James Brothers Once Ranched In Sterling Co.

The local historians of this vicinity may not know that Frank and Jesse James, the noted outlaws of the Southwest, once operated a horse ranch on the range of the head waters of Mulberry Creek in Sterling County back in the '70's.

The locality of the James Brothers ranch is now known as James Hollow in W. L. Foster's "James Hollow pasture" south of Sterling City about 14 miles.

During the Civil War, Frank and Jesse James connected with Quantrell, the Youngers and others formed a guerilla organization which inflicted terrible punishment on the invaders from the north which overran Kansas and Missouri during those grievous days of death and destruction.

Each member of this organization generally known as "Quantrell's Band," had a separate personal score to even up for injuries inflicted upon them by overzealous people in the name of the Union Cause. For instance, they murdered the James brother's father, crippled their mother and destroyed their property. The Youngers suffered the same kind of a deal. They murdered Quantrell's brother and sister and left the future leader of the terrible avengers for dead. He was a mere boy then. An old Indian found the boy almost lifeless from wounds received at the hands of a band of heartless murders, and nursed him back to health.

When Quantrell recovered, he laid a vow on his soul to avenge this terrible wrong. Under disguise, he joined this band of murderers. He learned the name of each member and studied his face so that he would know him anywhere.

Moved by the relentless spirit of revenge, it is written that Quantrell sought out each member of this bloody gang and shot him between the eyes. It took him years to complete his avowed mission, but he patiently hung on to their trail until the last man died in a woods near where a picnic was in progress, with a bullet between his eyes.

When the Civil War came on, it was natural for him to consort with the Jameses, the Youngers, the Pools, Hocksmith and a host of others whose grievances were mutual. They raided their enemies and became a terror to Unionists and the Federal Army. When things became too warm for them, they would come down into Texas to rest and recruit. Then they would go back and strike another blow to their enemies. About the end of the war, it is written that Quantrell was slain in Kentucky and the band was scattered.

The Youngers and the James brothers, after peace was made, went back to their old homes in Missouri and attempted to assume the role of peaceful citizenship as they saw thousands of others do, who participated in the war. But their activities during the war had generated such resentment among their erstwhile enemies, that they found no peace at home. They were driven from pillar to post until they became desperadoes.

They were not allowed to go back to their farms in peace, so they became bandits, robbing to relieve their necessities and killing when it was necessary to make their escape. In this way, they became "public

Home Demonstration Clubs Are Organized

Three Home Demonstration clubs in Sterling County have been organized and three other groups have organization meetings scheduled in the near future. At these meetings the set-up of Home Demonstration work is explained, officers are elected and plans for the work are discussed.

As soon as all the clubs have completed their organization, two representatives from each club will meet at the Home Demonstration office to make plans for the remainder of 1936.

When asked what types of demonstration work they prefer for their Home Demonstration club work numerous and various answers have been given by the women of Sterling County. So far the majority have been interested in the Wardrobe or clothing demonstration. For second choice the work on Home Foods Supply practically ties with Yard Improvement. Running a close third to these three is the Home Improvement work on Bed rooms.

After the work has been planned no time will be lost in beginning two of these demonstrations. As such demonstration is finished an other one will be taken up.

The Oldest Cavalry Stationed In Texas

Stationed at Fort Bliss, Texas, is one of the famous regiments of the United States Army, the Seventh Cavalry, known to old timers as "Custer's Regiment", most of its action having been in the Indian country and on the Mexican border.

The regiment was organized in 1866 at Fort Riley, Kansas, and with in a few months formed part of an expedition against Cheyenne and Sioux Indians in Kansas. The fight against Black Kettle on the Washita was the most notable in their history. They were stationed in the Dakotas for a number of years and in 1876 partook in the fight known as Custer's Massacre, in which nearly 300 officers and men were killed or wounded. Following this encounter they were moved over the southwest from place to place and finally were stationed at Fort Bliss in 1917 where they now are. (This sketch was furnished us by the U. S. Army Recruiting Station, Municipal Building, Sweetwater, Texas.)

A few weeks ago, friend C.T. Sharp lost a key. Then it transpired that somebody found a key and put it up to the News-Record to find the owner. A notice of the find was printed in the paper. Friend Sharp did not read the notice, but Clel Alinsworth did. When friend Sharp went to Clel to have a new key made Clel said: "Why don't you see Uncle Bill about the key he has advertised in his paper?" He did, and it proved to be friend Sharp's key. The notice cost him two-bits. The difference between two-bits and six-bits is four-bits. The News-Record saved Brother Sharp four bits. When you lose or find any thing, put it in the paper. Somebody will read it and help find it. Most any schoolboy can tell you that it pays to advertise.

Pension Querries

This is the second of a series of questions that the people of Texas are asking. Orville S. Carpenter, state pension director, answers them frankly and to the point:

Q. How many people are there in Texas past the age of 65 years?

A. Over 300,000.

Q. Definitely, if Texas gave each one of these $30 a month, would the Federal Government pay half of it?

A. No.

Q. If each of the 300,000 received assistance, where would the money come from to pay the bill?

A. It would come only from the taxpayers of Texas.

Q. Could we pay everyone past 65 years of age $30 per month if we desired and were willing to do so without the millions that the Federal Government will contribute?

A. No, we could not because the Old Age Assistance Amendment to the Texas Constitution provides for payments not to exceed $15 per month per person.

Q. Then $15 per month would be all that we could pay if we gave everyone past 65 years of age assistance without the help of the Federal Government?

A. Yes.

James Brothers

enemies," but not of the modern type who became such from choice.

The James brothers were lovers of good horses. They longed to raise fine horses as they had done on their mother's farm in Missouri but they were hunted like wild beast by men who longed to shed their blood. They sometimes fled to Mexico to escape their pursuers. In going to Mexico, they made the trip on horseback through this country. They noted the fine grass and water that was ideal for horses, in the Concho country which was inhabited mostly by Indians. They regarded the Indians as Sunday School children as compared with their white enemies at home. They spotted the James Hollow range as their future horse ranch.

Through their agents at their old home in Missouri, they purchased a stallion and a string of fine Missouri mares and received them in the western part of the Indian Territory now Oklahoma. From there they moved them to the James Hollow range where they looked after them for several years. What finally became of these horses, I never learned, but history tells of what became of Frank and Jesse James.

During the time the James Brothers operated this ranch, it was rumored that they had a horse ranch "Away out West." The Waco Examiner, a weekly newspaper published by Major Downs and the late Senator McCollum at Waco at the time, dispatched a reporter to investigate the rumor. Alone, and on horseback, this reporter came to Fort Concho, and learned from army scouts that a horse ranch was being operated by parties unknown to them on a creek about 40 miles to the west.

Pushing on, this reporter contacted the James Brothers at their ranch camp on James Hollow. He wrote a thrilling story about the James boys' ranch in the far West, but failed to state its location.

The Examiner published the story which might today be found among the old files of that paper. If it could be found, it would make thrilling reading.

After reading the story, I often wondered where that ranch was located. In 1887, I came out here and about the first settler I contacted was "Uncle Billy" Cosby, who afterward became the first Tax Assessor of Sterling county. I stayed over night with "Uncle Billy" and "Aunt Sallie". During the talks we had about the current events, I mentioned the story about the James Brothers' ranch, and told him of my longing desire to learn more about it.

"You have come to the right place" said "Uncle Billy". "Seeing that no harm can come of it now, I don't mind telling you that Frank and Jesse James had their ranch over on the divide between Mulberry and Sterling Creeks. They were my friends, and while here, they boarded with me, but where they slept, I don't know."

"Aunt Sallie" said they were the most perfect gentlemen she ever met. "Why, they were more like a pair of preachers than outlaws," she said.

I had reason to believe, that "Uncle Billy" was one of Quantrell's band, of this, I am not certain, but Dick Pool, who rode with Quantrell and didn't mind saying so, led me to conclude that "Uncle Billy" was one of them.—Uncle Bill

Tall Tales

As told to: FRANK E. HAGAN and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Cooking Under Difficulties

TEDDY BLUE of the Three Deuce ranch in Montana remembers what an annoying time he had when he came up from Texas with a trail herd back in 1883. When the cook died, the boss found out that Teddy knew something about slinging grub together and made him take charge of the chuck wagon.

In it he found plenty of bacon, flour, beans, baking powder, sugar, coffee and everything else needed to feed the hungry crew of punchers. But the only trouble was that they were out on a treeless plain where there wasn't a stick of wood visible anywhere.

Then one of the punchers lit a cigarette and snapped the still-blazing match into a bunch of buffalo grass. It flamed up and right then Teddy had an idea. He ran and got the coffee pot, filled it up, threw some bacon in a skillet and started toward the place where the fire in the buffalo grass was spreading.

Holding the coffee pot and the skillet over the flame he followed the line of blazing grass and in a short time the bacon began to sizzle and the coffee began to steam a bit. After a while Teddy said to himself, "Well, I guess she's ready to serve now." But when he looked up he discovered that he had followed the flame until he was 1 1/2 miles from camp. By the time he got back the bacon and the coffee were cold. The boys grumbled about having to eat cold chuck, so Teddy quit as cook right there.

Appreciates Neighbors

When I was ill and they carried me to the hospital, the trees, shrubs and flowers in my yard needed me to care for them. It was spring and they needed watering and working and in my conscious moments they were a source of worry to me, for I felt sure that they would all be ruined if and when I returned.

Imagine my happy surprise when I returned home and found that my neighbors—bless their hearts—had been there and had worked and tended my things just as well as if I had done it myself.

Then again, while I was grievously ill at the hospital, the members of the Methodist church sent me flowers and words of encouragement that made me want to live always among such good people. In fact, all Sterling gave me the physic of kind words and neighborly deeds which, in my opinion, went a long way toward helping the doctors to get me back to health again. I am truly grateful to all concerned in these kind deeds, and I am made to realize more than ever that Sterling can be depended on to take care of her own. From the bottom of my heart I thank you.—Frankie P. Howard.

Menace of The House Fly

Thousands of children and adults die every year from diseases carried by the fly. Typhoid fever, tuberculosis, summer complaint, cholera, intestinal diseases, and frequently death follow closely in the trail of the common house fly.

"The control of the fly menace comes at the top of the list of necessary public health measure which should be applied by every city and community in the State," urges Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer.

The most effective measure for control is to prevent breeding," he said. "Flies breed in filth, and about eight days are required to complete a life cycle. During her life time of several months, one house fly lays from 600 to 1000 eggs. Thus it can easily be seen that in a season which usually begins in the spring of the year, the descendants from one fly number countless thousands.

"To eliminate flies the breeding places must be destroyed. Manure piles, garbage, and other organic filth furnish the requirements of warmth, moisture, and food necessary for the propagation of the fly. Flies should be kept from contact with food or drink or utensils in which such food and drink are prepared and served. Likewise they should be kept from access to privy vaults where they pick up the infections, which they later spread to humans by contact with the food and drink, and by unwashed hands and utensils.

"See that your windows, doors, and porches are screened so that the stray fly from some careless neighbor will not molest your family. See that your grocer keeps meat, vegetables and fruit screened from flies.

"Organize health measures to destroy the breeding places, control the flies' access to your home and food, and establish standards of cleanliness in your community that will eliminate the fly."

Mrs. Geo. H. McEntire Entertains

One of the most outstanding affairs in Sterling social circles was the bridge party Saturday afternoon at the George McEntire home. Mrs. McEntire named as honorees, her daughter in law, a recent bride, Mrs. George McEntire Jr. of Midland, and her daughter, Mrs. Jack Wilkinson of Winters.

Receiving with the hostess were: the honorees, Mrs. A. J. Smith Jr. and Mrs. I. N. Wilkinson, both of Winters, and little Miss Frances Hill who presented the bridge trophies.

Large baskets of red gladoli, roses and white peonies were arranged for floral decoration in the beautiful new home. The centennial theme was beautifully carried out in every detail, including table appointments, bridge accessories, prize wrappings and refreshment plate.

High and second high bridge rewards went to Mrs. Marvin Churchill and Mrs. Elliott Mendenhall of Dallas. The honorees were also favored. The gifts were beautiful linens.

At the tea hour, on each table was placed a large lone star, in which was embedded a bowl of red carnations. This went to the high cut guest at each of the eleven tables. The Centennial colors were again dominate on the refreshment plate, with the red iced drink, the blue Texas map shaped sandwich, red and white star mint, salad, and white cake, ornamented with the Texas blue bonnet.

About fifty guests enjoyed this delightful social function.

KNOW

Your Asparagus

ASPARAGUS is too good for just a chance acquaintance-ship. It is one of those foods that you like to know, and which like good books or good music, improves with acquaintance.

Know, then, that there are two varieties of canned asparagus—the white and the green. These are planted from the same seed, but they are picked differently. Green asparagus is green because the tips of the spears have been allowed to poke through the earth and see the sun for a while. White asparagus remains white because it is picked before being exposed to the sun.

From Giant to Tiny

About grades. Asparagus is graded according to size and it is packed both as spears and as tips. Spears are especially nice for cooked dishes and tips are often preferred for salads, sandwiches, etc. From giant to tiny—here are the grades: Giant contains eight to twelve spears to a No. 2½ can; Colossal contains thirteen to sixteen; Mammoth contains seventeen to twenty-four; Large contains twenty-five to thirty-four; Medium contains thirty-five to forty-four; and Small contains forty-five to sixty. The grades of tips are the same, except that Mammoth is the largest and Tiny is the smallest.

Know these facts about asparagus, and if you are a careful buyer you can stock up with asparagus when it is on sale, and select the kinds and sizes most adapted to your own use.*
