Son to the Fred Allens

A son, named Ronnie Foster, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Allen on the night of December 28. Born in the Shannon hospital in San Angelo, the baby weighed almost six pounds. Both mother and son are doing fine.

This is the second son of the Allens—the other being Freddie. Mrs. Allen was looking mighty hard for a little girl, but papa Fred said that the boy was all right with him.

Maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Foster.

Tales of the Town:

In the Astor the other midnight Romeo Vincent got a big laugh telling pals about the drunk who zigzagged into a bar and ordered a triple martini. . . . After swallowing two of them he decided the bartender was his friend. Reaching into his coat pocket he brought forth a live lobster and offered it to the bartender, who tried refusing it several times. . . . Finally, the bartender decided it would be better to let the dumb thing than argue out it.

"Okay," he said, gripping the lobster, "I'll take it home for dinner."

"Oh, no, don't do that!" cried the sh. "He's already had dinner—take him to the movies!"

war correspondent back from Tojo brought this. You may remember that when Tojo shot himself, an American commentator in Japan predicted: "Tojo has killed himself!"

When the reporter returned to Tojo's house he learned the old so-so was still alive. . . . "Oh, my!" he shrieked the broadcast—"I just told CBS listeners that Tojo killed himself!"

Tojo was lying on his back and blood was flowing. . . . One G.I. looked at another. Someone suddenly broke the hush and said: "What the hell? He's gonna die anyway and good riddance. Let's turn the So-and-So over on his belly so the blood will run more freely!"

. . . And they did so. . . . Pretty soon the doctor arrived and examined Tojo. . . . Turning to the G.I.s and correspondents the doctor inquired: "Who turned him over?"

"We did!" they all yelled.

"Well," sighed the doc, "you saved his life."

Shirley Temple's book, "My Young Life" (her autobiography), which was written by a New York girl at a weekly wage. . . . Madeline Carroll spurning all screen and stage offers to continue serving the Red Cross. . . . Dinah Shore topping every popularity poll this year for gal thrushes. . . . The way Mrs. Truman has "aged" in his first season at the White House. . . . Not physically—but over his unhappiness at the way "my old friends in the Senate have let me down."

Earl Browder (former chief of the American Communist Party) is being investigated by a special board of the Nat'l Committee of the Communist Party. . . . They suspect him of organizing an Ruth Hogg, who vocals on some Harry James recordings is Betty Grable. . . . Wm. Eythe is coming here to visit Margaret Whiting, which debunks the tritemes of a parting.

Lindbergh intermediary Irving Bitz is back—working for an eve's paper. . . . Norma Richter, one of the 3 top models (making $1,000 weekly), has chucked it all to marry Chas. He will visit Delaware as soon as he is completely mended from the flu. He is sunning at the Roney-Pleasure Cabana Club.

Talk about gall! In an interview with an American newsboy, Mussolini's spouse defended the policies and the Romeing of her two-timing hubby. She then added that she wished to come to America to give lectures.

What! And give Liz Dilling competition?

Chorus girls, believe it or not, often discuss politics. At Nicky Blair's Carnival the other night one asked: "Why are there two political parties? Is it that there are two sides to every question?"

"No," observed Jayne Westbrook, "it's because there are two sides to every political office—outside and inside."

Feed Grinding Put On Automatic Basis; Time and Work Are Saved

By IRA MILLER
Farm Electrification Bureau

Of all the various expressions heard along Main Street, the one which means less to farmers than any other is "easy does it." There is no easy road to farming successfully, but there are new methods and equipment being developed constantly to make many laborious farm tasks easier to perform, more profitable and pleasanter.

Not long ago many farmers wasted half a day or more each time they hauled whole grain to a commercial mill to have it ground into feed. That was yesterday's way of farming. Today, electrically-driven small grinders and mixers enable farmers to perform these operations at home, reducing food processing costs from 30 to 40 percent and saving farm-to-mill travel time. Home processing of feed also permits farmers to use home-grown grain more economically, follow individual feeding formulas, feed fresh feed and put grinding and mixing activities on an automatic basis.

New developments in the construction of feed grinders for use on the average farm have led to the manufacture of mills operated by motors of one horsepower or less. These mills, set up to operate semi-automatically, grind large quantities of grain without attention. Farmers who want to grind ear corn or roughage will need larger mills driven by motors of from 3 to 7½ horsepower—the limit generally permitted on single phase lines. These larger motors use from 1/10 to 3 kilowatt hours of power for each 100 pounds, depending on the fineness to which feed is ground.

Thousands of farmers grind grain for even large herds or flocks at low cost and with little labor. The small mill is mounted under storage hoppers so the grain feeds to the grinder by gravity. Ground feed either drops into a box under the grinder or is blown into a feed bin. The farmer starts the motor, opens the gate in the grain feed chute, and goes about his chores. When chores are finished, he turns the motor off. The electric motor is equipped with an overload protective device and the mill is built to operate safely even when no grain is fed into it. Some farmers use a time switch or other device to turn the mill off after it has ground the feed requirements for one or more days.

Tests show that small mills can grind 100 pounds of grain at a cost of from 1 to 3 cents, compared to from 10 to 15 or 20 cents charged by custom grinders or commercial mills. Electrically-operated mixers, driven by a ¾ horsepower motor, are capable of handling 500 pounds of feed at a cost of ½ cent.

FEED GRINDING JOB—taken over by 3 horsepower motor; overhead bins and gravity-flow chutes make the job practically automatic.

Two Girls Are Charged with Robbery

Sheriff Vern Davis and deputy Henton Emery arrested two girls, Ula Thornton and Vivian Mosby, both 17, and they are in the Tom Green County jail on charges of robbery with firearms.

The two girls, hitchhiking from Big Spring to San Angelo when they were given a ride by J. H. Bass of Angelo. They pulled a gun on him and demanded his money and car. He got out of the car and grabbed Vivian. She pulled the trigger and shot Bass through the left leg. The girls then ran away through a pasture. Later on the highway, the sheriff picked up the two youthful gunwomen.

Both girls started from Ula's home in Colgate, Okla., planning to visit Vivian's husband in jail in Lamesa. They decided they didn't want to see him so they didn't stop at Lamesa. The girls said they got the guns in a Dallas pawnshop.
