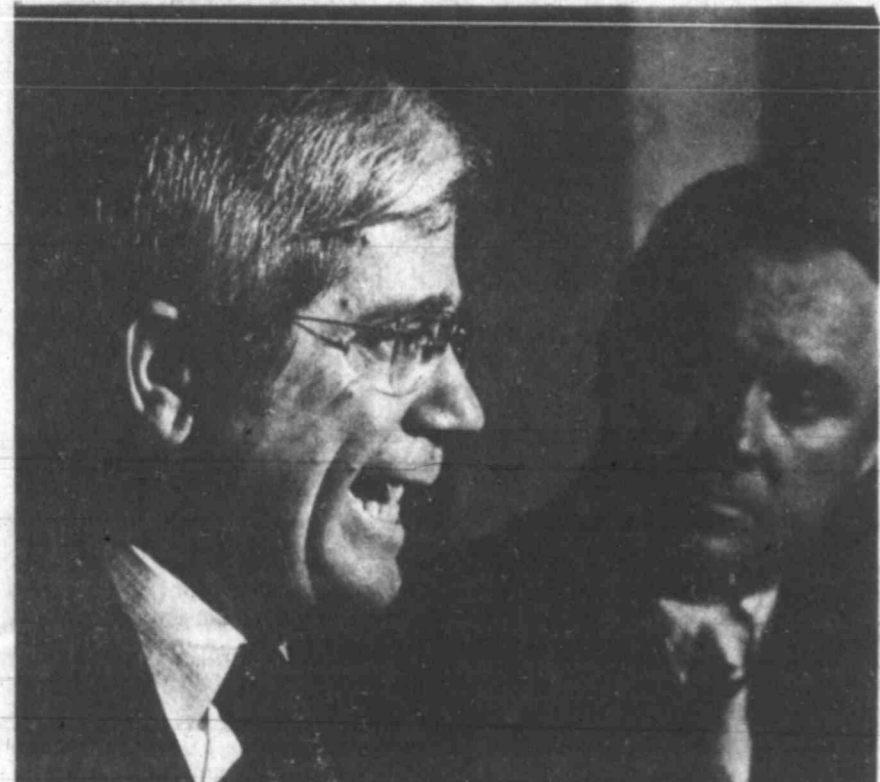

This latest economic forecast was included in an analysis sent to Congress on Friday that also included a budget deficit revised sharply downward. Lance said the deficit is now expected to be $48.7 billion, $19.3 billion less than had been anticipated in February.

The administration's scrapping of the $50 rebates and business tax incentives accounted for $12.2 billion of the decrease, while another $6.1 billion came from lesser government spending than had been estimated in February.

Wednesday, the Commerce Department released figures putting the Gross National Product for the first quarter of 1977 at an annual rate of 5.2 per cent. The same figures showed an inflation rate of 5.8 per cent for the year.

State GOP head raps Carter energy plan

Texas' Republican party chairman, together with Mayor Ernest Angelo and former Odessa Mayor Jim Reese, Friday afternoon blasted President Carter's energy conservation program in a news conference at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Party chairman Ray Hutchison is in West Texas to attend a GOP leadership conference today at the Midland Hilton.

Friday, however, he was saying the Democratic President had failed to show proper leadership in trying to solve the energy problem.

"In all of his proposals, not a single one provides a stimulus for increased production of domestic oil and gas supplies. The OPEC (Oil Producing and Exporting Countries) must be cheering Mr. Carter's proposal," he said in a prepared statement.

"I don't think it is an overstatement for me to say that for the people of Texas, this has been a very bad week," Hutchison added.

He said the President's proposal poses the greatest threat to the Lone Star state since the 1952 Democratic proposal for federal takeover of Texas' tideland areas.

Several times during the news conference he blasted the Democratic Party although he said at the outset, "I don't intend for my comments to be partisan."

Hutchison also had unkind words for two of the prime energy advisors in the Carter Administration, James Schlesinger and David Freeman.

He described Schlesinger as a man who was "banned by Nixon, fired by Ford and resurrected by Carter." He said Freeman was a poor choice because of his prior advocacy of strong federal control over the oil industry.

He said letting the "market place fix the supply" is the best solution.

Mayor Angelo said there are large reservoirs of oil for potential exploration in off-shore areas near other states, but these states have not taken the initiative to look for oil.

Hutchison agreed that coal must be an important source of energy in the future, but asked, "What are you going to do in the meantime? He (Carter) has taken the attitude that you do nothing but tax and tax and tax."

"We don't have an energy shortage. We have an energy production shortage," Hutchison said he has mixed feelings about the likely outcome of the Carter proposal.

On the one hand, he sees "public relations gimmickry" of Carter coming through to the American people and possibly lessening his effectiveness. He said an aroused public could defeat the energy proposal despite a Democratic-controlled Congress, such as was done with the common situs picketing bill.

But on the other hand, Hutchison fears "Our people don't perceive the true impact of this on themselves."

He said five Texas congressmen sit on a special committee to review the President's energy proposal, but said the congressmen may not all be unified. He added, "The committee is clearly stacked in favor of almost anything the President wants."

He said once the President's proposal makes it past the committee a "steamroller effect" may take over and get it past the House.

Reese also blasted Carter's proposal and said, "This is the most massive taxation program in the history of this country" and together with the income redistribution aspect will hurt oil and gas distribution.

New wells could be gold mines

By J.P. SMITH
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The invisible winners in President Carter's energy message may be the nation's oil companies.

In a series of technical decisions that have gone largely unnoticed in this week of presidential television appearances, the oil industry has won from the administration what one senior industry official described as "a lot of pluses."

These pluses would add up to hundreds of millions of dollars in additional revenues for the industry by 1980, mostly in the form of subtle price increases that would occur from relaxations of current oil price controls.

There would be no federal tax rebates to compensate the paying public for these increases, which would show up in higher prices for gasoline and all other products made from oil.

An analysis

The oil companies and industry trade associations such as the American Petroleum Institute have had an intense lobbying effort under way. It began weeks before Carter's inauguration, and reached saturation level in recent weeks.

One aide to presidential energy adviser James R. Schlesinger said, "We've been under carpet bombing by lobbyists of every stripe."

The lobbying continued even last weekend, as final details of the energy plan were being wrapped up. One decision of tremendous potential importance to the industry had to do with a definition — the substitution of the words "2 1-2 miles" for "5 miles" in one part of the President's proposals. The President apparently did not finally decide to make this change sought by the industry until sometime Monday.

Under current federal price controls, there are two basic categories of oil produced in the United States: old oil and new oil. New oil is essentially oil from wells drilled after 1972.

The price of old crude oil is frozen at $5.25 a barrel. New crude oil can be sold for as much as $11.25 per barrel.

What the Carter plan does for the industry — perhaps the most important thing — is quietly to create a third category of oil that would not be subject to price controls at all, and could rise to the so-called "world" or uncontrolled price of more than $13 a barrel.

A second important plus for the industry is a provision under which the price of new oil would automatically rise each year with inflation, and the annual price increases would not be subject to congressional veto, as they are now.

A third technical change involves the "decontrol" of gasoline prices.

Big Spring draws state panel's nod

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Industrial Commission voted Friday to ask the legislature for an additional $2 million in economic aid for Big Spring, which is suffering economically from the loss of Webb Air Force Base.

A delegation led by Big Spring councilman Ralph McLaughlin appeared before the 12-member commission during its quarterly meeting here.

McLaughlin said the $2 million would be used as "seed money" in seeking federal aid to convert the air force base to private use for housing, industry and advertising for plant sites.

He also said Big Spring citizens are raising $350,000 themselves to purchase an additional 200 acres of land adjacent to the base for a local industrial foundation. McLaughlin said Webb officials have said the base will be deserted by Oct. 1.

The Air Force impact statement predicted Big Spring's unemployment would rise 12.8 per cent and its retail sales would dip by $20.2 million. The Air Force statement said up to 2,928 houses will be vacated.

Carter steering head-on

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is steering his energy policy toward a head-on collision with congressional Republicans, pledging to fight to the last vote for a standby gasoline tax.

But Carter emphasized in a Friday news conference that gasoline and other fuel taxes would be refunded to the public through income tax credits or direct payments.

The President's session with reporters was his third nationally televised appearance this week on behalf of his energy package.

"As far as the consumers are concerned, those who conserve a substantial amount of energy will derive a substantial financial benefit," he said, explaining that the energy savers' profit would come out of the pockets of energy wasters.

Asked whether his proposed standby gasoline tax was really just a "bargaining chip" to be traded away for congressional approval of other energy policies, Carter said, "I am deeply dedicated to the gasoline tax and will fight for it until the last vote in the Congress."

Senate Republicans, however, were preparing a "Republican alternative" energy package — reportedly without Carter's gasoline, oil and natural gas taxes and relying instead on "free market" pricing to discourage energy use.

They sought time on nationwide television, perhaps next week, to counter Carter's proposals with their own.

Carter's news conference concentrated on energy, but the President also touched on other issues:

—He said existing federal programs to stimulate mass transit development may be accelerated by the Department of Transportation, and public use of mass transportation would be encouraged by his energy proposals.

—He confirmed previously published reports that he would visit Geneva, Switzerland, to meet with Syrian President Hafiz Assad, during his trip to Europe in early May for an economic conference in London and a conference of NATO nations.

Despite the variety and complexity of Carter's energy proposals presented to a joint session of Congress last Wednesday night, interest at the news conference tended to focus on the question: What will it cost?

Carter's general answer: Not much. He said the total price of his energy policies by 1985 is estimated tentatively at about $4 billion.

Although Carter did not do the arithmetic, that would work out to only about $9.50 per year per family of four, from now until 1985.

Carter did offer some figures to show the financial benefits a family could gain by saving energy under his program.

He has proposed a series of federal taxes on crude oil, to discourage demand, which the White House says would bring some $11.3 billion into the treasury; but Carter said it would be refunded through personal income tax credits or direct payments at the rate of $47 per person, or $188 a year for a family of four.

He has also proposed a "standby" gasoline tax, starting at five cents per gallon and rising as high as 50 cents if gasoline consumption climbs above pre-set targets.

Carter said this tax money would also be returned to the public on an equal per-person basis, making it possible for economy-conscious families to make money on the deal.

Carter offered the example of a family of four which drives 10,000 miles a year in a car that gets 27 miles per gallon. If a gasoline tax of 25 cents per gallon were imposed, he said, this family would pay an additional $91 a year for gasoline; but each family member would get back $125, for a family total of $500 and a yearly profit of $409.

Where would the money come from? Carter said it would flow from those who do not save gasoline, either by limiting their driving or by using

'Outlaw' fire burned on purpose

A fire was raging in the east. It was the work of an outlaw.

The fire was leaping and the smoke was billowing. More than one person called in the alarm.

Fire engines came blaring down the highway. Their tanks were loaded with water to be dispensed in the name of public service.

They were turned aside. The fire was meant to be.

A badman type by the name of Buck McCulley was the villain. He was put up to the job of burning the old building by his boss, Doug Brazil.

What else could he do? He did the right thing.

It was just about noon Friday when the outlaw whipped out his Zippo lighter and touched off the kerosene-soaked wood.

And this stocky guy with the graying moustache, pot belly, cowboy hat and boots armed with spurs wasn't delighted in the least.

It was just another job. He'd stand there and watch the fire. Then, he'd take his four-pronged pitchfork and keep the fire blazing real good.

A couple of so hours after the fire had been lit, Midland Fire Inspector Jerry Petree showed up.

Moments later, Fire Marshal James Roberts drove by and looked over the old, decaying building.

Then, the fire chief, Melvin Little, stopped by and chatted. He didn't stay long.

"We didn't know they were going to burn it," Petree said. Otherwise, the fire wagons would have stayed parked in the fire house.

The fire was legal. It was just across the road from Midland's eastern city limits. And the city had no say-so in what was burned there. But you can bet your last plugged nickel that the firemen would be there to knock out the fire.

On Brazil's orders, McCulley had set fire to the unburned wooden remains of the old and unsightly CJM Packing Plant.

When that old meat-packing plant closed down, Tri-Service Industries took it over and began rendering animal carcasses into dog food and soap.

Then the rendering plant halted production.

Carter raises possibility he will veto tax bill

By SPENCER RICH
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Carter raised the possibility Friday that he will veto the tax bill because the Senate refused to kill provisions he opposes. But he said he won't decide until Congress passes it.

The President made the statement at a press conference Friday morning, after the Senate, in a direct rejection of his requests, had voted 74 to 20 late Thursday to retain two special business tax credits that he wants dropped. The Senate also voted to enlarge the credits from $3.3 billion to $4.1 billion over the fiscal years 1977 and 1978.

"As you know, I am not in favor of continuing the business tax credit that the Senate voted yesterday," Carter said. He added, "My own position against the business tax credit has been very clearly expressed, and I will have to decide at the time the bill gets to my desk, if it passes, whether I can accept it or not."

Before the two Senate votes, many senators, including Finance Committee Chairman Russell B. Long (D-La.) had expressed the belief that the President wasn't all that strongly against the two business provisions and wouldn't veto the bill if they were kept in.

Long went to the White House Friday afternoon to discuss the bill with the President.

After the meeting Long's office issued a statement saying, "... I feel that President Carter has a better understanding of the tax bill in its present form in the Senate, and that the bill is well-balanced with more than 75 per cent of the benefits still going to individuals in the low-and-middle-income brackets." This was a reference to non-controversial provisions permitting larger personal deductions and continuing a number of tax cuts for individuals that would otherwise expire at the end of this calendar year.

One of the two controversial provisions raises the investment tax credit, for business purchasing new equipment, from 10 per cent to 12 per cent for the years 1977 to 1980. This means a firm can subtract from its tax bill 12 per cent of the cost of new equipment. This is intended to spur new investment.

The second provision permits a business, as an alternative to taking the added 2 per cent investment tax credit, to get a tax credit of up to $2,100 for each new person it puts on its payroll in 1977 and 1978. This is intended to spur hiring of new workers by labor-intensive firms.

Last January, Carter asked Congress to approve a one-shot $50-per-person tax rebate to individual taxpayers in order to pump $10.4 billion in purchasing power into the lagging economy. He also requested the investment tax credit increase and a payroll credit somewhat similar to the one in the Senate bill.

Last week, however, he changed his mind, saying the economy had improved. He asked all three provisions be dropped. The Senate readily eliminated the $50 rebate, but on Thursday refused to drop the other two provisions, which are heavily favored by business organizations. Long and many other Democrats argued against the President's position on the business credits.

Asked Friday whether the President as threatening a veto outright over the two provisions, press secretary Jody Powell said, "he was deliberately not excluding a veto. He wants to keep his options open."

Sun Oil's chairman doesn't pan program

DALLAS (AP) — President Carter's position on energy hasn't drawn rave reviews from Big Oil, but the board chairman of Pennsylvania based Sun Co. didn't exactly pan it at the oil company's annual meeting in Dallas.

H. Robert Sharbaugh pledged his company's support and said the Carter program "is an excellent start toward developing a plan which will strengthen the country's energy position and be fair to all Americans."

Sharbaugh's message to stockholders Thursday said he "differs on some of the means proposed to reach the goals," but he "endorses the basic principles" of the Carter plan.

"The country has gone too long without an energy plan," Sharbaugh said. "Now that we have had one presented to us, we must not allow ourselves to be killed by harsh and strident criticism. Unyielding positions by special and narrow interests have done in proposals in the past. We must keep this one alive through calm, reasoned discussion held in a spirit of compromise and dedicated commitment to the nation's interest.

"I believe we have the ability to deal successfully with the crisis, both in the short term and long term, if we have the will to do so. But it won't be easy. And it can't be accomplished without accepting a change in our lives." He said a change in the American lifestyle is inevitable, but it would not mean lowered standards.

Anticipating diversified operations because of the energy crunch, Sun recently reorganized, dropping the word "oil" from its previous corporate name. The company now takes in 14 separate forms with interests in other forms of energy as well as petroleum.

Sunoco Energy Development Co., one of the 14, recently finished initial construction work on its Wyoming coal mine and has already made its first shipment.

Sharbaugh said public understanding is the most important factor in development of a rational national energy policy. He said Sun "supports the concept of a national leadership conference on energy."

Court urged to affirm busing plan

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The Carter Administration entered a major school desegregation case Friday, urging the Supreme Court to affirm a sweeping busing plan to achieve racial balance in every school in Dayton, Ohio.

It was the Administration's most supportive policy statement on court-ordered busing to date.

In a friend of the court brief signed by Atty. Gen. Griffin B. Bell, the Administration rejected claims that the Dayton plan went too far and would accelerate "white flight" from the city.

"Dayton has not fulfilled its duty to eliminate the effects of its racial discrimination," Bell said in the brief.

"The (school board) has not shown that substantial racial separation in student attendance patterns, or the present racial identifiability of schools would have existed but for the discrimination."

The Dayton case, to be argued before the court next Wednesday, has been watched closely to see if the justices — as they seem to have indicated — are ready to set new limits on court-ordered desegregation plans.

Earlier in this term, the Court set aside far-ranging, court-ordered busing plans in Austin, Texas, and Indianapolis.

The entry of the Administration in the Dayton case — along with the personal participation of Bell, an appointee criticized by some civil rights leaders for his desegregation record as a judge — is considered likely to be of some influence on the court.

After years of legal battle, a court-ordered desegregation plan was implemented in Dayton last fall, requiring the busing of more than one-third of the 41,177 students in the city's 68 public schools.

Under the order, each school in the district is to reflect the district's overall student racial makeup — 52 per cent white, 48 per cent black — with an allowable leeway of 15 per cent.

The order, affirmed by a federal appeals court last summer, permits variations in the black-white ratio "in exceptional circumstances."

Dayton school authorities brought the case to the Supreme Court, saying the order went well beyond the action necessary to correct past discriminatory practices.

Soviet's remark causes walkout

MOSCOW (AP) — A top Soviet official said in a Lenin's birthday speech Friday that China was fanning world tensions. The Chinese charge d'affaires walked out in protest.

The incident demonstrated that full-scale propaganda warfare is on again between Moscow and Peking after a six-month lull following the death Sept. 9 of Mao Tse-tung.

Meanwhile, the Chinese held a conference of 7,000 persons to boost industry and Communist policies, and one Chinese official charged that war preparations by the United States and the Soviet Union will eventually lead to world war.

The conference was held at Taching oilfield, a model industrial enterprise. Leaders called on the Chinese to build "a powerful, modern Socialist country as quickly as possible."

The walkout in Moscow occurred during the annual Lenin's birthday address, given this year by Soviet Communist party secretary Mikhail Zimyanin in the huge Kremlin Palace of Congresses, with diplomats from around the world looking on.

During the 1970s, Soviet speakers at celebrations of Lenin's birthday regularly criticized China, and Chinese envoys regularly walked out. The early months after Mao's death saw a truce on the part of the Soviets.

But anti-Soviet propaganda in the Chinese press continued as before, and in the last month, the Soviet press has begun to respond with increasingly tough articles about China.

DEA at work on toughest anti-narcotics laws ever

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Drug Enforcement Administration is putting together the toughest anti-narcotics laws in U.S. history to be sent to Congress this summer, its director said Friday.

They are aimed at an estimated $10 billion in untaxed narcotics revenue as well as jailing criminals, Richard Bensinger said.

"Narcotics trafficking is the biggest untaxed business in the world," he said in an interview at a conference on border crime.

"We need legislation that would have the maximum financial impact. We had one case last year in which the man convicted had a $330,000 house, a Rolls Royce, a Jaguar, $125,000 in cash in the house and huge bank accounts."

Bensinger said the laws in preparation by the Carter administration would allow for seizure of bank accounts and other property acquired through illegal narcotics deals.

In addition, he said he said they would set minimum fixed sentences of possibly 10 years in prison for major heroin traffickers and deny bail to all suspects arrested in narcotics crimes who are illegal aliens, or use false passports or have past convictions of narcotics crimes.

Bensinger said the DEA hopes that the revised sentencing and bail laws will be before Congress by July.

But the seizure of money and property acquired through narcotics dealings is more complicated and may not be ready before 1977, he said.

In 1975, he said, nearly 4,000 people were convicted of heroin and cocaine trafficking.

Friendly suggestion

U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger of New Braunfels has been hinting of late that he may try to unseat U.S. Sen. John Tower in the 1978 elections.

Congressman Krueger has been a real friend of the oil and gas business and, during the 94th Congress, he had an impressive record as a freshman representative.

The 21st Congressional District House Member has received considerable financial support from friends in the petroleum industry in both his 1974 and 1976 campaigns. Many of these friends and supporters would like to see Krueger remain in the House of Representatives, build up his seniority and become a continuing, forceful voice for his district and for West Texas in general.

Senior Tower has become the fifth-ranking Republican in the U.S. Senate and now is the ranking Republican on the important Armed Services Committee. In his 16 years of service in the Senate, Tower has been the most vocal, active and effective voice Texans and the petroleum industry have had in the Congress. His fiscal conservatism and responsibility are needed in Washington more than ever before. It would be a grave mistake to replace him.

The Reporter-Telegram urges Congressman Krueger to remain where he is in Congress. This newspaper also suggests to its West Texas readers that they write to the New Braunfels congressman, pointing out specifically that they would prefer that he not run against Texas' senior senator.

Mr. Krueger's address is 512 Cannon House Office Building, Washington, D.C., 20510.

Let's keep John Tower's effective voice in the United States Senate and Bob Krueger's forceful efforts and leadership in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Five for thirty

Last year, the presidential candidates picked and chose from 30 state primaries on 15 dates in their separate bids for party nomination.

The travel demands, according to Sen. Bob Packwood, virtually dictates that the winners would be those who could still stand after the long primary grind.

Further, the Oregon Republican said in reintroducing his proposal to replace the present plan with a system of five regional primaries, the individual primaries are "grossly inefficient and duplicative." Financial disclosure laws, for instance, demanding reporting twice before each state vote.

Packwood's proposal for a staggered vote in New England, the Great Lakes area, the Southeast, the Great Plains and the West on the second Tuesday of each month from March through July would allow more effective campaigning and greater public access to the candidates.

It would minimize the impact of a single state's results — such as in New Hampshire — in the nominating process.

Senator Packwood's plan merits close consideration if only because it holds the promise of focusing voter attention on qualifications and issues instead of stamina.

'Aging gracefully'

The other day we overheard a man, in speaking of another person, say, "He is aging gracefully."

Now, this is one of the nicest and most complimentary remarks which can be made about a person.

Doesn't that appeal to you? It really should.

It's a doggone cinch that each and every one of us is aging right along ... and those persons who are achieving this normal process gracefully, it seems to us, are enjoying life and getting a great deal more out of it than those who are just aging.

More reliable service preferred

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The financially troubled Postal Service should concentrate on making its undependable deliveries more reliable instead of faster, the Postal Service Commission has urged in a confidential study.

The spotty mail service should hold costs down by cutting back deliveries to five days a week, not by closing needed rural post offices, recommends the long-awaited federal report.

We have obtained an advance copy of the report by the Postal Service Commission, which held 26 days of hearings in 21 cities to determine how the much-maligned mail service might be improved. Congress made the Postal Service a semi-independent agency in 1971 in a move to get it into the black, but Capitol Hill had to kick in over $1 billion last year just to keep the mail moving.

In fact, the postal operation cost twice as much last year as it did in 1968, and the declining service that the 13-cent stamp now buys has made it the target of increasing public resentment. The commission's recommendations, therefore, will have a major impact on the shape of mail delivery in the coming years.

According to the draft report, these are the panel's major suggestions:

— Rural post offices should not be closed to save money. If small post offices had not been closed in recent years, there would be almost 77,000 post offices today instead of 30,000. "Post offices provide major government services, especially to rural America," the study observes.

Closing the small offices to cut costs "hardly seems to be a fair return to the rural taxpayer."

— Mail delivery should be cut back to five days a week. According to a Nielsen survey cited by the commission, 80 per cent of the public favors this approach as the least painful way to cut costs. If Congress adopts this recommendation, Saturday's mail probably will disappear.

— Higher rates should be charged for guaranteed, next-day delivery. Although five-day delivery would be more efficient, those who demand faster service should bear the increased cost, the report advises.

— The number of collection boxes at convenient locations should be increased. More postal facilities should be located where people shop or do business, the study suggests, such as shopping centers and government buildings.

— Post offices should make their hours more convenient to the public. Without increasing the total number of hours, postal facilities should remain open evenings and Saturdays to accommodate people who work.

— Parcel post service should be improved. The report sharply criticized parcel post, where volume has steadily declined since 1953. A major reason is that the bulk mail machinery often mangles packages and sends them to the wrong destinations. "Doubt lingers in our minds," the commissioners said, that the service is doing all it can to make

THE WASHINGTON JOURNAL: Soviets could take Europe in 24 hours

By L. EDGAR PRINA
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The former chief of Air Force intelligence says the Soviets will have the power this year or next to take Europe "in 24 hours, with or without" nuclear weapons.

Maj. Gen. George Keegan, who retired Jan. 1, told a group of Washington reporters that a Warsaw Pact planner as early as 1977 or 1978 "would have every reason to believe" he could overrun the continent and do it with a minimum of fighting.

Keegan also asserted that the Soviet navy today could sink up to 75 per cent of the free world's surface fleets "in a matter of days, if not hours."

"To allow the British fleet to be mothballed and to cut our own Navy in half is one of the most unconscionable and blind acts by a government in modern history," he said.

The general, known as an advocate of the "worst-case" estimate of USSR military strength, warned that the Soviets believe they soon will be able to neutralize the U.S. ballistic missile threat to their country.

He said he thought they might master this new defense technology, which he asserted involves charged-particle, high-energy beams, by 1980 "if they don't blow themselves up."

U.S. scientists have been experimenting with charged-particle technology for years, but have not been able to apply it successfully to a defensive system.

"I think a global conflict is now in question, principally because of what they are doing and what we are not doing," the general said.

One of the most important things the Soviets are doing, he asserted, is in the area of civil defense.

"The Kremlin leadership has placed the Soviet Union underground and removed their command, industrial and population assets from our ability to cripple them," Keegan said.

"Their nuclear chain of command is now beyond the reach of American retaliatory weapons."

He said tens of thousands of the hardest man-made structures in the world have enabled the Soviets to put their nuclear weapons, most military units and the "entire industrial population" in protected places.

"Unless they take a direct hit, they will survive," he said.

Most shelters have been hardened to 145 pounds per square inch, the general said, but the 75 command posts in the Moscow area are 600 to 700 feet underground and can resist pressures of 1,000 to 2,000 pounds per square inch (psi).

"What weapons have we got that can take them out?" he asked rhetorically.

Keegan said it was "most urgent" that the United States improve the accuracy of its missiles in order to let the Soviets know that their expenditure of "well over $100 billion" on civil defense is not going to give them the protection they seek.

He stressed there is no doubt the United States today could burn every good-sized city in the USSR to the ground, but that this does not alter the fact that the Soviets could survive and fight.

"The Soviet Union today has a capability to initiate, wage, survive and emerge from a global conflict with far greater effectiveness than the United States and its allies," he said.

But he conceded that the United States has very powerful forces at its command and said he does not think the Soviets would risk all-out nuclear exchange at this time.

INSIDE REPORT:

Government regulation rather than market forces

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Intense 11-hour efforts by oil-state politicians to loosen natural gas regulation in President Carter's energy program were foredoomed by a hard ideological decision to solve the energy shortage through government regulation rather than market forces.

"When the President talks about sacrifice, we include people sacrificing their ideology," one Carter energy official told us. "The oil people don't realize that this means sacrificing the ideology of deregulation, that deregulation is dead." So, casting aside one campaign pledge, Mr. Carter has rejected the idea that freedom from government chains would produce more gas and oil.

This puts the Carter energy program in confrontation with the Carter economic program. The energy program, drafted by presumptive Secretary of Energy James Schlesinger, is governmental fine-tuning of energy supply and demand. The economic program, influenced mainly by budget director Bert Lance, stresses governmental non-interference with private business. While the stock market spurted after Mr. Carter's abandonment of the 50 tax rebate, it does not at all like Mr. Carter's energy program.

Energy decisions cannot wholly be separated from what Jimmy Carter reads in his polls. Hysterical public reaction against big oil, besides spawning know-nothing skepticism that any energy shortage exists, militates against any program that profits the companies. Besides, a pro-oil policy would invite trouble with anti-oil powers on Capitol Hill — especially Sen. Henry M. Jackson, chairman of the Senate Interior Committee.

But beyond politics, Dr. Schlesinger has accepted — and the President concurred in — a most controversial interpretation of the energy crisis: the shortage is so frightening that it dictates pervasive governmental intervention. Since no appreciable new gas and oil can be produced, production of what there is should be strictly regulated while Washington mandates conservation and alternative energy sources (coal, solar, nuclear).

True deregulation was ruled out weeks ago the Schlesinger team. It once toyed with a statutory "cap" of $2.40 per thousandweight on newly discovered natural gas (now set at $1.44 by the Federal Power Commission). This cap was quickly pushed down to $2.25, a figure which soon leaked out.

It did not survive for long. Breakfasting with newsmen here April 5, Sen. Jackson called $2.25 "absolutely too high." Rep. John Dingell of Michigan, chairman of the House energy subcommittee, also protested to the White House. The cap soon toppled to $1.75 — actually rolling back the price of intrastate gas (discovered and sold in one state), which is not now controlled. Hence, the Carter program discourages exploration in some cases.

A tardy counterattack began when eight governors were briefed at the White House April 14. Govs. David Boren of Oklahoma and Dolph Briscoe of Texas were shaken, nearly to the point of physical distress. They had been recipients of an Oct. 19 letter from Mr. Carter pledging natural gas deregulation with no ands, ifs or buts. That letter became the certificate of legitimacy with which Democratic leaders sold candidate Carter in oil-producing states.

Gov. Boren, an early Carter supporter, returned to the White House the night of April 14 to discuss with Schlesinger whether the President was reneging on his Oct. 19 letter. Mr. Carter was so concerned about the dismay of Boren and Briscoe that he pressed Schlesinger to make sure he was not violating a campaign pledge.

On Saturday, April 16, Schlesinger telephoned Boren in Oklahoma City, giving him the impression of possible late changes. With oil-state Democratic politicians on the rampage, word spread through Washington lobbyist circles on Monday, April 18 — two days before the speech to Congress — that phased deregulation was being written in.

It was not. The White House was merely coming up with new words. The President's speech pictured his $1.75 cap as a step toward deregulation. Briefing Congressmen on Tuesday, Schlesinger called the President's proposal "deregulation — with a cap." One House member whispered to his neighbor that George Orwell's "newspeak" was at the White House.

Such oil-state Congressmen who would have backed the the whole energy package had it contained gradual gas deregulation, now grumble that Jimmy Carter has killed deregulation — probably forever. Yet this conforms to the program's philosophical mind-set that energy is a task government — and only government — can manage. That reliance on Washington may make it difficult to fully enlist the public in the President's greatest undertaking.

Amin in Zaire; tanks 'unlikely'

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Uganda's President Idi Amin came to Kinshasa on Friday, met with President Mobutu Sese Seko for four hours and declared afterward, "I am ready to send troops" to help Mobutu defeat rebel invaders in Shaba Province. Amin told reporters he was "happy to report big progress on the battlefield." In Washington, President Carter said it was "highly unlikely" he would supply American tanks to the Mobutu government, as proposed by his administration last month in a military authorization reportedly unrelated to the current fighting. The tanks would be part of a $30 million package of U.S. military credit sales proposed for Zaire for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. The U.S. government has already announced

Judge gives killer stay

DALLAS (AP) — U.S. District Court Judge Robert Porter granted a stay of execution Friday for Ernest Benjamin Smith Jr., sentenced to death by a Dallas jury for the 1973 murder-robbery of convenience store clerk Stewart Moon. Porter ordered a procedural hearing on the matter for April 29. In granting his stay, Porter cited possible constitutional questions in the sentencing phase of Smith's trial. Howie Ray Robinson was the convicted triggerman in the slaying. He was convicted of capital murder in the case, but the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals threw out his death sentence. He will receive a new trial.

Davis' lawyers held in contempt

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — State District Court Judge Tom Cave Friday cited for contempt of court two of millionaire Cullen Davis' attorneys saying they had filed motions intended basically to increase the publicity given Davis' capital murder trial. The contempt citation against attorneys Richard Haynes and Phil Burleson referred to affidavits submitted Monday by the two in their motion to have Davis released on bail pending his trial. Davis is charged with the Aug. 3 slaying of his stepdaughter Andrea Wilborn, 12, he is also charged in connection with the shooting death of Stan Farr, a friend of his estranged wife Priscilla; and the wounding of Mrs. Davis and of Gus Gavrel. The shootings occurred in the Davis mansion where Mrs. Davis lived while the couple was undergoing divorce proceedings. The selection of a jury for the trial ended last week when Judge Cave declared a mistrial after eight weeks because a juror had expressed an opinion about Davis' possible guilt in a telephone conversation. The attorneys went back to the court Monday submitting unsigned affidavits by David McCrory claiming a link between Mrs. Davis with a Fort Worth drug dealer identified only as W.T. The affidavits also included a reference to an implied bribe from Mrs. Davis to McCrory. Haynes told the court the affidavit came from statements McCrory made to him. Judge Cave said the attorneys filed the statements for "the specific purpose of gaining publicity." The attorneys could be sentenced to fines of $500 and three days in jail each. Haynes could not be reached for comment. Burleson said: "I have no comment. I have nothing to say." Judge Cave has announced he will move the trial elsewhere. He set a May 9 hearing for the change of venue and the contempt of court hearing. The judge said the affidavits, "even if signed and properly presented, would leave serious doubts at the admissibility of such purported evidence in many respects, the very nature of which are calculated to cause and have in fact caused another flood of publicity to be added to the veritable ocean of publicity already surrounding the case." The judge declined to hear the bond motion on grounds that a previous bond motion is currently on appeal in federal court.

Bullock eyes impact

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock said Friday, it is clear that President Carter's energy proposals, if enacted into law, would affect Texas revenues. "Some may rise and others may drop," Bullock said in a statement. The comptroller said his revenue estimating section is carefully analyzing Carter's energy plan to determine what effect it may have on state revenues for the 1978-79 business year.

"However, I wish to emphasize that the Texas Constitution requires that our estimates be based only upon laws then in effect. This means that those proposals requiring legislation cannot change our estimate until they become law," Bullock said. "I also want to emphasize that, in looking at our estimate, we have come to the conclusion that there is just so much water you can pour out of a bucket before it is empty. You've got to fill it up again before you can pour some more."

Postal Service cites AMA for illegal underpayments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service has accused the American Medical Association of illegally underpaying its postal bills by more than a million dollars and has asked for the money by Monday. "If the deficiency is not satisfied, the Postal Service intends promptly to initiate whatever litigation may be necessary to enforce its claim," one letter from the Postal Service to the AMA said. Copies of two letters from Arthur S. Cahn, assistant general counsel of the mail agency, seeking payment from the AMA were obtained Friday by The Associated Press. In Chicago, AMA spokesman Joseph Breu declined to comment.

The Postal Service previously had turned over to the Justice Department what it called evidence of possible fraud by the AMA, and the department announced a criminal investigation. The Postal Service contended the AMA submitted false reports on its mailings, allowing it to underpay its postal bills. The back postage bill concerns the Journal of the American Medical Association, the organization's weekly magazine. The AMA board of directors decided in 1970 to expand the circulation of the magazine by sending free copies to physicians who were not association members. The apparent goal of the free distribution was to increase the journal's advertising revenue from manufacturers of drugs and medical devices. However, the law requires that an organization with a second-class mailing permit distribute no more than 10 per cent of its circulation as free sample copies. Copies exceeding the sample copy limitation are required to be mailed at a higher postage rate, known as the transient rate. Cahn's letters, dated April 7 and April 20, said the AMA paid $166,820 between April 3, 1972, and August 4, 1975, when it should have paid $1,215,787. It asked for the $1,048,967 difference but assessed no fines. "During this period it was the practice of your association, in violation of postal laws and regulations, to send significant numbers of free subscriptions to JAMA (the journal) to non-subscribers at the low second-class rate of postage."

Hobby: no repeal

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said Friday he does not think there is enough money in the state surplus to repeal the sales tax on utilities as well as all the other things the legislature intends to do. The House-passed bill also includes reform of the state inheritance tax, and would cost $258 million. Hobby told the television news panel show, Texas Weekly.

River floating may be curtailed

The Washington Post WASHINGTON — The 20,000 "rafters" who annually ride the Colorado River through the mile-deep gorges of the Grand Canyon may find their wild-river trips slower, bumpier or even eliminated this summer because of the severe drought throughout much of the western half of the nation. The river is expected to be so low at night and on weekends as to be almost impassable for the large rubber "Bologna" rafts, the luxury liners in the fleet of dories, rowboats and rafts that ferry visitors on two-day to two-week water trips, according to the National Park Service. The popular Colorado River rafting trips, which were booked up within days of their public offering in January, will be affected largely by upriver power dams that are low on water and will withhold water from the river on weekends and weeknights when there is less demand for the electricity their turbines produce. Despite the water shortage and some expected visitor "hardship," the National Park Service said all of its 293 national parks will be open this summer. "Magnificent waterfalls like Yosemite's have been reduced to almost nothing," and there will be water problems and fire hazards in most western parks, said Park Service spokesman Tom Wilson. "But people can still plan on visiting their favorite haunts."

Scheduled film

Invasion of Israel," will be shown at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in the Midland FREE METHODIST CHURCH, 4712 Shadylane.

IT'S IN THE BOOK

He never stops loving in any circumstance

The Bible has always been a best seller. Suddenly it has become "hot copy," which means individuals, couples, families are turning to scripture for answers. Dr. Charlie Shedd has been asked to do a weekly Bible study for the whole family.

By CHARLIE SHEDD

His name was "Flipper" and on this night I am telling you about, he crawled up onto my lap. It had not been one of his better days. He had fought with his sister, been obnoxious at school. (That's what his teacher indicated when we met her at the grocery store.) And his mother wondered only one thing when I got home from the office, "Can I take off for an hour and just go somewhere?" Anywhere. So she went. And after 30 minutes of him, I could understand fully why she made her request.

Then we got him ready for bed. Aren't they precious, fresh, clean, and on their way to eight hours of success? Maybe ten. Then came that moment I will never forget. Ready for his story, he snuggled close and asked, "Daddy, could I ever do anything so bad that you would quit loving me?"

RELIGION

What do you think I answered? You're right, I said exactly what you would have said. "No way. Chances zero." Jesus said that God loves us more than we love our children. In fact, said He, the extent of earthly parents' love for their own is only a glimmer of God's never-ending love for us.

If by some queer work of circumstance we had to give up all but one chapter of our Bible, Luke 15 is the keeper. Troops, let's have another look at it. Was there ever a better storyteller than Jesus? None! Yet the drama of

Why didn't he have a chance to say his thing? Reason: Luke 15:20. Focus now on these three words, "the father ran."

Let's talk about this, gang. Wouldn't it have been fair for him to stand behind the door, arms akimbo, and say, "Let him knock awhile. Remember how he insulted me, embarrassed me with his remarks. Now he's wasted what I gave him. Let's see if he's sincere."

You're right. It's because God, the Father, is like him—Luke 15: 22-24, "Let us eat and be merry. For this my son was dead, and is alive again. He was lost, and is found."

So just in case you ever worry whether your mom and dad are going to love you no matter what, 'ALWAYS' is a long time. For ever and ever we'll never stop caring for you.

Question: Do you think a child who knows this is more likely or less likely to go to a far country? What difference do you think it would make in our behavior if we really believed what Jesus is telling us about God? Prayer for the whole family:

Thank you, heavenly Father, for loving us no matter what. Help us to love you back like you love us. Forever. Amen.

The Beatitudes in Mathew 5:1-2 teach us how to be happy. Jesus is in effect saying, "Happy are the poor in spirit, they that mourn, the meek, etc." These are personality qualities that make us whole—like God.

The more we are like Him, the closer we can be to Him who can take away the weeds of sin, self-interest and pride and replace them with the beautiful, happy fruit of the Spirit.

Grant, Zeppelin zipping again

NEW ORLEANS — Peter Grant, the huge, Buddha-shaped manager of Led Zeppelin, talks about rock 'n' roll as a jungle. You've got to be tough, he says. Like the time he poured a bucket of water over a video machine that was being used to illegally film a Zeppelin concert. Or when he threw a TV news crew off the Ingewood Forum stage. Literally.

But the classic Peter Grant story, legend has it, occurred in British Columbia a few years ago during the height of the bootleg tape craze that cost the record industry millions of dollars.

Spotting someone huddled near the stage with elaborate recording equipment, Grant, a former wrestler and stand-in for outsized actor Robert Morley, raced over and smashed the machinery, sending the operator tumbling. Fair enough, except the man turned out to be someone conducting noise experiments for the Canadian government.

Mentioning the incidents brought a smile to Grant's face as he relaxed in his hotel suite here the day after the start of Zeppelin's first U.S. tour in two years. Almost everything brought a smile this afternoon. Not even a reminder of Zeppelin's long-standing clash with the press darkened his mood.

Grant's band — whose future was in question after a 1975 injury to lead singer Robert Plant's right foot kept the English quartet from performing for months — was back together. Bigger than ever.

While Time and Newsweek salute

Paul McCartney, Bruce Springsteen, Stevie Wonder, Linda Ronstadt and Bob Dylan in their occasional forays into the pop culture, Zeppelin outsells them all. More than 700,000 tickets for the band's 40 shows on its current tour were sold as fast as box offices could process them.

The group already has sold out six nights (starting June 21) at the 18,700-seat Ingewood Forum. That's the most shows ever booked in a row by a pop attraction at the Forum. Most sources agree Zeppelin could have easily sold out a seventh or eighth show. The demand for tickets was so intense in some cities that mini-riots occurred.

So what, then, if the media was off chasing the Rolling Stones and Margaret Trudeau in Toronto rather than huddled with notepads and cameras at Grant's door? Kids knew Zeppelin was the real story in rock. Besides, the press never mattered to Grant. Zeppelin's success was over the objections of critics who labeled the band's music as indulgent, excessive and derivative. Zeppelin record sales are upwards of $150 million.

Grant figures the media's refusal to acknowledge the group's commercial supremacy in rock has, ironically, only helped reinforce Zeppelin's ties with its young audience. That's why the band doesn't court the press. There was no junket to Dallas for the start of the tour the way the Who did last year in Houston. There also aren't backstage receptions after each show the way Paul McCartney did on his last tour. All that stuff bores the band, a Grant aide claims.

Offered Grant: "What do reviews or stories mean? Record companies cut them out, mimeograph 5,000 copies or whatever and send them to radio stations or to each other. Big deal."

"The main thing to remember is the people in the street. Their belief in the group is what is important. It doesn't matter what anybody says about a group, it's what the group does on stage or on record that counts. Zeppelin has always delivered."

"That's how we can have kids camping outside the Forum in the parking lot for days without taking out an ad or sell 20,000 tickets in Detroit just because one disc jockey says tickets are going on sale."

Led Zeppelin was a hit from the beginning, Jimmy Page, the band's celebrated, 33-year-old guitarist, was known as a top session player in England before he was 21. He played on hundreds of records in the mid-1960s, from the Who's "I Can't Explain" to Joe Cocker's "With a Little Help From My Friends."

For the new group, Page picked John Paul Jones, a bass player who had gained attention as arranger on Donovan's "Sunshine Superman" and the Rolling Stones' "She's a Rainbow." He also tabbed two unknowns: singer Robert Plant and drummer John Bonham.

Atlantic Records signed the band — largely on the strength of Page's reputation — and plans for the first U.S. tour were begun. The album reviews were almost all negative. Many critics called the group a blatant attempt to fill the vacated Cream-Hendrix-Yardbirds high-energy, blues-based, guitar-dominated tradition in rock.

But audiences, particularly in America, responded strongly. The album made the Top 10 and stayed on the national charts more than a year. The band's real strength, however, was in its live shows.

"It's an impossibility to think a band is ever going to be as big as Zeppelin has become," Peter Grant said, looking back on the early days of the group. "But we thought we were going to be successful. I knew what was required over here and Jimmy Page knew what was required. We were fortunate that the underground scene was happening, there were lots of halls around the country that served as opinion makers and we got them into all of them."

Success of 'Rocky' may indicate new trend

By RAYMOND E. MAPPS

DALLAS (AP) — The success both from an artistic standpoint and at the box office of the Oscar-winner for best movie, "Rocky," may be evidence of a new trend in Hollywood, away from an emphasis on morbidity and disaster toward the more optimistic.

"Rocky" and other movies like it were well-received at the 7th USA Film Festival at Southern Methodist University last month.

The week-long event is the only major film festival in the Southwest and the only one in the country dedicated exclusively to American film. Its entries are selected by a panel of six nationally known critics who also serve as moderators for discussions involving filmmakers and the audience after each screening.

"Our audiences here have been pretty good predictors in the past. We draw very emotional crowds and that's what the studios are looking for — that emotional response that turned "Rocky" into an overnight success," said Dr. G.W. Jones, the festival's founder and director.

"The non-competitives atmosphere is also an asset to us," he said. "It removes the 'winner and loser' stigma and therefore encourages the studios to cooperate more freely."

The festival traditionally honors an American director with a three-day retrospective of his best films. Cited this year was 83-year-old King Vidor, who made such classics as "Northwest Passage," "Duel in the Sun,"

"The Champ," and "Ruby Gentry."

This year, despite the presence of big-budget features like "Black Sunday" and "Audrey Rose," the warmest receptions were for the lighter, human-oriented films.

Among the most prominent in this category was the new film by Joan Silver, "Between the Lines." She rose to national prominence after her debut at the 1975 festival with a sensitive portrait of an early Jewish immigrant family, "Hester Street." "Between the Lines" is about the staff of a small, alternative newspaper in Boston, the Back Bay Mainline. The characters are post-60s social revolutionaries who have run out of causes and the cast is made up largely of unknown actors, like in "Hester Street."

"I'd like to clone you all and take you with me everywhere the film plays," Ms. Silver told an appreciative audience during the discussion period after "Lines" was shown.

"Pumping Iron," the semi-documentary examination of the often misunderstood life of a weightlifter, was shown for the first time in the region, and animator Ralph Bakshi brought his first feature that didn't carry the "X" rating, "Wizards."

One surprise was the favorable reaction the generally conservative Dallas audience gave the politically oriented feature "Brothers," a film based loosely on the life of Soledad Brother George Jackson.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Gadgets can help arthritic

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: My mother has had arthritis for many years, and although she is bearing up well, she is having an increasingly hard time trying to do all the little daily chores that people in good health for granted. Her hands are so bad she can't even zip her dress up in back when she gets dressed. She is tremendously independent and wants to do everything for herself. Are there any special devices that could help?

DEAR JEAN: There are some very practical and inexpensive gadgets you can get to make life easier for people with arthritis. For instance, there is a zipper pull, a lever that clamps onto a door knob, a rattail comb with a big easy-to-grip handle, nail clippers with long levers, a toothbrush with a large comfortable handle, a wooden rack to hold playing cards. You can get plans for making them at home or the devices themselves from a nonprofit volunteer organization called The Independence Factory. Their address is P.O. Box 597, Middletown, Ohio 45042. Why don't you write them and ask for their complete list?

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: I enjoy your column and feel that you are aware of the confusion that exists in many patients' minds about the difference between optometrists and ophthalmologists. I feel that by emphasizing the difference between an optometrist and an ophthalmologist in your column, you could help achieve your goal of a better informed population and a higher level of eye care for the general population. — John C. Hagan, M.D., Kansas City

Dr. Hagan's suggestion is a good one. Here are the facts: Optometry is a profession specifically licensed in all states to care for human vision. A doctor of optometry is educated and trained to examine the eyes and related structures to determine the presence of vision impairments, eye diseases, or vision malfunctions related to educational difficulties or other abnormalities. He prescribes and adapts lenses, contact lenses, and other optical aids and utilizes vision training to preserve, restore, and improve vision efficiency. An optometrist is not a medical doctor.

An ophthalmologist is a medical doctor who has gone through extensive training in medical school, and completed a residency program. He is an expert on the diagnosis, medical and surgical treatment of all types of eye problems. We have a need for both optometrists and opthalmologists. (If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies.)

BRIDGE Refuse first trick to stop long suit

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Even when you can win two tricks in a suit, it may be important to refuse the first trick. This tends to be true when one of the opponents has only two cards in the dangerous suit.

If you play the queen of spades at the first trick, East signals encouragement with the ten. You must lead diamonds at an early stage, and West takes the ace. He returns his other spade through dummy, and East can use either the king or the eight, depending on dummy's play. Either way, East sets up the rest of his spades.

East gets in with the king of diamonds to defeat the contract with the rest of the spades.

PLAY LOW
The correct procedure is to play low from both hands at the first trick. East wins the first trick with the eight of spades, but you are still sure of two spade tricks by way of a finesse.

If East returns a spade (as good a defense as any), you win in dummy with the jack and lead a diamond. If West wins, he cannot lead a spade, and you have time to force out the king of diamonds, he can set up his spades, but cannot get back to cash them.

DAILY QUESTION
Partner opens with 1 NT (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes. You hold: S-K10985; H-QJ9; D-K874; C-10. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three spades. Forcing to either four spades or 3 NT. Since you have 9 points in high cards, you know that the combined count is 25 to 27 points. Your excellent distribution should be worth at least one point if it turns out that the combined count is only 25 points.

Comedian turning to college circuit

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Comedian Robert Klein says he's limiting his television talk-show appearances these days and concentrating on college concerts to prevent being "sucked dry" by the tube.

"TV only gives you the tip of the iceberg; you've got to be quick and funny," said Klein, who got much of his exposure in 50 appearances on "The Tonight Show" with Johnny Carson.

"It's, 'Well Johnny, I'm back in L.A. I've got a new album out,' and then move over one chair. I fell off the edge once when he had all the Mills Brothers on."

"In the last several years I've done less TV; less frequently and more effectively, I hope. I can do as much of it as I want. I can always give a good 15 minutes, but you can be sucked dry of material."

So Klein, 35, has turned his attention to the college concert circuit, where he pockets several thousand dollars a night for 90 minutes of improvisational comedy. Much of the material centers on his student days at Alfred University.

"I picked the college by the catalogue; all those pictures of smiling students walking along with heads up. No pictures of drunk students throwing up... nothing like, 'I may be pregnant,' says Freshman Sue."

Despite the Bronx-born comic's reservations about TV talk shows, he recently completed "Klein Time," a pilot comedy show for CBS which he hopes will get a spot in the network lineup.

"I've had problems with Standards and Practices — the censor. I wanted to use 10-second film of paramedics reproducing," he told a crowd of 2,300 at Rutgers University.

"They don't even have sex. They just spit up. No one can get excited about paramedics. Nobody walks around saying, 'I'd like to see pictures of young paramedics.' If your job is to look for things dirty, you'll find them."

After Alfred, Klein attended Yale Drama School before joining the Chicago improvisational company "Second City" in 1965. He credits that group with nurturing comic skills that were later honed in dates at nightclubs and on the TV talk show circuit.

Klein has been in four movies and has three comedy albums out.

In person, Klein is energetic, sarcastic and free-wheeling. At Rutgers, he avoided political commentary ex-

Trinity pupils head for Quebec

Students at Trinity School are participating in a two-week spring mini-term.

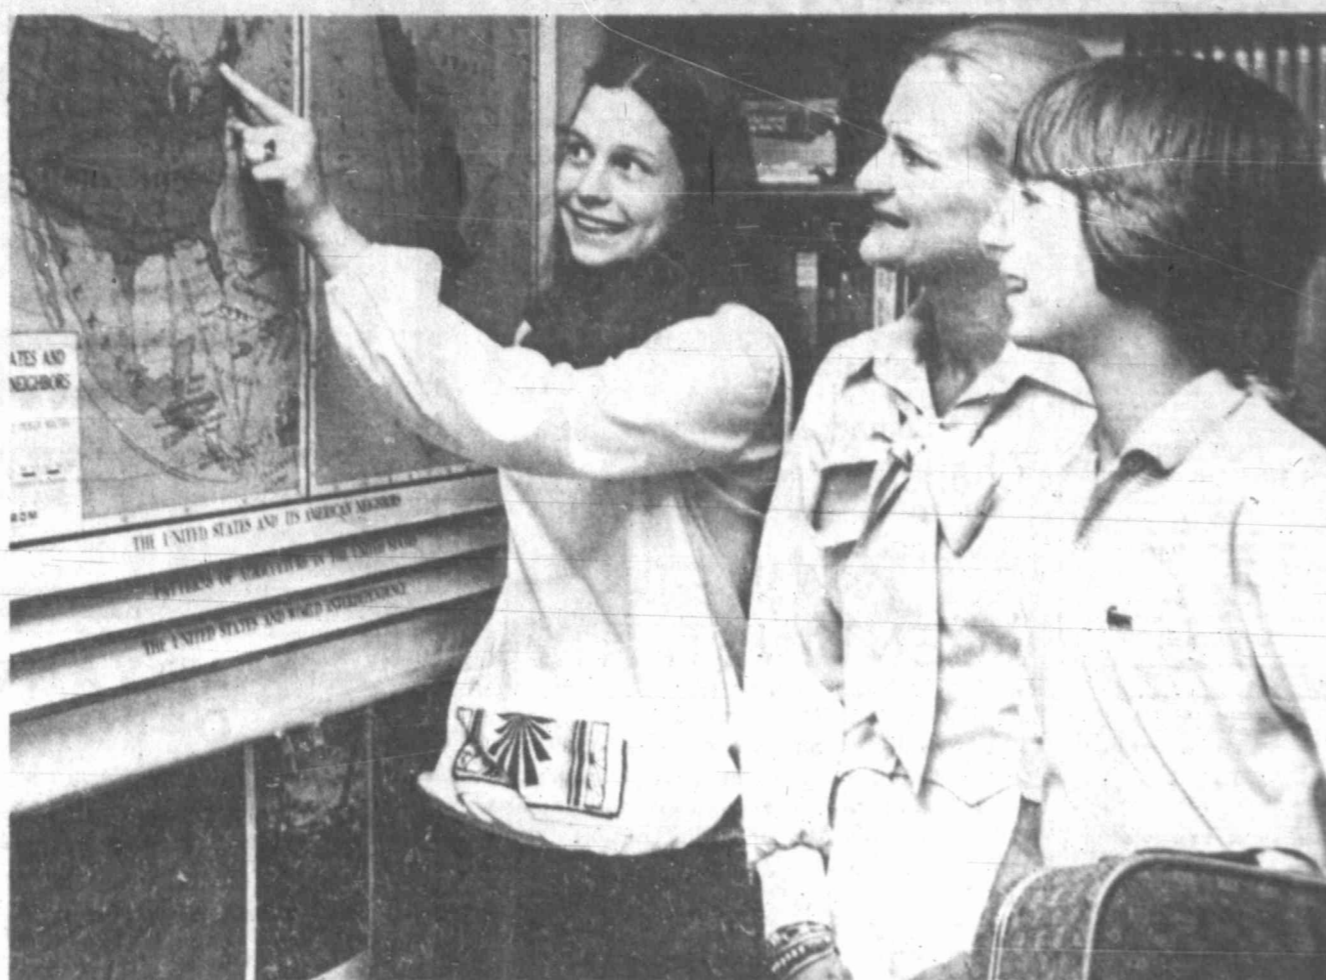

One group of six students left Friday morning for Montreal and Quebec City, Canada, with French teacher Marjorie Q. Kozak. The group will study the culture and customs of Quebec and experience "total immersion" in speaking French.

A second group left Monday for a two-week camp experience in Durango, Colo.

History teacher G. William Coombes II took a third group to Richmond, Va. to tour Civil War battlefields. From there, they will go to Washington, D.C., to see government in action.

All three groups are due to return April 23.

Trinity students not going on one of the field trips are taking 35 courses in such subjects as italic handwriting, games for thought and logic, model airplane building and teenagers and the law.

Chinese open national industry conference

Agence France-Press

PEKING — A national conference on industry, the first of its kind since People's China was founded in 1949, opened Wednesday at the Taching oilfield in northeast China with Chairman Hua Guo-feng presiding.

The New China News Agency, which reported the event Friday said the conference was attended by 7,000 delegates. Preparations for the conference had been under way since the end of last year.

Vice-Premier Li Hsien-nien, an economics expert, gave a speech at the opening ceremony. He called for "mobilizing of the white party and the entire working class" in order to "build China into a powerful, modern socialist country as quickly as possible."

This aim, first laid down by the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung and made public by Premier Chiu En-lai in January 1975, has returned to the forefront since the smashing last October of the Gang of Four radicals headed by Mao's widow who were accused of trying to sabotage the nation's economy.

Li called on the entire country to "race against time" to quicken the pace of industrial development. He recalled Mao's statement shortly after China became a Communist country that it would surpass the United States economically "in several dozen years."

Suburbs seek split from Cook County

CHICAGO (AP) — Some of the wealthiest suburbs of Chicago are mounting a campaign to split away from Cook County, which they say collects their taxes, but denies them proper representation.

Leaders of the secessionist movement say the county, the nation's second most populous, is dominated by Chicago, the country's second largest city, and that suburban residents are paying high tax bills largely to support city services.

To counter this, six townships containing more than a dozen of Chicago's fastest-growing suburban communities, have begun planning a new county, something that hasn't been done in Illinois since 1859.

The county — to be called Lincoln — would cut off what is now the northwest corner of Cook County. Lincoln would be the state's fourth largest county with an estimated 350,000 residents.

State Sen. David Regner, a suburban Republican, has sponsored legislation that would make succession easier. He says a survey he conducted among 2,000 of his constituents showed 69 per cent in favor of withdrawal, 17 per cent opposed and 14 per cent with no opinion.

The idea of separating suburban towns from the central city is not unique to Cook County. There have also been some efforts, so far unsuccessful, to split off outlying communities of Los Angeles County, the nation's largest in terms of population.

Admittedly a "tongue-in-cheek idea" when it started, the campaign "gets more serious the worse the Cook County government becomes," says Mayor Wendell Jones of Palatine, the guiding force behind the separatist movement.

Jones has prepared a feasibility study on the idea and suburban officials sent it on to the state Department of Local Affairs.

"The enormity of it staggers me," said John Castle, department acting director. "Starting a county from scratch like that. It's just an enormous undertaking."

Before World War II, the northwest suburbs consisted mainly of vegetable farms. Since then, they have experienced dramatic growth, absorbing an influx of relatively affluent white collar workers.

Arlington Heights, for instance, grew from 8,768 residents in 1950 to 64,884 in 1970. Its median family income in 1974 was $24,000, compared with a median of $12,400 in the city.

Currently, suburbs account for almost half of Cook County's total $23.9 billion assessed valuation. They accounted for only a third of the county's total worth a decade ago.

"I think we would be better served, with a more modern approach to government, if we created our own county unit," said Jones.

He said the present county board structure, with 10 Chicago members and six suburban representatives, gives the suburban interests short shrift.

Although the majority of suburban residents are Republicans, "you have the Democratic machine of Chicago controlling the suburbs," Jones said. "It's one-party rule totally, and there seems to be no way out except secession."

George Dunne, Cook County board president and chairman of the county Democratic organization, said he would offer no resistance to the secessionists' proposal "if it's what the people want."

"This is a democracy," he said. "If the people want it, they should have it. I'm not worried about losing (patronage) jobs or anything else."

Mayor James Ryan of Arlington Heights said the idea of seceding "has some merit, but I'm not as optimistic as some others are for its coming to fruition."

"Before I'd be out front, I'd want a thoughtful, in-depth analysis of what would result," Ryan said. "What's good at one time may not be good for all times."

Jones said the biggest obstacle to secession is the stringent requirements of state law.

The law currently requires the signatures of at least half the registered voters in the area to place the question of secession on the ballot in the 1978 general election, the earliest it could be done.

Then a majority of all persons voting in the election — not just a majority of those voting on the secession issue — is required for approval. This means someone who fails to vote either way on the issue effectively casts a "no" vote.

Regner's bills would reduce the number of petition signatures required to at least 20 per cent and would make approval hinge on the number of persons voting strictly on the issue.

Cougars take lead in SWC golf tourney

TYLER, Tex. (AP) — Defending Southwest Conference champion Houston, led by All-American Ed Fiori and Mike Booker, took the lead Friday in the SWC's spring golf championship.

Fiori and Booker led all individuals with one-under-par 71s to pace the Cougars to a sevenstroke lead in the team competition over Texas A&M. Houston has a 288 total to 295 for the Aggies.

Only three players besides Fiori and Booker were able to equal or break par on the Briarwood Country Club layout in Tyler. Cougar John Stark, Bobby Baugh of Texas Christian and Monte Schauer of Texas A&M all shot even-par 72s.

Following Houston and A&M in the team competition were Southern Methodist 301, Texas 302, TCU 303, Arkansas and Texas Tech 304, Rice 309 and Baylor 314.

The final two rounds will be played today and Sunday.

Gold Sox hand Cubs fifth straight loss

Midland's Cubs can't wait for Amarillo to pack up its lefthanders and leave town.

Amarillo beat Midland for the fourth straight time, 6-1, Friday night at Cubs Stadium stretching the Cubs' losing streak to five games. Four of the losses have come by hands dangling from the ends of twisted left arms.

None, however, was any better than the job turned in by Gold Sox southpaw Galen McSpadden, who went the route in hog-tying Midland on eight hits. Four of those came in the first three innings.

McSPADDEN, WHO was 10-7 with Amarillo last year, posted his third win over Midland in a two-year span.

In three previous losses, Midland sometimes wondered how the Gold Sox scored their runs. They never seemed to collect enough hits to do that much damage. However, Friday, the San Diego farmhands did it on a couple of two-run homers by Ivan Murrall and Steve Smith. Murrall's came in the first after a walk to Kurt Wittmayer and carried down the left field line.

Smith's came in the sixth after a two-out walk, just when it seemed Mark Covert might escape the inning. Catcher Duane Gustavson threw out Paul O'Neill, who had walked, catching his second thief of the night and Craig Stimac struck out, so when Pete Castillo walked, it looked harmless enough until Smith connected to left.

The two blows were really all McSpadden needed after surviving a couple of early inning threats.

MIDLAND LOADED the bases in the first with one out on hits by Keith Drumright and Joe Hernandez and a walk, but the timely hit that could have turned all four games in this series around, again was painfully absent.

In the third, Midland again threatened when Drumright walked and scored on singles by Bill Huisman and Gustavson with only one out. Karl Pagel then drove Murrall to the warning track in right-center and Karl Gordon skied to center to end the threat.

After that Midland advanced only

Atlanta ends Dodger streak

ATLANTA (AP) — Craig Robinson's bases-loaded single capped a two-run rally in the ninth inning that gave the Atlanta Braves a 6-5 victory over Los Angeles Friday night and snapped the Dodgers' seven-game winning streak.

Robinson's hit ended a game that was delayed by rain three times in the late innings for a total of 82 minutes.

The Braves' rally started when Los Angeles reliever Charlie Hough walked Jerry Royster and Willie Montanez singled off loser Stan Wall, 0-1.

After Jeff Burroughs forced Montanez, pinch hitter Joe Nolan singled Royster home with the tying run and a walk loaded the bases. Rod Gilbreath grounded into a force at the plate for the second out before Robinson came through with his game-winning hit.

The Dodgers had taken a 5-4 lead in the sixth on veteran Boog Powell's two-run pinch single, his first National League hit. Powell, who spent 15 years in the American League and was signed by the Dodgers after the Cleveland Indians released him during spring training, chased knuckleballer Phil Niekro with his hit.

one runner as far as second, Tony Pepper who doubled to lead off the ninth.

The Cubs wind up their series with Amarillo and close out the two-week homestand at 7:30 tonight. Byron Wilkerson, 0-1, will go for Midland while Marty French is ticketed to go for Amarillo.

CUBS BRIEFS — Tonight will be Pepsi Cola night at Cubs Stadium. Amarillo Manager Dave Campbell, who wound up his major league playing career with Houston in 1974 after playing stints with San Diego and Detroit, returned to baseball this year after two years as a sports commentator for a San Diego TV station. "I just wanted to get off the merry-go-round for a while," Dave explains his leaving baseball.

Midland shortstop Steve Davis ranged behind second base to rob Broderick Perkins of a hit in the seventh. Perkins is a pretty classy guy with a glove and probably was the big reason Amarillo won Thursday's game.

He saved four or five bad throws that could have gone for damaging errors. Perkins played at St. Mary's College in California and was a teammate of Jared Martin, who was on the Midland roster during spring training before being assigned to Pompano Beach...

Longhorns sweep 2; set strikeout mark

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Tony Brizzolara outduled Mark McClain in an 11-inning opener and Texas outhit Arkansas, 8-2, in the second game as the Longhorns defeated Arkansas 5-1 and 7-1 in Southwest Conference record with 19. Bert Hooten of Texas established the mark in 1974.

The sweep left Texas tied with Texas A&M, which beat Houston Friday, at the top of the SWC standings with a 16-4 one-out, two-run double and scored on a single by Keith Ferguson.

The fourth run scored on a wild pitch.

Brizzolara tied the SWC in the league and 32-16 on one-game strikeout mark.

The Longhorns are ranked third nationally and are 43-4 on the year. Arkansas slipped to 13-10 in the league and 32-16 on one-game strikeout

Vasicek gains finals; Garton is eliminated

By PAUL DOMOWITZ R-T Sports Writer

LUBBOCK—Vicki Vasicek bought herself a ticket to Austin Friday, but she will be making the trip alone.

The possibility of Vasicek and her Midland High teammate, Cary Garton, sweeping the girls singles event here at the Region I Tennis Tournament on the Texas Tech University campus and earning the two qualifying berths for the state tourney at Austin in two weeks went by the wayside in Friday afternoon's quarterfinal round when Garton was beaten in straight sets by Julie Brown, a tall, hard-hitting netwoman from El Paso Coronado.

Vasicek, the tournament favorite here, advanced to today's finals in fine fashion, devastating Plainview's Sharon Landry in the quarterfinals, 6-1, 6-2 and using a strong finish to oust Robin Winstead of El Paso Irvin, 1-6, 6-1, 6-2. Vicki's opponent in the 8:30 a.m. championship match will be Brown, who followed up her victory over Garton with a 6-0, 6-0, 17-minute assault on Kathy Lawson of El Paso Eastwood in the semifinals.

THE GIRLS championship doubles match will be an all 5-4A showdown featuring Abilene Cooper's Karen Berg and Julie Jones against Odessa Permian's tandem of Carmen Lewis and Leslie Miller. In last weekend's district final in Abilene, Berg and Jones took the Panther pair in three sets, 6-2, 3-6, 6-4.

Winstead must be beginning to get the feeling that the 15-year-old Vasicek owns her. It's the third time she has been beaten by the Midland youngster in five weeks. She fell in the semifinals of the Tall City Classic to Vicki, 3-6, 6-1, 6-1, and was humiliated two weeks later at a tournament in Abilene, 6-1, 6-0, and now this.

It was a typical Vicki Vasicek win as she struggled early and then took it out of low gear for a victory that guaranteed her one of the eight berths in the state event, no matter what happens in the finals.

"Vicki starts very slow and works up," her coach, Larry Burgin, said after the win. "She's one of the best three set girls tennis player I've ever seen."

In time, she may just be the best girls tennis player. Period.

While Winstead lacks the natural ability and developed strokes of many of her competitors, she succeeds with patience, keeping the ball in play and waiting for her opponent to make the mistakes. She did it against Vasicek in the Tall City Classic, and tried to do the same Friday.

THE FIRST game of their match lasted almost 15 minutes as the two went to deuce on nine different occasions before Winstead finally broke Vicki's service and took the lead. The outstanding volleys in that first game were marred by a disputed line call, which caused the two girls to exchange a few words.

After Winstead took another disputed point in the second game, Vicki stopped the match to request an umpire. Burgin agreed with her decision to have a third party stand by.

"I told her before that one time was all right. But if she got hooked twice in the same set, get somebody out there. I'm not saying Winstead was cheating, Vicki calls them close too. But you don't want to lose that way," Burgin said.

The dispute didn't seem to bother Winstead when play finally continued. She broke Vasicek's service in the third, fifth and seventh games of the first set and won, 6-1.

Despite the knowledge that Vicki starts slow out of the gate, her coach expressed just a little concern at the beginning of the second set. "She's trying to hit them a little too fine," Burgin said. "I hope I get a chance to talk to her (reference to the break between the second and third sets, if necessary). She's playing Winstead's game."

But Vicki didn't want to play it any longer, and minutes later the charge was on. She took the first game of the second set in convincing style, and evened things up with a 6-1 win of her own as she begin to get depth on her ground strokes and charge the net.

During the break, Burgin just told her to follow through on her shots and keep moving on her feet. The young sophomore did both, and never looked back. Winstead broke Vicki's serve in the first game of the rubber set, but that was about the last enjoyable moment the El Paso girl would enjoy.

Barber's 66 gains tie

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Miller Barber blasted out of a bunker directly into the hole on the 17th green Friday to card a six-under par 66 and grab a tie for the first round lead in the $175,000 New Orleans Open.

Craig Stadler fired his 66 Thursday before rain washed out play in the afternoon segment of that qualifying round.

Play picked up where it left off Thursday and when it was over, there were six golfers tied for second place, two strokes back at 68.

Masters champion Tom Watson and Keith Ferguson went into Friday's play holding that second spot between them, but Don January, George Knudson, Chi Chi Rodriguez, and Bobby Cole, completing their rounds in Friday's sunshine and gentle breezes, also carded 68s.

Barber was three under par at the end of 11 holes Thursday. He had bogied the 10th and birdied the 11th to stay within striking distance of the lead. He picked up play Friday with a birdie on 12, pars on 13 and 14, and another bird on the long 15th hole.

After a par on 16, he seemed to be in deep trouble when his drive landed in the sand of a fairway bunker 85 feet from the 17th pin. But he blasted out, bouncing the ball into the cup for a birdie and a tie for the lead.

The second round of qualifying is scheduled for today, with the final 36 holes to be played Sunday. Barber won the New Orleans Open in 1970 and lost a playoff to Jack Nicklaus in 1973.

Known as "Mr. X" because he has labored anonymously since 1959, Barber was uniquely suited to a field of no-names left when Nicklaus and other more prominent bypassed the Open.

Bruce Lietzke, the tour's second-leading money-winner and a name of sorts after losing a playoff to Nicklaus in the Tournament of Champions last week, was one over par at 73 in Thursday's play.

Conditions on the 7,000-yard course showed little affect from four inches of rain that drenched the playing area Wednesday and Thursday. The greens were slow, but there wasn't much standing water on the fairways. The roughs, however, were quite soggy.

Vasicek takes regional win

(Continued from 1-D) Vasicek broke her service in the second, fourth, sixth and eighth games of the final set for the victory.

After the way Garton played last weekend in the district event, where she finished second to her teammate, Vasicek, another meeting in the finals seemed very possible. But Brown, who stands at 5-10 and packs plenty of power in her tall frame, cut that hope short earlier Friday. She forced Garton into several mistakes that never really allowed the Midland High junior to ever get in the match.

Hogan releases slate

BY REX WORRELL
Hogan Park golf pro

The Hogan Park Men's Golf Association tournament chairman, Bill Sitton, has announced the 1977 tournament schedule.

The following tournaments will be held throughout the year: May 14, two-man scramble; May 28 through May 30, Association championship; June 11, scotch two-some; June 12, Ace of Spades; July 2, Ace of Hearts; July 4, two-man partnership; July 31, Ace of Diamonds; Aug. 5 through Aug. 7, Men's City Championship (sponsored by The Midland Reporter-Telegram); Aug. 27, Ace of Clubs; Sept. 3 through Sept. 5, two-man partnership; Oct. 22, Smokey Special; Oct. 23, Ace of Aces; Nov. 19, turkey shoot; March 1978 ABCD scramble, dates to be announced. There will also be a special match play tournament format schedule during June, July, August and September with dates to be announced.

The HPMGA has printed up membership cards. Anyone wishing to play in an association tournament or attend any function sponsored by the association, must have the card with them. If you have already joined, you may pick up your membership card at the golf shop.

It is important to join the HPMGA prior to May 1 because the handicap chairman will revise the handicap list May 2, and anyone not in the Association at that time will be removed from the list.

We might remind the junior golfers of the dates of the Hogan Park Junior Program. Tournaments will be held June 13 through June 17, and each Friday in July. Registration blanks for this year's program are on hand at the golf shop.

GOLFERS WITH Sunday tee times should change their clocks Saturday because daylight savings time starts Sunday.

The Hogan Park Women's Golf Association held their annual Handicap Tournament this past week. The weather didn't co-operate very much Tuesday, but the ladies held a good tournament with very good scores in spite of the weather.

The 18-hole division winner of the three day event was Muriel Inman, with a three-day net score of 216. There was a tie for runner-up between Merla Kettner and Gail McCrary with nets of 217. The No. 8 hole was drawn as the playoff hole to decide second place and Merla won the hole.

Fourth place went to Pat Barton with a net of 218 while Jane Wagner placed fifth with a 221. Thelma Johnston took sixth with a 222.

IN THE 18-hole specialty events held during the tournament, Dotting Turk took the Putting Award, Ova Smith won the Chipping Award, Chata Mee had the Longest Drive Award and Joyce Parker nailed down the Closest to the Pin Award.

In the nine-hole division, Betty

Williams was the winner with a score of 108 while Marjorie Cardwell was runner-up with a 109. Marilyn Berry placed third with a 110. Jeanne Allen and Mary Davis tied for fourth with 113.

Islanders to battle Canadiens

MONTREAL (AP) — The wait is over for the Montreal Canadiens and New York Islanders. The Philadelphia Flyers and Boston Bruins barely had time to catch their breaths.

The Canadiens and Islanders can get down to the business of playing their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semifinal series. Both National Hockey League teams have been idle since sweeping their quarter-final sets last Sunday. The Islanders disposed of the Buffalo Sabres while the Canadiens had an easy time knocking off the St. Louis Blues, each in the minimum four games.

"I'm glad we're going to start Saturday," Montreal Coach Scotty Bowman said. "The biggest problem with waiting like we did was not knowing who we were going to play."

The second game is set for Montreal Tuesday night before the series switches to Uniondale, N.Y.

The fact that the Canadiens will be playing the Islanders comes as no great surprise. New York had the fourth best record in the league this season, finishing with 106 points. But like everyone else in the NHL, the Islanders had little success against the Canadiens. They lost all four games to them, scoring just seven goals to Montreal's 16.

"But they could still give us a lot of trouble," said Canadiens' center Doug Jarvis. "Their style of play is that they play tight. In a tight game like that, one goal can make a difference."

In their four-game sweep of the Sabres, the Islanders outscored Buffalo 16-10, winning both games at home 4-2 and both games in Buffalo 4-3. The Canadiens had 7-2, 3-0, 5-1 and 4-1 victories over the Blues and never trailed in any of the games.

It is the second time in two seasons Montreal has played the Islanders in the semis. Last year, the Canadiens took the first three games of the series, lost the fourth at Uniondale, then came home to win the fifth game and advance to the finals against Philadelphia Flyers. The loss to the Islanders was the only one suffered by Montreal in last year's postseason play.

Steve Montgomery

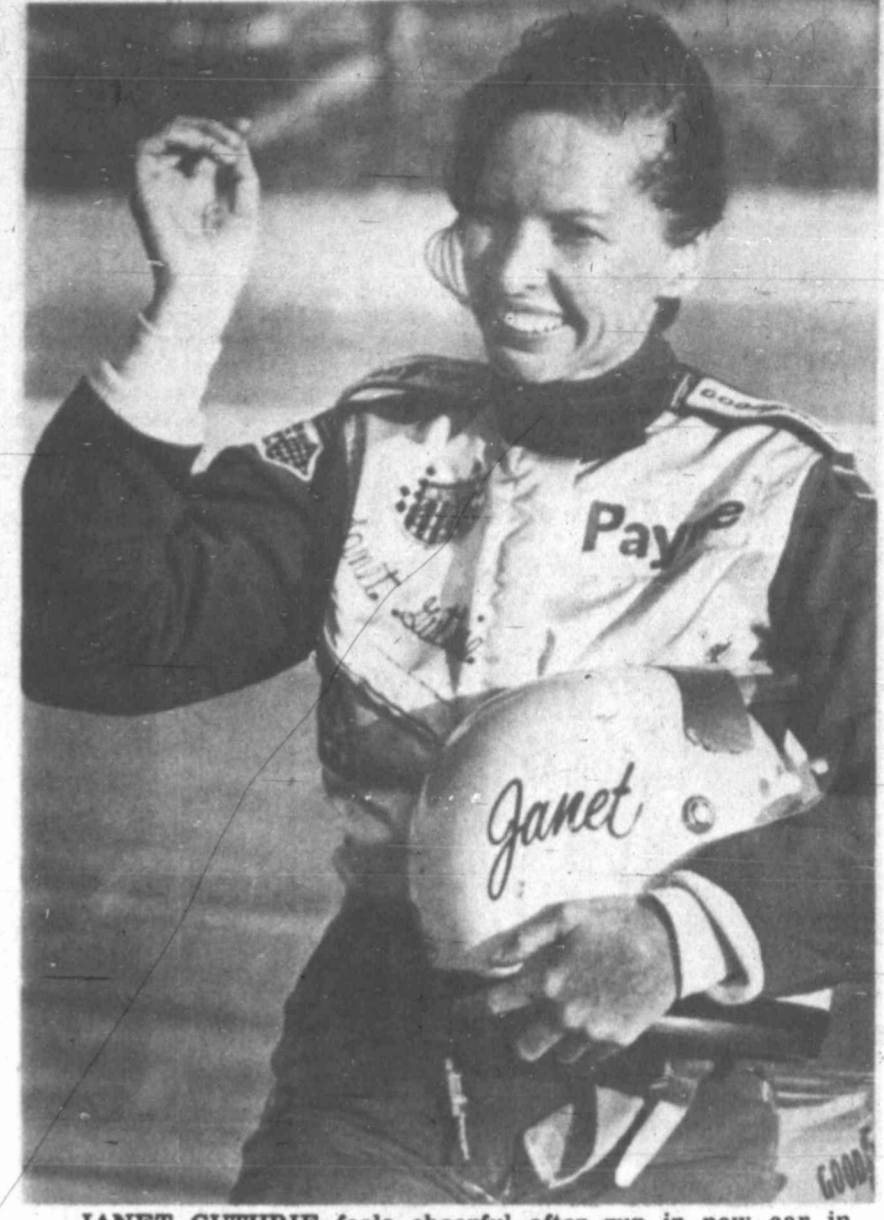

MC coach receives two honors

Steve Montgomery, Midland College swimming coach, received a pair of honors this week. He was elected president of the National Junior College Swimming Coaches Association and accepted an invitation to spend three weeks in Brazil giving clinics during June.

Montgomery was notified of his election as president of the NJCSA following a mail ballot conducted by the organization after the resignation of the current president, Bob Botger of Florissant Valley Junior College in St. Louis, Missouri. Montgomery will serve a one-year term.

In conjunction with the Brazilian Amateur Athletic Union and the Brazilian government, Montgomery is slated to present a series of six clinics in and near Sao Paulo, Brazil. His clinics will be presented at several universities, including host school Mogi das Cruzes, at an international coaches' meeting in the United States several years ago. As a result of that meeting, Montgomery has obtained two varsity swimmers from Brazil, sophomore Denise Prado and her brother freshman Fernando Prado. In February, the Mogi das Cruzes team spent a week visiting and training in Midland.

Montgomery joined the Midland College faculty in June, 1974. His varsity swim teams have captured second place in both men's and women's national junior college competition the past two years. He has coached at Greeland, Pasadena, and Deer Park high schools and at Texas A & M University. He earned B.S. and M.Ed. degrees from Sam Houston State University and currently is working on his doctorate at Texas A & M.

Philadelphia Flyers set to face Bruins

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Flyers are in the Stanley Cup semifinals because of two people who refused to look back—Coach Fred Shero and goalie Wayne Stephenson.

After the Flyers lost the first two games of the quarter-finals against the Toronto Maple Leafs—both in Philadelphia—Shero said matter-of-factly: "It's not easy to win four of five, but I think we have a better club than they do. All we have to do is prove it."

The Flyers went out and proved it without even playing five more games. They took four straight from the stunned Leafs and now open the best-of-seven semifinals Sunday night at home against the Boston Bruins.

Stephenson was a bitter man before the 1976-77 season. He had won 40 games the previous season after Bernie Parent was sidelined with a neck disc problem. He wanted to be rewarded—financially—for his effort.

The Flyers' brass stood firm. They refused Stephenson's demands. He asked to be traded. The club said nobody wanted him. Stephenson went home. He said he was through with hockey and practiced his trade—accounting.

The season started and neither side budged. The Flyers played and Stephenson audited.

Finally, the goaltender relented. He came back, took what the club offered and took his seat alongside the bench while Parent played regularly. Stephenson won 12 games during the season in occasional starting roles. He had three shutouts. And when the playoffs began, Stephenson sat. But Parent lost those first two games. He looked shaky. Shero called upon Stephenson.

Stephenson was in the net for all four victories over Toronto. And unless Shero pulls one of his customary surprises, the quiet, soft-spoken Stephenson should be in the net against Boston.

"I never live in the past," says Stephenson when asked if he harbors any bitterness toward Shero over the salary dispute. "The big thing is that I want to play. I'm not happy sitting. Freddy knows that."

Stephenson is playing. He is happy. The Flyers are happy.

But Stephenson doesn't fool himself. He knows that if he loses one game, Parent could be back in goal.

The Flyers probably won't admit it, but they're glad that the Boston Bruins emerged as their semifinal opponents. Shero's team would rather play Boston than the New York Islanders. If the Bruins had lost their semifinal to Los Angeles, the Flyers would have drawn the Islanders. In season play, Philadelphia holds a 3-1 edge over Boston. They were 2-3-1 with New York.

Ram end to retire
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles tight end Bob Klein has announced his retirement and Rams General Manager Don Klosterman said Friday that the 29-year-old Klein apparently has firmly decided to quit football and devote full time to the real estate development business.

"We wish he'd reconsider," said Klosterman. "But I understand he's been doing well in the development business and wants to pursue that more."

Klein, considered one of the National Football League's top blockers, has one year and an additional option year remaining on his contract.

Klein joined the Rams in 1969, and has caught 128 passes for 1,606 yards.

Eagles discover nugget

PHILADELPHIA AP—Panning for gold in a stream of free agents, the Philadelphia Eagles may have found a potential nugget in a tryout camp held Friday.

Of the 100 hopefuls invited to attend the one-day workout, 4 players were invited back for a second look. Two of them, including speedy wide receiver Johnny Mackrey of Darby, Pa., were signed to National Football League contracts.

Mackrey, a 5-foot-5, 150-pounder, brought the workouts to a stop with a time of 4.35 seconds in the 40-yard dash, pro football's most talked about measuring stick. When Coach Dick Vermeil asked him to run it again, Mackrey sprinted home in 4.4 seconds.

"That's the first 4.3 time I've seen since I've been here," said director of player personnel Herman Ball, who has been with the Eagles for 14 years.

"A workout like this is well worth the while. Sometimes you come up with all dirt. Sometimes you come up with a nugget," added Ball, who is trying to find building blocks to help the Eagles improve on a 4-10 record.

The other player signed to a contract was Scott Hilton, a 6-foot-2, 240-pound linebacker from Willow Grove, Pa. The others will go through a more extensive workout at the Eagles' rookie camp May 12-13.

"I knew I could play. It's just a matter of getting a chance. I know I can make this club," said the 23-year-old Mackrey, who got his invitation to show up on Tuesday.

"I believe it, but I don't believe it, you know & playing pro football is my lifelong ambition. I really think I can make this club. I think Dick Vermeil made the right decision," he added.

Mackrey played one year at Hudson Valley Community College in Troy, N.Y. He then attended Cheyney State College in Pennsylvania. e was ineligible for the pro football draft in 1975, and he's been writing letters to NFL teams since then for a tryout.

"It was a long time coming," said Mackrey, who played high school football against Billy "White Shoes" Johnson of the Houston Oilers and admires Harold Jackson of the Los Angeles Rams.

Until his burning time in the sprints, Mackrey stood out at the workouts because he was the smallest player in John F. Kennedy Stadium. Some wondered what he was doing there.

"That just makes me feel 9 feet tall. I'm always the littlest guy in everything. I knew I would have to try harder to show the big guys I can play," he said.

"I thought I had a chance, but I didn't expect it this good," Mackrey said.

Tug McGraw is disabled

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies announced Friday they have placed relief pitcher Tug McGraw on the 21-day disabled list and recalled right-hander Warren Brusstar from their Oklahoma City farm team.

McGraw irritated a nerve in his pitching elbow last Saturday while pitching to Montreal's Dave Cash. McGraw left the game and didn't throw a ball until Friday night, when he tried to play catch.

The elbow still was sore and he was placed on the disabled list as of April 17, a Phillies spokesman said.

Brusstar, 25, was one of the last players the Phillies cut in spring training.

Rice sophomore likes strikeouts

HOUSTON (AP) — Stocky Allen Ramirez is no picture of grace when pitching a baseball.

The 5-10 hurler from Victoria won't be around for the Southwest Conference playoffs, either, because of Rice University's lowly record.

"I have to use my whole body to get the proper velocity," Ramirez says. "I'm as liable to fall on the ground after my pitch as anything."

Academics? He arrived at Rice with visions of being a dentist. "But my first day of classes took care of that," he grinned.

Pinpoint accuracy, maybe? No, he still has control problems, but doesn't worry about them. "It's fun to throw the ball hard."

Can anything good be said about this sometimes-wild, not very graceful sophomore on a losing SWC team?

Oh, yeah. —As a freshman last season, he broke Bobby Layne's 30-year-old SWC strikeout record with 86 in 58 innings.

—Two weeks ago, leading Houston 5-4, he loaded the bases in the bottom of the ninth, then fanned the last two Cougars to end the inning and get the victory.

—His ERA is 2.56, with 56 strikeouts in 52.2 innings on the way to an 8-3 overall record. The team's ERA is 7.69.

This didn't strike fear into the hearts of the powerful Texas Longhorns last month. They said they were swinging early because Ramirez wasn't as fast as they'd been led to believe. Twelve of the Longhorns fanned in 13 innings as Ramirez threw 232 pitches and picked up a 4-3 victory, ending the longest win streak in college baseball history at 34.

"I like strikeouts, of course," Ramirez says. "But I don't mind letting the other guys hit the ball because we've got a good defense."

Ramirez has been pitching since he was nine and striking out 12 or 15 batters a game in Little League play. "I wasn't allowed to throw a curve because my elbow wasn't fully developed," he says. "I was always the hardest-throwing guy."

So far the Big Leagues haven't beaten a path to his door. Philadelphia drafted him in the 21st round two years ago, but made no effort to sign him.

"If you're good, the scouts will know," Ramirez says. "I just want to go as far as I can."

Meanwhile, there's always next season, and that's no comfort to Southwest Conference opponents.

Johnny Rutherford to race in Trentonian on Sunday

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Johnny Rutherford, in town to search for antique airplane parts as well as race in Sunday's Trentonian 200, says he's not sure a third Indianapolis 500 victory could change his life more than the second one did.

"But who knows? I was surprised how much the second one differed from the first," Rutherford added.

Rutherford, the Indy winner in 1974 and 1976, has two cars entered for him in the Indy 500. He's making his final competitive appearance before that race in the $100,000 Trentonian.

"I've been out looking for some stuff for my airplane this morning," Rutherford, a licensed pilot, said Friday. "I haven't had the airplane too long, but I sure enjoy it."

The plane, a P-51 Mustang, appears with Rutherford in a new television commercial for oil and filters. That, a shoe commercial "that gets me a lot of jobs from friends," and a television program called "The Racers" of which he is the host, are all part of the life outside the race track that Rutherford is building.

"All of this had come about since my second victory at Indianapolis," Rutherford explained. "After I won in '74 I was very disappointed. I knew what to expect, talking to other fellows who had won. But it never happened. The phone didn't really ring that much. The offers didn't come pouring in like I thought they would."

"But in '76, it was just the opposite. I don't know whether it was because it was the second victory or the economy was better. I finally realized that in '74 there was an economy crunch and advertising dollars had tightened up."

Rutherford has been complimented for dutifully making his share of public appearances without a gripe, always answering the same questions over and over, always politely, and putting up with the extra demands on his time.

"People say, 'Gee, I'll bet you get tired of these dumb questions.' Well, not really. I want them to know. And if I can answer their questions, maybe I can make the sport more interesting for them, make a race fan out of someone who's not." But he does admit that sometimes it gets overwhelming, that it can interfere with his work.
