IN AIDING OTHERS HE AIDS HIMSELF

To big Ed Landwehr the job of making aids for the hard of hearing is about like a chef tasting his own broth. Ed has known the confusion of partial deafness since early childhood and now, as electrical test engineer at Western Electric Company's Clifton, N. J., Plant, he helps to manufacture the very type of hearing aid that came to his own assistance.)

While still attending Northeastern University, from which he graduated with a degree in electrical engineering, Ed spent his summer vacations working as a waiter and bartender in his father's restaurant in New Britain, Conn. Betaurant in New Britain, Conn. Be-cause of his impaired hearing, particularly in the noisy hubbub of a busy restaurant, he found he was garbling orders. As Ed he was garbling orders. As Ed

Listening Stick Bows To Progress

Today the "listening stick," like the bustle, the mustache cup and the rubber collar is only a museum piece, but there are many oldtime telegraphers who recall pleasantly the days when it was the magic wand, the mahogany baton that marked their trade.

The gentle tick of a pocket watch, when conducted to the ear through a listening stick, can be heard even in a noisy room. This ability to single out sound made the listening stick an important tool to old-time telegraph repeater attendants.

The listening stick was an ingenious but simple device designed by Bell System engineers and made by Western Electric early in the 1900's to aid the telegraph room attendant of the day. And that harried guy needed help. Often hundreds of telegraph instruments, spread on tables in one small room, clattered away simultaneously. Attendants shouted orders back and forth above the din. In this babel of electrical and human voices, even an expert technician had difficulty reaching across a table to pick out one electrical voice from the many. The listening stick did the trick.

Made of finest mahogany, the listening stick is about two feet long and five eighths of an inch thick. It operated much like a doctor's stethoscope. The telegrapher would place one end of the stick containing a hollow wooden earpiece to his ear and the other end against the frame of the instrument. The sound, moving by conduction through the closely knit fibres of the mahogany, focused at his ear. As a doctor judges the regularity of heart beats, the telegraph man determined the clarity of dots and dashes coming through. He could detect any flaws in the adjustment of the instrument and concentrate on one circuit at a time.

Today, thanks to modern switchboards, toll-cable networks, vacuum tube amplification and other improvements, Bell System telegraph repeater rooms are about as quiet as an ordinary living room and the listening stick is just a pleasant memory to oldtime "brass pounders."
