SOIL CONSERVATION RANGE MANAGEMENT CONTEST STARTED

The North Concho River Soil Conservation District outlined its Range Management contest for FFA and 4-H Club members at a field day meeting and barbecue on the W. N. & L. R. Reed ranch Saturday, November 20.

Twenty-one future ranch and farm boys within the district from Tom Green, Glasscock, Howard and Sterling Counties along with their county agents, vocational agriculture teachers, and around forty ranchers and conservationists spent the day as guests of the Board of Supervisors. The Supervisors and Soil Conservation Service Service personnel assigned to the district showed the group first hand how to gather and record needed information to carry out the contest. Under the direction of Lee R. Reed, who led the field day discussion on his ranch, he called on A. T. Bratton, work unit conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service at Sterling City, to furnish factual information relative to range site, condition class, degree of erosion, kind of grasses present and amount of feed on the ground. As the information was presented, Lee Reed led the discussion with the group in evaluating the ways to improve the range and conserve soil and

B. W. Allred, chief, regional range management division of the Soil Conservation Service, and A. H. Walker, range specialist with the Extension Service, were guests of the district and helped the supervisors with the program. Following the barbecue lunch served by Mrs. Lee R. Reed and Mrs. Neill Reed, Allred told the gathering about the importance of conservation ranching. He pointed out that many of his experiences with ranchers who have become grass ranch-A. H. Walker discussed the various range plants found in the North Concho District and encouraged the boys to study them because of their importance in covering our ranching industry. Origin of Contest

The contest was conceived and developed by the board of land Zach Jones, owner supervisors, chairman, Foster S. Price, secretary, J. R. Mims, Lee R. Reed, and J. W. Cox, as a result of our experiences in administering the affairs of our soil conservation district, Jones states. In working up our educational needs, we analyzed our annual reports for the past seven years and found that more young boys needed to know about our district program for tomorrow this land of ours will be in their hands. In preparing the contest, we requested the assistance of E. J. Hughes, district conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service, to help us put most of our district could be carried out by 4-H Club boys on a practical basis. Upon completion of our proposed conand explained our conception of a $509.00. practical contest based upon our needs in getting more conservation applied.

The contest as outlined will run from November 20, 1948 to November 1, 1949 and will be supplemented with several planned field day meets throughout the year. The superevisors expect to utilize the resources of the district in helping invitation to serve as judges of the carry out the contest as hereby contest. outlined. Any 4-H or FFA member is eligible to compete for the $509 cash award program who can secure the use of at least one pasture within the North Concho River Soil Conservation District and gather the following information. (1). Prepare a range site map of the area entered in the contest which would delineate the deep valley soils, the upland soils and the hills or ridges. (2). Identify the erosion conditions by sites into slight, moderate or severe. (3). Identify and record the important range vegetation in relative per cent of total composition. (4).Prepare a "range condition class" map of the area in contest using four breakdowns of excellent, good, fair, and poor. (5). Determine the volume of feed, in pounds per acre, grown on the various sites during the contest. (6). Determine the per acre volume of litter on each site at the

Television on the Farm

Buck Childs' home has become mighty popular ever since he got that television set-one of the few sets in our town, outside of Andy's Garden Tavern.

Not only do the kids stay home nights, but the neighbors drop in to see whatever's being telecast. And Buck and the missus always make them welcome, with a mellow of ours. (We're thinking of buying glass of beer or ale (with cider and a television set ourselves!) cookies for the youngsters).

While I guess everyone admits that television still has far to go, it's not hard to see that it will some day be as much a part of American home and farm life as the temperate glass of beer that Buck serves. and the hospitality that goes with it.

And from where I sit, anything that adds to gracious living in America-brings folks together for temperate, quiet entertainmentis a boon to this home-loving land

WHAT SHOULD a business firm do when it finds that wage demands have put its expenses up higher than the income it can reasonably expect? This is the plight facing many businesses to-day. Some of them are taking flight to fairer climes. Perhaps you have heard of the big textile feature that is leaving New Engfactory that is leaving New England. No, it didn't decide to go to the South. It will leave the States entirely and go to Porto Rico. It had to go somewhere. It had to stay in the black, or close

Our industries will not all go to Porto Rico, but this incident is a handwriting-on-the-wall mes-sage addressed to all of us. When a business reaches the saturation point, where it cannot collect more income (in the form of new business, increased sales, or higher prices), then something's got to happen. If it cannot cut expenses, then it may go broke. This situation is tough on little businesses especially, but it's dangerous, even to hig ones. dangerous, even to big ones.

A Mutual MAYBE THIS thing explains our increasing rate of business failures. When the break-even point is so high and so close, even a little drop in income or a stepup in expenses can put a company in serious danger. It doesn't make any difference, either, that the volume of business today is so big. Most of our companies have to do two to five times the amount of business they did before the war, just to break even.

American workers are smart. Their good sense is needed today as never before. They can do a lot to help industry get on a sound footing. They know we can avoid misunderstandings that are so common if everybody sees that industry's problems are also

America's problems. Labor can seriously consider the important things. Labor can help work out solutions that are to the best interest of both industry and the general public, knowing that these are also very important to

Our Own TAKE THIS infla-Creation tion, for example. That old spiral, that always catches you right between the pay-check and the grocery store, can be scotched. One solution is greater production. Labor knows a lot about production problems. Are workers any less interested in higher output, because high output is something that also interests the manage-ment and the public? No, they still want production to be high. Increased production, if it delivers goods to the public, softens the danger of runaway prices. High output also makes it possible for the company to pay continued high wages. Some American workers have had experience with businesses that couldn't pay. A company that is in danger of folding up is no good as an employer. There-fore, the problem facing the boss in his effort to show more income than expense is also the problem of the workers. Labor may have some of the answers.

A lot of Americans may be fooled by the seemingly endless bounty of business. Government, also, is expected to give and give and give. Yet, it doesn't make sense to expect either of them to keep on giving forever. Neither government nor business ever actually creates a dollar of wealth. Each can give benefits only out of that which it receives. By the same token, our high living standards are actually the products of our own intelligent work and continued high production.
