The Bailey County Ministerial Alliance said all persons of all faiths will be welcomed at the Community Thanksgiving Service.

A PUSHIN' AND A PULLIN'.....When 10 inches of snow fell in this area, it created all sorts of driving problems. At the gate going into the SPS Tolk Plant construction site nine miles east of Muleshoe Tuesday afternoon, a truck got stalled with heavy equipment. One truck pushed, while a tractor pulled the truck in an effort to remove it from the gateway of the plant. In the meantime, plant construction was shut down until the weather conditions cleared some.

Ten More Inches Dumped Monday

Mother Nature levelled a double whammy at the Bailey County and surrounding area Monday night, when she dumped another deep white blanket of fluffy, slippery white stuff all over the countryside.

For the second time in less than two weeks, up to ten inches of snow, along with drifts up to four feet greeted residents when they got up on Tuesday morning.

Two weeks ago Saturday snow started falling shortly before night, and by the time the snow had ended on Sunday, nearly ten inches had fallen.

All kinds of records for the month of November were broken when the next ten inch snowfall started falling Monday night.

Before the snow started sticking on streets and highways, the snow was melting. By the time the snow started sticking as the weather turned colder, a solid sheet of ice was formed beneath the snow creating hazardous driving conditions.

However, by late Tuesday afternoon, no accidents had been reported in Bailey County, despite frequent Tuesday morning reports of stalled and abandoned vehicles.

Before noon on Tuesday, four wheel drive vehicles or those with chains were the only vehicles negotiating the city streets. As the city, county and state road maintenance crews started working, they began to open some of the clogged streets and highways, allowing traffic to move more freely. At midafternoon on Tuesday, many streets, where traffic had been moving were 'slushy' but with a hard freeze predicted again for Tuesday night, weather and travel advisories continued to be posted.

Skeleton crews of employees manned most businesses in Muleshoe, as many employees, and some employers, found the streets impassable.

School was dismissed for Tuesday, as school officials feared buses and students would be jeopardized if classes were scheduled. On Monday night, as the snow started sticking, a school bus south of Muleshoe developed trouble, and when the bus attempted to go back onto the highway it was unable to drive on the slick highway.

The bus and students were rescued by the Texas Highway Department employees.

As the snow fell, covering patches of snow left over from the Saturday, November 15 snowstorm, National Weather Service predicted that the snow could continue through Tuesday night, depositing an additional eight to ten inches of snow, which would bring the November total to 30 inches.

Travel was discouraged in all directions from Muleshoe, and in some areas, drifting snow forced the closing of major highways. On the highway, the blowing snow also created another driving hazard, as visibility was reported to

Annual Football Contest Winding Down This Week

Right down to the wire, and a tie has complicated things for the weekly Merchant's Football Contest.

This week, when Jerry Roddam came up with a second place, the contest to determine the winner of the two football tickets to the Cotton Bowl Football game on January 1 and an expense check, is in doubt.

Coming into the contest this Doyle Weir had a slight edge in the contest with 22 points. This lead

Lazbuddie Community Bazaar Set

Following a successful first venture last year, the Lazbuddie Community is planning their second annual Lazbuddie Community Christmas Bazaar.

Donna Smith, coordinator for the bazaar this year said it is scheduled for December 4th and 5th and will be at Ted Treider Electric at the intersection of FM 1172 and FM 145.

Mrs. Smith said 25 Lazbuddie area artists and crafters will be displaying their works from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. each of the two days.

Some of the items offered for Christmas shoppers will include paintings, leatherworks, jewelry, floral gifts, dolls, copper and brass, ceramics, quilts, crochet, tole painting and wooden toys.

According to the coordinator, the community has issued a cordial invitation to persons throughout the area to attend the annual bazaar.

Killough To Retire From THD January 1

After 39 years, and with much regret, Lloyd E. Killough, Maintenance Construction Supervisor for the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation in Muleshoe, will be retiring January 1.

George C. Wall, District Engineer for District Five of the THD, commented, "It is with sincere regret that I announce the official retirement from the services of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation of Lloyd E. Killough, Maintenance Construction Supervisor III, Muleshoe, Bailey County, Texas."

Wall said also, "I know the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Killough, both in and out of the Department join me in a sincere expression of best wishes for the future."

According to the District Engineer, R.L. Clark, currently in charge of the Dawson County Maintenance Section, will be assuming the duties relinquished by Killough at retirement. Clark is married to the daughter of Clyde Waggoner and the late Dovie Waggoner.

"Lloyd has always served with honor and integrity with the Department in every capacity during his thirty eight two second place wins.

Now, with the final contest in the paper for this week, it could switch around. If neither Roddam or Weir place in the contest, several other previous winners have a chance to tie or surpass the tied scores of Weir and Roddam.

In the event the tie is not broken, Weir and Roddam will be asked to come to The Journal where the winner will be determined by a coin toss.

For this week, Earl Richards was in third place. He missed three games and was 20 points away on the double tie-breaker score. In second place was Roddam, who years of service," added Wall. "He excels in his training of employees enabling them to attain higher positions."

A native of Eastland County, Lloyd Killough began his career with the Highway Department on July 15, 1941 at Dimmitt. He recalled that at the time he started work for the department, his wages were 35 cents per hour, which was standard wage at that time. He was married and he and his wife were then the parents of one child.

In 1944, Killough went into the U.S. Army, serving with the 39th Infantry. During his two years with the military, he spent the entire time in Europe. Killough said he crossed the English Channel to Normandy on D-Day, Plus Four. From Normandy, his military group went to meet the Russians. He was a .30 caliber machine gunner in the service.

At the end of the war, Killough returned to Dimmitt, and was rehired by Hershel Brown, who had originally hired him. R.D. Rogers became his employer until Killough was transferred to Bovina in Parmer County in September 1956 as maintenance

The Scientists Tell Me . . .

We May Grow Energy in Semi-Arid West Texas

By Robert L. Haney
TAES Science Writer

In the future, millions of acres in West Texas may be devoted to growing hardy plants suited to energy production.

The 2900 species of plants growing in West Texas were screened by scientists at Texas A&M University and 12 selected for further study as possible biomass sources of energy.

West Texas was defined as that half of the State that was west of the 24-inch-annual-rainfall line. If you imagine a straight line drawn from Brownsville to the eastern edge of the Panhandle, you'll have in mind the area they're considering.

Rainfall average decreases, as you go west, from 24 inches to about 8 inches, in parts of the region east of El Paso. A good part of that 100 million acres is capable of supporting native or introduced vegetation suited to energy production, scientists say.

The 12 plant species were evaluated for yield, energy content, forage value, adaptability to various regions and energy costs by scientists with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Average cost of unit of energy produced of the 12 candidate plants was somewhat higher than coal but somewhat lower than fuel oil.

This suggested that biomass production from semi-arid areas may become more competitive as the cost of petroleum products increases. However, production costs did not consider irrigation. It has been suggested that irrigation may be needed in drouth years or during seedling establishment.

A minimal application of water greatly increased productivity of Kochia, Russian thistle, and sunflowers.

"It is expected that production costs for annuals and grasses could be cut," said Dr. Ron Newton, Experiment Station plant physiologist, "by using more efficient equipment and cultural methods.

"This is especially true for harvesting and transporting costs; there were few efficiencies built into the production procedures used in the analysis," Newton added.

"Efficiencies can also be improved by increasing productivity of some of the candidate species by plant improvement methods such as selection and hybridization," said Dr. Marshall Haferkamp, Experiment Station range scientist.

In the tests, Four-wing Saltbush and Kochia were the best prospects due to their relatively high yield and energy content, forage value, and adaptability to all semi-arid regions in West Texas, according to Newton.

Other suitable candidates were Buffelgrass, Johnsongrass, Russian Thistle, Mesquite, and Candelilla. Increased production efficiencies and suggested plant improvements would undoubtedly enable mesquite to compare more favorably as a biomass candidate.

Equipment for mesquite harvest has not yet been adapted to cut costs and energy use. It appears that the best method for using mesquite would be to shear existing stands on about 60 million acres.

Contracts could be made with landowners to harvest such standing woody plants on rangeland. Forage production would be encouraged but since most of these woody plant species, including mesquite, resprout readily, a new harvest could be made every 3 to 5 years.

Candelilla may be more valuable as a source of high-grade wax than for biomass, Newton says. An alternative use would be to extract the wax and use the residue as a biomass fuel source.

This could be done on a large scale for several other plants of the region. For example, the residues of Guayule, a source of natural rubber and of Creosote Bush, a source of a commercial anti-oxidant, could be used for biomass energy production, after extraction of their more valuable products.

Sunflowers are grown in Texas at present as an oilseed crop. With present harvesting methods, it isn't possible to get a head and biomass crop from the same stand. The combine used to harvest the heads shatters the stover.

"Since productivity of many of the plants under consideration under dryland conditions is unreliable from year to year," Newton says, "innovative cultural techniques, in addition to probable limited irrigation, will be required in order to insure adequate production.

"Furthermore, a careful assessment of present-day land uses and an evaluation of the ecological and aesthetic effects of large-scale removal or production of biomass will be necessary to maintain the beauty and integrity of these semi-arid lands," Newton concluded.

May and presented her with a football helmet and a gold football. The Queen and her court were escorted to the waiting white wrought iron chairs decorated with black and gold streamers and were the honor guests for the remaining part of the pep rally.

The football game was held at 7:30 Friday when the Hornets squashed Anton for the zone championship which was a great added feature for Homecoming.

The annual dinner was held Saturday, November 9 when some one hundred and thirty persons registered for the meal.

The FTA members hosted a reception prior to the meal as the people registered with those in attendance visiting. The tables were covered with white and were centered with black and gold streamers featuring football helmets, band hats, megaphones and pom poms. The head table was also centered with a large fresh floral arrangement in fall colors provided by Central Compress.

Epsilon Delta

The Epsilon Delta Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha sorority had their Thanksgiving supper Saturday night in the 16th and Ave. D Friendship Room. Serving as hostesses were Mrs. Jack Rennels and Ms. Judy Lambert.

Each family brought a box supper and shared their food together around the warm glow of the fireplace. The tables were decorated in the Thanksgiving motif, with a turkey centerpiece and little baskets on each table.

After the meal the children were surprised by the arrival of some Pilgrims from the Mayflower. The Pilgrims, better known as Johnny Estep and his wife, Cherry, of the Imagination Plus party house, told the story of how the Pilgrims came to America looking for religious freedom and how the first Thanksgiving was celebrated. The Esteps were dressed in traditional attire of long ago when the first Thanksgiving was observed.

After the Pilgrims said their goodbyes to the children, the staff of Imagination Plus put on a puppet show entitled "A Thanksgiving Nightmare". Miss Bretta O'Tay played the starring role, about a little girl, who after eating too much Thanksgiving dinner, went to sleep and had a dream about turkey, yams, cranberries, popcorn, pumpkins, apples, and nuts. All of the goodies were represented by hand puppets.

The children and the parents were thrilled over having such a delightful evening and everyone went home looking forward to sharing this Thanksgiving with their families.

 supervisor. In 1968, Killough was transferred to Bailey County in the same position.

When asked about some of his experiences, one of the first things Killough mentioned was the major snow storm of 1957. "I was at Bovina at the time, and we got out truck stuck in a snowbank. That's the only time I ever thought I would freeze to death," he commented. "We were between Oklahoma Lane and Farwell for several hours. We had stopped, and were trying to start a maintainer which had frozen up. The truck froze up and we were there."

He said that during that particular snowstorm, a young couple and their baby were stranded. The young family stayed in the Killough home for four days until they could travel again. "We worked day and night," he said, "and every bulldozer we could hire every bulldozer we could find in this part of the country." It was the worst storm I have ever been through, he recalled.

Killough said that during his career, he has been washed off the road by water five times, with four of these times being in Parmer County, and the fifth time on FM 1760 in Bailey County a little over a year ago. Just over a year ago, when he was washed off the road, Killough said his car filled with water.

Several people have gone on to make foremen from his personnel, and three have become maintenance foremen. One of his trainees was J.W. Gooch, who is Killough's supervisor.

Killough is not going to be allowed to 'slide' through his last month and a half on the job. Record snowfall has already been recorded for November. In the first snowfall, which was 10 inches, his crew started working at 11 p.m. on Saturday night, and worked all night and all day until 1 a.m. on Monday. The crew returned to work at 6 a.m. and worked all day Monday and until 1 a.m. on Tuesday. Following a return to work at 7 a.m. on Wednesday, Killough said they completed a clean-up of the road condition around 11 p.m. Wednesday night.

He emphasized that during any weather emergency, his entire crew turns out, and they work until the conditions are cleared.

be near zero. Gusty north-easterly winds were expected to abate sometime Wednesday, and a slow return to normal was forecast by NWS personnel.

Along with the snow, the temperature remained in the 20's and even though slight melting on traveled streets was noted Tuesday afternoon, as dark approached, the snow was beginning to freeze over, and water from the melting snow was beginning to wear an ice crust.

Contest...

also missed three games, but was 21 points away on the tiebreakers. Third place winner was Ina Dennis, who missed three games and was 31 points off on the tiebreaker scores.

Also missing three games, but at 38 points off on the double tiebreaker was Weir, who is now tied with Roddam after maintaining a slight two-point lead. His brother, Byron Weir, missed three, but was 39 points away to also be out of the money and points.

If the tie is to be broken by a coin toss, it will not be the first time the annual football contest has ended up with a tie after the final contest for the year.

And, this is it, folks! The winner will be announced next Thursday.

What will he do when he retires? "My wife and I plan to do some traveling. At this time, we plan to make our home in Muleshoe, but we will be getting in some travel time."

He and his wife, Lucille, were married December 21, 1935 at Cross Plains, and they are the parents of two sons, Norman, Medford, Oregon and Sid of Hereford. They also have four grandchildren.

Closing out his career, Killough added, "I think the people here are grand. And, I want to say I certainly appreciate the cooperation of the law enforcement officials here. This is the nicest county I have ever worked in and I have always had excellent cooperation from the city, county and state officers, as well as the people who reside here."

As this issue of The Journal went to press, Killough and his crew were out fighting uncounted hours to try to keep highways open in another heavy snow.

CONSTRUCTION AT A STANDSTILL... This tall tower at Southwestern Public Service Company's Tolk Station east of Muleshoe was abandoned Tuesday as another 10 inch snowfall Monday night has brought construction to a standstill.

Application Of Chemical Aids Grain

Applying nitrogen for small grains this fall will be important, says Spencer Tanksley, county agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

He lists four important reasons why wheat and other small grains need nitrogen at planting or a short time afterward:

- aid in development of good root system
- for early grazing
- to hasten decomposition of excess residual straw
- for high production of forage and grain

Sufficient fall growth for early grazing cannot be expected without adequate nitrogen at planting, emphasizes Tanksley. The advantages of early planting and favorable fall growing conditions can be lost if nitrogen fertilization is delayed until the condition of the stand can be determined. Establishing a good uniform stand requires nitrogen, and most soils are deficient in this nutrient.

To meet nitrogen requirements during the fall growing period, producers can apply the total requirement before planting on heavy textured soils or can apply a small amount at planting followed by topdressing soon after planting.

Of course, fall nitrogen fertilization is also affected by the amount of straw from the previous crop, adds Tanksley. The bacteria and other microorganisms needed to decompose the straw require nitrogen and can use that already in the soil as well as that applied, thus reducing the amount avail-

The general rule in applying nitrogen has been to increase the rate about 20 pounds per acre for each ton of undecomposed straw. However, a portion of this nitrogen is recovered during the final stages of decomposition so that as much as half of this may be available during the spring months. This means that about half of the "extra" nitrogen could be deducted from the late winter topdressing, explains Tanksley.

New Cotton Production Systems Provide Key to Economic Survival

By Robert L. Haney
 TAES Science Writer

The last decade brought a multitude of economic challenges to cotton producers that either forced changes in production practices or forced many producers out of business. Now, new cotton production systems developed at Texas A&M University are providing a key to economic survival for many producers.

One economic problem, for example, in the Texas Trans-Pecos region in the early 1970's appeared insurmountable. The price of natural gas increased from $0.40 per thousand cubic feet (mcf) to $1.85/mcf.

This increased the price of producing cotton in 1975 to about $0.77 per pound of lint; market price was $0.55 per pound. The result was that many thousands of acres were idled in the Pecos region.

In 1979, expected gross revenue for cotton on the Texas High Plains was up 89 percent over that of 1965 but costs of production were up 148 percent.

In the Lower Rio Grande Valley gross revenue for cotton was up 99 percent in 1979 over 1965, but costs of production were up 140 percent.

So, not only is net revenue down in both regions, but because of inflation the net returns of cotton in 1979 dollars would be much less in 1965 dollars.

To meet these challenges, the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service have been developing new crop production systems and integrated pest management (IPM) programs.

For example, due to rapidly increasing national gas prices (high-cost production input) and accelerating insect resistance to pesticides, new IPM cotton production systems were developed for Southern Texas and West Texas.

These production strategies are based on short-season varieties and carefully controlled inputs such as fertilizer, irrigation water, and insect control treatment.

The short-season cotton production system for South Texas is associated with a 30-percent yield increase while inputs are reduced 33 percent.

Production costs are 13.8 cents less per pound of lint with the IPM program and total energy use is cut from 102 gallons of fossil fuel equivalent per acre to 69 gallons. Producer profit was boosted from $12.40 per acre to $102.97.

The success of this system is reflected by its very rapid adoption in much of the Coastal Bend Region of Texas (nearly 200,000 acres of cotton).

The economic implications of a short-season cotton production system applicable to the Lower Rio Grande Valley were evaluated in 1975.

The study showed that if such a system was adopted, insecticide use could be reduced by more than 1 million pounds (from 2.78 million to 1.69 million) and farmers' net returns increased by $4.33 million (from $11 million to $15.35 million). Energy savings would amount to about 300 thousand gallons of fossil fuel equivalent for the region.

Since 1975, many cotton producers in the Lower Rio Grande Valley have adopted the short-season cotton production system.

Dryland short-season production best typifies the short-season production techniques used in the Valley. By using only negligible levels of insecticides, dryland short-season production had the highest average net returns of all dryland and irrigation options.

The Sandhills Philosopher

Editor's note: The Sandhills Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on Sandy Creek looks at television this week, in a sidelong sort of way.

Dear editor:

Some educators are saying too much television watching is to blame for kids' goofing off in school.

WHO KNOWS?

1. When is Armistice (Veterans) Day?
2. Who said: "The very thing we have to fear is fear itself"?
3. When is Sadie Hawkins Day?
4. When was the first metal airship completed?
5. What two seas does the Suez canal connect?
6. Who was President before Herbert C. Hoover became President in 1929?
7. What religion is symbolized by the crescent and the star?
8. What is "Adam's ale"?
9. Boston's Great Fire occurred on what day in 1872?
10. Name the flower representing November.

Answers To Who Knows

1. November 11.
2. Franklin D. Roosevelt in his first inaugural address.
3. November 15.
4. November 13, 1897.
5. The Mediterranean and the Red Sea.
6. Calvin Coolidge.
7. Mohammedanism.
8. Water.
9. November 9.
10. Chrysanthemum.

If I was in charge of graduating students who can't read or write, I'd jump at the chance to blame it on TV or anything else I thought I could get by with.

I don't know whether television damages kids or not but it sure has damaged politicians and other prominent people.

Before television, a person could go for years without seeing his Senator or Congressman and naturally a certain mystery surrounded them. You figured a U.S. Senator for example, to get that high up in the affairs of the nation, had to be something of a giant of a man.

Television has ruined that. You see them on the evening news and discover most Senators and Congressmen are just ordinary people like the rest of us. Don't know any more about what causes inflation and how to stop it than you or me.

You see an Attorney General on television humming and hawing and dodging a question and find he's not any smarter than successful lawyers in thousands of small towns across the country.

You see the head of a big New York bank on television and find he does not seem any sharper than a banker here in Muleshoe. The main difference is that when the New Yorker makes a loan it has more zeroes after it, like $1,000,000 instead of $5,000, but the soundness of the loans is the same, or neither bank will last.

I have seen the heads of the big car companies on television but I won't go into that.

Or take a network male reporter. The accuracy of a news story he reports and one reported in The Journal is about the same. The only difference is the TV reporter reads well and generally has a good head of hair. At the same time, are reporters on small papers who have hair too.

Television may have improved some leaders' image but it has leveled a lot more. If you want to maintain a reputation for being a giant of a man, stay out of the range of a TV camera.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

ANOTHER BOMB

PARIS -- A powerful bomb exploded in front of a synagogue in the heart of the city on the Jewish sabbath recently, killing at least four people and injuring 12 in the latest outbreak of anti-Semitism in Paris.

Meat Surplus Only Temporary Reports Brown

AUSTIN--Texas red meat production is up, but only temporarily, reports Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown.

Slaughter increased in every category except calves. The January-August slaughter breakdown was: cattle 3,787,000 head, up 5 percent; calves, 118,600 head, down 29 percent; hogs, 984,000 head, up 23 percent; sheep and lambs, 777,000 head, up 27 percent.

"The hot, dry summer forced many producers to move their cattle, sheep and lambs off the withered pastures and into slaughter plants," Brown explained. "This created large supplies of meat initially, but could reduce them in the long run."

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—If you're a Texan who survived the 1980 onslaught of campaigns and elections, then hold on to your hat: you may have to go through another one soon.

Texas U.S. Senator John Tower, a Republican, is the latest subject of possible political scenarios which abounded at the Capitol last week. Tower, a strong Reagan backer, is said to be high on the President-elect's list of names for U.S. Secretary of Defense.

If Tower were tapped for that job, leaving a vacancy in the Senate, a special election would be held within 90 days of Tower's resignation from Congress. With that possibility in mind, several politicians are already jockeying for the inside track.

Should Tower resign, the man pulling the strings in the first act will be Gov. Bill Clements. Clements will have the power to immediately appoint someone to Tower's seat, and then call for the special election.

Obviously, whoever occupies Tower's old seat will enjoy some election benefits for an incumbent, even a 90-day incumbent.

An Electable Appointee

Clements will have to choose wisely, for Democrats are still strong in Texas and are likely to send a strong champion from their ranks to take over the long-coveted seat held by John Tower. Tower won re-election by the slimmest of margins two years ago over Bob Krueger, evidence enough that Texas Democrats can get more excited by that race than by supporting Jimmy Carter.

Any candidate who gets into the fray must have several assets immediately: name identification, high voter preference, campaign experience and personal money. Ninety days is not much time to raise money or learn by trial and error.

Clements, therefore, needs to choose someone who would run strong even without the advantage of a short incumbency, and several names have come to the fore.

Connally, Armstrong

Former Gov. John B. Connally and former U.S. Ambassador to England Anne Armstrong are strong Republican considerations. Both are wealthy and experienced. Connally has a strong edge in name identification; whether he is an electable candidate is another question.

Also mentioned are Republican Congressmen Bill Archer of Houston and Jim Collins of Dallas. Archer has said he may get into the race, even if Clements does not appoint him.

One long-shot is State Sen. Bill Meier, D-Eules, who has said he may switch parties to run for lieutenant governor as a Republican in 1982.

Eager Democrats

The Democrat mentioned most often is former Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who is eyed as a probable challenger to Tower in 1984. An experienced conservative, Briscoe could easily muster a 90-day campaign.

Other Democrats include U.S. Ambassador At-Large Bob Krueger, former Atty. Gen. John Hill, Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, and Congressman Mickey Leland of Houston and

Army-Navy Battle Holds Spotlight

Over the past seven years Army has been successful only once in its annual show-down with Navy. The one victory came in 1977 when the Cadets sneaked a 17-14 win. In addition to winning the other six games, the Midshipmen have outscored Army 211 points to 40. (Guess this is called Military Trivia) Navy has lost only three games this fall, Army has won only three. The game, of course, always has great upset possibilities, but we think the Middies will beat the Black Knights by fifteen points. The series is tied at 37 games apiece.

The biggest game of the weekend -- and it's on Friday, not Saturday -- has to be the meeting between Penn State and Pittsburgh. The Nittanys were beaten just once -- by Nebraska 21-7, and the Panthers only lost to Florida State 36-22. The two Eastern powers have played close to dead-even through their long series. Penn State leading by just two games.

Charles Wilson of Lufkin. Speculation For Naught? Of course, all such political speculation during the past two weeks may be for naught if Reagan chooses a Defense Secretary other than Tower, which is what Clements said last week he thinks will happen.

Reagan's closest political advisors were reported to have preferred former NATO supreme commander Gen. Alexander Haig over Tower, which Clements said could cause some difficulties. American tradition has put a civilian, not a military man, in charge of defense. A former deputy secretary of defense under Nixon and Ford, Clements ought to know the inside story.

"Sen. Tower will make a great chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee... and will best serve Texas in that capacity," Clements said last week before leaving for Washington to meet with Reagan's interim foreign policy advisory board.

Inaugural End Game

As Reagan's inauguration approaches, several Republican Texans stand in line to receive political plums, including Clements if he so chooses. However, as is always the case, there may not be enough plums to go around. Had the election been close, Reagan's victory in Texas might have been more valuable. His landslide win allows Republicans in many states a valid claim to pieces of the political pie. As his term approaches, he must choose wisely.

The Speaker Reports

by Bill Clayton

AUSTIN—At the conclusion of the 66th legislative session, I appointed an interim committee, the Select Committee on State Employee Productivity, to determine where changes could be made to improve the effectiveness and productivity of state employees. Needless to say, such an assignment was not an easy task. Findings and recommendations have recently been made by the committee in its final report.

As expected, one of the major concerns expressed involves pay incentives for state employees. The committee believes the Legislative Budget Board should adopt an emergency pay increase of at least 5.1 percent effective February 1, 1981 with additional increases for the 1982 fiscal year of at least 13.6 percent and 10.2 percent for the 1983 fiscal year.

Testimony before the committee has indicated one of the greatest handicaps to increased productivity is the absence of a true pay-for-merit system. It appears that this deficiency has also contributed to an increase of low morale and dissatisfaction with state employment. The committee recommends that the merit pay portion of the Appropriations Bill be rewritten to reflect mandatory documentation of performance before the granting of merit raises. These raises, the committee feels, should be 3.4 percent of an employee's salary and funds should be appropriated by the Legislature based on an amount equal to 1.7 percent of each employee's salary.

The results of an Employee Attitude Survey showed a lack of uniform personnel procedures among agencies creates a strong barrier to performance and productivity. Therefore, the committee recommends an orientation program for new state employees to help alleviate some of this problem. Such a program calls for new employees to be furnished the following information: 1) a list of all laws and policies affecting employment with the state; 2) and accurate job description including a detailed analysis of all tasks involved in the position; 3) performance evaluation and grievance policy procedures; 4) training programs available for upward mobility; 5) a reduction in force policy; 6) a benefits brochure listing all state benefits; and 7) a list of any special policies singular to an agency.

Two other recommendations made by the committee concern job posting and accrued sick leave. The Texas Employment Commission should be required to expand their job posting to include all commission offices in the state so that all citizens and state employees will have easy access to this information, according to the committee. Secondly, the committee feels that productivity would be increased by paying a state employee for that portion of accrued sick leave up to 336 hours upon bonafide retirement.

One additional request made is for an on-going mechanism to be created to continue with this project. The specific recommendation is that a 15-member committee, to be called the Joint Special Committee on State Government Productivity, be appointed by the Governor, Lieutenant Governor and the Speaker of the House. If established, the group would delve even further into the issue of state employee productivity and report its findings to the 68th Legislature when it convenes in January 1983.

The recommendations made by the Select Committee on State Employee Productivity will be presented to the members of the 67th Legislature in hopes of finding new and innovative ways to increase state employee productivity.

Handy Holiday Shortcuts

Your intentions were good. You wanted to get all of your holiday shopping done early, but somehow you never got around to it -- again.

Here are some tips on how you can catch up. Sit down and make out a gift list in a small notebook. Include names, sizes and gift ideas. Carry the notebook with you at all times. As you purchase gifts, simply cross names off the list. Shop during the early morning hours, before stores are crowded, clerks irritable and while a good selection of merchandise is still on the shelves.

Keep a supply of inexpensive gift certificates handy for last minute gifts, stocking stuffers, carolers and grab bags. Are gift certificates popular? Last year, busy shoppers purchased over 20 million McDonald's® Restaurants gift certificates to meet their holiday gift list needs. Gift certificates also make excellent gifts for the postman, paper boy and neighborhood children you wish to remember.

While you're taking care of "emergency" shopping, have the store gift wrap the presents for you. Or, wrap the gifts as soon as you get home. That way, you avoid having to wrap a heap of packages at the very last minute.

One final tip: Shop early next year!

Dec. 1 Last Day to Ship Citrus Fruit Gift Packs

AUSTIN—Now is the time to place orders for citrus fruit packs says Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown. And although the idea of giving food as Christmas gifts isn't new, notes Brown, it may solve the dilemma of what to give someone who has everything.

December 1 is the deadline for shipping fruit to many areas of the country. During peak days 10-12 trucks, each carrying 1,400-1,500 gift packages, will leave the Lower Rio Grande Valley bound for 43 central post offices in and out of state. From there the fruit will be delivered fourth class through the mail to its final destination.

Brown said the shipping deadline will be December 10 for such areas as Chicago, Oklahoma City, Washington, D.C., New York City and other places where orders are heavier and several trips are required to complete deliveries.

Shipping is coordinated by the Texas Gift Package Shippers Inc., a 27-year-old arm of the Texas Citrus and Vegetable Growers and Shippers. The shipping organization is handling packages this season for 35 growers, most with small acreage. Large producers also ship gift packs, but usually handle their own mailing.

According to Bill Weeks, executive director of the shipping organization, fruit in gift packs is premium quality, large and without blemishes. It is often packed in individual wrappers in boxes filled with colorful shredded cellophane. Packages may be as simple as an eight-pound box of six grapefruit, or as elaborate as a bushel of oranges and grapefruit supplemented with Texas avocados, pecans and a smoked ham or turkey.

Weeks said quarter and half bushels are the most popular sizes. Seventy-pound boxes are also shipped during the holidays, most likely to business people who give citrus as gifts. He said Ruby Red grapefruit is the most popular item, but oranges are also in demand. Star Ruby grapefruit, a cousin to the Ruby Red, gets premium prices because of its relatively small volume of production. Both varieties have deep pink meat and are naturally sweet.

A Day Of Thanksgiving

Happy Thanksgiving

Long ago on a brisk clear day in a sheltered, wooded clearing, a harvest feast, a humble meal of wild turkey and Indian corn, was shared by native and newcomer.

With this act of sharing of the harvest of a bountiful land, began the tradition of a feast of Thanksgiving, a tradition carried on through the years.

Today, in observation of this commemorative day of Thanksgiving, we shall be gathered together again in thanks for the blessings of a land bestowed upon a people and shared by a people, as it once was and is now.

and disputes that accompany far too many consumer transactions.

Consumer education is a lifelong learning process. Consumer education also is a "total" learning process. There is no single area that can be isolated and studied in order to become a truly educated consumer. Instead a whole range of basic skills is required: improved reading comprehension, math skills, the ability to view or hear advertising critically instead of passively and the ability to organize our financial affairs—all of these and more are involved in consumer education.

importance of consumer education.

I agree with the President that, "every citizen can benefit from knowing more about consumer laws, rights and avenues of redress." The volume of consumer complaints filed daily with state and local governmental agencies serves as a constant reminder that effective consumer education still is needed to reduce the confusion

Many good programs for consumer education, public and private, are now in place. But we need a more comprehensive and coordinated approach. Just as our democratic political system needs well-informed citizens, our free economy needs well-informed consumers who can participate effectively in the marketplace partnership among consumers, government and business.

Although the primary responsibility of my Consumer Protection and Antitrust Division is law enforcement—taking legal action against those who deceive consumers—we recognize fully our added responsibility of educating the public to approach consumer transactions intelligently. This column is one, small way in which we try to meet this responsibility; regular meetings in which we talk with groups of consumers to explain basic rights and responsibilities is another. Unfortunately, the vast majority of consumers we see are those who already have been victimized. In the few years that this Office has been actively engaged in consumer protection we have not been able to do as much "preventive" work as I would like.

Today, as one additional contribution to the goals of Consumer Education Week, I am proud to announce the publication of a brochure by the Consumer Protection and Antitrust Division entitled "Texas Consumer Protection." This brochure explains the rights, remedies and obligations of Texas consumers as spelled out in the Deceptive Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Act. As you may know, this statute is the centerpiece of Texas Consumer Protection and an understanding of its provisions will go a long way in helping the consumers of this State deal safely and effectively in the marketplace. Copies of the brochure may be obtained by writing to the Attorney General's Office nearest you.

to spend a little time taking stock of your consumer skills. The time you may need to sharpen those skills will be an excellent investment for the future.

Social concern for stepfamily

AUSTIN, Texas (Spl.) — Problems of the American stepfamily are a growing area of social concern, says Dr. Martin Manosevitz, a University of Texas psychologist. A lot of the problem revolves around children, he says, noting that about a million in the U.S. become stepchildren annually. Many second marriages fail, he says, because of conflicts between parents and children. While a parent may have recovered emotionally from a bad marriage and fallen in love with his or her new mate, "this little kid may still be trying to work out the shifting relationships," Dr. Manosevitz explains.

BUZZARD VS PILOT
PENSACOLA, FLA. — A Marine student pilot was forced into his first solo flight and landing when his plane collided with a turkey buzzard and his instructor, thinking the student was dead, bailed out. Navy officials said.

SOVIETS ON IRAN-IRAQ
Moscow — Whether it ultimately stands to win or lose in the Persian Gulf crisis, the Soviet Union is maintaining a cautious neutrality in the war between Iran and Iraq and is calling for a quick end to the fighting.
