SPINACHVILLE

They had a big festival last week down at Crystal City, otherwise known as "Spinachville."

Not so very long ago, some writer humorously referred to Crystal City as "Spinachville," because they raise such wonderful spinach there. This made some of the Crystal City folks mad and they resented it in no uncertain terms.

But the term Spinachville stuck. Soon people began to inquire about the place where so much of this "Popeye food" came from, and the answer came: "You should see it." Then it occurred to the Crystal City people to have a Spinach Festival. They did, and thousands went to it and had a great time.

Old Popeye heard of it and they made him say: "I smell spinach" and no doubt he, Olive Oyl, Wimpy, and Sweetpea were there and got a fill of the best spinach in the world.

The fellow who imagined that it was funny to refer to Crystal City as Spinachville was the making of that town. It got in all the papers and soon all the world was wanting to know about Crystal City. As you know, the papers make and unmake people and towns. Trying to be funny, papers sometimes give a town a big boost as they did in this case.

We used to get a kick out of referring to the people of Coke County as "Rabbit Twisters." Soon it got in the papers. Most of those boys took it good naturedly, while others got mad about it. After all, a "Rabbit Twister" is a synonym for a good citizen living in a mighty good county. If you smile, you can call a fellow most any name and get by with it. I always smile when I say Spinachville, or Rabbit Twister, because I know that I am referring to a mighty good town and some very fine people.—Uncle Bill

It was just a cool norther last Thursday morning instead of the much wished for rain. Some were disappointed, but they failed to consider that the reason for northers is still on. Later on, it will rain plenty and if you have not put in your time preparing for the event, it will be just too bad. If you don't like the way the weather cuts up in West Texas, the road is open to the New England states where it rains more than plenty. Lots of those folks would like to move to West Texas where there are no ice gorges in the rivers to destroy homes and drown people.

According to papers jimferguson is figuring on running Ma again for governor. I haven't learned yet what jim is mad at Jimmy Allred about. Roy Sanderford got awfully mad at Jimmy Allred about the first of the year because he wouldn't call a special session of the legislature. So few lost their temper along with Roy, that he threatens to quit the race for governor.

Election for two trustees of Sterling Independent District will be held at the Court House on Saturday, April 4, carried them home and made them in the size that suited our fancy. We also made finger rings out of mussel shells. It took a lot of patience to make these things, but otherwise it was comparatively an easy job. We invented tools to substitute a lathe in the manufacture of rings and buttons.

The time came when we couldn't buy baking soda any more. Where mother learned it I never knew, but she had my brothers and me to save all the red corn cobs when we would shell corn for the weekly grind. These, she would put in a heap on a clean, flat stone and burn them to ashes. Then she would place the ashes in a kettle and boil for an hour. She would then strain the lye through a cloth and boil until only potash remained in the bottom of the kettle. This she would use in the place of baking soda in making biscuits, and I assure you they were mighty light and good.

In the matter of dyestuffs for the cotton and wool cloth she spun and wove, mother became an industrial chemist. She had a method of converting tin into a beautiful scarlet. With yellow "nigger head" flowers and soft home made soap, she colored her cloth a bright Turkey red. She used the chips of Bois de arch for orange. For purple she used oak bark, for brown, walnut root was her favorite, for black, she used green mesquite roots "set" with coppers, or iron sulphate. Then it came to pass, that we couldn't buy coppers, but that didn't stop her, because she found a deposit of coppers in the bed of one of the creeks that empties into the West Fork of the Trinity river above Fort Worth. After that coppers was abundant.

In those days, no leather could be had at the stores, but there were plenty of hides, oak bark and sumac so most of us became tanners and shoemakers. We made our shoepegs of maple or elm. When we wanted shoes we made them.

After most all of the porcelain dishes had been broken, we had to resort to gourds for dishes, because you couldn't buy these things for there were none to buy. Then someone skilled in ceramics, began to make table ware out of clay. While this ware looked like jugware and was crude, yet, we got along fine with our cups, saucers, dinnerplates pitchers, bowls and other vessels.

In the matter of medicines and drugs we had to depend on the woods for our meteria medica, "Balmunia" took the place of calomel. Tea made of dogwood bark was our substitute for quinine, red root, black berry root, and oak bark were used as astringents. Mullein tea was used as a sweat producer. For pausia, grandmother would take the lining of a chicken gizzard, bake it in an oven until very brittle, powder it and give it to the patient. It was a good remedy. Doctors of today use it under the name of ingluvian.

Grandmother was a good doctor. In that day when wounds were treated without regard to cleanliness Grandmother understood the value of keeping a wound clean. She treated scores of wounded soldiers that were brought to her, and they always got well. She prepared her own soap and cotton, and the first thing she did was to wash the wound thoroughly with soap and warm water. Then she would snout with her famous turpentine salve. If brought to her in time, no gangrene, or "mortification" ever set up. Although medicine men criticised

Grandmother because of her theory that a wound would not heal very quickly unless kept clean, Grandmother never heard of a germ, but the boys got well just the same, and now that the good soul is gone, the doctors of today will tell you that Grandmother was right even if she was ahead of her time.

It is wonderful how people will get along independently if they are forced to it. Had the people of the South been compelled to exist for a half century under conditions in which they existed in the 60's they would have been the richest and most independent people on earth. When a people is forced to rely on their own resources as these people had to do, no one would have ever invented the Townsend Plan.—Uncle Bill

BANK CHARTERING POLICY REVIEWED

State Official Declares Correct Principles in Licensing Banks Are Essential for Sound Banking Conditions

PHILADELPHIA. — Sound public policy in chartering banks was discussed by Carl K. Withers, Commissioner of Banking and Insurance of the State of New Jersey, before the Eastern Conference on Banking Service, held here recently under the auspices of the American Bankers Association. He declared that "few questions bearing on the future stability and security of our banking systems loom as more important than that of a sound policy to be pursued in the chartering of banks."

Alluding to competitive policies of both state and national banking authorities to charter the most banks in the past, he said that "this country was over-banked, and that aside from any other consideration, economic or otherwise, this condition was brought about largely through an unwise, unsafe and unthinking charte, policy, alternating between the state and national systems, which has marked and hampered banking progress in this country since its very inception."

Political Influence

He decried political considerations in connection with the chartering of banks, saying: "Political influence has no more place in banking than it has in the deliberations of our highest tribunal—The Supreme Court of the United States. Until this is recognized and brought into being within both our state and national systems, we may never feel safe against the shifting sands of political expedience."

As to the "element of sometimes ridiculous competition heretofore existing between the state and national systems," he said that much may be said in favor of the progress made in recent years. In many states there exists a practical working agreement between local supervising authorities and the federal authorities, whereby all charter applications are mutually considered on a basis of community need rather than competitive advantage as between systems. In some states this arrangement goes even farther in the refusal of the one authority to even consider a charter while pending with the other, he declared.

Aside from the competitive and political aspects of our future charter policy, he continued, there are several others more individual and local which merit consideration. Among these he mentioned honesty of purpose, community need, the character of management and adequacy of capital.

Most state laws make reference to the "character, responsibility and fitness" of the incorporators of a new bank, he said, continuing: "So important do I conceive this factor to be, that I place it first among those for consideration, for unless the motive is sound, honest and sincere, there is little likelihood that the resultant institution in its service to the community will reflect other than the spirit of its founders."

The Lessons of the Past

"Too often in the past have charters been granted to promoters pure and simple—not always pure, and by no means simple. The country was dotted with such. The experience has been costly and, it is to be hoped, the lesson well learned, not only by charter-granting authorities, but the public."

Other factors to be considered as among the most important in granting new bank charters, he said, are the number of institutions already serving the area, the record of earnings of existing institutions, the number of failures since 1920, and the reasons therefor, public convenience and advantage, the reasonable prospects for growth of the community, expectation of profitable operation and whether a branch bank could serve as well.

"Sound public policy demands that no new banks be chartered unless there is a definite, necessitous and permanent need," he declared. "Sound mergers, consolidations and the sensible extension of branch banking are much to be preferred to any general movement toward a flood of new charters. But here again we must guard carefully against monopoly or unbridled branch competition, either of which might become as dangerous as the organization of new banks."

Gardening Rules

rules for gardening in this part of West Texas, where water for irrigation is plentiful is almost the same as that of East Texas. In East Texas they plant on ridges and use the drainage the ridge runs down. In West Texas, we plant in the middle of the field to conserve moisture. Never plant seeds in the dry soil until you wait for a rain, or irrigation to get them up. Plants are sorer to get up and do better if planted in rich soil. It is better to water the soil before planting. When setting out tomatoes, cabbage, sweet potatoes slips, peppers and other things, it is best to set out on a level ground. Have your soil pulled—dusty if you can, stick the roots of the plants in the dry dust, when a row is set out, let the soil quickly follow and flood the soil so that the dirt will be settled around the roots of the plants. When air is allowed to get in and dry the roots of the plants, they die. That is the reason why plants do so much better when they are planted in dry loose soil and watered with plenty of water. It excludes the air from the roots. In the afternoon of hot days, tomatoes set out in this way, will rarely die—especially if the plants are watered.

Don't forget to use fertilizer on your garden. It is all right to plow and thoroughly mix the fertilizer with the soil, but if you haven't time, wait until your plants are up and then spread the fertilizer around the plants, it will not harm them.

Don't be afraid of using too much fertilizer on your garden. I reckon it can be done, but I never saw it done in West Texas.—Uncle Bill

The Cream Of Ice-Creams

WHEN the French want to express the fact that something is particularly fine they speak of it as "the cream of the cream". That's a vivid expression, but not too vivid to express the satisfaction to be found in really fine ice-creams.

Your summer fetes will be more festive if you learn the ways of modern mousses and parfaits and other frozen creams, and also the new ways of serving them. Introduce them at your porch parties in pretty frilled paper cups, or piled high in colorful parfait glasses. Here are two that will make the dessert social register:

They're Cooling Too

Mocha Mousse: Add one-fourth cup of strong coffee to the contents of one 5½-ounce can of chocolate syrup. Beat two cups of cream so that it does not become too stiff, add two tablespoons confectioners sugar and then mix with the chocolate. Freeze in refrigerator trays or in an ice and salt mixture. Or the mousse may be poured into individual paper cases, then placed in the freezing trays or in a container of ice and salt. This serves eight persons.

Pear and Strawberry Parfait: Add sufficient water to the syrup from one cup of canned pears to make two cups of liquid. Bring to boiling, pour over one package of lime gelatin and stir until dissolved. Cool. Add the pears, diced, and pour into eight tall glasses. Set in the refrigerator to harden. When ready to serve, beat one cup of cream, add three tablespoons confectioners sugar, one-fourth cup of crumbled macaroons and one-fourth cup of sliced fresh strawberries. Pile on top of the gelatin. Do not beat the cream too stiff. This serves eight persons.

Public Confidence

Challenging a recently published statement that there is an "apparent loss of public confidence in banks," William A. Boyd of Ithaca, N. Y., asks why, if this were true, bank deposits are constantly increasing. "I maintain that any banking institution which has continued to serve its community since the trying days of 1929 must be enjoying the respect and confidence of that community, and I am sure that the very large majority of banking institutions which have come through this depression have never had to 'regain' public confidence," he says.

Trust Institutions

A directory of trust institutions published by the Trust Division, American Bankers Association, lists 2,853 institutions having aggregate capital funds of $4,416,000,000 and total resources of $35,443,000,000. It shows a total of 6,949 men and women engaged in this phase of bank work. The trust institutions comprise 1,356 state-chartered trust companies and banks and 1,497 national banks with trust departments located in 1,684 cities and towns.

CENTENNIAL BOOKLETS

The following letter was received in reply to the Centennial Booklets which the sixth and seventh grade English classes under the supervision of their English teacher, Miss Fie, sent to the seventh grade of Montreal, Canada.

Dear Seventh Year:
 We wish to thank you for the lovely booklets that we received from you. We are enjoying them ever so much. They are so interesting. Some of the girls in our class will be writing the girls who made them separately I hope.

I am including the names of girls who wish to carry on a correspondence with girls in Texas. Will you kindly answer them as soon as possible.

Yours truly,
 Seventh year
 (Freda Stephen, Class President)

The booklets were the result of twelve weeks of work for these students. The covers were designed by each student (no two covers were alike) and the material in the booklets was the result of each individual student's research concerning the Centennial. Some of the students found unusually interesting pictures to illustrate their stories and information. The seven best booklets from the two grades were chosen. Four of these were from the seventh grade and three from the sixth grade.

Ring 'Round Rosy

IN MILAN, TENN., they brag about their fat girl. This lady, according to Bruce Oliver, was the most enormous gal inhabiting West Tennessee.

Nobody knew her name, because no one ever got that close to her. Just in fun he called her Rosy.

She came over to Milan from the nearby town of McKenzie and almost immediately was besieged with suitors. The most persistent of these was Bruce himself.

He used to visit the damsel, sit out on the porch with her and feed her ice cream from a double freezer. When the bottom of the freezer was reached, Bruce, sorely smitten by the fat girl's charms, was inclined to grow serious in his love making. He wasn't disillusioned even when she confessed she slept in a bed strewn with cinders to prevent her rolling off.

Bruce was a persistent cuss, he admitted. In attempting to express his true feelings he would place an arm part way around the fat girl. When he had reached as far as possible he would mark his position with a pink crayon. Then he would move around to the mark, resume a posture of affection, and so gradually encircled the waist of the girl. The romance progressed swimmingly, according to Milan records, until the day Bruce shifted position, crayon in fingers, and bumped into an utter stranger who was chalking his own way around the waist from the opposite direction.

FOOD FASHIONS FOR LENT!

By MARYE DAHNKE, Kraft Cheese Institute

"And leap year makes it twenty-nine!" Just as if twenty-eight days in February weren't enough for this bustling of meal-planning! With the Lenten season, and Leap year, and every budget all to be considered at one time, this is just the season to add a new special recipe to the cookbook, to help tide over winter days.

That staple commodity, cheese, is an ever-present aid in planning meals for the Lenten season—and for meals the year-around. Known for centuries as the perfect Lenten food, cheese has a way of transforming ordinary dishes into Sharp American or "Old English" cheese can be included in so many interesting ways in late winter menus that well-stocked pantry shelves should harbor a generous supply. The combination of fish with cheese is ideal for the Lenten season—and a happy pair to satisfy winter-whetted appetites. One of the most delicious of these is well-named, "Cheese and Crab Delight." It is attractive enough to serve as the principal attraction for a party luncheon, and substantial enough to form the main dish for a family dinner. A molten cheese sauce provides just the proper setting for delicately flavored crabmeat—and the resulting delicacy is as pleasant to the eye as it is to the appetite.

Cheese and Crab Delight 1/2 cup cooked green pepper 2 tbsps. butter 2 tbsps. flour 1/2 tsp. mustard 1/4 tsp. salt Dash of cayenne 1 cup cooked & strained tomatoes 1 cup dehydrated grated cheese 1 egg slightly beaten 1/2 cup milk 1 cup crabmeat pepper Cook green pepper in butter for 5 minutes, blend in flour; add seasonings, tomatoes, cheese and eggs; cook a few minutes. Heat the milk before adding the other ingredients, then crabmeat. Serve on rounds of toast or crackers. Sprinkle with cheese to be sprinkled on top when serving. Some additional main-dish Lenten specialties made with cheese are easily made as follows: They are destined to remain popular family favorites the year around.	Macaroni Cheese Timbales 1 cup grated American cheese (broken) 1 1/2 cups milk 2 eggs 1/4 tsp. Worcestershire sauce Salt, pepper Blend well the grated cheese, well-beaten eggs and seasonings. Divide the macaroni equally among buttered custard cups and fill with the cheese mixture. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven, 350°, until firm. Unmold on a platter, garnish each timbale with mushroom cap, and serve with sauce made with the all-milk cheese, milk and seasonings cooked in a double boiler until cheese is melted.
Halibut With Cheese Sauce 2 cups milk 2 tbsps. butter 4 tbsps. flour Salt, pepper, paprika 2 cups grated American cheese Make a sauce with the milk, butter and flour, seasoning to taste. When thickened, add the grated cheese. Arrange half-inch slices of halibut in a buttered baking dish, pour the cheese sauce around them and bake in a moderate oven, 350°, until the halibut is tender. Remove the fish to a crystal platter, surround with the sauce and garnish with parsley.	Cheese and Vegetable Casserole 2 cups cooked spaghetti 2 cups cooked peas 1 onion chopped 1 green pepper, chopped 3 fresh tomatoes 1 cup bread crumbs Salt and pepper 1 cup grated American cheese Place half the spaghetti in a large baking dish.
