Richmond, Va., May 14.—In the U. S. circuit court to-day a writ of habess corpuse on the miscogenation case of the negre following the first country of the pentium of the statute prohibiting the intermarriage of the races, was retused by Judge Hughes on the ground that the U. S. courts have no unrightein ever the questions of marriage.

urisdiction over the questions of marriage.

The opinion holds that the laws of mar-iage are at the sovereign control and will of jurisdiction over the questions of marriage. The opinion helds that the laws of mirriage are at the sovereign control and mill of each state, unaffected by any provision or any article of the constitution of the United Shatas; that absolute and entire power over those laws is necessarily left all over the world and in the union of states, to the government of local society; that the laws under which the parties were convicted was with the unrestrained legislative power of Virginia to enact it, and that it is not problemed by any provision of the antional constitution as to making contracts. The opinion holds that section 1977 of the revised statutes, which secures to all persons within the United States the right in every state to make and enforce contracts have in the law of the states wherein it is proposed to enforce them. Admitting that marriage in a contract, the privilege of enforcing it extends only to lawful marriages, and that if a citizen of Virginia went to the District of Columbia or the territory of Utah and was there married in accordance with the local laws, he could not return with his consort or consorts to Virginia and expect to subordinate her laws of marriage to the laws of the other jurisdiction.

Her soft white drapery floated lightly around her, and her beautiful hair fell over her shoulders in rich golden masses—it has grown dark brown now, but it is as luxuriant as ever, and the empress wears it in eight massive braids, which, wound round her head form a diadem that many a beauty would envy as much as the royal circlet. The imagination of the empress was soized by the beautiful form and motion of the girl, heightened as they were by the charm of the evening and the loveliness of the soons. He neglected no opportunity to entitivate the nequalitance of the '/fee de la foret," as he called her. He devoted himself to her exclusively at a ball which took place at lachi a few days after the first meeting. Her charming disposition and her brilliant wit completed the conquest that her beauty had commenced, The match was soon arranged and the marriage took place in the succeeding year. There is, of course, some difference between the slender girl wife of that time and the dignified lady who is to-day receiving the congratulations of her loving subjects. But she wears her twenty-five years of wedded life exceedingly well, and is to-day one of the handsomest matrons of her age in Europe. Her features are not cast in any regular mould of beauty, but they are delicate and pleasing. Her shin is beautifully white and clear, her fine color is the result of the active outdoor amusoments in which she delights. She is about the middle height, her figure is absolutely perfect, and her carriage and manner are graceful and majestic. She has just returned from Irriand, where she has been fox-hunting, and captured the hearts of the hunters by her grace and beauty and condessonsion, and by her magnificent leading in the field. "She rides as straight as an arrow," says an Irish writer. "Nothing stops her. She takes fences, gates and brooks just as they come, and although there are many plucky hely riders on the shires, no one could touch the empress. Assuredly, no finer or utterly fearbon horsewoman ever skimmed cross the lovel midland pastures or took posts and rails with greater cohems and skill." She is as full of hife, intelligence and gayety as ever, and she has the same debustation of toudy ism and formality, and the same free-dom from all conventional restraint which gave rise to the unpapularity that she had to encounter in the early years of her reien. We don't need any quarrel between congress and the president, we don't need any dead lock to the detriment of governmental management, we don't want any more sectional strife.

We need to have confidence restored and business revived which need to have con-raised by free traders to retard the development of our country. A subsidy is not of necessity a swindle, but on the contrary may be a blessing and a saving to both people and government. Government aid extended to some judicious internal improvement is necessarily a subsidy. To quote a case, we notice a bill presented by Benator Coke of Texas. This bill proposes to aid a railroad company to build 160 miles of road to the Mexican border. The government has 5,000 troops on that border and the cost of their maintenance is $1000 apiece per annum.

Now this road runs through a rich country maintenance is $1000 apiece per annum.

Now this road runs through a rich country which will cause a rapid settlement by people who will be in every way capable of taking care of themselves, which will allow the withdrawal of one into or the army stationed in that re-gion. There is 1,000,000 saved every year, and about the same amount in transporta-tion. Besides, this aid will not only be a saving to the government, but will open up a trade, as Mr. Coke says, with three million of the Brazos and Trinity rivers, outderlies.

Thursday Moralus, May 15, 1879, THE INDIAN AS A PERSON.

The decision of Judge Dundy of the federal court at Omaha, discharging Standing Bear and his party under a writ of habeas serpus will excite a good deal of attention among those who are interested in the solution of the Indian question. This United States judge holds that the Indian is a person within the meaning of the law, and is entitled to the benefit of the rights of person growing out of the writ of habeas corpus dly with the white man. It was held in the case of Standing Bear and his party, sho were being taken back foreibly to the Budlan territory by Gen. Cook, that there was no rightful authority to force them back, and that such an act was an illegal restraint of their liberty and in violation of the constill differ and laws of the United States, the Indians having the same right of expatris. tion and of moving about from place to place that is possessed by the white man We are not aware whether any decision renred heretofero has gone as far as this in assuming to settle the legal status of the In clian as an andividual in his relations to the government and the laws of the land. THOSE colored emigrants from the south who reached Kansas, got tired of their bargein as soon as the novelty wore off, and they were put to work to earn their own living. Fifty worn out and homesick "refugoes" appealed to the captain of a Missouri ver boat at Wyandotte for transportation to St. Louis, from whence they expected to work their way back home. The officer made their hearts glad by granting their request. About two hundred of those who request. About two hundred of the se who were taken to Lawrence, Topeka, and other points in Kannas, have strangied back to Myandotte, failing to find employment, and are again a charge upon the committee there. Even at this time of the year, when the demend for agricultural labor is greakest in the inorth, these people find nothing to do, and those who reached the "land of promise" find want, destitution in its worst form, with a strong prospect of death by freezing or starvation next winter if they exist until that time. The white me who, deluding these people to their destruction under the guise of friendship, are responsible for all this suffering, will have much to answer for at the day of final reckepting. Less than six weeks ago Sergeant M. M. Mooney was a private in the rear rank of the Alamo rifies, but the military enthusiams burned and rankled, as it were, in his soldiery bosom and spurred his ambition, and so nobly did he lead in the charges upon the beer salcons and lunch stands in the neighborhood of the armory (the leader of these charges always pays the reckoning) thaf we soon find him advanced to the rank of corporal, in which trying and responsible position he displayed such military genus that he was afforded a still greater field for the display of his talents by being made keeper of the company's strong box, from which stand-point he soon covered for himself the name of commissary sergeant.

This brilliant advancement to military renown of a gentleman who so short a time ago was a modest and retiring private citizen, could not fall to attract the attention and appreciation of the community, and yesterday our people testified their appreciation of the achievements of a San Antonian by presenting Sergeant Mooney with a hand-some sword—a keen and glittering blade and scabbard of gold, bronned in imitation of 18 karat brass, and apparently embosed with the blumi edge of a cooper's adge.

The sword was presented with a feeling address, which the receplent responded to with his characteristic grace and eloquence. Our people may confidently expect to hear of the gallant sergeant heroically wielding his good Damascus blade at the call of duty, silicing cheese for the boys at the next annual pic-nic and drill.

The following is the letter of presentation accompanying the sword:

The following is the letter of presentation accompanying the sword:

To Sergeant M. M. Mooney, of the Heroic Alamo Riffee:

This sword is sent by many friends as a This sword is sent by many friends as a testimonial of honor. Sergeant Mooney, you have made a most wonderful progress in the modern military arens. Therefore your unparalleled advancement toward the princacle of military greatness, and the chivalrous glory that crowns your brief career as a soldier, deserves more than ordinary recognition. It is the least a host of admiring friends can do to present you with this sword. Accept it, wear it by your side, and when the hour of battle is at hand, unsheath the weapon, cast away the sheath, nor pick when the nour or pattle is at hand, unsheath the weapon, cast sway the sheath, nor pick it up until victory is yours. Invested with the prowess that you are, this lesson will prove an easy one to learn. Wishing you the fullest realization of your ambition in the ranks, gallant Mooney, we remain yours,
