THE Austin Stateman makes the statement that it costs more to ship a bushel of corn from Central Texas to Galveston than it does from the Mississippi river to New York city, and farmers who have raised an abundant crop this season are obliged to let it rot in their fields and cribs or give it to the railroad companies who will haul it to market. This is a matter that should engage the serious attention of the people of Western and Southwestern Texas. Before the products of Western Texas, excluding wool, cotton, hides and cattle, can form any considerable factor in the sum of our prosperity, we must have more advantageous means of transportation. We must have either the extension of the International road to this city, or another estiet to the Gulf. Our merchants and farmers are losing fortunes every year through the high tariff on cur importations, and the sooner we organize a movement to scoure a better outlet than we now possess, the better will it be for every merchant, lusiness man and property owner in this city, and for every land owner and products, and the sooner we organize a movement to scoure a better outlet than we now possess, the better will it be for every merchant, lusiness man and property owner in this city, and for every land owner and products, and talk business.

polled fell short of what was expected. There were but few tickets voted which were not more or less scratched. Democratic, Republican and Greenback tickets were voted, and the struggling elements labored with might and main to win the victory. Much money was spent, and laborers were taken from their work and stationed at the polls to add weight to the influences that would be exercised one way or another. In consequence of the great amount of scratching, the task imposed upon the Judges and clerks of election to count the vote was no mean one. Commencing their duties at 8 o'clock on Tuesday morning, they were employed until after midnight last night, wearcely taking time to eat their meals. But the election is over, and though the exact and complete result may not be known for several days, still every indication must inspire Mr. Schleicher's friends with the pride of a victory nobly won.

Up to the hour of our going to press, the counting of the votes in the First and Third wards of this city was still uncompleted. One of the largest and most fashionable audiences of the season gathered at the Casino ast evening to witness the first performance in this city of John T. Baymond in his famous creation of "Oot. MIRISE.

The receipts yesterday were very satisfactory, though, like the lots of wool, they were so scattered about the city among the wholesale merchants that it was difficult to keep track of them. One large lot of Mexican were added to the lot appreviously received and both lots were sold by sealed bids at 13 17-100c. Several smaller lots were sold at the railing quotations. A number of large shipments are expected but will probably be held back for a rise. One car load of twenty thousand pounds was shipped north yesterday by rail.
