Mrs. W. P. Meyer, J. S. Cole, Jr., Mrs. J. Q. Foster and infant son, Pat Allen.

DISMISSALS Since last Thursday: Mrs. Don Soules, Mrs. Raymond Blair, Isias Lopez, Pat McWhorter, Gail Steward, Mrs. Marcelino Hernandez and twins, Juan and Juana.

Alvie Cole, ranchman, is still a little on the "crippled" side following his accident of two weeks ago. A barrel of molasses was dropped on his big toe and nearly cut it off. He was hospitalized for a few days.

LAST WEEK the House debated UMT, passed a so-called wetback bill, while the Senate recommitted to a committee the matter of admitting Alaska to Statehood.

Rarely has an issue generated so much interest and controversy as has the military training proposal. Last year by a vote of 10-to-1 the House adopted a UMT program, and the Senate followed suit. But the detailed plans for the training was left a civilian-controlled commission, appointed by the President, and its report on the subject must be approved by Congress before it can go into effect—subjecting to any changes the Congress might want to make in it.

It is that Report that is now before the House, with some amendments adopted by the Armed Services Committee, to which the Report was referred.

In the course of hearings and the debate a number of points were made which help to clarify the real issues that are involved. Among these have been:

1. When we became involved in the Korean conflict and were being pushed back toward Pusan, new troops were recruited. But because of the pressing emergency and the immediate need, some 800,000 reservists, most of them veterans of the last war, were recalled. It was said there was no time to train young non-veterans in time to stop the Communist onslaught.

Under the UMT program, a pool of trained, ready reservists would be created who could be called in case of an emergency, and thus make it unnecessary for veterans of other wars to be pressed into service when non-veterans of military age are available.

2. After full implementation of UMT, the program will provide these trained Reserves, and will reduce our expenditures for national defense by an estimated $13 billion annually, without weakening our security. That will be done by a planned substantial reduction in the number in the standing forces.

3. On the question of the program militarizing the youth of the Nation the plan could hardly have that effect. It would be under civilian control, and under constant control and scrutiny of the Congress. There were more than 14 million men and women in service during World War II, many for from two to four years, but none of them are considered "militarized" as a result. Moreover, thousands attend military colleges each year—such as A&M College. But because they get some military training has never caused them to be militarized.

4. On the question of the program leading to a military dictatorship, these facts have been developed. After training, the trainees would go into a ready reserve pool and would thereafter be ordinary civilians, under civilian control. They would not be subject to call into service without the approval of the Congress, and then Congress would determine the number subject to recall.

5. Another question raised is that of the moral environment at the camps where they would be trained. The Commission Report, and the legislation, places great stress on that phase of the program. No liquors could be sold at or near the camps; no bawdy house, brothel, etc., anywhere would be allowed to admit a trainee during his six months of training. If they did they would be subject to a very heavy penalty. There would be twice as many chaplains per thousand men than are now provided for the standing forces. Every possible precaution against evil influences would be provided.

6. Both Thomas Jefferson and George Washington urged a universal training program for all young men as a part of their obligation to defend and preserve the Republic.

Miss Dorothy Sue Lowe, student in S.M.U. at Dallas, spent last week end here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Lowe.

Campaign to Elect Miss Ethel Foster GFWC Treasurer LAUNCHED BY TFWC

The Texas Federation of Women's Clubs formally launched its campaign Thursday of last week to elect Miss Ethel Foster of Sterling City treasurer of the General Federation of Women's Clubs at a luncheon at the Woman's Club in Ft. Worth attended by members of the state board and other club women who have been associated with Miss Foster over a period of years.

Also present were a number of Sterling City women, members of the Wimodausis Club, and several relatives of the honoree.

Mrs. Van Hook Stubbs of Wortham, TFWC president, and Mrs. J. Howard Hodge, past state president and campaign manager, who was general chairman of the luncheon, presented briefly the federation's reasons for deciding "to share Ethel Foster's unusual gift for financial management and federation expansion with the General Federation and its 11,000,000 members."

Mrs. R. E. Cox, local chairman, who will also be chairman of transportation for the TFWC special train to the GFWC convention in Minneapolis in May, expressed appreciation that Fort Worth had been chosen for the "Ethel Foster Appreciation Luncheon" and the campaign opening.

"We are gratified that Miss Foster, a real West Texan, chose Fort Worth for this important occasion", Mrs. Cox said, "for we in Fort Worth feel especially close to Ethel Foster. We remember with pleasure the occasion when the Texas Federation was hostess to the General Federation in Fort Worth with Miss Foster, then state treasurer, as general chairman of the convention arrangements."

Various phases of Miss Foster's federated club service, beginning with membership in a junior club while she was a student at Kidd-Key College in Sherman, to her current office of finance chairman of the General Federation, were covered by other speakers, including Mmes. J. Howard Payne of Dallas, W. R. Potter of Bowie, Ruth Allen of Sterling City, M. H. Hagaman of Ranger, J. W. Walker of Plainview and Joseph M. Perkins of Eastland.

Mrs. N. H. Peters of Waxahachie gave the invocation, and Mrs. E. Brinton Ingram, Woman's Club president, gave a short greeting. Mrs. Ingram called attention to the long-time close relationship between the TFWC and the Woman's Club, which provided the federation with headquarters until the state clubhouse was built in Austin.

Informality and a warmth of feeling characterized the several tributes. Miss Foster responded, and the recognition of relatives and long-time friends further developed the intimate, personal theme.

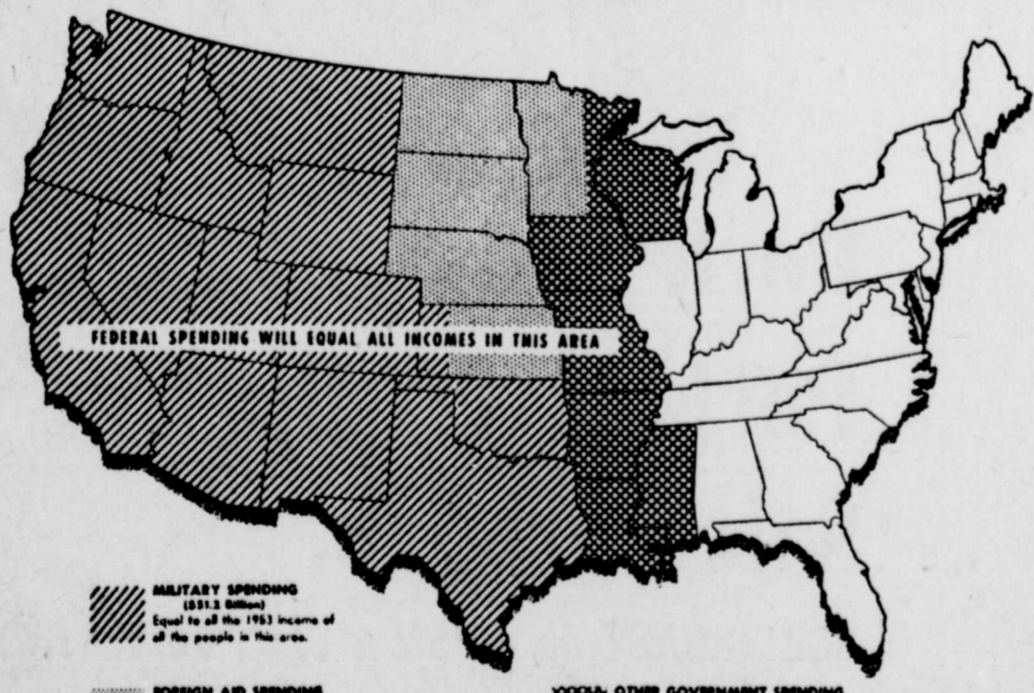

Mrs. H. L. Hildebrand, Miss Foster's sister, was introduced as the "one who has helped Ethel in her federation career by keeping the home fires burning." Others of the "Sterling City family" present were Mmes. Rufus W. Foster, Temp Foster, Harvey D. Glass, E. F. McEntire, W. N. Reed and Ruth Allen. Mrs. F. H. Duff and Mrs. Guy Day-vault of Dallas, cousins of the honoree, also were at the Sterling City table.

"HIS MASTER'S VOICE"

THE 1953 FEDERAL BUDGET OF $85.4 BILLION IS GREATER THAN ALL THE INCOMES OF ALL THE PEOPLE WEST OF THE MISSISSIPPI

THIS STARTLING PICTURE is the result of study by the National Chamber's Government Economy Program, based on figures from the U.S. Department of Commerce. Incomes of all people include all money that goes to individuals as wages, salaries, interest, rent, and dividends. Since latest Commerce Department figures available for the map were for 1950, the Chamber estimated total 1953 incomes at 15 per cent higher than those for 1950. Total 1953 spending under the President's budget would equal the incomes of all persons west of the Mississippi plus 96 per cent of the incomes in Wisconsin and all the incomes in Mississippi.

They Do "Give A Hoot" For Easy

Easy Roberts finally got rid of the noisy pigeons that used to whoop it up under his eaves.

He must have tried a dozen ways to scare them off. But no matter what he did, they would be right back cooing by his window the next morning.

Then Easy thought of an old stuffed owl he had in his attic. He propped it on the roof so's all the pigeons could see it. They left... and three hoot owls have taken their place. Easy swears the hooting is even worse than the cooing of the pigeons.

From where I sit, quite often a "bright idea" will turn out to be "not so bright" after all. That's why we should never be too cocksure of our ideas and opinions—but always try to keep an open mind. I believe a refreshing glass of beer is the best thirst-quencher—you may believe differently. But who's to say one's right and the other is wrong? Let's just practice tolerance. It'll save a lot of hootin' and hollerin'.

HEALTH TALKS

Prepared by the State Medical Association of Texas
KEEP YOUR NOSE CLEAN

As an air scoop, the nose starts off a chain of respiratory reactions which get around to all parts of the body sooner or later. As an atomizer for odors, the nose turns on a sprinkling system of scents which starts in the brain and also reacts throughout the body. But that's not all the nose does.

The nose also has an effect upon your voice and upon your hearing. The main nerve of the eyes crosses over some of the nasal pathways and thus gets influenced by the doings of the nose.

The nerve in the head that is connected with the nose is the No. 1 cranial nerve, and as such it is possibly the first link-up between you and the outside world that comes to you in gusts of air. When you toss back some of that air in the form of speech, the nose and nasal cavity get in on the deal, too. Back behind and around your eyes is the nasal cavity, a cavern type structure with several stalactites hanging down. The holes inside these hollow stalactites are the sinuses. If you've ever hit a stalac-tite in a cave, you know it gives off a ringing sound, shriller toward the loose end than toward the bigger attached end.

The sounds you make in your voice box come tooting up the throat and swat the different sinuses on their way out and you have speech of varying pitch. When those sinuses are chock-full of germs or congestion, they don't ring when hit, they just sorta thud and you have the peculiar dull nasal quality of speech that accompanies a cold or sinus trouble.

All the gadgets that make up the voice box and all the paraphernalia that lie between the voice box and the sinuses also play a part in the production of sound, of course, but the nose is in on the deal, too.

At the back of the nasal cavern is a hole in the ceiling that leads off to another part of the cave. This ceiling slopes downward at this point into the throat, but that hole leads to the intricate system of the ears.

From that hole the ears are supposed to get their ventilation. You know that the houtside ears have a drum over them which generally forms a seal, so that only sounds and not air enter the ear from that shell-shaped job sticking out on each side of the head. But from that hole there at the back of the nasal cavity near the top of the throat, the air circulates into the ears, aiding in all functions of the ears, including the maintenance of balance.

There's a tiny recess just behind this hole, the kind of off-set from traffic that often collects "spider-webs." It isn't in the channel of airflow, so it doesn't get swept very often and as any such spot might, it collects webs and other debris. The webs and debris make up the kind of stuff known as adenoids.

A little bit of adenoids might be all right; it might be the web that catches some of the "flies" that get in the air stream. But when those adenoids keep piling up, they get so big and heavy that they close over that hole to the ears, not only cutting down on hearing but also possibly messing up the many functions of the ears. It takes nose-breathing to keep the air circulating sufficiently past this hold to the ear to keep webs from closing it up. So here, again, the nose plays a very important part.

Then there's the involvement of the nose and eyes. You know that when you cry, your nose runs. The ducts which channel your tears open not only into the eye, which makes them overflow, but there is also a "safety" valve that opens into your nose too. So you have to blow your nose when you cry to get the tears out.

Then there's the problem of peeling onions. If you hold the onion under running water when you peel it, you don't weep; or if you keep your mouth open and close your nose when you peel the onion you don't weep. It is possible that the onion juice can sting your eyes if it gets in them, making you weep. It is also possible that the onion scent, when it hits the smelling bulb in the nose, gets rejected and sets up a backward flow which results in tearing of the eyes and dripping of the nose; then, by keeping your mouth open and automatically closing off your nose, you can peel onions and smile.

Another connection between the nose and eyes exists in the pulley which works the eyelids up and down; this pulley is connected with the root of the nose, there between the eyes.

With so many different functions of the nose the parental warning of "Keep your nose clean" becomes a very good piece of advice.

LYDIA CIRCLE HAS ALL DAY PROGRAM

The next meeting will be next Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Henry Bauer for the regular monthly mission study.

Albert W. Dimes is an expert who can stump the fortune tellers. He doesn't even need to see the tea leaves to read the story they can tell him.

Just a sip reveals to this "tea detective" not only the country but the exact district in which each tea was grown, how it was processed and blended — even at what altitude it was grown.

Amazing as it seems, Mr. Dimes is as accurate in his work as a Scotland Yard operative or F. B. I. man. He has to be right every time. It is his responsibility to guard the blend perfected by one of the world's great tea companies over 100 years ago.

The young lady pictured above, Miss Muriel Callahan keeps careful record while Mr. Dimes brews and samples. Cup after cup — throughout the day, he tests the work of expert blenders for the Tetley Tea Company. And what do you think he drinks with his meals? Why tea, of course.

Tea tasting is a profession mastered by only a small coterie of men throughout the world. It is a most important function because the flavor of tea depends on proper climatic and seasonal conditions to reach perfection. That is why buyers for companies like Tetley watch the market and buy only when the quality of tea is up to their standard. Then the blenders take over. After that it is up to Mr. Dimes to say whether they have matched the famous master-blend formula to produce a uniform quality of flavor and color — golden in hue when it pours from the pot, rich amber in the cup.

Oh yes, here's an expert's recipe for making "a perfect cup of tea":
1. Rinse pot with boiling water.
2. Put in one teaspoon of tea (or teabag) for each cup to be served.
3. Pour bubbling, boiling water on the tea.
4. Steep 3 to 5 minutes, according to strength desired, and
5. Serve promptly with milk and sugar. You can use cream or lemon, if you prefer, but not with Mr. Dimes' approval.

"I REMEMBER"
BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Mrs. Kathryn Bennett, Middletown, Pa.: I remember the Hokey Pokey Man who came around every evening during the summer. For a penny we could get a big, cooling and refreshing Hokey Pokey, with bright colored cherry flavoring poured over it. I always got cherry, although it smelled and tasted like hair tonic.

From Frank Cochran, Webb City, Mo.: I remember the first schools that I attended were in a log house, about 30 feet square, with large fireplace that burned wood about six feet long. There was no floor. The benches were made from logs split through the center and hewed smooth. There were four holes bored on the round side and wooden pins used for legs in the holes. There was a huge puncheon door. The house had no rafters.

From Mrs. C. B. Scott, Meadows of Dan, Va.: I remember when I was a little girl, mother and we girls would card and spin yarn and knit our winter stockings and gloves. Women wore dresses to the ground. Most everybody walked; sometimes a young man would ride horseback and take his best girl on behind him to church and back.

From George A. Musmehner, Douglas, Ill.: I can remember when there was a death in the family, all the pictures were turned with their faces to the wall, the clock was stopped, and no one spoke above a whisper while the body was in the house.

From William Shaner, Lakeview, Ohio: I remember when daddy bent pins, fastened them to a piece of string, tied on a nail for a sinker, and sent us to the creek fishing. Oh yes, we had a can of worms.
