A Mexican woman known as Chona Blanco, the keeper of a tamale stand on in Larsdo street, has been I laced under the surveillance of the authorities on the charge of having committed the crime of infanticide. The tamale business was continued in the house, however, though Chona was sick abed, and yesterday persons who visited the place to obtain tamales were nauseated by a bad smell, and Officer Zeuk was complained to regarding the smell, and repairing to the house proceeded to investigate its origin. The result was his discovery of the body of the infant carelessly stowed away beneath the hearth-stones of a fireplace in the old adobe shanty. After being exhumed, Dr. Menger was sent for to examine the body. The Doetor's conclusion was that death had been occasioned by violence. The child's mother is still ill, and cannot be arrested until her recovery. Others besides the mother are supposed to be more or less implicated in the shocking crime.
