The History of Sterling County

By Ira Lee Watkins

We are going to run The History of Sterling County serially in the News-Record this summer. It was written by Ira Lee Watkins, son-in-law of Mrs. C. L. Coulson, for his thesis at Texas Tech in 1939. His history was written as a partial fulfillment of the requirements for his master's degree there.

The history starts with the Spanish-Indian period and goes up to 1939. We wish some history major would undertake to bring the history up to date by completing the years following. Maybe someday, someone will.

INTRODUCTION

The story of the pioneer is always a thrilling chapter in American history. Every section of our nation has had its pioneers, and every section from the Appalachian Mountains to the Pacific Ocean has been, at one time or another, the western frontier of America. The hardy pioneers, in carrying the frontier westward, in braving the unknown West, in suffering hardships and privations, and in living in constant danger from the Indian, finally conquered a wilderness and bequeathed it to America to develop and enjoy.

In the westward expansion of the United States, Texas stands out with unusual pioneering experiences. Her six flags, her ten years as a republic, her early Spanish history, her Indians, her great cattle kingdom, and the very recent development of West Texas all combine to make the story of Texas a romantic one. The fact that West Texas is the most recently settled part of the state does not mean that this section of the state has nothing to offer of historical interest. On the contrary, West Texas was the first part of the state to be visited by the Spaniards. It was a favorite range of the buffalo and a hunting ground for the Indian. It offers a fertile field for historical investigation, but as yet that field has not been developed extensively.

The history of West Texas may be approached through a study of the histories of the various West Texas counties. Each has its own particular story to tell, and among those with an interesting past is Sterling County. This county is located just off the cap rock of the Staked Plains in Central West Texas. For the most part the topography of the county is rolling plains. The North Concho River runs through the county, heading just west of the western boundary of the county. The main Sterling tributaries of the Concho are Sterling Creek and Lacy Draw. Mesquite grows rather abundantly throughout the county, and a great many pecans are found along the water courses. The county is ideal for grazing purposes. Sterling County was once a favorite hunting ground for the Indian. The region abounded in wild game—buffalo, deer, wild turkey, and fish. It at one time was a part of the Western frontier and was also for a time in the line of forts which existed for the purpose of preventing Indian depredations on the settlers farther east.

It is the purpose of the author in this study to trace the history of Sterling County with the view of preserving valuable information to the interest of those future citizens of the county who may be interested in learning something of the activities of their forbears, and also with the view of making a small contribution to the history of West Texas.

The writer wishes to express appreciation to the following for invaluable assistance he has received from them in preparing this study: Dr. W. C. Holden and Dr. O. A. Kinchen of the History Department of Texas Technological College and the several pioneers of Sterling County, especially W. L. Foster, G. G. Ainsworth, Mrs. Erie Conger,

C. L. Coulson, J. L. Glass, Mrs. Neil Reed, and W. F. Kellis, without whose assistance this paper would not have been possible.

CHAPTER I The Spanish-Indian Period

Long before the coming of the white man to West Texas, that part of the country which is now Sterling County was a favorite hunting ground of the American Indian. He roamed this area, unaware of the lighter complexioned people of other continents whose materialistic ambitions were later to bring about such a great change in the life of the red man. This change in the American Indian's world began with the coming of the Spanish explorers and missionaries to the New World in the early part of the sixteenth century. From 1535 when Cabeza de Vaca was stranded on the Texas coast until nearly three hundred years later, the history of West Texas is, to a great degree, the story of the relations between the Spaniards and the Indians.

Among the Indian tribes which have roamed and camped on Sterling soil are the Lipans, Kickapoos, (1) Kiowas, (2) and Comanches. (3) It is believed by some that the Wichitas also lived in this area before the coming of the Spaniards. (4)

The Lipans and Kickapoos roamed the valleys of the Colorado, San Saba, and Concho Rivers. The native home of the Kickapoos was somewhere east of the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers, but when the Anglo-Saxons began to settle that region these Indians were pushed west and southwest into Texas. (5) The Lipans were, at first, friendly with the white man of West Texas but became his enemies when their chief, Flacco, was murdered by a white man. As long as the Lipans were on friendly terms with the white man, they aided the latter in his conflicts with the hostile Comanches of Texas. This enmity and intermittent warfare between Lipan and Comanche was ended by a peace treaty in 1845. The Kickapoos were at times friendly with the Comanches and at other times made war with them. They possessed guns obtained from Arkansas River traders. The Comanches feared and respected these Kickapoo guns and as a rule tried to avoid trouble with that tribe.

The Comanches came to Texas from the northwest. When the white settlers began to move into the upper Mississippi Valley, they pushed the Sioux Indians out of that country into the area of the State of Colorado. The Sioux, in turn, pushed the Comanches out of that section down into Northwest Texas. The Comanches then took up, as their main range, the headwaters of the Canadian, Arkansas, Brazos, and Colorado Rivers. Sterling County was in an area which roughly marks the southern edge of Lipan and Kickapoo ranges. Apparently no great number of Comanches ever hunted farther south than the North Concho River.

The Kiowas originated in the North Yellowstone Country and drifted south into the Panhandle of Texas. In Texas the Kiowas and Comanches clashed and the two tribes warred many years until about 1790 when they made peace. The Kiowas drifted farther south than the Panhandle—at least as far south as the Concho Rivers.

Health & Safety Tips

FROM THE AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION How To Be A Good Patient

Do you know how to be a good patient?

There's more to it than just wanting to be well. If you know how to be a good patient, you can receive even better health care, get more for your money, and make your doctor's job easier.

In a new pamphlet on the subject of "How to Be a Good Patient," the American Medical Association urges that it is important to choose a family physician before illness strikes. Meet him personally, have your medical history on file in his office and schedule periodic physical examinations. Then, should illness strike, you'll know where to turn.

There is a real advantage in going to the doctor's office, rather than insisting that he come to your home. Proper examination, to help the doctor arrive at a diagnosis, can be done much better in the office, where everything is at hand to make it thorough.

In phoning the doctor, when a house call is essential, be prepared to tell him briefly all the facts in the case, the symptoms of illness, temperature and other factors. It is impossible for the doctor to carry with him all of the tools of modern medicine, but if he is told what to expect, he can bring along some of the equipment and medicines that might help in your case.

At home or in his office, tell your doctor the whole story. The uncommunicative patient merely makes it more difficult for his doctor to treat him. Have in mind the salient facts about past illnesses, operations, accidents, even when they are years in the past. Have your questions ready too, and never hesitate to ask the doctor about anything that is puzzling you.

Most patients are embarrassed about discussing the fee when they first go to a doctor. The best thing for both the patient and the physician is to bring up the subject of fees on the first visit. No one should mind a frank discussion of charges.

The patient seeks the doctor's opinion about the state of his health, and he seeks advice on what to do about it. The time and money of both doctor and patient may be wasted if you don't follow the advice. If you decide to stop taking the prescribed pills after a day or two, or if you don't bother to have the prescription filled at all, or if you head for the golf course when the doctor ordered rest, you may be facing even more serious illness later on.

State Bar Column

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE EXPRESSES BASIC BELIEF

What do we mean when we say that in the United States we have a "government of law" and not a "government of men"? Basically we mean that we have certain individual rights, guaranteed by our federal and state constitutions and laws, which may not be denied by any governing body.

The early American colonists had their fill of government by men, and the Declaration of Independence, signed 187 years ago, set out their complaints against that type of government and revealed their belief in a principle which we now accept as basic to our American way of life.

The indictments set out in the documents against King George III of Great Britain charged him with numerous violations of that principle. Among the complaints enumerated are the following:

"He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people."

"He has obstructed the administration of justice, by refusing his assent for laws for establishing judiciary powers."

"He has made judges dependent upon his will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries."

"He has refused his assent to laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good."

"He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation: . . . For depriving us, in many cases, of the benefits of trial by jury; For transporting us beyond seas to be tried before pretended offences; . . . For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws, and altering fundamentally the forms of our governments; . . . For suspending our own legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever."

Our forefathers who subscribed to the principles of the Declaration of Independence were willing to fight for their beliefs. The Revolutionary War followed, dragging through weary years of suffering and suspense. Each of us takes pride in their eventual triumph over gigantic obstacles.

In 1787, when the framers of our Constitution met at Independence Hall in Philadelphia, where the Declaration of Independence had been signed 11 years previously, they set to work to create a system of checks and balances in government which was to perpetuate the fundamental theory mentioned in the preamble of the earlier document:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident; That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

"That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; . . ."

Some five years later, the first ten amendments to our Constitution were adopted at one time, specifically detailing various basic civil rights stemming from the underlying theory of the Declaration of Independence.

Our courts day by day guard these rights for us.
