Exodus of Americans expected in Ethiopia

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Three hundred Americans were expected to begin leaving Ethicpia today in the wake of the leftist military government's closure of five U.S. facilities.

U.S. State Department officials said about 100 American staff members and 200 wives and children would leave via commercial flights.

The Americans have been given until Wednesday to leave the country, but a State Department spokesman in Washington said:

"We have been informed that time would not be a problem and that there would be no pressure to meet the deadline. We were also informed that we would have access to the affected facilities and security would be provided wherever we requested it."

The government ordered the United States to close the U.S. Information Service center, the Military Assistance Advisory Group and the Naval Medical Research Center, all in Addis Ababa, and the Kagnew radio communications center and the U.S. Consulate in Asmara, the capital of Eritrea province, where the government is fighting guerrillas of the Eritrean Liberation Front.

Oil price rise to continue

By THOMAS O'TOOLE

WASHINGTON - A private study done for 25 industry and government clients forecasts that world oil prices will rise just as rapidly in the next 10 to 15 years as they have in the 3 1-2 years since the Arab oil embargo.

By next year oil will be about $1 a barrel more than this year, the study by Kansas City's Midwest Research Institute and California's Sherman H. Clark Associates predicts, by 1980 will be almost $3 more than this year.

The study forecasts that by 1985 the price for foreign oil will be $26.14 a barrel, and for domestic oil $24 a

Current prices are $14 a barrel for foreign oil and an average of $8.90 for World demand for oil will begin to outstrip supply by 1985, the study said, which will force an even more dramatic price rise in the five years after 1985. The study forecasts a price for foreign oil of $37.42 a barrel by 1990, and a domestic price of $37.50.

The study said there are three reasons why U.S. oil will rise so rapidly in price, eventually sur-passing the price of foreign oil. U.S. oil prices start from a lower base; the so-called "old" oil that is price-regulated will soon be exhausted, and domestic stocks still dwindle more quickly than stocks in foreign countries like Saudi Arabia.

The study assumes that Saudi Arabia (the country with the world's largest oil reserves) will not expand production as rapidly as some experts forecast, putting more upward pressure on prices.

"We restrain Saudi production, because we think the Saudis will restrain it," Sherman H. Clark said the other day in an interview. "We do not think the Saudis will expand their oil output just to match the world appetite. We think they will conserve their oil."

The study also assumes that the world's rush to nuclear power will slow down dramatically as more and more environmentalists question its worth. The study assumes nuclear delays in half the countries of the world now building nuclear plants, meaning more reliance on oil.

Another reason for higher oil prices in the U.S., the study said, is that domestic coal production will not rise at the rate President Carter predicted in last week's message to the

At best, the study estimated "sustainable output" of coal in the U.S. at 869 million tons in 1980, which is only 20 per cent more than the study estimates coal output will be this

Carter called for a 66 per cent increase in coal output in the next seven years. A 20 per cent increase in the next three years will not be a high enough rate to meet that goal.

If the study is correct, and world and domestic oil prices reach $37.42 and $37.50 a barrel by 1990, that would mean a gasoline pump price of almost

WASHINGTON (AP) - A group of Texas parents today lost their bid for Supreme Court review of a lower court decision denying them an op-portunity to challenge a desegregation plan for the Midland Independent School District.

Front remains quiet in African conflict

LUBUDI RIVER, Zaire (AP) - A mile west of the Lubudi river four Zairean soldiers sat behind a machine gun concealed in six-foot-high elephant grass.

It was the Zaire army's forward position in its counteroffensive against Katangan rebels, now in its 12th day. The front was quiet on Sunday, as it has been most days in Africa's newest war, now nearing the end of its seventh week.

Bright butterflies hovered in the sweet-smelling grass as soldiers carried ammunition forward from the damaged steel bridge over the Lubudi river. The retreating Katangan rebels blew out part of it.

A helicopter brought President Mobute Sese Seko to the river Sunday to bolster his troops and show foreign reporters that his army was ad-vancing. He watched bare-chested engineers, some wearing rosaries around their necks, heave and sweat as they muscled pieces of railroad track across the 15-foot chasm in the rusted steel Bailey bridge.

TIJUANA, Mex. - The complex problem of illegal immigration from Mexico into the United States cannot be resolved as long as it is treated simply as a "police problem," ac-cording to Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo.

Contrary to what many Americans might think, the Mexican President said during an interview with The Los Angeles Times, Mexican government officials do see illegal immigration as a problem "and we want to resolve

"But it is not simple," the 56-year-old President added. "We see it as a problem of commerce, a problem of finance, a problem of demography...we cannot resolve it as a police problem.

Lopez Portillo ended a two-day visit to Tijuana on Sunday. It was his first visit to the border area since being elected Mexico's president last July.

His interview with The Times was limited to one subject—the illegal im-migration of thousands of Mexican workers into the United States.

Although illegal aliens come to this country from all over the world, the majority come from Mexico, according to U.S. immigration officials. Almost 90 per cent of the approximately 800,000 undocumented aliens caught in the United States last year were Mexican nationals.

Lopez Portillo frankly acknowledged during the interview that "for us the problem is a solution, a solution to the lack of work in Mexico.

"We know it is the obligation of Mexico to find enough work for our citizens," he said. "We are doing what we can.'

However, the Mexican President added, there are things the United States can do to help stimulate the Mexican economy

'We are a nation that produces many things we could sell to the United States," he said. "But as of now our level of trade with you is very poor. We want to bring it up to a higher level."

Asked for his reaction to an increasingly negative public reaction in the United States to illegal immigration from Mexico, Lopez Portillo said it is based on "an incorrect view of the situation, or a lack of correct informa-

"Our workers are being portrayed as criminals, and as though they are replacing North American workers," he said. "The fact is that they contribute in their own humble way to the strength of the U.S. economy.

And as much as many Mexicans want to work in the United States, Lopez Portillo said, there are U.S. employers who want to hire them.

"They pick many of your crops and do other jobs that your citizens just won't do because they are hard or pay poorly," he said. "Many Mexican women, for example, work as domestics.

"The problem of these workers is like the problem of drugs," Lopez Portillo said. "As long as there is a demand in the United States, they will come - from one country or another. That is a simple law of economics." Lopez Portillo said the U.S. public as a "nation of immigrants" and show some tolerance for Mexican workers. "I believe Europe is viable today because it was able to send its excess population to the United States, and this same population helped the United States grow into a strong coun-

Carter visit strikes foreign policy notes

JACQUELINE TRESCOTT
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - As one more indication that Africa looms larger daily in American foreign policy, President and Mrs. Carter turned up Sunday night at the dedication ceremony of the Kennedy Center's African Room, a new reception gallery decorated with works from 22 African nations.

"All of you sense a growing importance of people who live in Africa," said Carter before an array of faces representing Washington's diplomatic, social and professional life. "As President, I have become increasing aware of the hopes, dreams, frustrations and concerns of the people of Africa.'

The Carters' appearance was roundly applauded by the African diplomats in the crowd of 450. "After all," said Andrew Young, U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, 'these are the same ambassadors that in previous years have felt neglected." Young and Center Chairman Roger L. Stevens were hosts for the evening. The Carters were at the head of a carefully juggled guest list that included several congressmen, Mayor Walter Washington and other city politicians, diplomats and an integrated mix of city professionals. While drummers in Kente cloth played Ghanian music, levity more than politics marked the evening. It was a night Douglas Moore, of the D.C. City Council, resplendent in an African robe, could be mistaken for a native of the Cameroon by that country's ambassador.

Before Carter toured the room, he spoke of the significance of America's growing concern" with Africa.

'I have had a lot of good teachers in the last three months. I'm always interested in what Andy Young is going to say," said Carter, as the crowd laughed at his allusion to the ambassador's outspokenness.

"Andy has brought to our country as Ambassador to the United Nations a very sure sense of the many compatibilities" between, Carter emphasied, the freedom struggles of minorities in the United States and African nations. "Both movements are worthy, exhilarating and sure of ultimate, success," Carter added.

After he shook hands with the nearest line of guests, which included the two sons of Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.), Carter toured the room, touching the fabrics and asking a barrage of questions. The 2,000square-foot space, paid for by the African countries, is actually two rooms, designed with textured, slanted walls to give not only a realistic feel of the architecture of the continent but to symbolize the diversity within it.

"Come here and look at this," Carter called to his wife, who had fallen behind to find out the history of the gourds. Kenneth B. Walker, the designer of the room with architect Frank Sanchis, told her, "They're functional as well as decorative. Sort of like Tupperware." Carter wanted her to examine the intricate figures Medical Association, on the 12-foot wooden doors, realizing the seriousness especially carved for the room by of the problem, is en-Lamidi O. Jack Watson, the secretary to the Cabinet, said, "I think Carter came because he regards U.S. relations with African nations as very important. He wanted to honor the African nations and he came because Andy Young was here."

Hospital fee bill to be sought

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter is ready to ask Congress to limit the fees hospitals may charge patients for rooms and services, a move that could save the government and consumers nearly $2 billion in 1978, government sources say.

Legislation to implement the plan by putting a cap on hospital charge increases is expected to go to Congress today.

The Carter administration also plans to send to Capitol Hill its legislative proposal to launch a new program of comprehensive health assessment and treatment for poor children, the sources said. President Carter has asked for $180 million to get that program started.

The limit on hospital charges, which the government has called "the first step in making national health insurance financially feasible," would benefit most consumers indirectly by slowing the upward spiral of health insurance premiums.

The cost of health care in America has been rising at about 15 per cent a year, and consumers pay those increases in the form of rising taxes and health insurance premiums. This rate of increase is more than twice the anticipated six per cent rise in overall consumer prices this year. The government estimates that Americans work about one month of the year to pay for their health care and almost two weeks of those earnings go to hospitals.

Nearly 90 per cent of hospital charges are paid by government Medicare and Medicaid programs or by Blue Cross and the private health insurance industry.

Small loan interest hike bill advances

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) -The Senate Economic Development Committee approved a bill today raising interest rates on $100$-300 loans — a bill its chief critic, Sen. Bill Patman, calls a "true loan sharking bill."

The committee sent the bill to the Senate floor on a 5-0 vote without discussion.

This is the second in-terest rate bill to clear the committee. The Senate, however, refused to debate the first one.

Patman, D-Ganado, said the second measure would raise the highest annual rate on loans of $100 to $300 from 31.4 per cent to 149 per cent, plus "acquisition charges" paid to the lender for giving the loan in the first place. Testimony was taken on the bill last Thursday, but the vote was postponed until today, with at least one more witness expected to testify. Neither the witness nor Patman were present when the vote was taken.

Paper's refusal of gay ad upheld by Supreme Court

Supreme Court today refused to consider whether the editor of a student newspaper at a state university may refuse a paid advertisement describing counseling and legal services offered by an alliance for homosexuals.

The justices let stand a U.S. Circuit Court decision upholding the student editor's right to reject the ad because he objected to the subject matter.

The Mississippi Gay Alliance, with support from the American Civil Liberties Union, urged the Supreme Court to overturn the lower court ruling in the case involving "The Reflector," the student newspaper at Mississippi State University.

The ACLU lawyers argued that the newspaper is an arm of the state because it is published at a statesupported school. In that situation, they continued, the newspaper cannot constitutionally accept some com-mercial, political and social announcements and reject others simply because the student editor found the contents objectionable. The lawyers acknowledged a recent Supreme Court decision that the First Amendment guarantee of a free press gives newspapers the right to refuse to publish whatever its editors reject. "Compulsion to publish is un-constitutional," the high court said in

But the ACLU attorneys argued that this case is different because the student newspaper is published by a state institution.

War on energy waste

No one can say that residents of Midland and other cities in the Permian Basin oil country aren't just as interested in conserving energy as persons in any other part of the nation.

And this is a very good reason for the forming here last week of a Midland-based organization which is designed to take the lead in a far-reaching campaign against the wasteful use of energy.

People in the oil country, long aware of a fast-developing energy shortage, perhaps are even more conservation-minded in this respect than residents of non-oilproducing states.

Anyway, it doesn't hurt to let persons everywhere know that West Texans are organizing to do battle against waste, as it affects

Residents of other parts of the country perhaps are inclined to think that just because many Texans have voiced opposition to President Carter's proposed energy program, that they are not interested in conserving energy. Such is not the case.

"Self-Initiated Conservation Movement" (SICM) is the name of the Midland organization, which is headed by Louis Hochman.

The movement, it was explained, came about as a result of increasing shortages of oil and gas and the national habit of overuse and misuse of the fossil

Hochman said the energy crisis has created for Americans "the greateet challenge in the history of our Republic."

He and his associates in the movement believe that if the realities of the energy crisis could be exposed totally, the American people would rally to the cause, joining hands, as in previous national emergencies, in meeting the challenge.

"The individual consumer of energy is our ultimate 'crisis' and our ultimate solution," Hochman said in a recent interview. "Each person must bear his own responsibility in this battle against energy waste."

He believes further that the efficient use of energy would assure added years' supplies of oil and gas .... providing additional time for the development of other energy sources. The "Self-Initiated" part of the organization's name really is the key to the program. The individual consumer holds the answer to waste of energy, or anything else, for that matter. If SICM can get its program across to enough people, it would have a very definite effect on wasteful use of petroleum. If it catches on over Texas, as is expected, it very well could spread rapidly across the nation. And it all begins, remember, right here in the center of the oil and gas country, with many oilmen and petroleum-oriented groups supporting it.

The sponsors realize full-well that conservation is by no means the answer to the overall energy crisis, but they know that conservation will help ... and this is their goal.

The "individual" pledge of SICM is as follows:

"To make a constant personal commitment of energy conserva-

"To take every reasonable action that promotes the efficiency of my personal energy needs. "To prevent the wasting of those precious resources now needed for stability and growth. "To not let my personal comforts weaken my determination for this cause. "To recognize that I am but one 'soldier' in this cause and to promote my individual contribution as being what's best for the whole." Think about it. And if you have suggestions on energy conservation, they will be welcomed by SICM, P.O. Box 4277, Midland

Former Nixon aides form club

ANDERSON and LES By JACK

WASHINGTON - In the comic strip "Doonesbury," the old Nixon hands got together to relive the wondrous days of Watergate. Sometime in the fall, believe it or not, it will happen in real life.

By solemn count, 132 erstwhile Nixon aides have formed a club, they call the "February Group." They took the name from the month in 1975 when the founders -Nixon loyalists who had escaped the slammer or were out on bailestablished a loose association.

A poll of the membership indicated that 72 were interested in chartering a plane for a pilgrimage to visit the Recluse of San Clemente, It almost became a patriotic pilgrimage next Fourth of July, except that too many of them had already scheduled family vacations that week

Instead, they decided to select a convenient week after Labor Day Then they will fly to San Clemente for few days of reminiscing with Richard Nixon about the good old

The idea for the reunion with Nixon grew out of a conversation between ex-White House aide W. Dewey Glower and the former president himself. Nixon was so pleased to learn about the February Group that he invited them to San Clemente.

But he cautioned solicitously: "I hope you won't tie the group too closely to me. I wouldn't want it to hurt you.

In a dispatch to his former Nixon teammates, Glower wrote in the familiar, old style: "With a Democratic administration and a Democratic Congress here, my son suggested that signs be placed at all entrances into Washington, D.C., stating:

"WARNING, the thinking people of the United States have determined that the actions of a Democratic Congress with the Rubber Stamp of a Democratic Administration may be hazardous to your health."

The February Group, which meets quarterly, has several minor Watergate figures on its rolls. But the only major Watergate personality, who has appeared at the meetings, is hatchetman-turned-evangelist Charles "Chuck" Colson, John Dean, who blew the whistle on Watergate, has not asked to join.

HAMS HOLLER - Our April 4 column about the crowded Citizens Band radio frequencies produced some loud static from the ham radio operators. We reported that 300,000 hams have 100 times more airspace than is available to the nine million CB enthusiasts and that some federal officials who regulate CB radio "have traditionally been hams.'

The story triggered an outpouring of mail from the offended hams. They pointed out that hams relay vital health and medical information during natural disasters, that hams are more scrupulous about policing theaselves than are CB operators, that hams have helped bring about scientific advances in radio communication and that the assignment of radio frequencies is heavily influenced by international agreements. Not the least indignant of the ham operators was Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. We'll let him speak for his fellow amateur radiomen. He complained that the CB enthusiasts often operate without a license and amplify their transmitters beyond the five-

They have also "abused the system," he charged, "in complete objection to all concepts of decency and gentlemanliness on the air. While this doesn't apply across the board, there are enough offenders that I don't care how many frequencies they have, they are slowly going to destroy their own function

Concluded the Senator: "I think I can safely say, Jack, that the amateurs through the years have contributed more to the art of communications than all of the so-called experts in the field. Our frequencies have been diminishing, not increasing We have great pride in our craft."

We didn't intend our story to be interpreted as an attack on the hams. We merely pointed out that the airwaves belong to the public, that there are far more citizens using CBs than ham equipment and that some of the federal regulators themselves were hams.

WATCH ON WASTE - Citizens besiege their Congressmen with complaints about Social Security, which is ensnarled in bureaucratic red tape. So the Social Security Administration sends about 6,000 mailgrams a month to congressmen, assuring them routinely that it is looking into the constituents' cases. But at $1.13 apiece, these meaningless interim replies cost the taxpayers about $72,000 a year.

Perhaps it is true, some Latins reason, that there is nothing the United States can or will do about the worsening situation in Africa.

But Mr. Carter could at least have said something about Cuban involvement.

Keep in mind that in recent months few U.S. government spokesmen have been sparing in their criticism of other Latin American countries that pose no threat to world peace. Then why not speak out against Cuban intervention in Africa?

Quite obviously, many Latin governments are confused by this apparent indecision in Washington. The major countries - Mexico, Brazil, Argentina and Colombia know how unreliable the Soviet Union and Cuba are. What is more, Cuba is proof that the Soviet system cannot be made to work in Latin America. Castro himself said in East Berlin that it is possible that the African countries will go socialist before Latin America because "imperialism created bourgeois and reactionary armies" in Latin America, but not in Still, it is hard to have confidence in Washington. The doubts that were sowed in Latin minds when the United States failed to support the Cuban exiles 16 years ago after landing them at the Bay of Pigs have been reinforced so many times, in so many places, since then.

Meat-axing arms sales could disrupt foreign policy

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON - An April 12 meeting of the Carter ad-ministration's top policymakers for national security moved toward reduction of U.S. arms sales abroad drastic enough to dislocate foreign policy, thereby showing what can be accomplished by middle-level officials unknown to the public. The Policy Review Committee heard, without significant dissent, a proposal for a meat-ax cut of 25 per cent in foreign arms sales. That followed by one month submission to President Carter of a confidential memorandum which critics in the Pentagon fear would hand absolute control over arms sales to Leslie H. Gelb, director of political-military affairs at the State Department. Indeed, the arms sales proposals — along with a great many other things in the Carter administration - bear Dr. Gelb's imprint.

This points to the principal worry of defense-oriented members of Congress. Whereas President Carter has forced a tougher arms control (SALT) bargaining position than his middle-level appointments preferred, lesser questions — arms sales, for example — will be decided well below the Oval Office.

It is here that the one-sided nature of Mr. Carter's appointments immediately after his election will be felt. National security machinery is now controlled by what was frequently called the network youthful liberals on Capitol Hill and in tax-exempt institutions who operated a government-in-exile during the Nixon years. Gelb, 39, a diplomatic correspondent for the New York Times the past four years but a Brookings Institution staffer before that, is a network member in good

Novak

Although hard-liners have come to see the President himself as their best hope within the administration, in the case of foreign arms sales Mr. Carter would not only have to overrule his subordinates but also contradict his own positions. In the second presidential debate, he twice criticized the U.S. for being "the arms merchant of the whole world" and contended that is "contrary to our long-standing beliefs and principles." There is little debate that foreign arms sales did get out of hand under Henry Kissinger, particularly to Saudi Arabia and Iran. Fiscal year 1976 figures total $8.6 billion with $2.5 billion to the Saudis and $1.4 billion to the Iranians.

While this could stand some trimming, a 25 per cent meat-ax is something else. Iran-might turn to Moscow for arms. While unable to take that step, Saudi Arabia might become less cooperative with Washington on Middle Eastern peace and oil prices. Furthermore, reduced arms sales would exacerbate U.S. difficulties with Latin American states. Indisputably, drastic cuts in arms sales drastically change international relations.

With this background, a "confidential" State Department memorandum of March 17 to the President stirred national security circles. The memo warned Mr. Carter of "a substantial risk" that Congress would pass its own arms sales proposals which "would impose new restrictions on your authority." The solution: an extraordinary executive-legislative branch working group" to draft new legislation.

While signed by Secretary Cyrus

Vance, the memo was prepared by

The arms sales question is now in the hands of Gelb and one definitely like-minded colleague from the National Security Council (NSC) staff, Jessica Tuchman. The Pentagon has been busy elsewhere - the office of the Secretary of Defense not focusing on the question, the Joint Chiefs of Staff characteristically unaggressive.

So, the State Department had the field to itself at the April 12 policy review meeting. Amid much talk about slashing Saudi and Iranian arms shipments, there was little comment from either Secretary of Defense Harold Brown or the representative of the Joint Chiefs, Lt.

Gen. William Smith. Even if Secretary Brown and the President wanted to ease Gelb's drastic proposals (which certainly may not be so), they scarcely can devote sufficient time to this area. Thus, the significance of Les Geib and others whose appointments aroused defense-oriented Democrats in January, becomes clear: unable so far to control SALT, their influence elsewhere can profoundly affect foreign policy in the months ahead.

City council approves street improvements

New York Avenue from Weatherford to Lee streets and Indiana Avenue from Mineola to Lee streets have been approved by Midland City Council for paving with $135,000 from Community Development Act funds of the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The council recently authorized advertising for bids for a contractor to do the work.

Public works director Fred Baker said work could begin within three ANDREWS - R. V. Hammack, 65, months if the project is awarded to a of Andrews, died Sunday morning in a contractor that is not now doing the city's assessment paving project.
But if Southwest Texas. Construction Co., the contractor doing the assessment paving, is the winning bidder, then Baker said work probably will take at least six months At the time the 1977 project is getting started, work is nearing completion on fiscal year 1976 street paving projects. All paving done with Community Development funds is intended to aid low and moderate income areas of Midland, which means the south and east section of town.

The streets improved with fiscal year 1976 funds are Carver Street from Front Street to Hemlock Avenue, Hemlock Avenue from Carver Street to Lamesa Road, Hemlock Avenue from Carver east, three blocks of Scharbauer Drive, and South Street from Carver to Lee

The two streets to be paved with CD funds this year fall short of what had been slated for priorities this year.

Mike Butler, the city's chief advisor on CD funds, said a staff review about one year ago had recommended spending $160,000 for the paving project, but the council had to cut this to $135,000 because HUD wanted more money spent on housing rehabilitation.

The city allocated $160,000 for housing rehabilitation.

"It probably came up the big loser, percentage-wise," Butler said of the money for paving rechanneled to

In all, $576,000 of Community Development money has been allocated to Midland for fiscal year 1977. There is $946,000 available to the city for fiscal year 1978, which starts Oct. 1. Of this, tentative projections are that $310,000 will be spent on paving' Butler said.

Streets that were on the list for paving this year with CD funds, but will not be paved due to lack of funds. are Indiana Avenue from Clay street to Fairgrounds Road, Orchard Lane from Carver Street to Front Street, and Industrial Avenue from Mineola

Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. said there is a possibility these streets may be improved this year with Revenue Sharing money.

Baker, on the otherhand, said these streets are slated for Community Development Act paving with fiscal year 1978 money.

Mayor Angelo said the amount of money remains the same for streets this year as was allocated by the city council last year. "There's no shor-tage, you've just got more priorities than you have funds."

Michigan Avenue from Weatherford Street to Lamesa Road was also on the schedule for paving this year, but will be delayed until a street realignment project is completed.

HOLDING PLAQUES honoring their service on the Midland Parks and Recreation Commission are Mrs. Martha Houston and Frank Wolfe. Mrs. Houston will resign soon and Wolfe's term is expiring. The plaques were presented at a recent commission meeting. (Staff Photo)

Uniformed guards from Burns International Security Agency have begun recently to patrol Midland Memorial Hospital.

Three guards have been employed for one-man shifts, seven days a week at the hospital.

Hospital administrator Wayne Ulrich said the guards, who started April 10, were retained as "a concern for maintaining security within our hospital and better insuring the safety of our patients.

There have been problems in the past with trespassers on hospital property, however, "nothing of any magnitude occurred," Ulrich said. The guard patrols throughout the hospital and grounds, escorts em-ployes to and from parking areas at night during shift changes, advises visitors to leave when visiting hours are up and generally oversees protection of the facility, he said.

The guards are unarmed, but carry small beepers that can summon them to any location of the hospital if needed, the administrator said.

General appropriations bill faces House today

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - State representatives had their carving knives ready when they began work this afternoon on a $15.7 billion general appropriation bill.

The bill is fair game because trimming it is about the only way funds can be obtained for giving teachers a respectable pay raise and improved retirement.

And the bill isn't all that generous to begin with. A number of agencies would not get enough money to stay abreast of inflation, nor would their employes. State workers would get 3.4 per cent annual raises, while inflation once again is moving at a double-digit

Look for efforts to eliminate proposed increases in welfare grants and part of the $150 million in new construction proposed by the House Appropriations Committee.

"If we adopt House Bill 510 (the budget bill) we would have $765.5 million left," said Lynn Moak, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's fiscal expert.

The House has passed a $695 million school finance bill, heavy on relief for school districts and their taxpayers. A $263 million .eacher pay raise bill is out of committee, and a sizeable teacher retirement bill also is in the Callie Smith, executive secretary of the Texas State Teachers Association disavows any effort to beef up teacher pay at the expense of welfare recipients.

He says he is worried, however, because the bill doesn't contain the traditional guarantee of automatic funding of the Foundation School Program even if its costs exceed the $4.3 billion provided by appropriation.

"It would be a tremendous obstacle for the public schools of the state to come in each year and compete for money in the general appropriation bill," Smith said.

Rep. Mickey Leland, who represents a Houston ghetto, said he feared there would be an effort to the monthly Aid to Families with Dependent Children grant from $32 to $40. Two-year cost would be $75

"If anybody runs with anything to take AFDC out to get a teacher pay raise they (the teachers) are going to be in trouble," said Leland, an appropriations committee member.

Committee chairman Bill Presnal.

D-Bryan, would not object to removing the AFDC increases. "I supported in committee that we not put it in there because we didn't have the money," he said. Grants have remained at $32 since about 1969, but Presnal said food stamps and increased medical assistance have raised living stan-darads for welfare recipients since

The Associated Press tabulated reports of 25 deaths between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight Sunday, including 19 on streets and highways, four homicides, an electrocution and a fire death.

These were among the victims: Motorcycle accidents Sunday killed three young men stationed at Dyess Air Force Base near Abilene. State police reported E.A. Bounds and Leslie C. # Operators see 'Red' when wells blow out

HOUSTON (AP) - Paul Adair, much better known as "Red," has been fighting oil and gas rig fires for 38 years at locations ranging from deserts to oceans. Oil and gas operators have made it a habit of calling Red when one of their drilling rigs blows out.

The red-haired, middle-aged Texan has dispatched some of the specialists that he's built since his company started at Houston in 1959 to the offshore rig fire in the North Sea off Norway that's already produced a giant oil slick measured in square miles. In 1968 Adair plugged a leak in a gas rig in the Bass

Strait off Australia after a 29-day effort. That blowout was similar to the current problem with the Phillips Petroleum Ecofisk Field off Norway. Adair capped the Australian rig by pumping mud into the well to seal the leak, stopping the spewing gas and halting the spread of oil on the water. Although Adair has tapped out blazes and blowouts as quickly as 45 minutes, most operations take weeks or longer. A blazing Phillips gas well in Algeria once required six months of Adair's time. Though he won't talk about his fees or income, Adair is no stranger to luxury automobiles, homes

The Texas grandfather and his crewmen are easily identifiable as they work on well fires. They all wear red underwear, coveralls, boots and hard hats. These replaced asbestos suits, regarded as "too clumsy" by Adair. He insists, however, that he and his workers are constantly drenched by water as they work close to the inferno-like conditions where they

"I like the challenge of the job," Adair has said.
"When the phone rings I never know where I'm going or what situation I'll have to face.'

Although the calls often lead to exotic places, Adair's closest brush with death came at Hollywood Park racetrack in Englewood, Calif., in 1954. During a fire at an oil well located at the track, Adair's hips were crushed by a crane. Doctors first gave him little chance to live, then said he would never walk again. Four months later Adair walked out of the hospital to resume his risky lifestyle.

"Red" Adair

Adair went into the business when he caught the eye of Myron Kinley in 1939. Mr. Kinley noticed that Mr. Adair was blown 50 feet into the air by a blowout and landed unharmed.

Adair worked for Kinley until 1959, when he started

It is now in mothballs near San Francisco waiting for a decision on its future use.

John Pottinger, the Maritime Administration's mothball fleet supervisor, recently showed the 36,000-ton ship to two reporters for The Sacramento Bee, who said they were the first journalists aboard since her arrival four months ago. The 36,000-ton ship is now in the hands of the U.S. Navy. Upkeep costs $300,000 a year - $3,500 a month just for electricity to run security lighting.

The newspaper said the National Science Foundation is awaiting word from its board of directors in Washington, D.C., on a request for up to $5 million to study the feasibility of a 10-year, deep ocean drilling

Dr. Peter E. Wilkness of the NSF's Ocean Sediment Coring Program was quoted as saying that could include conversion of the Glomar Exolorer at a cost of up to $52 million. He said it would cost about $110 million to build a new ship for the research.

There's also a possibility it will be used for mining the ocean floor for metal nodules, which would require a less-expensive conversion.

Rep. Robert L. Leggett, D-Calif. who represents the district, told the Bee the Glomar Explorer was "a treasure hunter and that should be exploited. How many ships were lost during World War II? Literally thousands. There is much to be recovered.

The ship has a cavern 200 feet long and 80 feet deep that opens to admit vessels or other objects brought up by a huge claw and three derricks.

Pottinger said the ship's engineers were a closed-mouth group who told him and his workmen only what they needed to know to take care of her.

Car air bags back in spotlight

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

Air bags are back in the spotlight again, despite a December ruling that deflated supporters of the controversial devices.

The federal government is conducting a new study to determine whether the bags should be required equipment on cars of the future.

A public hearing on the issue is scheduled in Washington on Wednesday. Written comments can be sent to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) up until May 27.

The hearing is being held in the department auditorium, between 12th and 14th Sts. on Constitution Avenue. Written comments should be sent to the administration, Room 5108, 400 7th St., S.W., Washington, D.C., 20590. Writers should refer to Docket No. 74-14. Notice 08.

At issue is whether the government should require some sort of passive restraint system, such as air bags, to protect automobile occupants in case of accidents - even if t e individuals take no action to help themselves.

Air bags are balloon-like devices that inflate automatically and almost instantly during a frontal crash. They begin deflating in less than a second Another type of passive restraint systems is a belt that is attached to the door of the car and automatically wraps itself about the driver when the door is closed.

William T. Coleman, then the two months

secretary of transportation, ruled against mandatory air bags Dec. 6, although he did say they were technologically feasible. Coleman ordered further research to determine whether there was some way to increase seat belt usage

Coleman's successor, Brock Adams, decided in February to re-examine the entire air bag issue.

Adams said he favors some type of passive restraint system, but added: "I haven't prejudged what should be done or when or how." He said the lighter, smaller cars of the future might not be safe enough without additional built-in protection.

Opponents of air bags say that seat belts — required since 1968 — provide adequate protection. They say air bags would boost the price of cars by as much as $300 and would limit consumers' freedom of choice. The opponents also argue that more tests are needed to determine the effectiveness of the air bags in actual traffic accidents and to make sure the bags cannot inflate accidentally.

Supporters contend that many people do not use the seat belts properly. The safety administration estimates that no more than 20 to 30 per cent of drivers and passengers buckle up. They claim almost 12,000 lives could be saved every year if air bags were required and say that mandatory mass production would cut costs. Adams has said he believes automakers could install air bags in all new cars by 1980 or 1981 at a cost to consumers of $100 to $150

Japan reaffirms program to pursue plutonium use

by SAM JAMESON Los Angeles Times

TOKYO - Japan Sunday reaffirmed its determination to go ahead with the use of plutonium for nuclear power development by beginning operation of its first experimental fast-breeder reactor.

The reactor, which was developed primarily by Japan itself but with the help of what an American embassy official called "a large cooperative program" with the United States. began to generate heat power after a cautious 40day process of insertion of plutonium and uranium fuel.

As such, the development served notice to President Carter that Japan has no intention of abandoning the use of plutonium, a highly explosive element which can be used to produce nuclear bombs.

Sosuke Uno, director of the Science and Technology Agency, spelled out that message in a special announcement issued as the reactor, ubbed Joyo (eternal sunshine) reached "criticality.

A fast-breeder reactor not only uses plutonium, which Carter has urged all nations to refrain from producing or using commercially, but also produces more plutonium in the process

- offering an endless source of nuclear fuel. Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda marked the occasion by declaring on a visit to the city of Takaoka that he intends to meet Carter separately during the May economic summit meeting in London to renew Japan's appeals for U.S. permission to proceed with plans to reprocess spent nuclear fuel into plutonium.

Fast-breeder reactors must use plutonium as fuel, unlike light-water reactors now in use in Japan which consume enriched uranium - incapable of being used for nuclear bombs - as Fukuda also indicated he intended to bring up the issue in the summit meeting itself.

The beginning of operations of the fast-breeder reactor, a technically difficult task involving the use of highly sensitive coolants, came 12 years after construction began on the project at Oarai northeast of Tokyo. It underscored the nature of the about-face in american nuclear policy Carter now appears to be attempting to force on Japan.

Not only was the reactor developed with what Justin Bloom, science attache at the American Embassy, called "a large cooperative program" involving exchange of scientists and technology with the United States, but the plutonium used to begin operations was obtained with specific U.S. approval for reprocessing in plants in Britain

China discloses large obstacle

France-Presse

PEKING - Mao Tse-tung's successor, Chairman Hua Kuo-feng, has revealed one of the main obstacles to the development of China's economy: the lack of scientific and technical workers and their insufficient proficiency. He also announced that petroleum production in China would be stepped up. The New China News Agency said Hua made these statements during a visit April 17-19 to the Taching oil field and petrochemical complex in Heilunkiang (formerly Manchuria), the Chinese oil capital. A national conference on industry, the first of its kind since 1949, opened in Taching on April 20.

The official media said Sunday that Hua spoke to researchers and technicians who had shown him around a scientific exhibition.

Adoption or parenthood? The girl must choose

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a two-part series which examines the increasing number of teen-age pregnancies in Midland County and the alternatives a girl has when she discovers she is pregnant. By LANA CUNNINGHAM

"The times they are a-changing," is a saying which can be applied to pregnant teen-agers and the com-munity, both in Midland and across the nation.

Whereas a pregnant teen-ager formerly was sent away somewhere, either to a home for unwed mothers or a relative's house, there is a trend for the girls to stay at home and keep the baby, instead of giving it up for

Dr. Charles Lutrick, pastor of the First United Methodist Church, doesn't believe more teen-age girls are becoming pregnant, it is just that more are staying home to have the

"It's evidence today is more prominent because of the lessening of the stigma held formerly by the community, by the parents and by the individuals who formerly went somewhere, whereas today they are likely to be at home in the community," he said. "I think related to this business of staying at home is the fact that families and the girls themselves are supportive of a one parent family situation."

When a teen-age girl finds herself pregnant and single, there are several places in Midland she can go for counseling.

Dr. Ray Bristol of the Pastoral Counseling Service said the best resource would be a minister. But, after the initial counseling the girl needs people who can give her a total view of her situation and he recommended Permian Basin Planned Parenthood, Inc.

If a girl goes to Family Services Association of America in Midland. she is shown alternatives and also sometimes is referred to PBPPI, according to Linda George, director.

"It is important for the girl to have some follow-up counseling to adjust to the decision she made, whatever she chooses to do. The counseling is terribly important," she said.

Options available

The pregnant teen-ager has several alternatives:

-Getting an abortion. -Getting married and keeping the

-Continuing her education, living with her family and keeping the baby or giving it up for adoption.

-Going to a home for unwed mothers and either keeping the baby or giving it up for adoption.

George said she feels there is a trend away from abortion and that girls are either staying in Midland and having the baby, or going to a home for unwed mothers.

For many girls the decision is a difficult one. Several girls for various reasons decide to give up their baby for adoption, or they need a place to go while they make a decision.

For these girls, a home for unwed mothers might be the answer. There are several in Texas, including the Methodist Home located at 6487 Whitby Road in San Antonio, the Florence Crittendon Home in Fort Worth and the Edna Gladney Home, also in Fort Worth.

According to Peggy Fisler of Midland, Edna Gladney home's outreach representative, the home provides a place from the rest of the world to help the girl make her

"One of the workers there said the home's most important job is to give the girl the knowledge to make an informed decision about the choice (of keeping the baby or putting it for adoption) facing her," Mrs Fisler

The home has a counseling staff which includes a psychiatrist and psychologist. If the girl prefers, she can have the counselors talk with her parents, or in some cases, the baby's father. But, Mrs. Fisler stressed, none of this is done without the girl's

'The counselors make them (the girls) aware they need to consider what is best for their child," she said. Even though a teen-ager may have decided before she enters the home that she will give the baby up for adoption, she signs no papers until four days after the baby's birth.

Identity hidden

Girls who go to the Edna Gladney home are assured confidentiality and they go by another name while there, Mrs. Fisler explained. They work at various jobs while there, such as office aide, receptionist or in the beauty shop.

Her schooling is not neglected, either. Six teachers from the Fort Worth school district make sure the girls keep up with their studies, and they will be at the same level when they transfer back to the school in their community.

Even though some homes have closed in recent years with more teenagers keeping their baby, this is not the situation at Edna Gladney, ac-

"The first thing a girl thinks about when she finds herself pregnant is abortion. Then she thinks of other ways, such as marriage. But, if she doesn't know about the home, she may be forced into a situation she doesn't want.'

Peggy Fisler, Edna Gladney Home representative

"There are very few tears here. By the time the girls come here they have made their decision as to what they want to do-they will have the baby, keep it and stay at home."

Virgie Lewis, Director of Cowden House

cording to Mrs. Fisler. The campus recently has been expanded and it includes two areas.

One area includes the dormitory for the younger girls and the other area has apartments for the older girls. Each area has its own swimming pool and recreation facilities. Events such as spring luaus and Christmas parties are scheduled throughout the year for the girls. The community also provides tickets to various entertainment in Fort Worth, such as to movies or pageants. The girls' medical care is taken care of with the staff of Duncan Memorial Hospital which includes obstetricians and a pediatrician. The hospital is used only by girls of the Edna Gladney Home, according to Mrs. Fisler.

She urged that any girl who wants to talk with a counselor at the home may dial a toll-free number: 1-800-792-1104. If she prefers to talk with one of the girls who is going through the same experience, she may dial the number after 5 p.m.

"The first thing a girl thinks about when she finds herself pregnant is abortion." Mrs. Fisler said. "Then she thinks of other ways, such as marriage. But, if she doesn't know about the home, she may be forced into a situation she doesn't want."

The home does not turn down any girl for lack of money, she said. If the girl can only afford $1, that is all she is charged. And the girl never pays for her complete medical care.

Figures show 97 per cent of the girls in the home give up their babies for adoption, but Mrs. Fisler said there is no pressure on the girl.

She added that if a girl knows she definitely wants to keep the baby before she enters the home, she is urged to stay at her home to adjust to the community, and that is what many Midland girls are doing.

An increasing number of Midland girls are keeping their baby and prefer to stay in the community while pregnant. Some of these girls do marry the baby's father, which solves one problem, but they still want to continue their education while pregnant

School set up

Cowden House, located at 301 N. C. St. was set up about six years ago, according to Hugh Smith, coordinator for special education for Midland Independent School District. It follows the state law which states that any child who is handicapped must have education provided for them, "and pregnancy is considered a handicap," he said. The girls, though, are no longer required to leave the regular classes and go to Cowden House. Under Title IX, the federal rule which states no one can be discriminated against in public schools, the girls can remain in their classes.

Whenever a pregnant girl enrolls in Cowden House, she is kept in the program she had in regular school, with the exception of science and home economics labs "because we don't have the facilities for those.

When the girl is ready to return to school, about two weeks after the baby is born, she goes back into the program she was in before transferring to Cowden House, he added.

Virgie Lewis, director of Cowden House, said 16 girls currently are enrolled. The school has had an average of 50 girls each year since it opened, although it has dropped slightly in the past year. This she attributes to the increasing number of abortions.

"There are very few tears here," she said. "By the time the girls come here they have made their decision as to what they want to do-they will have the baby, keep it and stay at Even though they are not required to go to Cowden House, the girls said they prefer it. "The hours are shorter and the teachers take more time with the students," explained Nancy, a junior (the girls' names have been changed.)

Several girls transferred because they also are given instruction in prenatal care, nutrition, childbirth and care of the baby after delivery.

The girls, being of a younger age than most women who bear children, encounter more health problems, Mrs. Lewis said, and they need the environment of Cowden House, where everyone understands.

And Susan added, jokingly, "Besides, it's too uncomfortable sitting in those other desks."

Mrs. Lewis said she feels the girls are more serious about their education. "They are disciplining themselves in their school work more than in the past. They are more aware of the importance of an education."

No ordeal

For many of the girls at Cowden House, their pregnancy is just another event in their life. It has not caused the emotional upset it would have 10 years ago. Several girls married the baby's father, after they discovered they were pregnant. Others said they are planning to marry the father ... sometime in the future.

Some girls, though, feel they will have fewer problems by not getting married. They realize the baby's father is not ready to assume responsibility, Mrs. Lewis said.

The girls also said their lives have not changed that much since they became pregnant. They still go out and see their friends.

"Teenaged girls getting pregnant now is more common," siad Susan. 'The parents don't want to hide them (their daughters.) They are not afraid of their social position any more. The girls are still accepted in the family."

Mrs. Lewis explained that for one of the girls, being pregnant is not an ordeal. The community in Midland where the girl lives is accustomed to single girls becoming pregnant and keeping their babies. The only problem comes when the girl goes back to school, the mother works and there is no one to keep the baby.

"This is the point where a girl may drop out of school," Mrs. Lewis said. As for the future, most of the girls said they are looking forward to taking care of their baby. "I just don't know how some girls can put their baby up for adoption," said Susan, who added that she is married.

Sylvia said she knew of girls who, while pregnant, were ashamed to be seen in public.

'Then they didn't want to be seen with their baby after it was born."

Another student related the story of a girl who kept her baby for a year and then put it up for adoption. "She didn't like having to stay home and take care of her baby. She liked to go

Girls have fantasies

Peggy Fisler said, "A lot of girls have their fantasies beforehand about having their baby, and then realize later they can't do it.'

Gloria Roden, director of information and education with Permian Basin Planned Parenthood, Inc. supported Mrs. Fisler's statement.

"The very young girls don't have a clear perception of what it means to be a parent and what it means in the future," she said. "They feel gratified to have a child and think of themselves as becoming a family unit without realizing what lies ahead."

Even with the counseling available in Midland County and the alternatives open to a pregnant teen-ager, sometimes she doesn't make the decision in time or changes her mind

"We do know of a lot of girls who are keeping their babies for six months or a year-maybe even two years-then discovering it is more than they can cope with and are putting them out for adoption at that

And there have been some instances when the girl, ready to deliver, walks into a Planned Parenthood clinic for the first time. "There is not much the clinic or a doctor can do then," Mrs. Roden said. The times may be changing in the community's outlook toward pregnant girls, but one thing will always remain the same. That pregnant teen-ager, and she alone, will have to make the decision which will affect her life forever.

Cuban woman recalls first days of revolution

Haydee Santamaria with her son Abel.

"After this it will be much more dif-licult to live than to die, therefore you will have to be more valiant than we; ecause we are going to die, and you, felba and Haydee, you have to live, you have to be much stronger than we, and to die is much easier than

-Abel Santamaria to his sister Haydee shortly before he was tor-tured to death at the Moncada Garrinion in 1953.

She could easily be mistaken for a suburban American housewife. Medium height, plump with short dark curly hair, she wears slacks, a bright orange-embroidered overblouse, matching coral lipstick, masses of jangling gold bracelets and tapestried clogs.

You could picture her at the supermarket, at the bridge club, maybe on a shopping spree with the girls, so vivacious and chattery and carefree.

You could, that is, if you didn't know that Haydee Santamaria was one of the two women involved in the launching of the Cuban revolution, the bloody and historic attack on the Batista army's Moncada Garrison in Santiago on July 26, 1953. That she lost her brother, Abel, and her fiance, Boris, to torture in prison after the three of them were captured that day.

That she was imprisoned for nearly a year after the attack. That she continued fighting alongside Fidel Castro and Che Guevara in the Sierra Maestra.

She is filled with memories of the early days of the revolution this day that she has agreed to be interviewed. She has just received a medal, she and three other heroines of the revolution, for the 20th anniversary of an armed struggle.

They are the first women to receive it. She is in a rather emotional state, allowing herself a rare moment of nostalgia. She rocks back and forth in her rocking chair and fingers her medal wistfully, more out of sentiment than pride.

"I don't speak of these things every day," she says, and her eyes mist over just the slightest bit.

"But it doesn't mean they are not inside me. I would say with complete honesty that it is very difficult to talk to someone about these things, to someone who does not know us.

"I am referring to the struggle and

"But with all of this I am sure I would do it again. Because before this time my life had no meaning.

When you love the land in which you were born and you want a minimum of rights for people, that's when one decides to take the most violent steps, to take the weapons.

"For a woman this is difficult. But then she decides she can be as good a soldier and warrior as any man. And I decided 23 1-2 years ago. It is hard to understand what a woman can feel. When she goes, in my case, to the conquest of life and death.

"I understand this. "From my family I encountered the first misunderstanding. We felt many things but we couldn't explain then. We had to fight against our family at that moment and fight against the total incomprehension of all of our

"But we decided with absolute confidence finally that even if we died history would understand."

She is speaking softly now, wetting her lipstick with her tongue.
"I didn't die at the Moncada Garrison," she says. "But I left more than my life there. "I went there with the man I was ing to marry and with my brother who at that moment meant everything to me. My brother liberated me from a very good but very reactionary family. 'And those two men remain forever in the garrison and I remain alive .. and after this I knew that there was only one way left: to keep on struggling. "Life has been good to us. I have been able to see what our people have accomplished. I am a totally happy woman, I am laughing. I feel

She stops and looks down at her lap a moment, then looks up and smiles. But if I said that I felt no sorrow today I would not be telling the truth.'

Haydee Santamaria was born in a small town in Santa Clara in the countryside of Cuba. Her father was a director of a sugar mill. They were not rich, but they were petit bourgeois.

They ate well, had enough money and lived comfortably, as one of the leading families in a small village. "Even then, in that atmosphere," she recalls, "it was like not being able to breathe. My brother, Abel, was two years younger than I, but he was always my guide. "It was very difficult in the sugar mill. Some of the men couldn't work more than four months. Those workers had no food for their families. Abel and I decided to struggle for the workers. I was 14 years old. In those small villages one decided very young whether to struggle or to be a part of it. "At that moment my family thought I was odd. They suffered because I suffered because I made them suffer. It was a vicious circle.

But her brother, Abel, finally decided to go to the University in Havana and brought Haydee with him. "I was suffocating there."

It was in Havana in 1953, shortly after Batista's coup that they began to struggle. "After the coup d'etat we decided for a more violent way of struggle. That's when my brother decided there was no other way." Radical students began to meet in the apartment of Haydee and Abel Santamaria. "We met Fidel about that time and he began to visit our apartment and immediately became head of the group. Abel was the second leader. There was never any discussion about my being a woman. I remember thinking then that we could all die. But I never thought of the way Abel and Boris would die."

The attack on the Moncada Garrison was planned; Haydee Santamaria and her friend Melba Hernandez were the only women among the attackers. After it was over, they were the only two in their group to have survived. Abel and Haydee Santamaria and her fiance, Boris Santa Colona, were supposed to take over one section of the garrison, Castro another. And other radicals were to take over other sections.

Socialized medicine sounds ideal...but

DEAR ABBY: The widow of a physician complained because two years after her husband's death, his unpaid bills totalled $11,000. Your suggestion was: "It's a wise dentist who collects his fee while the tooth is still aching"-in other words, payment in advance. This would limit health care to those who can afford it. An example of how unfair that would be is the case of the woman who was refused admission to four hospitals just south of the U.S.-Canadian border because she was on welfare. The poor woman finally gave Norway does not permit stationing of foreign troops on its soil in peacetime or stockpiling of nuclear weapons. Norway keeps its cool even cooler by not allowing NATO exercises or allied military aircraft or naval ships near the Soviet border.

Kirkenes, a iron mining frontier town with 5,000 people and, in the vicinity, 10,000 reindeer, always has had a cultural and economic affinity to Russia. Oslo, Norway's capital, is 2,000 miles away. But Murmansk, with its opera, ballet, soccer stadium and hockey rink, is only two hours by train. Nikel, the Soviet nickle mining town six times as big as Kirkenes, is just across the Pasvik River.

"Our citizens go there on bus trips several times a year," says Kirkenes Mayor Arnt Isaksen, "but no tourists come here from Russia.' On formal occasions, like a big Communist holiday or "liberation day," celebrating the arrival of the Red Army to end the German occupation of World War II, Mayor Isaksen goes to Nikel to exchange toasts with his counterpart. Behind his desk is a hammer and sickle pennant, a memento of his last visit.

Before World War II, when the border was open, people regularly went back and forth to visit, shop, tend reindeer and get married, which accounts for the Russian, Lapp and Finnish names in the phone book. The Soviet side of the border is patrolled by frontier guards from the ministry of the interior, but the Red Army in great strength is not far away. "We sometimes see their tanks on maneuvers, and at night we see the gun flashes from the firing ranges,"

Outbound checkpoints conference proposal

By BILL HAZLETT The Los Angeles Times

SAN DIEGO, Calif. - Outbound checkpoints for travelers going from the United States into Mexico were proposed here Saturday during the final session of a border crime con-

Such a system would be part of a coordinated effort to stem the "almost unchecked" flow of stolen property and automobiles across the Mexican border," said California State Atty. Gen. Evelle J. Younger.
The checkpoints would be similar to those currently manned by United States Customs officers to screen motorists and pedestrians entering this country at border crossings. California may become the first state to initiate the outbound checkpoint plan, Younger told more than 300 federal, state and local law enforcement officers attending the three-day conference.

Authorities from Texas, Arizona and New Mexico, also plagued by spiraling criminal activities along the 2,000 mile U.S.-Mexico border, also expressed strong support for the checkpoint proposal.

"It might be unpopular at first, especially if the checkpoints create traffic jams and long waiting lines, but the system could work," a spokesman for Younger said.

"The checkpoints would be like those security setups in airports. People griped like hell about them, but they sure put an end to

The outbound checkpoint system was one of several proposals discussed by participants at the A major item was a plan to establish regular meetings between forcement officers to iron out border crime problems.

Mexican Atty. Gen. Oscar Flores Sanchez and law enforcement officials from the six Mexican border states took part in the conference along with U.S. Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell, who was keynote speaker; Peter Bensinger, head of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration; Leonard Chapman, commissioner of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, and others.

Among other proposals discussed were: tougher sentences for convicted smugglers of illegal aliens, a program of federal reimbursement to defray state and local costs in the handling of illegal aliens, a coor-dinated state and federal effort to deal with false identification documents, and the development of a positive identification system for undocumented aliens.

The conference steered clear of such highly controversial proposals as the use of military personnel for border patrol.

Younger, however, urged the federal government to take an active leadership role in finding and financing solutions to the massive problems created by border crime.

At the same time, Younger ordered his staff to arrange twice-yearly meetings for law enforcement agencies dealing with border crime and to establish a series of monthly meetings between California and Mexican law officers to solve mutual

Friendship Force aim to promote understanding

The Los Angeles Times ATLANTA - A small businessman and his wife from Los Angeles become houseguests of a Rio de Janeiro businessman's family they have never met.

A bricklayer from Newcastle, England, visits the home of a bricklayer in atlanta. A schoolteacher from Tiffin, Ohio, is computer-matched to be a live-in guest of a schoolteacher in Heidelberg, Germany.

These hypothetical matchups are used by Friendship Force — President Carter's nongovernmental, people-to-people program — to illustrate the sort of ordinary citizens exchange visits beginning this summer.

"This isn't tourism — it's for better understanding among grass-roots families all over the world," said the Rev. Wayne Smith, 42. Smith has been appointed by Carter as volunteer president of the nonprofit program. which has its headquarters in Atlanta.

The Friendship Force program, which already has plans under way for exchanges between residents of at least seven states and seven countries, is patterned after one Carter set up when he was governor of Georgia. All flights will be chartered, Smith said, with participants paying $250

each, regardless of destination. Sample plan: An aircraft carrying 300 Californians to Paris will return immediately to the United States with, 300 French participants.

Although the program will match people with similar occupations and interests, those who sign up are not selecting a tour but agreeing to go anywhere in the world, Smith em-

Those chosen to participate, he said, will attend a meeting well ahead of their trip at which their destination will be discussed. He explained that participants will be permitted to carry only one piece of luggage and that they will be asked not to spend more than $50 for items beyond sightseeing expenses.

"They will not be going on a buying trip," Smith said. "They are going to make friends — as goodwill am-

Each person will be required to live at least four days in a private home, Smith said, and then will be free to sightsee for the duration of the trip if

Low-income applicants chosen by computer and by Friendship Force volunteers will be partially sponsored by funds from foundations and corporate contributions limited to $10,000

The inaugural exchange is to take place about July 4 between Atlanta and Newcastle, England. If the deluge of more than 2,000 applicants is any gauge, there may be as many as 500 exchanges annually by 1980, Smith believes, involving 250,000 persons

Smith said California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr has assured him that California will participate. He said that by this week 15 other states had chosen directors.

Smith, a pastor of the Decatur (Ga.) Presbyterian Church, said in an interview that President Carter conceived the Friendship Force primarily to promote world peace.

Friendship Force, Inc., which has a full-time paid director and an office staff, but which will rely largely on volunteers, has grown out of the annual exchange visits that Carter helped initiate between Georgia and the Brazilian state of Pernambuco in 1973 when he was governor.

Smith, who also speaks Portuguese, was the original coordinator of those exchanges, which generally were praised by Atlantans who took part.

"I came away very impressed with Brazil's culture and architecture," said Sharon Bailey, an Atlanta Constitution reporter. "But I also came away very grateful for what we have in the United States. I have reported on slums and poverty in our country, but nothing like theirs..."

Governors urge crude entry via Washington

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) - A conference of Western and Midwestern governors, concerned about U.S. energy resources coming under the control of another country, says Alaskan oil should be funneled through a Washington state port to keep delivery systems under American control

The governors agreed they support "the delivery of crude oil through a pipeline running from that port through the northern group of states."

In a related development, a letter from Washington Gov. Dixy Lee Ray to President Carter, made public Sunday, urged that the United States choose a pipeline route for Alaska natural gas that would minimize dependence on Canada.

Standard of Indiana chairman criticizes President's solution

By WARREN BROWN (The Washington Post)

WASHINGTON - Leaders of in-dustries directly affected by President Carter's energy program praised him Sunday for highlighting the nation's energy problem, but took issue with his plans to solve it.

Among the more vociferous of those criticizing the President's program was John Swearingen, chairman of the board of Standard Oil of Indiana

Carter's proposals would result in less exploration for critically needed oil and gas supplies, Swearingen said in an appearance on "Meet the Press" (NBC). He was one of four representatives - from the oil, coal, automobile and electric utility industries - to appear in a special onehour segment of the show.

In fact, Swearingen said, President's proposals would tually leave the (oil) industry with less money to drill wells and increase supplies than the industry currently

The oil industry "is perfectly willing to make sacrifices" to help meet the nation's energy needs, Swearingen said. "But you must realize, and our political people must realize that additional (oil) supplies are not going to be forthcoming unless the value received for the output exceeds the cost of getting them."

White House energy chief James Schlesinger took an opposite view Appearing on "Face the Nation" (CBS) he said the oil industry is makin g"absolutely invalid" and "misleading" statements in saying Carter's plan contains no incentives for increased production.

Schlesinger noted that the President's proposal would allow prices on newly discovered oil to rise to the current world market prices -$13 per barrel. U.S. prices on new oil now range from $5.25 to $11.28 per

The "new oil" increases are meant to spur exploration and production, Schlesinger said. He said the oil industry is dissatisfied with Carter's plan because it wants higher incentives (such as the elimination of price controls on "old oil" - oil now in production), bigger profits and a larger share of the nation's gross national product.

When the matter of high industry profits was put to Swearingen Sun-here th ekind of things that you hear from the left wing of our country. He added, "If you really want to accelerate the domestic exploration of oil and gas production in this country, the industry has to be given the money to do it. If the industry doesn't do it, there aren't but two other alternatives. "One is for the government to do it. And the government can do it just like they run the post offices and the railroads. And the second is for the public to do without. And I don't believe the public wants to do without," Swearingen said. Just as dissatisfied with the particulars of Carter's plan was Carl E. Bagge, president of the National Coal Bagge said he "applauds the fact that the President has indicated that there is a problem and has laid his conservation program he put before the nation last week. But the program "doesn't deal with the root causes of the problems that have led to a slacking of demand for coal," which is now considered the major alternative to oil and gas fuels, Bagge said.

hampering production, Bagge said.

He said those restrictions need to be straints, both on the production of coal and the use of coal" in his energy program, Bagge said. "Something has to give. There has to be some national balance between the securing of our environmental goals ... and a shift in this economy from oil and gas to coal."

New Philadelphia lawyer may change profession

By KEN ALLEN

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - The American Bar Association has turned a two-story row house in West Philadelphia into an experiment that could revolutionize the legal profession.

The building is the home of the ABA's first legal clinic. Robert T.

the clinic. They also advertise, despite the fact that advertising is still a controversial issue within the legal profession.

The 59th Street Legal Clinic is an 18-month experiment that began last November to try to bring legal services to middle-income people who make too much to qualify for free legal aid, but don't make enough to afford an expensive lawyer.

efficient way to provide legal services to the middle-income people," Richards said. "The poor have free legal aid. The rich people have the big law firms. But where does the guy who works go? The middle-income people have been greatly overlooked."

The clinic has a limited practice in areas in which the ABA thinks mid-help. It handles real estate tran-sactions, actions in small claims court, uncontested divorces, defenses of mortgage forclosures and legal "checkups" which include wills.

Prices range from $10 for the initial consultation fee to $350 for an un-contested divorce. Most of the work can be done in one visit with the lawyer and one or two follow-up visits

Richards, who used to practice with downtown Philadelphia firm, said the clinic's prices were about half what large law firms charge. Smaller firms and attorneys in individsal practice may charge fees comparable to the clinic's, he said.

That's where the controversial advertising comes in, said Robert Cohen, chairman of the company that owns the clinic. "The legal profession is throes of a dilemma with advertising," Cohen said. "It would appear that without advertising, the clinic won't make it. But what kind of advertising and what should it say?" For the time being, advertising for the clinic is being handled by the Philadladelphia Bar Association, which has been placing discreet ads in neighborhood publications, listing the

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Saccharin discussed

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know I'll gain 30 pounds if I can't get saccharin. Who wants the ban, anyway? Could you explain what it is all about?-Linda S.

Dear Linda: Some experts are for the ban. Some say it doesn't make sense. And others are sort of inbetween. One thing is sure. The Food and Drug Administration had no choice but to start the banning procedure once the study done in Canada showed saccharin could give rats bladder cancer. Under the law-the Delaney amendment-a food additive automatically gets banned if it causes cancer in any test on animals or man.

It doesn't matter that you would have to drink over 800 cans of diet soda daily in your life to get the same proportion of saccharin the rats did, because the Delaney clause makes no allowance for levels. If the saccharin in 800 cans a day is a cancer risk, so is the saccharin in one can-or one teas-

There actually is a reason for these super doses in animal tests. It is a kind of shortcut: if huge doses of additive X cause some cancer among 200 rats, then tiny doses will cause some cancer among 200 million Americans, according to the theory.

But the fact remains that saccharin has been used for almost a century and has never been known to harm anybody-as Sherwin Gardner, the acting commissioner of Food and Drugs, acknowledged in announcing the ban. Dr. Frederick Coulston of Albany Medical College has fed it to monkeys for seven years with no ill ef-

Saccharin is the only non-sugar sweetener left on the market, and it is of enormous value to the tens of millions in this country who suffer from diabetes or serious weight problems. Obesity, after all, is of real medical concern-it is linked with hypertension and heart trouble and, perhaps, cancer of the breast and uterus.

I think a very fair statement on all this came from the American Cancer Society. They said, in effect, that we should reduce exposure to identifiable cancer-causing substances whenever possible, but a saccharin ban may cause great harm to many citizens while protecting a theroetical few. Independent scientists should go over all the pros and cons of saccharin so what is best for the public can be decided. There is no evidence that saccharin causes human cancer, the ACS adds, but its experts on disease statistics will be looking into this.

The ACS supports a congressional review to see if saccharin should be exempted from the Delaney amendment. The Delaney principle is basically sound, the ACS says, but as tests become more sophisticated, there must be better evaluation of an additive's dosage, of its benefits compared to its risks, and of the cost versus the benefits of a ban. And just how far animal tests apply to human beings must also be weighed.

In other words, we have to allow scientists, doctors, and public health experts some reasonable leeway in dealing with a complicated problem like saccharin.

HOUSE TO HOUSE campaign chairman for the 1977 Hope Chest Campaign of the Permian Basin chapter of Multiple Sclerosis Society is Stanley Moore. Money raised during the drive May 9 will be used for research and patient services.

Higher Tar Cigarettes Lose Taste Exclusive.

Taste dominance of higher tar cigarettes challenged by MERIT breakthrough.

REGULAR and MENTHOL

Kings: 8 mg."tar," 0.5 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette, FTC Report Dec. 76 100's; 12 mg."tar," 0.8 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette by FTC Method.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined.
That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

For years, you couldn't get real tobacco flavor without high tar. Low tar cigarettes just couldn't measure up.

Until MERIT.

Until a breakthrough in tobacco science resulted in a way to boost tobacco flavor without the usual corresponding increase in tar.

The result was 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco.

MERIT and MERIT 100's were packed with this special tobacco. And taste-tested against a number of higher tar cigarettes.

Overall, smokers reported they liked the taste of both MERIT and MERIT 100's as much as the taste of the higher tar cigarettes tested.

Cigarettes having up to 60% more tar!

Only one cigarette has 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. And you can taste it.
