STATE AND DISTRICT. For Governor, O. M. ROBERTS. For Lieutenant Governor, JOSEPH D. HAYES.

BEXAR COUNTY TICKET.

For County Judge, F. G. SMITH. For Sheriff, T. P. McCALL. For District Clerk, GEORGE R. DASHIELL.

Our people are witnessing their first panic.

It is a panic among the adherents of Judge Ireland. The season of the year is near when one can eat fruit padding without unpleasant suspicions depressing the mind.

It is suggested that the Governor set apart some particular Sabbath day on which all ministers of the gospel preach from the text, "Thou shalt not kill."

James Bacon, who plead guilty to land stealing in Barnet county, was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary, was District Judge appointed by Governor Davis.

The Breckenridge Standard says Hon. John Hancock's election to Congress from that District is beginning to be looked upon as a forgone conclusion, even by some of his strongest opposers.

New York's latest recruits to the army of Evangelists are William Welsh, a minister performer, and Orville Gardner, the prize fighter, and they are said to be stirring up the sinners at a great rate.

Since the recent election, politicians do not seem to care to be on sociable terms with the Greenback Party, "chance" as they formerly were. It is that contest the "giant skirmish" about between the legs of the principal contestants, scarcely noticed but for the noise it made.

The massacre of the Dowdy children in Kerr county has had the effect of greatly augmenting the ranks of the "little brainless demagogues," who according to Mr. Ireland's advocate, Judge Martin, "keep up this agitation about frontier protection in the hope of keeping themselves in office."

The torchlight procession in favor of Ireland at Kerrville did not take place. The failure was due to the fact that the man engaged in making the transparencies was killed by a party of raiders just as he had completed the legend. "All this agitation about frontier protection is but the work of a few little brainless demagogues who hope thereby to keep themselves in office."

The Waco Telephone trusts that the next Legislature will take steps to purchase the Alamo property, to be forever held, owned and kept in a good state of preservation by the State, and thinks it would be a shame not to do so. Such a course will no doubt be pursued. We do not believe a dissenting voice would be heard in any part of the State. Let the venerable and honored pile be purchased and its interior walls restored as near as possible to what they were at the close of the glory which is not outshone in the annals of heroism and devotion to a cause.

It was determined to hold a series of Irish meetings, so-called—two each week—and the first was inaugurated on Monday evening, the 14th inst., in the First ward. The second was held in the Second ward on the following Friday, and then on Monday evening next, the "rally" was made in the Fourth ward. The Third ward meeting should have been held on the following Friday evening, but Maj. Burgess arrived in the city before that time, and over a week has passed without any public mention of any proposed meeting in the Third ward. People may laugh and believe that all the Express has said about the injury to Ireland's cause these business meetings were making was exaggerated, but let them put this and that together, and they may form a pretty good idea of the correctness of the report sent to the Galveston News by Alex. Reed, and published elsewhere. P. S. Since the above was written we learn that a call is made for an Ireland meeting this evening at the Literary Hall; but this meeting may be a genuine one, not like the business affair held hitherto.

THE BORDER QUESTION.

It is understood that the object—in part, at least—of Gen. Ord in his recent visit to the Rio Grande was to confer with Gen. Trevino, the Mexican General in Chief of the Division of the North, with the view of effecting some plan of co-operation in putting a stop to raids into Texas. That Gen. Trevino failed to meet him is also known, and the failure seems to have occurred in a manner to render it the equivalent of a refusal. While it is to be regretted that such an overture in the interest of peace was not met in a corresponding spirit by the Mexican commander, it is probable that he is less responsible for so palpable a manifestation of unfriendliness than is the Mexican government itself. In fact, this is evident in the light of President Diaz's message of September 15th to the Mexican Congress, in which he treats of the border question at some length, and reiterates the determination of his administration to enter into no arrangement with the United States on the subject while the order of June 1, 1877, to Gen. Ord in relation to crossing over into Mexico remains in force. President Diaz says:

"I feel, as in the conception of the government of Mexico and conformably with the precepts of international law, the order of June 1, 1877, constitutes a flagrant violation of the sovereignty of the Republic; it was not thought compatible with the honor and the rights of Mexico to enter upon the arrangement for the reciprocal passage of troops in pursuit of Indians in the desert region, until the said order should be withdrawn, notwithstanding the great desire of the government to reach an agreement with the United States on this point, which may avert more serious difficulties in the future. It is presumed that the position here assumed lastly, and that it will be maintained as the rule of action by his administration in connection with this question. There is no doubt but that public sentiment in Mexico is so hostile to the United States that no other position would be tolerated for a moment. The President of the Mexican Congress, responding to the message of President Diaz on this point, says:

"The order given to General Ord was without doubt an abuse of force and an attack on the sovereignty of nations; and Congress congratulates the Executive on his noble attitude in not treating with the government of the United States until such unfavorable order be duly retired. It is thus clear that an issue is presented between the two governments that may result in a collision at any time while our troops are over the border in pursuit of raiders. Such is the situation. But should war come, who is responsible? Tried by all the rules of international law, Mexico will have herself to blame for the consequences. Her President admits broadly the existence of the incursions by Indians, marauders and thieves, of which we complain, and the necessity of an arrangement for a reciprocal crossing of troops, but stands upon the technical point of honor raised, as he claims, by the order of June 1, 1877, to General Ord, and while our people are being murdered and plundered refuse to entertain any friendly overtures for the mutual benefit of both countries. But how stands the law of nations as to the point in dispute? The right of the United States to send its soldiers across the Rio Grande on the trail of marauders? By the universally accepted doctrine of this great code, every sovereign State has a clear right to the complete inviolability of its territory, arising, as do all others, from the primary right of self-preservation. Growing out of this right and the corresponding duty of protecting its own people, is the further right of a sovereign nation to resist invasions and march across the boundary into the territory of a neighboring nation which fails to prevent such incursions. And, as laid down by Philimore, it matters not whether these violations of its territory are the result of weakness or of perfidy. The duty of the government to protect its own people is the same and as binding in the one case as in the other. Not only this, but in cases where this measure is not adequate for the purpose, it is the right of the aggrieved government to take armed possession of the territory from which the incursions are made in order to give complete protection to its people. These are propositions which cannot be controverted. They are part and parcel of the law of nations. Applied to the situation on the Mexican border, they show that the United States is exercising a clear right in crossing the Rio Grande, and that the Mexican government in resisting our troops will place itself in the attitude of sanctioning the raids and protecting the raiders. President Diaz' lofty talk about the violation of the rights of the Mexican nation by the order in question is in the key to suit Mexican ears. It does not impress anybody outside of Mexico. In fact, not to put too fine a point on it, it is but little better than highfalutin bombast. We remain, therefore, in the position in which President Diaz is placed, and do not doubt that his own better judgment condemns it, while public opinion leaves him no alternative."

What Texas desires is the security of her frontier and the opportunity to bring into use and cultivation the extensive range now rendered unsafe and well nigh impossible of settlement by reason of the raids from Mexico. If this can be done, as it ought to be done, by the peaceable and friendly cooperation of the two governments, it will be a matter of sincere gratulation to the people of Texas. If it is not so done, but is only to be accomplished by war, the responsibility will be upon Mexico.

When the Irishman, of the street-corner politician stripe, arises in the morning, he proceeds to his usual haunt and takes his morning's morning in election. He seems to take no interest in the election; at least cannot be drawn into a discussion of the probable results of the coming battle with ballots on the 5th of November. By noon he will claim that Ireland will carry certain counties, and by the time the "regulars" complete their task of bracing up for the voter's work, it is not an unusual thing to hear a proposition to bet that Schleicher will not carry the district by more than four thousand or five thousand majority. By ten P. M., Ireland is sure of election, and by midnight, "I bet you ten thousand (sic) dollars Ireland will get six thousand majority."

The Austin Statesman drives a nail home when it says: "It is surely enough to deter Jones that Davis is for Jones, and it is enough to elect Hancock to know that Davis dreads and opposes Hancock's election, and yet Hancock and Davis were both Union men. Since the election of Hancock is no longer a virtue in the eyes of Davis, it should not be a crime in the eyes of the Galveston adherents of Flournoy, and Hancock should be supported by every true citizen of Texas. Surely we will not always find the 'dark divisions' like Flournoy's little coteries always co-operating with men like Davis and Ben Butler, who are the supposed antipodes of Col. Flournoy's sort. But extremes do always meet, and Davis and Flournoy have again gone to bed together."

THE GONAVAS INQUIRY.

The Gonavas Inquirer either shows signs of repentance or is guilty of a forgetfulness that it is an advocate of Judge Ireland, for it gives that gentleman a stinging rebuke when, commenting on the conduct of the canvass, it says: "Men would rarely quarrel on an intellectual subject if one party did not feel that his arguments had been overthrown and his theories demolished. It is often noticeable in conversation as well as in some journals, that whenever an opponent wins a marked and apparent advantage, the vanquished party is apt to show temper, and, forgetting reason, commences to deal out the 'his', 'scoundrel', and 'like' expressions. Whenever a man is forced into this position he is vanquished. It were wisdom to withdraw from advocacy of a cause rather than be driven into the error mentioned." Now, the Express does not pretend to say positively the Inquirer intends this for Judge Ireland, but this much we do know: That Mr. Ireland makes opprobrious and disparaging use of the name of Mr. Schleicher in his speeches, while the latter seldom uses the name of the former, and never in a manner to reflect upon his personal honor. However, if the Inquirer had said, "In his foul throat" instead of the single "his" all doubts of the intended application would have been at once removed, as the people would have recognized the language.

MR. ALEX. SWEET, in his "San Antonio Bittings" in the Galveston News of the 19th inst., says: "Col. Burgess is once more in our midst, with whom we will have to be satisfied for the time being, as Judge Ireland remained back in the woods over at Seguin. Your correspondent has not been interviewed by Col. Burgess yet, hence he has to rely on popular rumor. It is asserted that when Col. Burgess arrived in San Antonio and learned Judge Noonan was not in town, he (Burgess) tore around and went on like a pirate. He said he had come all the way over from Seguin for the purpose of suing out an injunction against Dr. R. L. Graves, Fayette Walker, (colored) and other so-called Ireland men in San Antonio to restrain them from making any more speeches in Ireland's behalf. He said Judge Ireland, in case he was defeated, would bring civil suits for damages against the parties who have been conducting the Ireland movement in this city. It is understood that Schleicher's friends made a vile attempt to bribe Col. Burgess not to interfere with the Ireland meetings now being perpetrated in this city, but the offer was refused with scorn."

The papers and the people seem thoroughly awakened on the subject of the prevalence of crime in this State, and there is every prospect that good will result from the agitation. In this connection, we are glad to see that the evil disposed class are cowardly, and let the evil disposed class know that sure and speedy punishment awaits the evil-doer, and we will hear less of outlaws. Let officers be elected who will perform their duty without fear or favor, and whose friends are not mainly found among that class whose interest lies in a violation of law. What we want is a change in the criminal code that will bring criminals to trial within a reasonable time. Then let the people elect the right kind of men for judges, sheriffs and prosecuting attorneys, and give them every support and encouragement in the faithful discharge of their duties. They will soon put an end to the complaints about the prevalence of crime.

The Rockport Transcript says Judge Ireland, "observing the natural law of philosophy, has endeavored to make up in velocity, what he lacked in weight, and his circulation about the district should put to blush the comparative slowness and irregularity of the United States mail; but the flattering union he took to his soul that large bodies move slowly, verified, as he has fondly believed, by the delay in Col. Schleicher's canvass, is about to be rudely dispelled, and he awakened to the fact that the momentum of large bodies is overpowering when fairly attained. Col. Schleicher has begun his canvass in earnest, and once under headway he will astonish the natives with the rapidity with which he will dispel in the wake of the Honorable John, falling like mists before the rising sun, the fine spun speculations with which the latter has endeavored to blind and entrap the suffragans of the now conspicuous Sixth District."

Who is Majority?

Trade Unions. In an article headed "Valde to the front" and signed "Majority" in the Galveston Times of the 12th inst., dated at Valde, is some of the most outrageous sentences ever published by the press of any country. It starts by saying, "Judge Ireland achieved a great victory at the barrens on the 4th inst. Please inform us what it was? It makes the false statement, that it was not known that Mr. Schleicher or any of his supporters would be present on that occasion. We say false, because those who were present were invited in connection with others by prominent Ireland men of this country. And as for the speech, Mr. Schleicher gave a failure both in not causing any demonstration of feeling and not having any weight, it is false, and it was so pronounced by those who were present on that occasion. We do not know the writer of the article in the Times, but from the tone of it, we judge that he is confused and confused. It is a single fact, and ends the article by stating that Mr. Schleicher will not receive forty votes in this county, and that there will be four hundred polled. There is not a citizen in this county but what knows that that is not so. It is known that this county will give Ireland a majority at all, and as for the polling of four hundred votes it is out of all reason at the present time. The writer of that article, judging from this, is excusable for the expressions he used, for it shows plainly the want of knowledge of what he speaks."

Greenbackers' Paradise.

How happy the Greenbackers would be if they only lived in Cuba. It is indeed a paradise for that money changer. A gentleman writing from Havana, says: "I am decidedly in favor of being landed at a hotel, two of our party went into a convenient bar-room, had two drinks of brandy, had down a $1 greenback and received $4 Cuban currency in return. It was encouraging and calculated to lead to exhilaration. I seemed to open up a new and enticing road to wealth; for they received two tubs of brandy, and for change, double the nominal money tendered in payment. The brandy was only fifteen cents a tub, and $1 in Cuban currency is worth about $2.25 in Cuban currency. And yet that money had all the authoritative stamps on it there was room for."

The Deadly Viper.

Three young men named Mortimer, Forbes and Gordon, were crossing the downs to Anlsey, Sussex, when they stopped in a village called Mottisfont, where they were sitting on a bank. Mortimer was bitten in the hand by a black viper. The viper was killed, and no further notice was taken of the matter. Before sundown was reached, however, Mortimer was seized with violent symptoms, and died in great agony at a village public house. All three were engaged as clerks in a bank in the city.
